ANIMALS.—English wheat, 40s. to 42s.; foreign wheat, 38s. to 40s.; oats, 22s. to 24s.; barley, 30s. to 32s.; peas, 20s. to 22s.; beans, 18s. to 20s.; clover, 12s. to 14s.; lucerne, 10s. to 12s.; rape, 8s. to 10s.; turnips, 6s. to 8s.; potatoes, 4s. to 6s.; cabbages, 2s. to 4s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.; potatoes, 1s. to 2s.; cabbages, 1s. to 2s.; carrots, 1s. to 2s.; onions, 1s. to 2s.; mushrooms, 1s. to 2s.; asparagus, 1s. to 2s.; artichokes, 1s. to 2s.; cauliflowers, 1s. to 2s.; cress, 1s. to 2s.; radishes, 1s. to 2s.; lettuce, 1s. to 2s.; spinach, 1s. to 2s.; peas, 1s. to 2s.; beans, 1s. to 2s.; clover, 1s. to 2s.; lucerne, 1s. to 2s.; rape, 1s. to 2s.; turnips, 1s. to 2s.;

GRAND SPORTING PARTIES AT HOMBURG, near Frankfurt-on-the-Main.—THE CASINO OF HOMBURG is the only establishment on the coast of the Rhine which is open all the year. The great number of fashionable visitors who have engaged apartments, and the generous patronage of the administration, have made it a most interesting and brilliant resort for the winter. For many reasons, however, the great sporting parties which take place twice a week. In consequence, the management shrink from no expedient to render this wintering place as agreeable as possible, have hired 10,000 English acres of forest and meadow land, where game of every description is found in abundance, as well as a reserve for the great sporting parties. The superb Casino, which, by the beauty of its architecture, its internal arrangements, and the splendour of its decorations, surpasses anything that has been seen in this sea as well as the Rhine, contains a magnificent ball room, a concert room, a theatre, a library, a billiard room, a reading room, and a casino, and as commerce, from eleven o'clock to the morning till eleven o'clock at night, a reading room, where are found most of the German, French, English, Russian, Belgian, and Dutch newspapers; a coffee room; a divan, opening on a beautiful asphalt terrace and a splendid smoking room, with a French table d'hôte at one end and the clock. The Casino of Homburg has hereto had the sole privilege of receiving, spending the whole year, the most distinguished and fashionable society of the continent, and has thus become to the residents of Homburg a most extraordinary attraction. Numerous bathing establishments, with all the comforts of London and Paris, and private lodging houses offer accommodation to foreigners at extremely moderate prices. The distance from London to Homburg may be accomplished in forty-three hours, on taking the General Steam Navigation Company's vessel to the Havre, arriving in twelve hours; from Ostend to Cologne, by rail, and, in thirty hours, from Cologne to Marburg, by steamer, or Bonn to Bonn, by rail, and, in thirty hours, from Frankfurt to Homburg, by rail, or in a carriage, which starts from Bonn to Homburg, in one hour and a half, by omnibuses and mail coaches, which start at all hours.

NEW ALMS-HOUSES AT NORTHFLEET.

ALMSHOUSES AT NORTHFLEET.

These buildings have just been erected at Northfleet, from the design of Mr. W. Chadwick, of Adelaide-place, London-bridge. The present design, however, only comprises twelve dwellings—the intended number being forty. They have been built from the private funds of Mr. John Huggins, of Sittingbourne, Kent, and are intended for the peaceful havens of those persons who, in common parlance, "have seen better days;" each of whom is to receive, in addition to this abode, a pension of twenty-one shillings per week. In the centre is a chapel, of neat design, in the pointed style, with a lofty spire. We cannot refrain from commemorating this noble act of individual munificence, and shall further rejoice at the completion of the benevolent founder's design.

DEATH OF MR. GEO. HONNCASTLE, THE VOCALIST.—This gentleman, who was one of the corps operatifs of Drury-lane Theatre last season, died at his residence in Tavistock-place, on Sunday, in the prime of life. He made his début, we believe, at Covent-garden, in the character of Lord Alton, under the management of Madame Vestris, having been previously one of the leading vocalists at the Liverpool Theatre.

NEW CLAIMANT TO THE STONEHENG ESTATE.—On Monday the town of Leamington was in commotion, in consequence of the examination of thirty-two individuals who had been apprehended by Mr. Roby, the superintendent of police, having been engaged in unlawfully taking forcible possession of Stonehenge Abbey, the mansion of Lord Leigh. A new claimant, named John Leigh, has now just come forward, and sought to enforce his pretensions by proceeding with a party of thirty, with bludgeons, &c., to take forcible possession of the mansion. They were met by the police and constables; and Denon, a police sergeant, and Hancock, an assistant-constable, were felled to the ground, and other persons engaged in guarding the premises seriously maltreated. They retained possession of the mansion for upwards of an hour. The police, however, went to the spot, and the whole of the party were handcuffed, and conveyed to the public office at Leamington, upon a charge of riot and assault. The above facts were elicited from the several witnesses, some of whom bore upon their forehead, face, and hands, marks of great external violence. Ultimately they (twenty-nine in number) were committed to take their trial at the next county sessions, with liberty to find bail.

THE BOURSE AT ANTWERP.

NOVEL EXPERIMENTS IN WARFARE.

A few days since, the first of an intended series of experiments were exhibited in the grounds of Mulgrave House, Fulham, now in the possession of "The Society of Practical Science, and Private Military School of a New and Noble Science of Warfare," having for its objects, as stated in the prospectus, "the advancement of science and the establishment of universal peace," and the placing "at the command of our young and beloved Sovereign such a tremendous machinery of warfare as to enable her Majesty to maintain universal peace. That her Majesty may overrule any nation disturbing our present tranquillity, and say, 'Be still—redress your grievance in some more laudable manner—but to war you shall not; the power is in my hands, and if war be your determination, the destruction of your fleet and army is certain.' To this great and glorious end do the Directors of the Society of Practical Science, and Noble Science of Warfare aspire, and they doubt not that in a short time the country will be convinced that they have such a system of warfare at their command, and are in possession of such inventions as will hurl to destruction any opposing power."

Arthur Asherley, Esq., who represented Southampton before the Reform Bill, died suddenly at his seat at Arundel, Sussex, last week. He was seventy-four years of age, and has left three sons and three daughters.

A CLEVER PARISIEN TAUNTS.—A Paris paper gives the following account of a very ingenious robbery:—About a fortnight ago, a young man, of about 25, of elegant manners and appearance, presented himself at the house of the Misses N., in the Rue Meslay, to look at some apartments which were to let. He stated that he was an artist connected with the Porte St. Martin, and that he wanted to live near the theatre. He agreed about the apartments, and paid a month in advance. The very next day he had a long conversation with the ladies, and he soon contrived to make himself so agreeable to them, that he passed several hours a day in their company. In short, a few days afterwards, the so-called artist offered the ladies a box at the theatre for the next day, which the ladies did not scruple to accept. "I will accompany you myself," said he, "and take care that you are comfortable." The day came, and the gentlemen took the ladies to the theatre according to promise. After he had been in the theatre about an hour, he made a pretext to leave. He immediately proceeded to the house in the Rue Meslay, and asked the porter for the keys of the apartment, pretending that the ladies had forgotten a shawl which they would require on coming out of the theatre. The porter having no suspicion, gave him the key. In about an hour he came down, having a parcel in his hand wrapped in a pocket handkerchief. On their return, the ladies were surprised at the answer of the porter; and, suspecting something, hastened to their apartment, but the truth became manifest. The furniture was in confusion, the desks broken open, and all the plate, money, and jewellery of which the ladies were possessed had disappeared. They found at once that a considerable robbery had taken place, and that they were the victims of the said styled artist, who had only introduced himself to them with the intention of pillaging them. Inquiries were made the next day of persons to whom this adroit swindler had referred, but of course he was not known; and in spite of the exertions of the clever Parisian police, no trace has been discovered of this ingenious thief.

THE BOURSE, AT ANTWERP.

This celebrated structure will be found referred to in our historical details of the London Royal Exchange, in another part of the present number. It was long reported to be the finest building of the kind in Europe: and served as a model for not only the Exchange in London, but also for that at Amsterdam.

A shower of hand-rockets were then thrown from a mast and exploded, to show how, by their means, a merchant-vessel could easily protect herself from pirates, or other hostile parties at sea: from the unfavourable weather, however, other intended trials were abandoned. Next were fired some self-exploding rockets, without sticks; and an exploding rocket of cannon, which can be manufactured to a tremendous power, and be fired from a cannon of any calibre: it was directed against a strong target, cased with sheet iron, which it instantly tore to pieces.

SHOWER OF HAND-ROCKETS.

But the implement which excited the most attention was a cannon upon the principle of non-recoil, which was fired several times with a strong charge of powder, without any recoil, or certainly not more than a quarter of an inch. The Society state that the principle is applicable to guns of any calibre. A telescope is attached, which they say enables the gunner to hit the smallest mark with unerring precision.

NON-RECOIL GUN.

This experiment gave rise to nearly an hour of discussion among the scientific and professional gentlemen present, till at length, the inventor (the Duke of Normandy, understood to be at the head of the Society) took the gun from the carriage, held it in his hands, and fired it, as did another gentleman present, with perfect safety, and without feeling the least effect from the recoil. The inventor then said to one of the stoutest sceptics: "I will allow you to take my gun to pieces, and if you discover the secret, I will make you a present of it; but, if you do not discover it"—("What, then?")—"you pay me. The challenge was declined."

HUT DESTROYED BY A SHELL.

It should be explained that the principal point aimed at by the inventor of the shells was to show the perfect safety with which they could be carried about; in proof of which they were let fall several times, when only the cap exploded.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 108, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 109, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1844.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 131.—Vol. V.]

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1844.

[SIXPENCE.]

THE SPANISH CONSTITUTION.

ESPARTERO, the late Regent of Spain, has but just published an address to the Spanish people, in which he resigned his office, his functions ceasing on the Queen attaining her legal majority on the 10th of October. His resignation was one of form only, for he had long been an exile, without power or influence in the conduct of affairs, and the Queen had been declared of age in anticipation of the day fixed by law, to suit the purposes of the party which had got the child under its controul. Dwelling, as he did, on the efforts he had made to govern by and within the law, and on the respect he had always shown for the forms and spirit of the Constitution, this manifesto of the Duke of Victoria had an interest beyond that it derived from the circumstances amid which it was issued. It was the last homage paid to a Constitution now no more; it was a political document couched in a language that the rulers of Spain no longer understand. The Constitution of which Espartero was the servant, and as long as he could be, the defender, has ceased to exist. It is superseded by another, which, under the phrases and forms of a Constitution, is all that a Ferdinand could wish, and the whole of the people of Spain is subjected to the caprices of a profligate woman, who, like Louis XIV., is taking refuge in bigotry as an atonement for the vices of her past life, and the lawless sway of Ministers, whose only idea of government is that of the sword.

The new Constitution of Spain is a lengthy document—formal and legal in its appearance, and duly divided into heads and sections. But in no one single point is it changed, that it is not worse than the old one. It in every way invades the privileges of the people; and the few securities that are allowed to remain, may, and undoubtedly will be, broken through without ceremony or scruple on the first occasion on which it shall be thought necessary to dispense with them. There are also abundance of contradictory provisions laid down, which indicate that its promise and performance will be of no kin together. Thus it says, "All Spaniards can freely print and publish their opinions, without any previous censorship, by conforming to the laws." Who would imagine from this that the only protection the press possesses under the old Constitution, has been taken away? In all cases of libel, or what the Government may choose to consider such, the right of trial by jury is altogether destroyed. In a servile spirit of imitation of a bad model, the Spanish Ministry has copied one of the worst features of the French Constitution, such as it has become by the successive invasions of the Charter. Again, all Spaniards are declared to be equally subject to the laws; but exceptions are immediately made in favour of the army and the church, the members of which will be, we presume, only accountable to their own tribunal—the soldier to martial law, even for offences against the civil code; and the priest to his ecclesiastical courts, although guilty perhaps of crimes against society at large. Don Carlos, had he been permitted to ascend the throne on the death of his brother, or had he been placed there by his party at the beginning of the civil war, could not have made such an invasion of the liberties of the people, and certainly he could not have attempted it so openly. The liberal movement has degenerated into a military tyranny; all the struggles of the Con-stitutionalists, all the lives that have been sacrificed, all the blood that has been shed, have been in vain. Without calling forth a man worthy of the name of a leader, without eliciting a voice that can command a moment's attention, the last spark of Spanish liberty has been trampled out! And the outrage attracts far more notice and discussion in France and England than in Spain itself! This appears strange, but it is not impossible to account for it. In England we attach great importance to the terms and forms of law, and almost instinctively do the same when we study the laws or Constitution of another country. But in that country itself the laws may be badly administered, and the Constitution so broken and perverted as to be worse than useless. What then is the feeling created in the people who are subjected to the abuses of both? At the best, indifference and carelessness; more frequently a turbulent spirit ready to supply by revenge what the law cannot furnish by justice, and prepared to acquiesce, if not actively to promote any change, conscious that no alteration in the form of the Government will injure them in proportion to the advantages to be gained by the cabals, intrigues, and a chronic state of semi-warfare in which the Spaniards seem to delight. A Regent like Espartero governs by the law, cautiously abstains from violating it, is never even suspected of adding to his private fortune by playing fast and loose with the public revenues; and he is driven from the kingdom by the revolt of a mercenary army that seems to be absolutely at the command of any adventurer who has the means of bribing it. The people stand aloof and see the pronouncement of the soldiery depriving them of the only security they had for national liberty, without an effort to prevent it. Time passes on, and the military chief, who has got the ascendant, having shot those of his rivals whom he considered dangerous, seizes the Government, brings back the Queen-Mother, who had been deposed for her arbitrary tendencies, and then

PROCESSION OF HER MAJESTY TO OPEN THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE—DELIVERY OF THE CITY SWORD, AT TEMPLE BAR.—See page 270.

OPENING OF THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE, BY HER MAJESTY.

On Monday last, the splendid Ceremony of the Inauguration of the New Royal Exchange was enacted with all the circumstance befitting so truly a national event. As a chronicle of the proceedings will doubtless hereafter occupy a prominent position in our social and civic history, we have illustrated the principal scenes of the Pageant and the Ceremony to the full extent of this week's journal; and, as the best accompaniment for these picturesque records, we have taken the utmost care to ensure the accuracy of the descriptive details, by collecting the several accounts narrated by our contemporaries, and testing them by our own observation (with considerable assistance), at the several grand stages of the event.

THE DEPARTURE FROM BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

In its natural order, our account, of course, must commence with the proceedings in St. James's Park, previously to, and after the departure of, the procession. Before eight o'clock, numbers of persons had assembled round the Palace and in the Park, to occupy the best positions, or seeing her Majesty pass.

At nine o'clock St. James's Park began rapidly to fill, and thousands of spectators ranged themselves in line down the Mall, from the Palace gates to the German Chapel, along which route the Royal carriages were to pass.

At ten o'clock the crowd in the Park, chiefly of well-dressed people, had increased to a dense mass, eight or ten deep on each side the way. Shortly after ten o'clock the Royal Horse Guards (Blue), under the command of Captain Oliver, marched into the Park: a portion of these formed part of the Royal escort, the rest were stationed at intervals on the line through the Park, to aid in keeping back the crowd. The 15th Regiment of Lancers, from Horsehold, next marched through the Park, and formed from Marlborough-gate, where the Royal Horse Guards (Blue) terminated, keeping the line along Pall-mall to Charing-cross; the rest of the line to Temple-bar was kept by parties of the 1st and 2nd Regiments of Royal Horse Guards.

Soon after, a strong detachment of the 1st Regiment of Life Guards, under the command of Lord William Russell, ranged themselves to the right of the Palace gates; and a similar detachment of the 2nd Regiment of Life Guards, under the command of Capt. Russell, ranged themselves opposite, to the left, to form the Royal escort. The whole of the cavalry were under the command of Major-General Lygon. The foot of the two regiments of Life Guards and of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue), bearing the colours of their respective regiments, with the Royal trumpeters, were ranged to the right, close to the Palace gates.

At twenty minutes past eleven o'clock the Royal carriages (the magnificent Royal state carriage drawn by eight beautiful cream-coloured horses, decked in their gorgeous trappings) drove to the Palace, followed by a troop of Yeomen of the Guard.

About five minutes past eleven o'clock her Majesty entered the Royal carriage, and the procession immediately formed. On emerging from under the marble arch, her Majesty was greeted with the greatest enthusiasm—the cheering and waving of hats and handkerchiefs being continued down the whole of the densely-crowded line. Her Majesty repeatedly acknowledged these bursts of enthusiasm in the most gracious and graceful manner, by bowing on either side.

Her Majesty's dress was of white satin (silver tulle) of the richest and most elegant design, portions of the pattern, representing leaves and foliage, being of different textures, and some having the effect of burnished silver. It was open in front from the girdle, increasing in width as it approached the bottom, and displaying a profusion of the most valuable old point lace.

The sleeves were short, and at the top of each was a very brilliant diamond ornament.

The dress had a most chaste and magnificent appearance, the silver-brocaded satin of which it was composed being ornamented with valuable diamonds down each side of the front, placed at intervals on white satin bows.

The dress was of Spitalfields manufacture.

Her Majesty had a most splendid diamond stomacher, some of the brilliants in it being of extraordinary size and beauty, and on the left side the Queen wore the star of the Order of the Garter, having the cross in the centre formed of rubies, and the rest of the star composed of diamonds.

Her Majesty wore at the back of her head a miniature crown entirely formed of brilliants, and a diamond tiara surmounting the forehead. The necklace, earrings, and bracelets were of brilliants.

Over the left shoulder was the ribbon of the Garter, looped with diamonds, and having a most magnificent "George" suspended, composed of large and valuable brilliants; and on the left arm was the Garter of purple velvet, edged with diamonds, and having the motto, "Honi soit qui mal y pense," set in diamonds.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert wore the uniform of Captain-General and Colonel of the Honourable Artillery Company, with the insignia of the most noble Order of the Garter and the Golden Fleece.

The Lord Steward, the Lord Chamberlain, and the officers of the royal household were the full dress household costume, and the Earl of Jersey his uniform as Master of the Horse, with the insignia of the Royal Household Guelphic Order. The Duke of Norfolk carried his gold hat on Earl Marshal of England. The Captain of the Gentlemen-at-Arms, and the Captain of the Yeomen Guard wore the uniforms of their respective corps. The Marquis of Anglesey appeared in the uniform of his regiment, the Royal Horse Guards, with the insignia of the Garter, and of two foreign orders. The Earl of Roslyn wore his uniform as Master of the Buck Hounds.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent left her residence, Clarence House, St. James's, with her suite, in two carriages, escorted by a party of Life Guards, at a quarter before eleven o'clock.

The dress of the Royal Duchess was of white satin and silver, of Spitalfields manufacture. The headpiece, of feathers and diamonds.

The Duke of Cambridge left Cambridge House, attended by Baron Knezebeck, Esquire in Waiting, and escorted by a party of Life Guards.

The Royal Duke was habited in the uniform of a Field Marshal, and wore a star, set in diamonds, of the Order of the Garter, and the ribbon and badge. His Royal Highness also wore the stars of the most Honourable Military Order of the Bath, and of the most distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George.

The following is the order of the procession, which left the Palace-gates at about five minutes past eleven o'clock. The suite was along the Park, through the iron gates, by the German Chapel, into Pall-mall, along Pall-mall east, the Strand, Fleet-street, Ludgate-hill, St. Paul's Churchyard, Chesapeake, to the Royal Exchange:—

Detachment of Life Guards, Her Majesty's Carriage, Each drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The First Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Second Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Third Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Fourth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Fifth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Sixth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Seventh Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Eighth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Ninth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Tenth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Eleventh Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Twelfth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Thirteenth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Fourteenth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Fifteenth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Sixteenth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Seventeenth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Eighteenth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Nineteenth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Twentieth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Twenty-first Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Twenty-second Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Twenty-third Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Twenty-fourth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Twenty-fifth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Twenty-sixth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Twenty-seventh Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Twenty-eighth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Twenty-ninth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Thirtieth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Thirty-first Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Thirty-second Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Thirty-third Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Thirty-fourth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Thirty-fifth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Thirty-sixth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Thirty-seventh Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Thirty-eighth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Thirty-ninth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Fortieth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Forty-first Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Forty-second Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Forty-third Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Forty-fourth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Forty-fifth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Forty-sixth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Forty-seventh Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Forty-eighth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Forty-ninth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.
The Fiftieth Carriage, Drawn by Six Horses.	Two Grooves walking.	Two Grooves walking.

THE QUEEN.
Her Majesty Queen Victoria; The Princess of Wales; The Duchess of Kent; The Duchess of Cambridge; The Duchess of Devonshire; The Duchess of Somerset; The Duchess of Argyll; The Duchess of Buccleugh; The Duchess of Sutherland; The Duchess of Gordon; The Duchess of Grafton; The Duchess of Hamilton; The Duchess of Lauderdale; The Duchess of Leinster; The Duchess of Marlborough; The Duchess of Devonshire; The Duchess of Somerset; The Duchess of Argyll; The Duchess of Buccleugh; The Duchess of Sutherland; The Duchess of Gordon; The Duchess of Grafton; The Duchess of Hamilton; The Duchess of Lauderdale; The Duchess of Leinster; The Duchess of Marlborough.

The carriages of the Ambassadors and Foreign Ministers assembled at the lower end of St. James's-street, and fell into the line immediately after the Queen's procession.

The carriages of the Cabinet Ministers fell into the line immediately after those of the Ambassadors and Foreign Ministers.

The general direction of the procession was under the orders of Lord Charles Wellesley, Clerk Marshal; Major-General Prince Weymouth, Esquire to the Queen; and Lieut-Colonel Bouverie, Esquire to Prince Albert.

ARRIVAL IN PALL-MALL.
On emerging from the Park into Pall-mall the scene was most exciting. Every balcony and every window—nay, every roof, where it was possible to obtain a view, was crowded. The streets on each side presented a dense and unbroken mass of human beings, with difficulty kept back within the bounds of their confined space by lines of policemen and mounted Lancers. Proceeding past the magnificent chib-houses of Pall-mall, the cheering was most enthusiastic, and elegantly-dressed ladies from every window waved handkerchiefs in abundance.

Passing the Italian Opera-house, the top of the Arcade was covered by a dense crowd of ladies. At Pall-mall East, the space in which the statue of George III. is placed was curiously crowded—little urns formed a pyramid of heads to the very legs of the horse on which the statue rests.

About nine o'clock the Duke of Wellington passed through the yard of St. James's Palace in a private carriage, on his way to the City. He was dressed in the uniform of Field Marshal, and looked extremely well.

Long before the time for the appearance of the procession the streets were literally crammed with spectators, and the police had some difficulty in keeping them within bounds.

The Duchess of Kent passed in a carriage and four escorted by a party of Life Guards.

The houses in Pall-mall were mostly filled up with seats to accommodate spectators, and as early as nine o'clock we saw many a fair head seen on window-sills, without any exterior, exposed to the chilly air. The first Life Guards mounted in Waterloo-place soon after ten o'clock, and afterwards proceeded eastwards. To the 15th Lancers was assigned the duty of lining Pall-mall and the route to Charing-cross, where they joined the 2nd Life Guards. At the foot of St. James's-street a space was reserved for the carriage of the Foreign Ministers to assemble, and before half-past ten—the time named in the programme—they were in readiness to join the Royal procession.

At Trafalgar-square, the hoarded space around the Nelson monument had been moved, the steps around the monument all into a capital view-tap, so admitted. The crowd on these steps presented a curious spectacle, persons of heads rising one above another, with the steps, in the midst of the pillar, and of which they appeared to cling like a swarm of bees. The crowd was increased in Trafalgar square, extending up the steps of the Church of St. Martin in the field, the bells of which were hourly ringing; the union jack and Royal standard decorating its spire.

CHARING-CROSS AND THE STRAND.

It having been arranged that the equipages of the Ambassadors and the other Foreign Ministers should fall in after the Royal carriages upon their entering Pall-mall, Charing-cross was, from the fact of the dense masses who assembled there, deemed the first point at which a good view of the procession could readily be obtained. As early as seven o'clock in the morning that locality presented a very bustling appearance. Vehicles of every description, conveying parties to their respective destinations for the day, passed by in a rapid succession towards the eastern end of the metropolis, whilst pedestrians, thousands in number, moved in the same direction. Workmen were busily engaged in the various houses, preparing seats for those who might choose to occupy them; and flags and banners were being spread from the windows in profusion. Towards nine o'clock the rambling of carriage wheels was heard less frequently, as the police were ordered to stop all conveyances that did not contain some person who had a ticket of admission to the Exchange, and before ten o'clock the neighbourhood became comparatively silent; little more was heard than the voices of those persons who had congregated, and were assembling to secure good places. The people, however, were exceedingly good-humoured, and joked with each other upon the various causes of pressure from within, and consequent breaches of the order of the line, which, by the way, were admirably kept by the metropolitan police, who discharged their duty very tolerably. Shortly after ten o'clock, three regiments of the household brigade marched past, and a portion of them took up positions at intervals to assist the police in maintaining order. From that period till eleven o'clock the carriages of the nobility, the great officers of state, and others who were invited to be present at the ceremony, began to file past the Exchange continued to roll by. Amongst them were the Duke of Devonshire, the Duke of Cambridge, the Duke of Kent, Sir R. Peel, Lord Stanley, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, &c. Perhaps at no point on the route was a more amusing scene presented than at this, when the period arrived that the Royal procession was approaching. With the exception of the line through which it was to pass, every spot in the immense area of Trafalgar-square, Charing-cross, and the pathways leading to the Strand, was covered with people, and the windows of the houses were crowded with ladies and gentlemen.

At ten minutes after eleven o'clock, the royal cortège came in sight at the end of Cockspur-street, and the utmost excitement prevailed to catch a glimpse of her Majesty. Those who were in the background attempted to rush forward in the direction of the Strand, but they were rapidly restrained by the exertions of the police, clear serious consequences must have ensued. As the Queen approached, the greatest demonstrations of loyalty were manifested towards her and her Royal Consort by the assembled multitude, which her Majesty and Prince Albert graciously acknowledged.

After the procession had passed, another rush was made by the crowd to follow it, and, notwithstanding all the exertions of the police and military to repress it, they succeeded in reaching Hangerford street, and after a short time the line was completely broken through.

Many of the balconies along the Strand were covered with cloth, hung with festoons of different coloured stuffs, and with bows of ribbons and artificial flowers, and a union jack or a Royal flag floated over the balcony of the crowd from almost every window. Here the letting of seats to view the procession appeared to begin, and, if possible, more gaily-dressed people were crammed into each window. The reader of history was reminded of the description of Queen Elizabeth's celebrated entry into the City on her accession to the throne:—

"Gowns of velvet or satin richly trimmed with silk furs or gold lace, costly gold chains, and caps or hoods of rich materials, adorned with feathers of various colours, decorated on all occasions of display the persons, not of nobles and courtiers alone, but of their crowds of retainers and higher mechanics, and even of the wealthy citizens. Hangings of cloth, of silk velvet, and cloth of gold or silver, adorned on days of family festivity the upper chamber of every house of respectable appearance. These, on public festivals, were suspended from the balconies, and, uniting with the banners and pennons fluting over head, gave to the streets almost the appearance of a suite of long and gay-dressed giants. Every circumstance thus conspired to render the public entry of Queen Elizabeth the most gorgeous, and at the same time the most interesting, spectacle of the kind ever exhibited in the English metropolis."

There was the same rich adornment "even of the wealthy citizens;" and though "hangings of silk velvet and cloth of gold" were not suspended from the "upper chambers of every house," yet flags and banners, and innumerable handkerchiefs, waved from every window; and the entry of our present gracious Queen Victoria into her metropolis, though perhaps not marked with so much gorgeousness, from the altered customs of the age, exhibited at the least in every other respect as much of interest, of enthusiasm, and of triumph, as the public entry into the city of her illustrious predecessor Elizabeth. This was the scene presented along the Strand eastward, varied only here and there by a greater or less profusion of flags.

The Royal cortège entered the Strand from Charing-cross precisely at half-past eleven o'clock, amidst the enthusiastic applause of the assembled multitude.

Near the church of St. Mary-le-Strand the students of King's College were drawn up in line; and the children of the parochial schools, who had been accommodated with very convenient seats in front of the church, rose on the approach of her Majesty, and sang with great enthusiasm the national anthem, evidently to her Majesty's great gratification. A platform had also been erected in St. Clement's Churchyard, where a large number of the children belonging to that parish were delighted with a most excellent view of the procession.

A curious and somewhat amusing incident occurred in the Strand during the passing of the Royal procession. It is usual on all such public occasions to have many of the police stationed in different parts of the streets, dressed in coloured clothes, in order more effectually to keep an eye upon thieves and portpoets. One of these men had discovered a common thief in the act of peering the pocket of a student of King's College, and took him into custody. At the same moment, as some of the constables who were keeping the line were about to pounce upon him, the latter, mistaking their brother officer in the coloured clothes for a friend of the thief who wished to rescue him, began to berate him with their staves; and it was not until after he had received several severe blows on the head that he succeeded in making them believe that he was what he represented himself. The thief was, however, secured.

The spectacle at St. Clement's church was perhaps the most beautiful on the line. Not only were the houses on the right-hand side of the Strand crowded with elegantly dressed ladies, but to the left every window from which even the slightest glance could be obtained was occupied. On the top of the church and on the houses in all directions anxious groups were to be seen. As the Queen passed the church, her Majesty was evidently pleased with the pretty appearance of the flags which decorated the walls of that edifice, and directed the attention of Prince Albert to them. The effect produced by these flags, with a representation of the Royal Exchange, forming part of an announcement of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, was exceedingly good, and attracted considerable notice. Altogether, the coup d'œil was beautiful in the extreme. The sun was shining brilliantly on a part of the crescent on its left, which heightened the effect from the contrast presented by those portions of the surrounding buildings on which the sun's rays were not thrown. The ladies at the windows waved their handkerchiefs enthusiastically, and at this spot the state carriage stopped for an instant, as there was a slight impediment to the preceding part of the procession. Her Majesty turned her head several times towards the right-hand side of the Strand, from whence the cheers proceeded at the moment, and acknowledged them very graciously. Prince Albert also bowed repeatedly.

The Royal carriage proceeded from this point to Temple-bar at a very slow pace. Arrived at the bar, the Royal carriage stopped under the archway, the gates being open, and was met there by the civic authorities. The ceremonial which there took place will be found detailed below. After the passing of the procession some confusion took place on the City side of Temple-bar, owing to the crowd breaking through the line.

THE STRAND SIDE OF TEMPLE-BAR.

So perfectly clear of all obstruction was the appointed route of the Royal procession kept, that it experienced no check or interruption to its advance until its arrival at the very threshold of its destination.

The time occupied between the early gathering of spectators at this spot and the arrival of the Royal cavalcade furnished but little for description in the shape of incident. The shop-windows, the usual mass being removed, were filled with seats, and the seats with ladies, exposing to public gaze a galaxy of beauty and fashion. The upper windows, too, were occupied to the very attic; and above them were not a few adventurous persons, sitting like sparrows upon the house-tops, with unvaried patience awaiting to catch a bird's-eye view of carriage roofs and hat-crowns.

At eleven o'clock the Queen's grooms passed by, and more guards proceeded to line the streets; and a few minutes afterwards the Duke of Cambridge, in his carriage, rode rapidly through the bar, and he was followed at intervals, as he had been preceded, by many distinguished visitors, most of whom passed unnoticed, or, rather, we should say, unobserved.

The chiming of the clock of St. Clement Danes' church were musically proclaiming three-quarters past eleven o'clock, when general attention was directed towards that building, the royal procession, headed by a detachment of Life Guards, being then just in the act of turning the corner of the church-yard.

The scene presented on the west side of Temple-bar as witnessed from between the upper portion of the Bar and the banking-house of the Messrs. Child, to whose courtesy we are indebted for the above description, was hardly as follows:—Immediately after the arrival at the foot of the first Royal carriage, occupying the gentleman's chair of the second of state, and over which, Mr. Brown, the senior City Marshal, stood the gate. The Royal cavalcade being announced, the Marshal, at the bidding of the Lord Mayor, opened the gate, and Mr. P. Leane, who had been appointed conductor of the procession of the Lord Mayor, advanced on horseback, dressed in his usual gown, wearing a Spanish hat with black feathers, and having a white neck, which he waved constantly to the procession to announce. The carriage then followed him within the bar, in the order detailed below. As they slowly proceeded, the approach of the royal carriage was announced by a volley of cheers, which ran along the thick phalanx of the vast multitude that now filled every possible standing place, and was taken up and repeated by the occupants of the windows and loggias of the adjacent buildings. The scene at this moment was most animated and joyful. The sun had broken forth, despite a thick autumnal atmosphere, and sparkled on the gables and battlements of ancient roofs of the metropolis, making more gay than usual the usual and unobtrusive dress of the members of the Guard and other attendants, and the gorgeous top pages of the matches which contained the Lord Mayor and Prince Albert. The Queen bowed most graciously in reply to the loud and hearty cheering with which the congregated mass greeted her Majesty.

When the beautiful cream-coloured horses which drew her Majesty's carriage had passed through the gates, they were stopped, and the royal carriage became stationary.

THE CITY SIDE OF TEMPLE-BAR.

From a very early hour in the morning, this point of the line of procession presented an appearance of great bustle and preparation. Before daylight a number of workmen had been engaged in laying down gravel along the street; at a later hour others might be seen filling up holes from the sides or on the tops of the houses, or giving the finishing stroke to the seats prepared for spectators in the windows, doorways, and every available portion of building. Long before 9 o'clock these seats began to fill, chiefly with well-dressed females, whose gay attire, as seen in every story of each house—united with the banners, streamers, and union jacks, with which or with bunting most of the buildings in the neighbourhood of Temple Bar were decorated—made the scene here most picturesque and striking.

Accordingly, the locality appeared to create much interest. First-street being densely crowded with foot passengers as early as 9 o'clock, great numbers having at that hour taken standing positions in the immediate vicinity of the bar, apparently with a determination of retaining them. About 10 o'clock, a party of the Royal Artillery on horseback, headed by four officers, came up, and filing through the gateway of the Middle Temple, proceeded to the open space in front of King's Bench-walk, where they dismounted to await the time when their horses should be required by the sheriffs, for whose use in the procession they were destined. Shortly afterwards, a strong body of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue) marched within the bar, and took their positions as is usual on occasions of processions—namely, two and two at short intervals on each side of the line. Soon after 11, the Aldermen began to arrive in their carriages, attended each by the ward beadle with his mace on foot; but such was the density of the crowd, and so great the pressure that it was with much difficulty the police could clear a passage from the carriages across the pavement to the entry to Messrs. Child's Bank, where the Aldermen alighted. Shortly afterwards, the Aldermen, headed by the Lord Mayor, and accompanied by several deputies and common councillors, the latter in their marine gowns and ruffled hats, and all bearing white wands, proceeded along the street to the Middle Temple, in order to mount their horses.

Half-past 11 had now arrived, and the scene that displayed itself to a person standing on the top of Temple-bar was as animated and lively as could be imagined consistently with the half-day state of the atmosphere. Gay flags were waving on every side; the houses up to, and including, the tops presented thousands of eager faces; the street below was covered with carriages, and cavalry interspersed with the police and the populace, the red horse-hair plumes of the Guards and their bright uniforms giving life and variety to the generally dull and monotonous appearance of a London crowd. In another quarter of an hour, the head of the royal procession arrived at the west side of the bar, and after a momentary pause passed within, being received upon entering the City by a shower of trumpets from a party of the City trumpeters stationed on the south side of Fleet-street, in front of Messrs. Child's Bank.

No sooner had the royal carriage drawn up, than the Lord Mayor (who, at the head of the civic procession, was waiting her Majesty's arrival), alighted from his horse amidst the most profound silence—a silence which was not broken even by the circumstance that, in the hurry, his hat, with its Spanish plume of feathers, fell on the ground. His lordship then took the civic sword of State from the swordcase, and, proceeding to the side of her Majesty's carriage, where was spread a handsome carpet, knelt tenderly to her Majesty. The Queen, gently touching the hat, assured him that it could not be in better hands.

The engraving at page 273, represents this stage of the ceremony. The civic emblem is the Great Seal of the City, presented by Queen Elizabeth to the City of London, on the occasion of her opening the first Exchange. The sword is 34 feet in length, the handle is of chased gold, and the scabbard is richly lined with pearls.

The Lord Mayor, after receiving back the sword, withdrew from the side of the state coach with several observers, which Prince Albert acknowledged by half rising from his seat beside her Majesty, and bowing repeatedly with much grace. The Lord Mayor then remounted, and, putting on his hat, took his place in the line of procession, immediately preceding the carriage of her Majesty. Some delay was here occasioned by the necessary alighting arising from the junction of the cavalcade of the City dignitaries, which was interrupted between the twelve o'clock when we have mentioned as preceding the royal coach, and the coach stood. As soon as the alighting was accomplished, the cortège moved on in the following order:—

Police-officers on horseback.
Carriages of the Members of the Court of Common Council.
The state carriages of the Sheriffs.
Carriages of the Aldermen.

THE LORD MAYOR'S STATE COACH.
The Junior City Marshal on horseback.
Members of the Court of Common Council, in their mariner gowns, each with an attendant.

Mr. Henry Marandage
Mr. Samuel S. Evans
Mr. James Butler
Mr. Thomas M. Fooks
Mr. Edward Gadsden
Mr. Walter A. Peacock

Mr. William Gresham
Mr. W. J. Frothingham
Mr. James Anderson
Mr. W. Collingwood
Mr. Joshua G. Bedford
Mr. Richard Dixon.

The Senior City Marshal on horseback.
The Sheriffs, in their scarlet gowns and chains, on horseback, each attended by a Sergeant and a Groom.

The Aldermen, in their scarlet gowns (these past the chair in their chairs), on horseback, each attended by a Serjeant and a Groom, and also by a Footman of the Royal Artillery.

Mr. Alderman Farnborough
Mr. George Curzon, Bart.
Mr. Alderman Wood
Mr. P. Leane, Knt.
Mr. Alderman Lucas
Mr. S. Redgrave.

The Common Council on horseback, carrying the City Mace.

THE LORD MAYOR.
The Right Hon. William Maynard, in a Gown, Valour Rose and Garter of SS., bearing the City sword of State, immediately before.

THE STATE COACH.
Attended by a Yeoman of the Guard at each wheel, and two Footmen at each door, carrying the City Mace.

THE QUEEN,
and
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT,
Attended by the Duchess of Buccleugh, as Mistress of the Robes, and the Earl of Jersey, the Master of the Horse.

As soon as her Majesty was seen within the gateway, a loud, sharp, and general buzz rang through the street, and loyal acclamations continued as long as her Majesty remained in sight. Not were the expressions of devotion and attachment confined to the citizens on the street; from every window on each side of the way far hands were waving handkerchiefs, or enthusiastically clapping in honour of her Majesty. Her Majesty's attention seemed to be particularly attracted by this display, to which she looked up with apparent interest and admiration.

The last of the strong body of the Life Guards, who closed the procession as an escort, had passed this point of the gateway by five minutes to 12 o'clock. Whether from the greater density of the crowd, concentrated as they were on what by many was considered a very interesting point of the line, or from the weakness of the force of City police on duty, the line within the gates was certainly not nearly so well kept as it was without the gates. Neither on going or returning were the dainties and subjects who formed part of the cortège, including the Duke of Wellington, greeted or recognised by the people. As the procession passed on the crowd, after a short struggle, the police were permitted to rise in their rear of it, but the Royal Horse Guards (Blue) remained upon the ground where they had been posted until the return of the Royal carriages.

The whole procession was of a singularly happy, and had an appearance only second to that of royalty itself. The beauty of the horses in the Lord Mayor's state coach, and the elegant carriages and harness of the Sheriffs, the Lord Mayor and gold, and the other green and gold, were universally admired. The different carriages, as they passed their waiting house, by the corner of Temple-bar, set down those of their occupants (including the Lord Mayor, several of the Aldermen, &c.) who constituted the great detachment to receive the Queen and ride before her Majesty into the City. The Aldermen in their scarlet robes, and the members of the Common Council in their blue gowns, seated well with the genius of the scene, but the appearance of the legal functionaries in their wigs and gowns seemed somewhat to excite the curiosity of the multitude. At one house in Fleet-street, a small cannon was placed on the parapet, from which minute salutes were continually fired, whilst all the moving groups appeared to be in the highest state of good humour and excitement.

OPENING OF THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE.

SIR THOMAS GRESHAM—FROM THE PAINTING IN MERCERS' HALL.

This portion of the cortege was, certainly, the most novel. The first of the Common Councilmen in the procession, (See page 275) on the right hand, Mr. Gresham, is a descendant of the "Royal Merchant" who founded the Exchange.

PORTRAIT OF SIR THOMAS GRESHAM.

Of the famed "Royal Merchant," a memoir-sketch appeared in our journal of last week. We now annex the best known portrait of Sir Thomas, from the picture belonging to the Mercers' Company, and ascribed to Holbein, but Mr. Burgen considers, "with very unequal pretensions to the honour of having proceeded from his hand. It is on panel; has suffered considerable injury from injurious cleaning; and was, probably, the performance of some third or fourth-rate Flemish artist." He thus as it may, the Mercers' Hall painting has been preferred by Mr. Lodge in his "Portraits of Illustrious Personages." A black doublet, cap, and cloak, appear to have been Gresham's invariable costume. In his person, he seems to have been above the middle height, and handsome when a young man; he was lamed by a fall from his horse, in one of his posting expeditions in Flanders, when a broken leg was the consequence. "Gravity of deportment, and courtesy of manners, are hinted at by two old dramatists as having characterised him; and every means we possess of forming an opinion on the subject, leads to the belief that such was actually the case."

"Of Gresham," says Mr. Burgen, "it has been well remarked, that in founding a college, an exchange, and an asylum for the poor, he showed himself soli-citious to provide for the wants of youth, the convenience of manhood, and the necessities of age. * * * Gresham was the younger son of a private merchant, who enjoyed no privileges, and whose only honours were those of a well-spent life. He was the maker of his own fortune, and died while the brightest wits of the Elizabethan age were yet in their cradles."

LUDGATE-HILL.

So large a portion of her Majesty's subjects were, perhaps, scarcely ever before congregated within so small a portion of her Majesty's dominions as were to be found between the hours of nine in the morning and four in the afternoon, in the broad thoroughfare from Ludgate-hill to Cornhill. Before the sun had succeeded in dispelling the fog, a strong current of human beings had set in towards the centre point of attraction from all parts of the town; but, by about ten o'clock, when the avenues to this great artery were closed by the pressure from without, the tide ceased to flow or ebb, and the accumulated mass became stationary, we may even say, stagnant. The truncheons of the crowd-compelling policemen were then brought into requisition, but their peaceful weapons were obviously not so efficacious in inspiring the sight-seers with due respect for the constituted authorities, as the hoofs of the Blues and Life Guards' chargers—of which the profusus vulgus appeared to stand in righteous awe. Despite the general excellence of the arrangements in this part of the City, the municipal police would have scarce succeeded in maintaining order during the pageant without the assistance of the cavalry, who caracolled amongst the multitude with their well-trained chargers, doing their spitting gently, and invariably, exercising the utmost care, forbearance, and discretion under circumstances which must necessarily have been somewhat trying to their tempers. There appeared to be a general feeling of admiration amongst the comfortably seated spectators for the admirable manner in which these fine fellows performed their arduous and disagreeable duty.

At eleven o'clock, the Lord Mayor's state coach, containing his lordship and the officers forming his suite, passed towards Temple-bar, followed by several of the Aldermen in their private carriages, and the Sheriffs in their state carriages. It need hardly be stated that the Chief Magistrate of London was very well received. Nothing could be more unequivocal than the greeting given to him in this part of the town, especially opposite the London Coffee-house, the three great houses which form this establishment being filled to the attic with highly respectable and numerous company. Her Majesty passed up Ludgate-hill a few minutes after twelve o'clock; her progress along the streets was marked by the most enthusiastic cheering, and both the Queen and Prince Albert seemed to partake of the joyous spirit which seemed to animate the vast assemblages through which they passed. The procession was of course followed by an immense mob, and the streets gradually became less crowded, perfect good humour and hilarity prevailing amongst the people during the whole of the day.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD.

This locality was naturally one which excited much interest, and the company began to arrive as early as half-past seven in the morning, in order to secure their seats on the extensive platforms which had been previously erected. These scaffolding extended from the right hand top of Ludgate-hill all along the south side of St. Paul's Cathedral, as far as Watling-street, and were continued eastward for a considerable distance, and were put together in a most substantial manner. The seats were not fully occupied till an hour or so before the Royal cortege arrived, in consequence of the price originally demanded for the sittings having been higher than it should have been; but during the early part of the morning the charge was materially reduced, and hundreds of her Majesty's loving subjects availed themselves of this fact.

The attention of the thousands of spectators was kept on the qui vive from eight o'clock until twelve o'clock by the numerous equipages of the nobility and gentry who were on their route to the Royal Exchange. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, were each heartily welcomed. In the confusion the Duke of Wellington's carriage was not observed. Sir Robert Peel was sitting so far back in his carriage that until the equipage had passed few persons were aware of the right hon. baronet's presence. The portico of St. Paul's School was decorated with the royal standard and two union flags, and was covered with crimson draperies. The compartments were filled with a very numerous and elegant company. From the house of Messrs. Dakins, the tea-dealers, were suspended several banners, on which were the following inscriptions—"The sun never sets on her dominions;" "On the waves of the sea, on all parts of the earth, among every people and nation, hath she not possession." The houses of Messrs. Tupis and Co., Berens, Blumberg, and Co., Faldin and Co., and the other firms on the south side of St. Paul's, were severally graced with a galaxy of female beauty, in gazing on which the beholder could not fail to exclaim—

"From woman's eyes this doctrine I derive;
They are the ground, the books, the academies,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire."

Whether we turned to the right or the left, everywhere we found that "bright eyes did abound." A band, which took up a position in Watling-street, played a variety of airs, and helped to relieve the tedium which prevailed for some time. At twelve o'clock the Royal procession, headed by that of the civic authorities, passed along in the order already described, and it would be impossible to convey an adequate idea of the enthusiasm with which her Majesty was everywhere greeted. The cheers were such as to excite the evident gratification of her Majesty, who acknowledged the reception thus given her in her Majesty's usual graceful manner. From the windows of the vast houses in St. Paul's Churchyard waved thousands of handkerchiefs, accompanied with the cry of "God bless the Queen," &c. The enthusiasm which pervaded all classes at this period led them to forget the toil they had undergone since half-past seven in the morning, and good humour might be said to be "in the ascendant." At the moment of

THE PROCESSION PASSING THE MANSION HOUSE.

OPENING OF THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE.

HER MAJESTY CROSSING THE GREAT WEST PORTICO.

THE PROCESSION IN THE NORTH AMBULATORY.

SKETCH FROM THE PROCESSION, BY A CORRESPONDENT.

the Royal carriage arriving near the south door of St. Paul's, the crush amongst the crowd at the end of Watling-street was very great, but the few Life Guards who were patrolling rendered speedy and most efficient aid, without inflicting any injury, though some heads were knocked down in the momentary confusion. The eagerness of many persons to view the procession, on the one hand, and the curiosity of those who had rooms, &c., to let, on the other, was such that, the gutters having been taken out, a number of men sat on the top of the parapet of a house near the corner of Watling-street, hanging their legs over it, whilst others leaned back on the roof, placing their feet in the shallow gutter. Their position was such as to create a very unpleasant feeling on the part of those who beheld it.

CHEAPSIDE.

At an early hour of the morning the busy hum of preparation was heard throughout this locale to give effect to the auspicious event that was to take place—an event that will, no doubt, form an important feature in the historical incidents connected with this great metropolis. As early as nine o'clock the houses on either side of this spacious thoroughfare were filled to overflowing from the basement to the roof, and never before were the ample windows of the tradesmen's shops set off to such advantage. The beauty and fashion of London congregated together in extensive groups, and occupied the place of the merchandise with which these warehouses are usually stored. Several of the houses were ornamented with handsome flags and banners, bearing inscriptions appropriate to the great occasion.

The loving subjects of one of the best and most popular sovereigns that ever presided over the destinies of this great and glorious kingdom, were permitted to promenade the streets uninterrupted until eleven o'clock, when the splendid regiment of Life Guards appeared, and formed themselves into orderly positions, for the purpose of clearing the centre of the road, and confining the crowd to the pavements. They were ably assisted by a large body of the City police, and the moving masses fell back in good order, and formed themselves into compact lines on each side of the thoroughfare. The patience of the spectators was kept alive by the number of splendid equipages which occasionally passed, containing persons who were proceeding to take part in the procession, and which demanded general attention. The excitement was thus kept up until the Royal procession had arrived.

At half-past eleven o'clock, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent and suite passed. In a short time afterwards, Sir Robert Peel followed in his private carriage. At five minutes after twelve o'clock the head of the procession turned into Cheapside from St. Paul's, and as it proceeded slowly along this spacious thoroughfare it presented a truly gorgeous and imposing appearance. The myriads of human beings that thronged every available spot enjoyed a remarkably fine and prolonged view of the magnificent pageant until it had arrived in close proximity with the Exchange. At a quarter past twelve o'clock, her Majesty passed in front of Bow Church, the celebrated bells of which rang out a merry peal as a welcome to the "Queen of earthly Queens," and as she proceeded she was received with loud, fervent, and continuous acclamations.

"You would have thought the very windows spoke;
So many greedy looks of young and old
Through casements darted their desiring eyes
Upon her visage."

Her Majesty and Prince Albert bowing their heads repeatedly to the general welcome that was offered them, expressed their acknowledgments in the most courteous and condescending manner.

RECEPTION AT THE EXCHANGE.

Her Majesty, Prince Albert, and their suite, arrived at the western gate of the Exchange at a quarter past twelve o'clock.

The door at the western entrance of the Exchange was opened for the reception of the company soon after nine o'clock. At the same time a strong body of civic functionaries, consisting chiefly of members of the Joint Gresham Committee, who wielded in their hands the wands of office, took their station within the portico. As each visitor arrived, the ticket was formally demanded, and being presented, was solemnly inspected, mysteriously intimated, and then condescendingly returned; after which, a signal was given, the sliding gates were expanded for a moment, and the footman's holder was admitted into the interior of the building. The band of the Life Guards and of the Hon. Artillery Company were also in attendance, and were stationed in divisions in the quadrangle, and also in the portico. Among the early arrivals were Sir C. Napier, the Earl of Westmorland, the Marquis of Salisbury, Sir F. Pollock (Chief Baron of the Exchequer), and Mr. W. Holmes. These were soon followed by Lord J. Russell, who wore a splendid court dress, and appeared in excellent health and spirits. Very soon after his lordship's arrival, tremendous shouts from the thousands and tens of thousands assembled around burst upon the ear, and a carriage drove rapidly into the area, from which immediately alighted, his grace the Duke of Wellington. The moment his grace was recognized the band stationed in the portico struck up "See, the Conquering Hero comes," and every head was uncovered and bowed low to do him reverence. Notwithstanding this astonishing burst of national enthusiasm, his grace evidently retained his wonted composure, and, ascending the steps, calmly surveyed the portico, turned round and cast a glance almost of recognition at his own statue which adorns the area, surveyed the myriads of heads gathered around him, every one of which was strained to catch a glimpse of him, and the windows and balconies from which thousands of kerchiefs waved and enthusiastic tongues shouted his welcome, and then quietly walked towards the door of the principal entrance. Arrived there the official gentlemen, who had by this time resumed their posts, stood with the door in hand, but still closed, and looked at his grace, evidently awaiting the production of the red ticket.

Then followed a momentary pantomime, the most interesting and expressive we ever witnessed. His grace evidently had no ticket, or did not think it necessary to procure it, so he merely glanced at the closed door, and then at the official. "Can it be necessary?" was evidently the language of the mute demand, and it was understood, and responded to immediately; for, without a word said on either side, the door was opened, and with profound obeisance, his grace was ushered into the interior. Here his grace was immediately joined by Mr. Lambert Jones, and Mr. Tite, the architect, who conducted him over the building, while the band stationed inside likewise struck up in honour of "the conquering hero." Next to his grace arrived the Sub-Comptroller-General (Sir F. Thesiger), in full court dress, and soon afterwards the Earl and Countess of Lincoln. Shortly afterwards followed the Recorder of the City (the Right Hon. C. E. Law, Q.C.), in his official robes; Alderman Gibbs, with two ladies; and also Lord Granville Somerset and Sir Thomas Fremantle, who wore the rich official costume of her Majesty's Ministers. At about eleven o'clock his Grace the Duke of Cambridge drove up to the Exchange, attended by a body of Life Guards. The band immediately struck up "God save the Queen," and his Royal Highness was received in the portico by the Duke of Wellington, Mr. L. Jones, and Mr. Tite, with the former of whom he shook hands, and conversed very cheerfully. Among the next succeeding arrivals were the Right Hon. Sir James Graham (who carried under his arm a small green box, containing her Majesty's answer to the proposed address), the Chancellor of the Exchequer (Right Hon. H. Goulburn), and the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone. Each of these right hon. gentlemen wore the official costume of a Cabinet Minister. Soon afterwards the Bishop of London arrived in academic robes and cap, accompanied by Mrs. Blomfield. At a quarter past eleven her Grace the Duchess of Kent arrived, accompanied by her ladies in waiting, and attended by a detachment of Life Guards. Her Royal Highness was received by the military with the usual honours, while the band again played the National Anthem. Her Royal Highness was detained for some minutes in the portico, while some of the official gentlemen ran to collect the orders to receive her with the honours due to her illustrious station, but was at length received by the Duke of Cambridge, with whom her Royal Highness shook hands very cordially, the Duke of Wellington, the Cabinet Ministers, and the various civic functionaries before mentioned, and conducted by them to a seat in the banquetting-room, near that appropriated to her Majesty. Soon after the arrival of her Royal Highness a large party of the Yeomen of the Guard arrived, and took up their positions so as to form a passage for her Majesty through the portico into the quadrangle. As soon as this had been accomplished, a loud cheer from the multitude without announced the arrival of Sir R. Peel. The right hon. baronet wore the same costume as his official colleagues, and was accompanied by Lady Peel. He also was received in the portico by the members of the Gresham Committee and the architect, and stood there for some time conversing with the Duke of Wellington and other gentlemen around him. Nearly at the same time there arrived the Governor of the Bank of England, with Sir J. R. Reid, Mr. Pattison, M.P., and many other influential gentlemen connected with the City. Afterwards arrived in quick succession, the Master of the Rolls (Lord Langdale), Lord F. Somerset, Lord A. Fitzclarence, Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, Hon. G. H. Dawson, Marquis of Northampton, Earl of Dalhousie, Earl of Haddington, Viscount and Viscountess Caning, Viscount Castlereagh, Lord Hill, Sir G. Murray, Right Hon. J. C. Herries, Sir J. Macdonald, Hon. J. T. L. Melville, Sir I. L. Goldsmid, Sir H. Pottinger, &c. At twelve o'clock a distant shout, which was immediately taken up and continued throughout Cheapside, announced the near approach of her Majesty, and immediately every head was turned, and every eye strained westward to catch the first glimpse of the Royal procession. At length it came in sight, and her Majesty was seen bowing gracefully in acknowledgment of the homage paid to her, and of the loyalty and affection evinced by the heartfelt acclamations of all classes of her subjects.

As the Royal carriage passed the Mansion-house, cheers loud and long rent the air, which were as loud and wide. In a few moments after passing the Mansion-house, the Royal carriage reached the principal western entrance of the Royal Exchange, where it drew up in the centre. Her Majesty was handed out of the carriage by Prince Albert. Her Majesty, leaning on the arm of Prince Albert, then passed on to the interior of the Exchange, preceded by the Lord Mayor, bearing the city sword of state, and bowing as he ushered her Majesty and Royal Consort into the new building. As her Majesty went from her carriage to the inside of the Exchange, she was most vociferously cheered, while her immediate attendants, who had previously arrived in the Royal carriages, and the Ministers and other high officers of State, formed a lane through which her Majesty passed. Her Majesty smiled most graciously in recognition of the hearty reception given her by her loyal subjects, and gracefully acknowledged the courtesies made to her by her Ministers and State Officers as she proceeded.

It was a quarter past 12 o'clock when her Majesty and Prince Albert arrived at the western entrance of the Royal Exchange; and the cheerings of the multitude, the music of the military bands, which immediately struck up "God save the Queen," the waving of handkerchiefs and of banners of the gayest description, with which most of the houses in the vicinity were decorated, produced a sensation which it must take a long time indeed to efface. Immediately on her Majesty stepping out of her carriage, the Royal standard was hoisted on the top of the Exchange, and underneath that floated a banner bearing a combined representation of the Gresham, City, and Mercers' Arms. Along the roof of the north and south sides were also poles, eight on each side, to the end of each of which was affixed the union jack.

The second Engraving, at page 278, represents the Royal carriage passing the Mansion-house, sketched from a gallery under the Portico. The first Illustration, at page 277, shows a side view of the interior of the Great Portico of the Exchange (looking towards the Bank), with the arrival of her Majesty. Upon the ribbon at the head of the page are inscribed the motions of Gresham, the City, and the Mercers' Company.

INTERIOR OF THE EXCHANGE.

After the reception, her Majesty, leaning on the arm of Prince Albert, proceeded up the steps of the portico and through it to the entrance of the Merchants' Quadrangle, or, as it is usually termed, the Merchants' Area. Her Majesty was immediately preceded by the Lord Mayor, who carried the City sword of state. On entering the quadrangle, her Majesty, still preceded by the Lord Mayor and accompanied by all the chief personages, walked round the arcade of Ambulatory which surrounds the quadrangle. In the area of the quadrangle, a considerable number of ladies and gentlemen, principally members of the Common Council, and others connected with the City, had been accommodated; the band of the Coldstream Guards and that of the Grenadiers was also stationed within the quadrangle, and played the National Anthem as her Majesty entered, and while the Royal party walked round the ambulatory. During the same time, those who had been admitted into the centre of the quadrangle, formed in line on either side of the direct pathway from the portico up to the eastern end, leading to Lloyd's rooms. Along this pathway her Majesty and the rest of the Royal party walked up towards the foot of the staircase leading to Lloyd's rooms, after having completed the circuit of the ambulatory. The whole quadrangle presented a very gay and animated scene, formed by the brilliant uniforms of the noblemen and gentlemen who accompanied her Majesty, the bright groups of ladies who were to be seen at the windows and in the area itself, the martial music of the band, and the loyal cheering of the spectators.

The Engraving at page 277 and 284, represent these splendid stages of the ceremony—the Procession in the Great Northern Ambulatory, and the Quadrangle; the latter view being taken from the south-east angle.

THE BANQUETING ROOM.

Leaving the quadrangle, her Majesty and the royal party proceeded up the grand staircase, through the Vestibule, towards the suite of rooms called Lloyd's Rooms, which was to be the principal scene of the day's proceedings.

The principal apartment in which her Majesty was to be received is called the Subscribers' Room. It is 90 feet long by 40 wide, so that it afforded ample room for a grand entertainment. The tables were spread with every conceivable delicacy, and a profusion of the finest wines. There were four tables extending the whole length of the room, with seats on either side for the guests, the two centre tables being wider apart than the others, in order to afford a broad passage up the room to the cross-table, where a special preparation had been made for her Majesty, Prince Albert, the Duke of Cambridge, and several others of the chief guests. This table was covered with massive gold plate, of the most exquisite workmanship, and those who had arranged the banquet had not forgotten her Majesty's fondness for flowers, of which two large and beautiful bouquets were placed opposite where her Majesty was to sit. There were also some dishes of magnificent hot-house grapes, and also three or four dishes of very fine strawberries. Her Majesty's seat was placed at the centre of this cross-table, a little raised above the rest. There were some other seats on the right and left. Among the elegant decorations of the Royal table were napkins of exquisite fineness, bordered with the richest lace, one of which was placed opposite the seat of each of the guests. The southern end of the room was hung with rich crimson velvet, descending in massive folds from the ceiling; and ranged along the wall at the back of the Royal table, in rows reaching nearly to the ceiling, were some massive pieces of plate, bowls, salvers, and other large articles, all of the finest workmanship. Reflected in looking-glass, which formed the surface of the wall, this display presented a very brilliant appearance.

Leaving the southern end of the room, where the déjeuner was laid, under an archway at the south-east, you came to another room, in length 40 feet, and 25 feet wide, which will be used when the Exchange is open for commercial purposes as a reading room, but which, on the occasion of this Royal visit, was fitted up as a reception-room. The decorations here were particularly splendid. The eastern wall of the room was hung with a curtain of crimson velvet, 20 feet high, from richly-gilt wreaths. On either side at the top of the room is a gallery of very delicate framework. These galleries were not used for the reception of any spectators on this occasion, but the lightness and elegance of their structure relieved the effect of the massive hangings of the room. At the eastern end of this reception-room was a raised dais, three steps in height, and covered with crimson cloth, of the same with which the whole of the room was covered. On this dais there was a chair of crimson velvet and gold, for the use of her Majesty when receiving the address of the corporation. Beyond this reception-room some of the offices attached to Lloyd's were fitted up as retiring-rooms for her Majesty.

The guests who had received invitations to the déjeuner began to reach the Exchange very soon after ten o'clock. Indeed, before that hour there were very considerable assemblages of visitors, ladies and gentlemen. A detailed list of the chief guests will be found below.

The Earl and Countess of Lincoln arrived shortly before eleven o'clock. The Bishop of London and Mrs. Blomfield also arrived about the same time. Sir Robert and Lady Sale on their arrival were received with marked interest and respect by the company. Sir Henry and Lady Pottinger were also objects of much interest.

The Duke of Wellington, on entering the banquetting-room was received with the most lively demonstrations of respect. The band at the entrance of the room played the air "See, the conquering hero comes;" and the appearance of his grace was the signal for a general clapping of hands, and even some cheering from the gentlemen, and waving of handkerchiefs from the ladies. The Duke was welcomed at the door by Mr. Lambert Jones and some of the leading members of the Corporation, by whom he was attended to the top of the room. Sir G. Murray was among the gentlemen who accompanied the Duke. Sir R. Peel soon after arrived, and was the object of much attention. He was very warmly received by the company. Sir Robert was accompanied by Lady Peel, and before he came up stairs to the banquetting-room he had been shown round the building, the different purposes of which were explained to him by Mr. Tite.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent entered the room, leaning on the arm of her Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge. Their Royal Highnesses were received at the entrance by Mr. Alderman Humphrey, Mr. Lambert Jones, and some others of the authorities of the place, and were conducted to the throne-room, whence they went to her Majesty's private apartments. While their Royal Highnesses were proceeding up the room the band played the National Anthem. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Gladstone, Lord Fitzroy Somerset, and several members of the Cabinet arrived soon after.

Baron Brunow with the Baroness Brunow and several of the foreign Ambassadors, were also there.

By half-past 11 o'clock all the guests, except those who were in immediate attendance on her Majesty, had arrived, and the banquetting room was full.

Amongst the last of those who came was Sir James Graham, who, in his official capacity, inspected all the preparations that had been made for her Majesty's accommodation. He expressed himself highly satisfied with everything that had been done.

Her Majesty's approach was announced to the guests by a call from the upper end of the room of "The Queen is coming!" and the National Anthem was immediately played by the band of the Life Guards stationed outside. Immediately the whole mass of guests rose, and faced on each side the avenue through which her Majesty was to pass to the top of the room. Two lines were then formed on either side of this avenue, of ladies and gentlemen, glittering with diamonds and jewels, and brilliant in uniforms, military and naval, covered with orders and insignia. As her Majesty entered and passed up the room, preceded by the Lord Mayor, bearing the civic sword before him, and by the Aldermen and members of the Corporation, with their robes and wands of office, and followed by a brilliant suite of ladies, officers, Ministers, and Ambassadors, the whole company bowed repeatedly, at the same time receiving her Majesty with a loyal and respectful cheer. Her Majesty leaned on the arm of Prince Albert.

A scene more imposing and interesting from the great extent which it filled, and, at the same time, more brilliant and striking in the display which it occasioned, can seldom have been witnessed. The size of the building afforded space for a great effect; but the distinguished rank and position of the guests added an importance and an interest which mere numbers or state could not have produced. Within the compass of this room were assembled some of the highest in rank and the most distinguished in talent, not only in England, but in continental Europe; and the flower of the female aristocracy of this country were there to add the charm of beauty, and all those aids which their personal adornments could bring, to vary and make gay the scene. Their brilliant jewels, and dresses of the brightest and purest colours blent in variegated beauty, formed at once a gay and a soft contrast to the uniforms, military and civil, of the gentlemen, not less bright or various in colour, nor less dazzling, from the orders and stars with which their breasts were adorned. All the greatest colours of the rainbow were brought together in the living mass; chequered at every interval by the scarlet hues of the military officers, and the blue of the naval, the darker and more sombre Windsor uniform blurring with gold lace, and the gay bright colours of the costume of the foreign Ambassadors glittering with their many marks of Royal favour. Her Majesty appeared struck with the appearance of the place and the company, accustomed as she has been to such scenes; but she was evidently gratified at her reception, for she bowed repeatedly, and that in a manner indicating a desire to do more than reply by a more formal salutation to those who were endeavouring to offer her homage.

PRESENTATION OF THE ADDRESS.

Arrived at the upper end of the room, her Majesty did not take her seat at the Royal table, but proceeded with the Prince, to the inner banquetting-room. Her Majesty took her seat on the dais, Prince Albert standing on her right, on the second step, and the Duchess of Kent and the Duke of Cambridge on her left. Sir Robert Peel stood on the floor of the room, a little below Prince Albert, and Sir James Graham next Sir Robert, but nearer the foot of the throne, that he might be ready to receive her Majesty's commands in his official capacity. A guard of the Gentlemen-at-Arms, officered by Lord Forester, Sir B. Smith, and others, were in the throne-room at the entrance. As soon as her Majesty had taken her seat on the throne, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and other members of the Corporation and of the Gresham Committee retired, as a matter of form, on the assumption that they would prepare the address, although it had, of course, been prepared and written beforehand. In a few moments, they returned to the room, and formed a semicircle in front of her Majesty, the Lord Mayor a little in advance, and the Recorder on his right. The members of the Administration, with their ladies, the foreign Ambassadors, with their ladies, and some others of the chief guests, were then invited into the room to be present at the reception of the address.

Here again, the scene, though on a smaller scale, was imposing. The room contained the déjeune of the whole company, all the most distinguished of the distinguished persons present in the Exchange; and as an assemblage of commercial wealth, of hereditary rank, of political and diplomatic talent, of military and naval renown, and last, though not least, of female beauty, it would be difficult to match it within the same small space, or on an occasion characterized by so little of mere ceremonial, or of attempt at pomp and display. Her Majesty, as she sat on her throne facing the brilliant circle, looked indeed royal; and, what will perhaps please her subjects better, she looked in the full bloom of health. Her magnificent tress of diamonds became her admirably.

The Recorder, on an intimation given from the throne, then proceeded to read the address, which he did in a very emphatic way, appropriate to the sentiments it conveyed. We subjoin an official copy:—

"TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.
"The humble Address of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commoners of the City of London, in Common Council assembled,
"Most Gracious Sovereign,

"We, your Majesty's faithful subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commoners of the City of London in Common Council assembled, together with the Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Mystery of the Mercers, joint trustees of Sir Thomas Gresham, hail your Majesty's auspicious presence in the heart of the metropolis on this renowned and favoured spot with the liveliest sentiments of devoted loyalty and attachment.

"The privilege we this day enjoy of approaching your Royal person under the roof of the new Exchange revives the memory of the olden time, when your Majesty's illustrious predecessor, Queen Elizabeth, vouchsafed to adorn by her presence the simpler edifice raised by a citizen, and dedicated to the commerce of the world.

"Your Majesty in this respect emulates the example of that great monarch, who deemed it no disparagement of her imperial state to proclaim by the herald and to distinguish the work of a subject by the title of the 'Royal Exchange.'
"It is recorded in the graceful narrative of events inscribed on the foundation-stone of this building, that 'the relief of indigence and the advancement of literature and science' entered into the capacious scheme of the original founder of this noble institution, and were made subsidiary to the stability and grandeur of a commerce co-extensive with the habitable globe.

"Yielding to that eminent citizen and benefactor of his kind, Sir Thomas Gresham, the signal merit to plan and execute at his own charge this glorious work, we will rejoice to trace the assisting hand of the City and the ancient company of Mercers from the earliest prosecution of the design, and our gratitude is kindled on reflecting that each memorable epoch of the Royal Exchange is marked by the solicitude of the reigning monarch to raise and to rebuild the structure from the ashes to which it has been twice reduced by the calamitous effects of fire.

"King Charles II. commenced the former building on the 23d of October, 1667; and the illustrious Prince, the Royal Consort of your Majesty, under your Majesty's auspices, laid the first stone of the present edifice on the 17th of January, 1842.

"Design, therefore, Most Gracious Lady, to regard with your Royal approbation this work of our hands, the noble and well-constructed pile again raised by the Citizens of London, and erected on a site rendered worthy of the object of a vast undertaking, to endure, we fervently pray for ages, a memorial and imperishable monument of the commercial grandeur and prosperity, and the peaceful triumphs of your Majesty's happy reign.

"Signed by order of the Court,
"HENRY ALWYN MURPHY."

"Her Majesty listened to the address with marked attention, and bowed at its conclusion. She then turned to Sir James Graham, who handed her a written copy of her Majesty's answer, which she read in that clear and emphatic tone of voice which, though by no means loud or elevated, has made her so distinctly audible on several occasions in even the remotest parts of the House of Lords. Her Majesty's answer was as follows:—
"I receive with peculiar satisfaction this faithful address. It is a pledge of
(Continued on page 282.)

SPLENDID ENGRAVING

FOR THE SUBSCRIBERS
TO THE

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

COMPANION PRINT TO THE COLOSSEUM VIEW OF "LONDON IN 1841."

The Proprietors of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS have great pleasure in announcing the forward preparation of a most superb Engraving, as a companion to their celebrated large Print, entitled "London in 1841."

PANORAMA

THE RIVER THAMES,

showing at one view "the Royal-ware Thames," its "Forests of Masts," its crowded Docks and Port; its Fleet of Steamers; its

NOBLE BRIDGES, UNQUALLED IN THE WORLD;

its busy Wharves and Quays; and the various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate banks, including and exhibiting the winding of the "River Thames" through the mighty mass of buildings that form the metropolis of the Commercial World.

GREENWICH, AND ITS SUPERB PALACE-HOSPITAL;

Showing as distinctly as in a Map, yet with beautifully picturesque effect, the several

STREETS OF THE METROPOLIS;

with the many hundred Churches, Palaces, Columns, and Arches; Government Offices, and Public Institutions; Club Houses, Noble Mansions, and Palatial Homes; established Street Architecture, Terraces, and Villas; Theatres; Railways; Parks and Public Walks; Factories and Warehouses; and, in short, a perfect Picture of the vast extent, Architectural Character, and most Recent Improvement, of the

BANKS OF THIS NOBLE RIVER.

To be Engraved in the

FIRST STYLE OF THE ART,

From a most Elaborate Drawing made expressly for the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS;

And which has occupied the Artists for several months, so that the strictest reliance may be placed on its accuracy.

The entire length of the PRINT will be

UPWARDS OF EIGHT FEET!

but it is impossible to engrave one-fourth of the objects.

The interest of the subject cannot be surpassed, and the highest talent is employed in its execution.

32- Further announcements of this Magnificent Print will be daily given.

10th, Strand, April 25, 1844.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Nov. 3.—Twenty-second Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 4.—King William III. landed, 1688.
TUESDAY, 5.—Gunpowder Plot, 1605.
WEDNESDAY, 6.—Princess Charlotte died, 1817.
THURSDAY, 7.—First Gazette published, 1693.
FRIDAY, 8.—Milton died, 1674.
SATURDAY, 9.—Lord Mayor's Day; Prince of Wales born, 1841.

Rise and Fall of London Bridge, for the Week ending November 2.

Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m.	h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m.	h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m.	h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m.	h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m.	h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m. h. m. a. m.
7 30 8 16 5 34 5 34 10 9 10 43 11 16 11 44 6 0 6 10 6 31 6 33	7 30 8 16 5 34 5 34 10 9 10 43 11 16 11 44 6 0 6 10 6 31 6 33	7 30 8 16 5 34 5 34 10 9 10 43 11 16 11 44 6 0 6 10 6 31 6 33	7 30 8 16 5 34 5 34 10 9 10 43 11 16 11 44 6 0 6 10 6 31 6 33	7 30 8 16 5 34 5 34 10 9 10 43 11 16 11 44 6 0 6 10 6 31 6 33	7 30 8 16 5 34 5 34 10 9 10 43 11 16 11 44 6 0 6 10 6 31 6 33

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

- "An Interested Party." Penn, Bucks, cannot marry a deceased wife's sister.
- "A Native of Bath." Stuttgart, will find the View of Bath at page 215, vol. 1.
- "H. R. S."—We will endeavour to extend the University Intelligence.
- "H. R. S."—Bradford.—Bath.
- "Y. O. S."—may obtain the Act of Parliament, by order, of any bookseller.
- "H. E."—Gloucester.—The Garrick Club, King-street, Covent-garden.
- "H. H. H."—Margate; Ordo; will be entitled to the Large Print.
- "W. R. C."—Bunderton, is thanked; but we have not room.
- "J. W. P."—Barnstaple; A. Smith, Barnstaple.—"Taylor's Short-hand" may be obtained, by order, of any bookseller.
- "P. P. C."—We have not room for the monument at Narsdon.
- "F. B. R."—states the "Beggars' Petition" to have been written by the Rev. R. Moss, born in Norfolk about 1665.
- "T. J. S."—Mile-end-road.—Although frequently overlooked, it is not lawful.
- "J. T."—Brook-green.—Our correspondent's letter has been referred to the printer.
- "A Subscriber."—Abroad.—If the cultivation of the waste lands of Great Britain and Ireland were likely to turn out profitable, capitalists would soon be found to undertake it.
- "Kunst." Edinburgh.—The South Western Railway Carriage was built at the expense of the Railway Proprietors. In the description, it should have been mentioned that the interior was designed and trimmed by Mr. Herring, Fleet street.
- "A Leicestershire Cattle Dealer" complains that the mode in which cattle are delivered at the railway station at Camden-town calls for the interference of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and of the Railway Directors.
- "A Subscriber."—Warminster, should read our account of the Atmospheric Railway, in No. 113 of our journal.
- "C. E."—Rensgate, will be entitled to the Large Print.
- "H. H. N. B."—The irregularity shall be remedied.
- "H. D."—No.
- "An Old Subscriber."—We have frequently cautioned our subscribers against becoming shareholders in new schemes.
- "A Constant Subscriber."—Our demand for paper has so considerably increased of late, that the supply of one will be soon inadequate.
- BIRMINGHAM DOCKS.—Some explanation is due to our Birminghams and Liverpool readers of the delay of the engraving of the ceremony of founding the New Docks; the importance of which has only been surpassed by that of opening the Royal Exchange in the metropolis. Next week we shall illustrate the Grand Ceremony at Birmingham.
- INDIGIBLE.—Lines on the Opening of the New Exchange; The Love of Youthful Days; sunset, The Lunar Rainbow.
- "T. S."—Clerkenwell.—The Frenchman modestly meant to allow that London is half the size of Paris.
- "Alpha."—Meadow's French Pronouncing Dictionary." Negus was, we believe, named after the person who first mixed it.
- "A Subscriber."—We have not room for "Scholastic Tactics."
- "Margaret."—See future announcements.
- "Melton."—We do not know anything beyond the advertisement of "the Grand Distribution."
- "A Constant Reader."—Birmingham.—Indigestible, Riddle, by X. Y. Z.
- "Moody."—Colford.—"Taylor's System of Short-hand" improved by Harding.
- "A Correspondent."—The salary of the Governor-General of India is £20,000 per annum.
- "J. P."—Drummond-street.—If our correspondent has other evidence than a receipt that he has paid the money, it will be a sufficient discharge.

* The two middle pages of this number, are to be cut out by the binder and folded, and placed so as not to injure the plate in binding.

The Completion of the Description of the New Royal Exchange, with Engravings, will be given in our next.

Last week's Number contains a complete History of the Royal Exchange, from its first foundation, with many Engravings.

CHURCH.—"Barton." "J. W. P."—Barnstaple.—Referred to our chess correspondent. "C. H."—Your pawn may be exchanged for any piece you choose; thus, you may have two or more Queens, three or more Rooks, &c., on the board at once.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL.—We are indebted to a Governor of this Royal foundation for the following correction of our answer to a correspondent, "E. H. P." in No. 118, respecting Christ's Hospital:—The Lord Mayor and Aldermen are ex-officio Governors of Christ's Hospital. The Lord Mayor has two presentations annually (one as Lord Mayor, the other as Alderman), and each of the Aldermen has one presentation annually at Easter. The other Governors of the Hospital have a presentation about every third year, according to the number of vacancies. The amount of benefaction to the hospital by the nobility and gentlemen in order to render them eligible to be elected Governors of the Hospital, has been raised about two or three years ago from £400 to £500. The twelve members of the Court of Common Council who are elected Governors enjoy the like privileges which the other Governors, not being Aldermen, enjoy, so long as they shall continue members of Common Council; and the Court of Common Council fill up from time to time all vacancies by death or otherwise.

PART XXVI., is Now Ready, Price 2s. 6d.

* Any Country News Agent may receive Posting Bills, bearing his address, by informing our Publisher where a parcel can be enclosed, free of expense.

Q.—We are continually receiving complaints from subscribers respecting the slowly way some newsmen forward our journal by post, much to the injury of the work. Our advice is, change the agent for one who is more attentive. In consequence of the press of engravings, we are obliged to defer the illustration of the Fashions.

STEAM CAN'T DO IT!!!
THE IMMENSE SALE OF THE
ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

THIS WEEK, renders it IMPOSSIBLE to SUPPLY HALF THE DEMAND.

The Indulgence of the Public is earnestly requested until the whole number Ordered can be printed.

Office, 129, Strand, Nov. 2, 1844.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1844.

EVERY public event has two sides from which it is looked at—the anticipatory, and the retrospective. We need scarcely add that the backward view is not always so bright as the forward one; things are included in it that mar the harmony of the prospect. For unmingled gratification in this world it is better to trust to hope than memory. The opening of the Royal Exchange has been no exception to the very general rule; indeed, it has rather been a very striking instance of how a gratifying occurrence can be twisted and mismanaged till it produces a vast amount of dissatisfaction. From all we have heard and read, we have been compelled to come to the conclusion that the ceremony was converted into a selfish job by that most selfish of bodies, the Corporation of London. It does not require to be told by us that it has long lost the respect of the public; it is no longer the true representative of the wealth, power, and let us add, the integrity of the citizens of London. Yet, with so few claims on public regard, it took advantage of one of the very few occasions on which a prominence might have been accorded it without the accompaniment of contempt, to annoy and insult, individually and collectively, nearly every body and institution that have a real value and importance in the commercial community. The Exchange was built for the merchants at large, and it was seized on, on the day of opening, and appropriated as exclusively as if it had been the fee simple of the Corporation. The object of all the arrangements was evidently to make a show of her Majesty, for the gratification of themselves and their wives; the purpose of the day was lost sight of; the character of the festival perverted to that of a supplementary Lord Mayor's day; and the guiding principle of those who, by some means or other, had the exclusive management of matters, was to take the best possible care of themselves, by appropriating as many of the good places, and monopolizing as much of the good things as they decently, or rather indecently, could. The public press is teeming with complaints of the scandalous and unbecoming manner in which the merchants of London were swamped by the greedy ostentation of the corporate body. It is scarcely credible to find it stated that to such a body as Lloyd's, only twelve tickets were forwarded, and that in a tardy, ungracious manner! Why, the banquet itself was given in the rooms destined for the members of this association. But we have heard and read of omissions quite as bad: we understand that, as a body, the Directors of the East India Company were neither invited nor represented; nor the Elder Brothers of the Trinity House. To one of these bodies tickets were sent at the eleventh hour, as an after-thought; and from the grudging, unhandsome manner in which it was done, they were contemptuously returned. Admittance was most jealously withheld from everybody who could be excluded, except they happened to be connected with the Corporation. Yet that body might be searched throughout, and there are not two men among them who can properly call himself a banker or merchant; if the commerce of London was no greater than that which they represent, there would be no occasion for an Exchange at all. The same humbug-spirit of ignorance and insolence combined, caused every impediment to be thrown in the way of the press, though half the interest of the day consisted in its events being faithfully recorded. We do not complain on our own account, as we had an admission which the underlings did not venture to dispute. But several of the morning papers were either refused admittance or put to great inconvenience to effect it, and on the broad principle that the press had a right to be there, we condemn the exclusion. And throughout the arrangements there was a consistency of almost studied slight to those who had the best right to be present at such an inauguration, which has altogether so disgusted and irritated the mercantile body of London, that it is not at all improbable some marked mode of expressing its feelings may be resolved on. The Corporation should recollect this fact, and derive from it a truer notion of its real position; every place and office in it has fallen to its present possessor, not from any merit of the holder, but from the contempt in which the whole mixture of munificence and corruption is held by those whose wealth, position, and characters make them in reality what the Corporation is in appearance only—the influential men of the City. The occasion was a great one, and its interest was not entirely destroyed even by the mismanagement we have noticed; the Queen of a Great Empire was there, and nothing could diminish the real respect and loyalty with which she was received. Nor could any amount of official insignificance, thrusting itself every where to the exclusion of better worth, deprive men of the consciousness that the event was one worthy of being held in remembrance.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINDSOR, THURSDAY EVENING.—(From our own Correspondent.)—His Royal Highness Prince Albert left the Castle this morning, between nine and ten o'clock, in a travelling carriage and four, for the Slough Station, and proceeded thence by a special train to Paddington, en route to Buckingham Palace. Colonel Bouverie, equestrian in waiting, was in attendance upon the Prince. His Royal Highness returned to the Castle this afternoon at a quarter past three o'clock. The infant Royal Family were taken out for their usual airing, during the day, in the private grounds of the Castle. Her Majesty, attended by Lady Portman, took a carriage drive this afternoon. Major-General Wemyss was in attendance on horseback. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, the Countess Josephine Wintalaw, and Lady Charlotte Dundas, had the honour of joining the Royal dinner-party this evening. The band of the Royal Horse Guards (Blues) performed during the banquet, and her Majesty's private band attended during the remainder of the evening.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO THE MARQUESS OF EXETER.—The long-contemplated visit of her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert to the Marquis of Exeter, at Burleigh House, is expected to take place in the course of next week. It is understood that the Court will be absent from the Castle about four or five days. During the visit of the Queen and the Prince Consort to Burleigh House, the christening of the infant daughter of the Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter will take place, the celebration of which will be upon the most magnificent and extensive scale. Her Majesty will confer the honour upon the Marquis of being present during the performance of the sacred rite, and standing as one of the sponsors. The chamber containing the gorgeous state bed in which Queen Elizabeth slept nearly three centuries ago, will be appropriated for the use of the Queen, as well as the entire suite of state rooms, during her Majesty's stay at Burleigh House.

The Duke of Wellington left Aspley House, on Tuesday afternoon, for Walmer Castle. Lord Beauchamp arrived at the castle on Friday week last, to visit the noble and gallant duke, and remained till the next afternoon, when the learned lord went to Dover, and thence embarked for Boulogne, on his way to Paris, from thence intending to go to his estates in the south of France. The noble and learned lord has arrived in Paris.

Lord John Russell has returned to Dover to join his lady, who is residing there for the benefit of her health.

MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—The marriage of Viscount Loftus, eldest son of the Marquis of Ely, with Miss Jane Hope Vere, niece of the Marquis of Tweeddale, was on Tuesday solemnized at St. George's Church, Hanover-square, in the presence of a large circle of the nobility.

ACCIDENT TO THE HON. GEORGE EGERTON.—The Hon. George Egerton, second son of Lord and Lady Francis Egerton, has been thrown from his horse, a high-spirited animal, in the Fulham-road, and received some very severe contusions in his fall. The horse was so injured as to be obliged to be killed. The hon. gentleman is going on favourably.

Lord and Lady Sale have arrived at Windsor Castle on a visit to the Queen. We are sorry to announce the death of the Hon. Miss Wynyard, who, it will be recollected, was for many years bedchamber woman and constant companion of her late Royal Highness Princess Augusta. The deceased, who was in her 71st year, was third daughter of the late Lieutenant-General Wynyard.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

STRANGE DEATH OF A CHILD.—On Monday an infant, whose parents live in Ratcliffe-Highway, that had been left alone in bed, with a chair to prevent its falling out of bed, was found quite dead, hanging with its neck tightly fixed between the back rails of the chair, having evidently forced its head through, and then slipped out of bed before extricating itself.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.—A lamentable accident occurred on Monday morning in the Royal Exchange. An individual fell to the ground through one of the sky-lights of the building, and was very seriously injured. He was immediately carried to St. Thomas's Hospital in a very dangerous state.

ACCIDENT ON THE BRIGHTON RAILWAY.—As an engine was passing through

Folly-hill Cutting, a short distance from Hayward's-brath, on Saturday, a jolting motion intimated that the wheels had passed over some obstruction on the line. The engine was at once stopped, and the driver found that a man, who must have been lying on the rails, was nearly cut in two by the wheels, which had passed over the abdomen. He was quite dead. He is a labourer, named Mitchell, and had been drinking at several public-houses and beer-shops during Saturday. He passed from a companion at ten o'clock on Saturday night, in order to go home, and he had possibly taken the railroad as his nearest road, till, overcome by liquor, he probably lay down to sleep.

THE LATE MURDER AT DOVER.—John and William Clark, charged on the coroner's inquest, with their father, another brother, and a man named Smith, with the wilful murder of Samuel Constanter, a Dover police-constable, have been apprehended, and committed to Maidstone to take their trial.

SERIOUS INJURY BY A RAIL.—On Tuesday night, the proprietor of an ale and stout house, Southwark-bridge-road, was sleeping with his little girl, about three years old, who was lying in a cot adjoining his bed, when he heard the child scream several times, and as she remained on the ground for some time, she was taken into her father's bed, where she also kept on crying for some time. About three o'clock he was awake up by something hitting the forefinger on his right hand in a dreadful manner. He immediately got up, and found the bed-clothes covered with blood, which was flowing from one of the child's ears, which was dreadfully lacerated, as also his own finger. On searching the bed, an immense rat was discovered, which after some trouble was destroyed. Both the wounds are in a very painful state.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT TURNHAM GREEN.—A most frightful accident occurred on Tuesday afternoon, opposite the Post-office, Turnham-green. The driver of a market-gardener's wagon being fast asleep, suddenly rolled off, and two of the wheels passed over his body and killed him.

THE ALLEGED MURDER OF A WIFE AT LAMBETH.—In our Union-hall police report, last week, we gave the examination of a Mr. Brenton, an apothecary at Lambeth, on a charge of murdering his wife. The inquiry before the coroner lasted a considerable time. The jury, after being locked up many hours, returned a verdict of "manslaughter against Mr. Brenton," and he was committed on the coroner's warrant.

SUICIDE OF A LITERARY CHARACTER.—Mr. William Thompson, a reporter on the Newcastle Chronicle, committed suicide last week by cutting his throat. It is supposed that the cause was his dissipated life, and his consequent loss of a regular duty. He was well known as a poet, and was the author of some excellent pieces in the periodical magazines. The jury gave a verdict of "Temporary insanity."

SPITOMES OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

One of the inmates of the Grand-Hospice at Brussels has attained the age of 109 years and 6 months.

There is a report that in the vessel which took out Barber and Fletcher, the will-tongers, a fever has broken out, to which several of the crew have fallen a sacrifice, and which had also communicated to some of the convicts, by which, it is said, Barber himself has also become a victim. He has, it is said, left behind him some important memoirs connected with the will-tongers.

The proposal to make a railroad from Bremen to Hanover has received the sanction of the authorities, and the requisite funds have been provided.

Westminster bridge has been again thrown open for carriages. Several improvements have been made.

A letter from St. Petersburg announces that the Emperor Nicholas has been so much affected by the death of the Grand Duchess Alexandra, that his health has much suffered, and it was lately found necessary to apply leeches three times. He lives almost alone, and takes no part in public affairs.

A terrible murrain is raging among the cattle in the south of Russia, more especially in the neighbourhood of Odessa.

Sir Thomas Kirkpatrick, sheriff of Dumfriesshire, died suddenly last week. He had been sheriff of the county for 33 years.

The planet Jupiter is now nearer to the earth than it will be for nearly twelve years to come, and, therefore, looks considerably larger than usual. With a magnifying power of 95 diameters, the planet now looks much larger than the moon.

A letter from Constantinople, dated October 9, says:—"In the night of the 2nd of this month, Pera, which has so often suffered by fire, was again visited by a great conflagration. The fire broke out in the quarter built of wood, and spread with great rapidity towards the north-west, and was not put down till it had raged for eight hours. The lowest estimate makes the number of houses reduced to ashes 200, the highest 400.

A Constantinople letter of the 10th October, says:—"Mehermet Ali has convinced the Paris upon the subject of the treaty with England for the passage of the Indian mail; and the answer received was, that everything in such an arrangement was left to his own judgment and prudence."

Letters from Leghorn of the 20th ult. state that political prosecutions are still being continued in the Roman territory, and that several persons had been obliged to fly into Tuscany. The persons implicated in the affairs of 1843 and 1844, not yet condemned, were to be shortly judged; and it was supposed that after their condemnation the Pope would record an amnesty in favour of the less compromised, and send the others into exile.

The German papers continue to speak of the objections made by England to the treaty of Berne with the Zollverein, and now state that the British Minister at Brussels had declared to the Belgian Government, that every new concession of the kind would be looked upon by the British Cabinet as a formal act of hostility to England.

The first section of the railroad of Lower Silesia, viz., from Breslau to Leignitz, a distance of about 80 English miles, was opened on the 18th. This is part of the great line of railway which will extend from Kiel (Holstein) to Trieste, and thus connect the Baltic Sea with the Adriatic.

Accounts have been received from Carthagen of the alarming illness of Major-General Nest, who is residing in that town.

The celebrated Professor of Anatomy and Physiology, Dr. Ritter Von Serenar, died at Vienna on the 10th ult. He was Vice-director of the Imperial (Joseph's) Academy in the Austrian capital, and from his extensive learning and professional acquirements, was considered in Germany one of the most eminent men of his age.

Professor Liebig left England on Tuesday last for Germany. It was in contemplation to have given him a public entertainment, but being necessitated to officiate at the Göttingen University, the lectures at which foundation commenced a week ago, he was obliged to decline the invitations received from several scientific bodies.

The Courier Français states that Louis Philippe has sent a splendid doll, worth 10,000 fr., to the Sultan Abdul Medjed, as a present for his daughter Naimé, who is four years old.

A letter from Frankfurt of the 22nd mentions a report that the Emperor of Russia is about to recognize the independence of Belgium, and to establish diplomatic relations with that country.

At the recent reinterment at Dresden, of Weber, the immortal composer of Der Freyschütz, about a thousand persons of the highest distinction joined the funeral cortege. Cherubini's Requiem was performed on the occasion, whose name, with those of Jomelli and Mozart, was placed in an urn, to be decided by lot which of the three composers' requiems was to be performed.

POSTSCRIPT.

THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.—The anxiety to obtain a view of the interior of this edifice still continues. Yesterday the applicants for admission were greater than ever, and from the time the doors were opened till the close the crowding and crushing were awful. Several women got driven by the pressure against the barriers, over which some gentlemen, attracted by their shrieks, drew them and released them from danger. Some children were extricated at the same time. Among the immense concourse of persons, several of the "right fingered gentry" have been extremely active; many complaints having been made of the loss of pocket-handkerchiefs, &c. On Thursday afternoon a gentleman named Sraff, holding a situation in a mercantile house in the City, had his pocket picked of his pocket-book, containing Bills of Exchange and private memorandums. Fortunately, the gentleman had a few minutes previous to his entering the Exchange deposited £150 in bank-notes at his banker's, in Lombard-street. The Bills of Exchange were not endorsed, therefore they are of no use.

SIR WILLIAM FOLLETT.—Dr. Bright, whose professional services were devoted to the Attorney-General since his departure for Italy, has returned to this country from Milan, leaving his patient there, greatly improved in health. Sir Wm. Follett does not intend returning to England before February.

INTERDISPOSITION OF SIR CHARLES THORNTON.—Sir Charles Thornton was this morning (Friday) seized with a fainting fit in Westminster Abbey. In a short time, after proper remedies had been administered, Sir Charles was sufficiently recovered to be able to walk to the residence of the Dean.

COUNTY PALATINE OF LANCASTER.—The Vice-Chancellorship of this court having lately become vacant by the death of Mr. Holt, Lord Granville Somerset, the Chancellor of the Duchy, has selected Mr. Tait as his successor. Mr. Renton Nicholson, better known perhaps as the Judge of the Judge and Jury Society, and keeper of the Garrick's Head, Bow-street, has been examined again at the Insolvent Debtors' Court, and after giving some further account of his business, was ordered to be discharged.

NEWMARKET RACES.—(Friday).—Miss Hawthorn paid forfeit to Fobish-Balligh. Scabree beat Greenwich-Namie. Green Fish beat Pan-fisher. Garry Owen beat Plantagenet. Event won the Second Class of the Nursery Stakes, and Rose of Cashmere the other.

LAMENTABLE ACCIDENT AT OLDHAM.—We have received from Oldham an account of a very fatal accident which occurred there on Thursday afternoon. A portion of the cotton-mill of Messrs. Ratcliffe suddenly fell down, burying all the people at work in it. Up to half-past eight o'clock in the evening about 12 or 14 bodies had been found. It is not yet known how many are missing, but report says 30 or 40.

SAFETY OF DR. WOLFF.—The Indian mail has brought accounts from Constantinople, which state, on the best authority, that advice has been received of the arrival of Dr. Wolff at Meru, on his way to Teheran. Having thus crossed the frontier of Bokhara, his personal safety has been insured, and his return to the civilized world will be hailed with general satisfaction.

ER MALESTY TO OPEN THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE.

(Continued from page 278.)
the affectionate loyalty of my people, presented on an auspicious occasion in a place long renowned as the centre of the commerce of three realms.
"It delights me to behold the restoration of this noble edifice, which my Royal ancestors regarded with favour, and which I esteem worthy of my care.
"Within the last three years, when fire had destroyed the ancient building my beloved consort laid the new foundation, and this day I gladly celebrate the completion of the work, quickly executed, but grand and perfect in all its parts.
"The edifice of the Exchange, the advancement of science, the extension of commerce, were the objects contemplated by the founder of the Exchange.
"These objects are dear to my heart. Their attainment will, I trust, be recorded among the peaceful triumphs of my reign; and I shall rejoice if I am thus enabled, by the blessing of Divine Providence, to promote the prosperity and happiness of all classes of my subjects."

The presentation of the Address is represented in the Engraving at page 283. At an invitation from the throne, the Lord Mayor then stepped forward and knelt before her Majesty, who gave him her hand to kiss.

Her Majesty was then graciously pleased to say to the Lord Mayor, "It is my intention, Mr. Mayor, to confer the dignity of a baronet upon you, to commemorate this event." Her Majesty, looking to the Secretary of State, added, "Sir James Graham, see that the patent is prepared."

[This gracious intimation has already been carried into effect, and the Gazette of Tuesday contains the announcement that the Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto the Right Hon. William Maynard, of Postford-house, in the county of Surrey, Lord Mayor of the city of London, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.]

The Lord Mayor made an obeisance to her Majesty and returned to his former place. The Lord Mayor then again stepped forward, and presented to her Majesty Mr. Lambert Jones, the mover of the address, and Mr. Harrison, the seconder, who both had the honour of kissing her Majesty's hand. The Lord Mayor also presented Mr. Aston, the Master of the Mercers' Company, and the two Sheriffs, Messrs. Sidney and Hunter, who also had the same honour. Mr. Tite, the architect of the Exchange, was also presented to her Majesty by the Lord Mayor, and her Majesty was graciously pleased to give him her hand to kiss.

Both the sheriffs were prevented from taking any part in the Royal procession within the Exchange through being shut out at the western entrance. It appears that some of the mounted policemen were equally unfortunate. Whether to attribute this accident to mismanagement on the part of the officials, or to the awkward horsemanship of the civic functionaries, it is impossible to determine.

THE DEJUNER.

As soon as this ceremony had been performed, the Corporation, the Ministers, Ambassadors, and others who had been present in the throne-room, retired to the banquetting-room, where they immediately took the seats which had been assigned to them. Her Majesty, accompanied by the Prince, the Duchess of Kent, and the Duke of Cambridge, retired to the private apartments, where they remained for nearly twenty minutes.

The following is a list of the principal persons present, as they were seated prior to the return of her Majesty to the banquetting-room:—

Sir R. Peel and Lady Peel, the Duke of Wellington, Mr. Goulburn, Lord Granville Somerset and Lady G. Somerset, the Duke of Norfolk, the Marquis of Exeter, the Earl of Lincoln, the Earl of Liverpool, the Earl of Jersey and Lady Jersey, Lord Wharfedale, Sir J. Graham, Mr. Gladstone, the Marquis of Anglesey, Earl De la Warr, Earl of Dalhousie, Earl of Rosslyn, Earl Jernyn, Sir G. Murray, Marquis of Salisbury, Marquis of Northampton, Lord Fitzroy Somerset, Viscount Casling, Viscount Harcourt, Lord Castlereagh, Lady Ford, Bishop of London, Sir Robert Peel and Lady Peel, Sir Henry Pattinson and Lady Pattinson, the Lord Chief Baron, Lord Langdale, Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, the Earl of Hereford, Lord Forrester, Sir Thomas Fremantle, the Earl of Westmorland, Lord John Russell, Lord Ernest Russell, Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, Lord Dufferin and Lady Dufferin, Major Graham and Mrs. Graham, Lord and Lady Seymour, Sir F. Thesiger, Sir T. Wilde, Mr. Assell, Sir J. Keathley, Captain Bullock, Mr. G. R. Robinson, Mr. W. Cotton, Sir W. Gossett, Mr. Haines, Mr. Melville, Sir C. F. Williams, Mr. Rennie, Sir John McDonald, Hon. J. Melville, Mr. G. Lyall, Mr. H. Kemble, Sir C. Napier, Mr. Brownrigg, Mr. Aaron Chapman, Mr. J. A. Smith, Colonel F. Wood, Baron Rothschild, Sir L. L. Goldsmid, Mr. T. Chapman, Sir M. Montagu, Mr. W. Wedgell, Major Freshfield, Mr. Hubert, Professor Airey, Sir J. R. Reid, Mr. Haines, Mr. Milne, Mr. Cooke, Mr. Bonham, Archdeacon Hollingsworth, Major Kingston, Mr. Hardy, Mr. Holmes, Sir W. Clay, Sir G. Leppert, Sir W. Young, Mr. Masterman, Mr. John Simpson, Mr. W. W. Saunders, Mr. John Robinson, Mr. Deane, Mr. Pattison, Mr. G. Anson, Mr. Palmer, Mr. J. S. Walker, Mr. J. S. Sutton, Mr. C. Barton, Mr. R. Barnard, Mr. R. Sutton, Mr. G. Palmer, Mr. W. Newham, Mr. J. H. Palmer, Mr. C. F. Johnson, Mr. T. Watney, Mr. De la Force, Mr. John Day, Mr. L. F. Wilson, Mr. Heath, Mr. Shepherd, Sir H. Willock, Sir H. Pelly, Mr. R. L. Jones, Mr. Dean, Mr. G. R. Dawson, Mr. W. H. Dawson, Mr. Stephenson, Mr. Walker, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Alagar, Mr. Hasky, Mr. Gurney, and their ladies.

The Foreign Ministers present were:—The Belgian Minister, the Netherlands Minister, the Venetian Minister, the Neapolitan Minister, the Wurtemberg Minister, the Brazilian Minister, the Danish Minister, the Saxon Minister, Baron Behaven, the Austrian Minister, the Russian Minister, the Portuguese Minister, the Russian Minister, the Turkish Minister, the American Minister, the Mexican Minister, M. Mesquero, Count Raval, Sir Robert Chester, and their ladies.

Among the members of the Corporation were, besides the Lord Mayor, Sir Claudius Hunter, Mr. Alderman Farchrother, Mr. Alderman Brown, Mr. Alderman Gibbs, Mr. Alderman Mansgore, Sir John Pina, Bart., Sir Peter Laurie, Mr. Alderman Moon-indeed, nearly the whole of the Court of Aldermen; also the Recorder, the Common Serjeant, Mr. Sergeant Mewweather, the Town-Clerk, the Remembrancer, and nearly all the deputies of wards.

Her Majesty's arrival in the throne-room took place at about twenty minutes to one o'clock. The presentation of the address occupied about half an hour, and her Majesty remained about a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes in the private apartments before returning to the banquetting-room. On her return, her Majesty at once proceeded to the throne-table, where she took her seat, Prince Albert sitting on her right, and the Duchess of Kent and the Duke of Cambridge on her left.

The company, who had risen on her Majesty's entrance, then became seated, and the déjeuner commenced, grace having been said by the Bishop of London, thus:—"O Lord, grant us grace to be thankful for Thy gifts and mindful of the benefits of Thy Divine Providence."

The repeat having concluded, the Lord Mayor, standing at the right of her Majesty's chair, said—"I have her Majesty's permission to give you the health of Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria."

The toast was received with every mark of loyal honour.

The Lord Mayor then gave, in the same terms, "The Health of Prince Albert," which was also responded to enthusiastically.

The Lord Mayor next gave, in the same terms, "Albert Prince of Wales and the Royal Family."

The Duke of Cambridge stood up to acknowledge the toast, which was duly honoured.

The Lord Mayor then said, "Her Majesty has commanded me to give 'Prosperity to the City of London.'"

It is unnecessary to say that this toast was received with every mark of honour and enthusiasm by all the guests, as well as by the hosts themselves.

During the repeat Mr. Lambert Jones went round the tables and distributed among the guests a medal commemorative of the great event of the day. On the one side of this medal, which is about the size of a two-shilling piece, is the head of her Majesty, with the inscription "Royal Exchange opened by her Majesty Queen Victoria, Oct. 25, 1844." On the reverse are presented three shields, with these arms respectively:—the Gresham arms at the top, surmounted by the grasshopper; the City arms on the left; and the arms of the Mercers' Company. These are surrounded by an inscription—"First stone laid by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, January 17, 1844." The medals given to the chief guests were of gold, the others of silver; but some of the latter (those given to the chief officers) are to be replaced by gold ones, as soon as they can be struck off.

THE ROYAL TABLE.

The appointments of her Majesty's table were entirely of gold, and the dinner service was expressly manufactured for the occasion. This consisted of three courses, and was of very choice and elegant design. The handles of the knives and forks were of the most elaborate workmanship, and represented knights in full armour.

The spoons were "Apollon" spoons, and of exquisite chasing; they presented a splendid specimen of the elaborate finishing of the chasing of the middle ages.

This portion of the plate appeared to interest her Majesty, who was observed to direct the attention of Prince Albert and the Duchess of Kent to it.

The dessert plates were of very costly china, also expressly manufactured for the occasion. They bore the Royal arms in the centre, and the arms of the City of London, of the Mercers' Company, and of Sir Thomas Gresham round the border. The colour of the porcelain was Royal purple.

The doyleys were unique. They were of peach-coloured satin, with corners of white satin, in which were very beautifully worked a crown and sceptre, a grasshopper, and the arms of the City of London.

The dessert glasses for the use of her Majesty displayed the same good taste. They were delicately engraved with the same arms that we have described as being worked in the doyleys. The other glasses were in a similar style, but no two were alike.

Among the wines placed upon the Royal table was some very choice Sherry—viz., some of the same built from which his Majesty Ferdinand seventh of Spain, on his visit to Xeres, in 1824, was entertained. It was from the finest produce of the best vine in the most celebrated vineyard in all Spain, Macanudo, and was at the time of Ferdinand's visit to Xeres one of the oldest and choicest wines of the country. The sum of £130 was paid for the built from which the wine in question was selected.

In keeping with the choice character of this wine were the glasses placed on the Royal table, and out of which it was drunk sparkling. They were beautifully chased in design and elaborately engraved, and were, as well as a passing glance would enable us to judge, in the Venetian style.

Immediately behind the Royal table the wall of the room was covered with crimson cloth, with the Royal arms in the centre, and flags on either side. Here there was a sideboard of costly plate. Among the many massive gold chafers were two deserving a few words of description—one representing the adoration of the Magi, an exquisite piece of workmanship; and the other representing the battle of the Gods, in bold relief.

Upon the long tables there was a profusion of gold tarts and ornaments, which were filled with flowers. These gave a very pleasing effect to the tables. The value of the plate in use on this occasion was stated to be upwards of £100,000.

The scene of her Majesty's table was very tastefully illuminated in blue and gold.

On a gold dish immediately before her Majesty were some remarkably fine grapes, presented by Mr. Geo. Crawshaw, the well-known muscivore. There was also a profusion of strawberries of a very large size upon the table, as well as some natural flowers of very rare description beautifully arranged.

The four long tables of the banquetting-room were decorated with a variety of gold and silver ornaments, filled with very beautiful and choice flowers, both natural and artificial, the value of which, perhaps, may be gathered from the fact that the ladies took away the greater portion of them.

The giving of the last toast concluded the déjeuner, and after a few minutes had elapsed, her Majesty rose from her seat, and proceeded, escorted by the Prince, to her private apartments, where she remained a short time. At about twenty minutes after three o'clock her Majesty returned, and proceeded towards the door of exit, through the two lines of gentlemen and ladies, and preceded by the Lord Mayor and the members of the Corporation. Her Majesty was cheered on leaving the room. The Royal party proceeded down the staircase to the quadrangle, where a considerable number of ladies and gentlemen had obtained admittance. The band of the Grenadiers were stationed in the quadrangle, and played the National Anthem, on her Majesty's appearance. The Coldstream band was at the entrance.

During the déjeuner, the band played—Overture, "La Siren," Aubrey; "Le Pourpoint, Don Pasquale," Danter; and several popular airs.

Among the more remarkable dishes on the table was a magnificent baron of beef, weighing upwards of twenty stone, and surmounted by a figure of St. George and the Dragon.

THE ROYAL BILL OF FARE.

The menu for the Royal table was, correctly, as follows:

Portage de Tourne à la Reine d'Angleterre.	Portage de Tourne Clair.
Portage de Ferdinand (Ranc).	Portage à la Reine.
Entrées Chaudes.	Entrées Froides.
Pilete de Grouse à la Périgord.	Cailles à la Maitre d'Hotel.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Reine.
Parade de Volaille à la Reine.	Mayonnaise de Perdreau.
Salade à la Reine.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Macaroni à la Périgord.	Agneau à la Reine.
Macaroni à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Chaud-froid de poulet à la Reine.	Pilete de Poularde à la Cardinal.
Hare de saumon à la Reine.	Macaroni de Perdreau.
Troisième course de saumon aux truffes.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Chapeau à la Montmorency.	Agneau à la Reine.
Artichaut à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Salade à la Montmorency.	Croquettes d'Agneau aux oignons.
Grouse à la Reine.	Macaroni de Grouse.
Croquettes de Venaison en Chasseur.	Croquettes à la Re

The papers all agree together,
He wore a "Spanish" hat and feather,
But 'twas as shabby a creature
To wear before a Royal Queen
As any that I've ever seen.
For, forsooth, miss in Temple Bar,
I've often brought a better far—
Having had a sword upon his shoulder,
Neither the gold and great Queen Rose or Any other performance
Could do it better,
(He looked so silly)
And then, to make it all repeated
"A Baronet your's now created Rose up, Sir Billy!"
Next turning on her heel about
"Graham you'll make his 'Patent' out,
Soon as you please."
"My Liege, there shall be no delay,
But first you know, he'd have to pay
The office fees!"
"Allowed!"
Now the crowd,
Scarcely began to disperse, for 'twas then getting late,
So the coaches were ordered to the Queen and her maids,
Having finished a bumper or two of Champagne,
"Cut their luckies" to Slough, by the three o'clock train.
You're got off the news now, so Peggy, my honey,
If you want any more, you must cut with your money,
For you'll read nothing else in the most of the papers,
But of peacocks, and lacers, and guards cutting capers,
Of chieftains, waving handkerchiefs, flags, and all that;
Which, between you and me, is exceedingly fat.
If you want the "real thing," Peg—I don't overrate it—
Buy the "News" with the pictures, "THE GREAT ILLUSTRATED!"
Let me know in your next how gets on the Reposée,
And "the boys," as they will since they got out of jail.
No more for the present—I'm monitoring dry,
So must send for a drop of the native.—used by

THE THEATRES.

Although the present month is proverbially considered the dulllest one in a theatrical point of view, yet the leasars of the different establishments have small cause for complaint. All their new pieces have met with very fair success; and they have been filled each night with good average audiences. Activity has certainly been shown in the arrangements of all, and there is novelty yet to come. Mr. Bourgeois's five act comedy has been read, and will be produced within ten days at the Haymarket. Its present title is "Old Heads and Young Hearts." The cast comprises Messrs. Farren, Charles Mathews, Strickland, Howe, Tibbels, Miss Julia Bennett, &c. Several new farces are accepted at the Lyceum, and another burlesque on the stocks. Messrs. J. Beckett and Lemon are underlined as the authors of an extravaganza at the Strand, to be called "The Knight and the Sprite; or, the Cold Water Cure;" founded, we believe, on "Ondine;" and a farce by the latter gentleman is also announced. We begin to look for something new from Drury-lane. "The Syrian" cannot be called a great hit, with all its excellence; and "The Bohemian Girl" is now somewhat worn out. Mademoiselle Plunkett, however, has been well received in the "Revolt of the Harem," which, for the off-nights, is a vast improvement upon the "Deserter of Naples" and "Three-fingered Jack."

HAYMARKET.

Mr. Marble appeared here on Monday evening, and was well received. As we noticed this gentleman's clever acting at the Strand, and as the piece in which he played was the same—"Yankee Land"—there is no occasion for further remark.

LYCEUM.

A pleasant comedietta, called "Watch and Ward," was produced here on Monday evening, and with perfect success. It is a translation from a French piece "Le Chevalier de Gue," and was adapted to the English stage about three years ago, by Mr. Planché, at Covent Garden, under the title of "The Captain of the Watch." On the present occasion, however, a trifling alteration has been made in one of the principal characters. This is the plot: the Baron de Brissac (Mr. F. Mathews), an old beau, who, in spite of his years, believes that he is still captivating, has a fair ward, Isabel (Miss Farebrother), in love with a young officer, Victor de Lussac (Mr. Kinloch). Taking advantage of the guardian's absence, who goes to visit a gay widowed Countess, the servant, Louise (Mrs. Wigan), contrives to inform the lover that the street-door will be left open, if he chooses to come, and see the lady of his affections. Meanwhile, an Irish officer in the French service, Captain O'Donnell, having got into some scrape in the city, is making his escape from the guard, of which he is the captain; and seeing the door open walks in. Just at this moment the Baron returns, and finding O'Donnell, insists upon knowing who he is; upon which the ready-witted Irishman makes up a diverting story about his having killed some one who had deceived his sister, which so touches the old gentleman that he insists upon his remaining. Night comes on and O'Donnell is left alone, when Louise comes to ask for Victor, and finding an officer, takes him for the real lover in the obscurity and conducts him to her mistress. Isabel is thrown into a dreadful state of alarm, as well as her servant, when they discover the mistake; and as the uncle is heard approaching, there is no resource left but to hide O'Donnell in Isabel's chamber. Meantime, the real lover has come to his appointment, and the old man finding him there, and still taking him for O'Donnell, brings him into the house, that he may find a shelter for him from the police. A very amusing episode now takes place, in the course of which O'Donnell's hat is discovered, forming the best situation in the piece; and the mystification at last assumes a serious aspect by O'Donnell's appearance from Isabel's room. But this accident ultimately leads to the éclaircissement, and then all is explained, and the piece concludes with leaving everybody satisfied, including the audience. The performers acquitted themselves excellently well; and Mr. Wigan's quiet humour and capital burlesque as the Irish Captain, kept the house in high spirits from beginning to end. Mrs. Wigan had a character exactly suited to her, in the intriguing servant, which she played with great archness; and Miss Farebrother was a very charming Isabel, in a powdered head-dress of the Marie Antoinette style. It is unnecessary to say aught of Mr. Frank Mathews' admirable personation of old men: he performed with his usual ability, and that is the highest praise we can award him. At the conclusion of the piece, Mr. A. Wigan—whose maiden effort in dramatic authorship it was reported to be—announced it for repetition every evening until further notice.

ADOLPHI.

On Tuesday night, a piece called "The Mysterious Stranger," was brought out at the above theatre, and achieved a complete success. It is a translation, by Mr. Charles Selby, of a comédie vaudeville which has attained a great degree of popularity in the French capital, termed "Satan; ou, le Diable à Paris." The adapter has had the good sense not only to mention the name of the original drama in the bills, but those of the authors, Messrs. Clairville and Damarin—a practice, which, in justice to our neighbour dramatists, ought to be generally followed. The plot is most ingenious, albeit somewhat improbable, and highly interesting; and, although rather complicated, may be easily followed. It turns on the plans of a "Mysterious Stranger," represented in the bills by five asterisks, and popularly supposed to be Satan (Madame Celeste) to open the eyes of a young French nobleman, Comte de Beauvois (Mr. Hudson), by showing him the utter heartlessness of all those by whom he is surrounded—his friends, and even his intended; and preserving his fortune. To effect this, the Étincelle first appears as a "gentleman in black;" and then successively as a strange princess at a party, a victim of the low quarters of Paris, an officer, and a young lady; finally, gaining her end in proving herself the guardian angel of Beauvois, instead of the fiend, confessing that after all she is but mortal, and winning his heart and hand by her devotion. In working out this idea several situations are brought round which are peculiarly effective; and the interest of the piece never flags once, but is kept up by the plottings of a rascally banker, two fashionable scamps, a gang of passport forgers, a heartless worldly girl, and a circle of double-faced acquaintances.

Great credit is due to Madame Celeste for her personation of the various characters presumed to be sustained by Satan—perhaps the best being that of the gamin, at the end of the first act. It was a perfect realization of the idling rogue of the Quartier d'Antoine, the aspirant to the fellowship of the tapis franc; and the bit of dancing with which she accompanied the chorus was inimitable. The first dress of the gentleman of the present day was also most effective, as was her acting. She was, to our thinking, less impressive in the female characters: especially in the more impassioned scenes, where, from her accent and quality of utterance, you lost nearly all the words. In fact, as a gentleman by its remarked, listening to her put him in mind of reading a very blotted manuscript; he considered himself lucky if he caught a word here and there. This must not, however, detract from Madame Celeste's general conception of the character, which was most excellent. Mr. Hudson's Beauvois was, also, a very clever piece of acting; and he sang a ballad in the second act with such taste that it called forth a unanimous encore. Wright and Miss Ellen Chaplin had to sustain a pleasant underplot, which they did to the entire satisfaction of the audience; and Mrs. F. Mathews, certainly the most careful actress in the theatre, made a very great deal of a very little part. O. Smith's manner of playing the master of the subterranean estaminet was also an artistic "hit" of acting. The intended of Beauvois was performed by a Miss E. Harding, whom we recollect at another theatre as Miss Floyd; she is a remarkably pretty young lady, with a remarkably ineffective voice. Mr. Selby threw great spirit into the part of the swindling Comte de Fenille, but his companion, Gacondade, should have been told not to call Beauvois Roussell, nor to appear at a dinner-party and ball in white trousers. The "Polka des Salons," introduced in the first act, was very pretty at first, but entirely spoiled by degenerating into a silly and conventional ballet figure at the end. If there was a necessity for dancing it, and it was supposed to take place at a ball in a banker's house, why could it not be done as it is usually seen in society? Ladies and gentlemen do not pair off, and cabaner, and divide, and throw their legs and arms about, as they were taught to do in this "Polka des Salons" of Tuesday evening.

The piece was, as we have said, throughout successful, and indeed deserved to be so. At its conclusion, the principal performers were called before the curtain, and subsequently Mr. Selby, who announced it for repetition every evening. It will, we think, draw money.

STRAND.

The chief difficulty which the regular play-goer now experiences, does not consist in discovering at which theatre the ubiquitous "Don Cesar de Bazan" can be witnessed, but rather where he cannot. The Princess' commenced the farceur: this was followed by the Haymarket and the Adelphi on the same evening; then came the Surrey and Victoria; then a tribe of wonderfully remote houses, of whose existence we were only informed by perceiving long bills hanging in pork shops or pasted upon oblong boards, with stars, whose names we know not, figuring in all the pride of big type; and on Monday evening the little Strand, resolved not to be outdone, brought out its own version; and with the same success which has attended its production at other establishments, being announced for repetition amidst unanimous applause. It was well acted throughout, and got up with great care: indeed, it is remarkable what good management can effect on this very limited and inconvenient stage; there being, as we believe, only fourteen feet between the proscenium and the back wall.

SURREY.

As we predicted, "Don Cesar de Bazan" has crossed the Thames and made his obeisance to the audiences of two of the "transpontine" houses. The adaptation of the Surrey version has been entrusted to Mr. C. Z. Barnett, a gentleman who has already put forth several successful pieces at this theatre. The plot is carried somewhat beyond the incidents as played at the Princess' and Adelphi, but does not lose thereby; besides, an extra spice of melodrama is always acceptable to the audiences of the Surrey. The hero was excellently played by Mr. H. Hughes, the Minister by Mr. Hicks, and the Avoy by Mr. Johnson, whilst the rest of the cast includes the principal members of what is perhaps the best working company in London for the class of pieces required. Mrs. R. Honner's truthfulness as the gitana, Mérolise, drew down warm applause from the audience; and Mrs. Vining's Louise was very gracefully acted. Little Miss Terry had to bustle through the character of a domestic, and look plump and good-tempered. The manner in which the piece has been brought out, under the direction of Mr. Honner, deserves the highest commendation. Every thing is in good keeping down to the most trifling property, and the scenery, from David Roberts's "Views in Spain," by Mr. Brunning, really beautiful.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

"All the world is a stage," says Shakespeare: what if we pronounce the world of the current week to have been but a race? Let us to our hypothesis. Needless is it for this poor teacher to jet down the right coach, costly, gorgeous, and goodly, to the which it gave existence and immortality in the metropolis of the world—London. Their record is written elsewhere in this fair sheet, whose monument is sculptured to them worthy the occasion, and which shall share its fame. Upon our special pen devolves the task of narrating in what fashion the chariot of the idle made trial at Newmarket. Look them, most courteous of readers, on this picture: see ye not the aldermen mounting for the Corporation "plates"? And look on this: note ye not how our merry men are in taking play for the Cambridge "stakes," and is it not our great fellows of a race?

Seer did sun, rose more intently on a morning of account than that which ushered in the dawn of Monday last. Brilliant was its reception on the banks of the Thames; cordial its welcome on the sides of the green Warren Hill. There, bringing the early dew away, were coursers with speed which defied the wings of Pegasus, and courtly dames and cavaliers that had arisen from their couches at the hour in which elsewhere it was too late to seek them.

In the memory of man there never was such a meeting as this. Houghton now in discussion: its career has been watched by that astute crowd, the mob of gentlemen who live at ease—and by a multitude of minor personages—the mob which lives by its ways and means—or slaves, as the case may be. The attendance, however, taken as an average, was excellent—the sport, in quantity, extraordinary—in quality, though not so good, quite satisfactory. The principle of organization prevails too much in regulating the details of racing: here, during the present week, the whole of the interest, so far as the public were concerned, was crammed into the first day. On this, besides a host of small engagements, were to be disposed of, the Cambridge handicap, the last hope of the betters round for the present year of grace—and the Criterion, to which we have often looked, and not in vain, for a crack winter favourite at Tattersall's. With what fortune these events, big with so much fate were decided, we proceed to state.

As we shall give an article exclusively to the Ratan affair, so soon as it is ripe, we pass by all allusion to it, for the moment, and confine us to the matter of the course. Feigha-Ballagh having done a greater thing in winning the Cesarewitch than was, probably, ever done by a racer—became forthwith the favourite, and it is on him, as we have seen, for the final great handicap of the season. For this cause (because it should have been just the reverse), people went forth to witness the result of the Cambridge, in much such wise as they would to a feast of milk and water. At noon the business of the beach opened with a course of petting-polls, and it was not till three o'clock that the note of preparation for the great cavalry manoeuvre was sounded. The rush was then to the Duke's stand, where the ring was formed, and the sentence of being beaten. Feigha-Ballagh's nominal price was five to four on him, but it was scarcely laid or taken at all. Seven to one was quoted about the Cure, but he had neither friends nor foes. Several animals were done upon for small sums at various odds: Reveries being laid against once in our beating, at 500 to 10, and three coverings were accepted to return 100, if he won. The sight of the starting-post was a very animating one, for the sun shone, and the bright silk jackets glanced about like segments flying from a rainbow. Nineteen evenly-matched horses for the essay, and, with an indifferent start, were launched for the goal. As soon as they were on their legs, Walpole jumped to the front, and went away from his horses by some six or eight lengths; the Cure, Algerines—Col. Peel's colt out of Jason's dam, and Cousin—forming the division nearest his heels. The favourite got badly off, and when they reached the weighing-house, and commenced the hill for home, he was so completely disappointed, that he, most probably, the race was decided. A rock of horses lay before him, through which he did not break till almost abreast of the Duke's Stand, where Reveries was leading at a killing pace, Walpole next, and Feigha-Ballagh an indifferent third. He was struggling however, gallantly, and soon beat Walpole. At this moment Bell began to punish him—the noble animal answered every stripe, but all would not do: Reveries, one of the speediest horses at Newmarket, was in his tremendous stride, and all was over; he won by two lengths—full of running—and would have run further, had it been required of him. The Criterion brought out eleven—the winner being Lord Lansdale's colt by Jerry, out of Turquoise—disqualified for the Derby by the death of the Duke of Grafton, by whom he was named. The remainder of the week's racing was all of a temporary interest, save the proposed match between Alice Hawthorn and Feigha-Ballagh, appointed for yesterday—but too late for our impression, should it have come off.

DEATH OF MRS. HENRY SIMMONS.—It is with regret that we announce the death of this talented lady. Mrs. Simmons had left Carlisle, where she had been staying for the benefit of her health, and on arriving in London had a surgical operation performed, which she survived only two days.

THE MARKETS.

Corn. (Futures.)—We have had a fair arrival of English wheat since Monday, yet the stocks in day were by no means heavily supplied. The demand for that article was tolerably steady at full prices. There was a fair demand for foreign wheat, the value of which was supported. Owing to the large supplies of barley, that article was very dull at a decline of about 1s. per quarter. The quality of the foreign article is very good. Malt, oats, beans, and peas, were in moderate supply and fair demand at late rates.

ANIMALS.—English: wheat, 51/10; barley, 41/10; oats, 31/10; peas, 41/10; beans, 41/10; mangel, 41/10; turnips, 41/10; clover, 41/10; hay, 41/10; straw, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10; silver, 41/10; gold, 41/10; diamonds, 41/10; pearls, 41/10; rubies, 41/10; sapphires, 41/10; emeralds, 41/10; garnets, 41/10; topazes, 41/10; amethysts, 41/10; crystals, 41/10; opals, 41/10; jet, 41/10; ivory, 41/10; bone, 41/10; horn, 41/10; shell, 41/10; stone, 41/10; wood, 41/10; coal, 41/10; iron, 41/10; copper, 41/10; tin, 41/10; lead, 41/10; zinc, 41/10;

OPENING OF THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE.

THE PROCESSION CROSSING THE MERCHANTS' AREA.

CEREMONY OF NAMING AND PROCLAIMING "THE ROYAL EXCHANGE."

OPENING OF THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE.

PRESENTATION OF THE ADDRESS IN THE RECEPTION ROOM.

THE GRAND VESTIBULE—DEPARTURE OF HER MAJESTY.

explicated in their poems, and the white and human-like arch, the rich, luxuriant trees, and the beauty and of form, formed admirable images of the irreducible qualities of the human condition. The poet's art is a kind of epiphany, a kind of epiphany.
OBONO The second poem was awarded its own glorious place, and the several regions of Europe, together with the various which adorn the shores of private and royal mansions, and the decoration, by expression, of the infinite effects of these conditions unparalleled. They have proved the theme of the poet, they are elevated in the periodical literature of the whole civilized world: the lips of Borne, and the voice of the universal press, have proclaimed the incomparable virtues of the "Obono" and of the "Obono".

PRICES PATENT CANDLES are sold by respectable dealers in most parts of the kingdom, but care must be taken to insist on being supplied with the real ones, as many imitations are made in all prices for the shopkeepers, which, on account of the greater price of them elsewhere, and with too frequent success, to palm upon the public as "just the same as the Patent Candles." The trade may obtain them wholesale from EDWARDS, FAIRBANKS & Co., Belmont, Vauxhall; or from FAIRBANKS and Co., Nassau-street, Clerkenwell.

—From the Annals of the Bazar, 18th October, 1866.

N.B.—No business transacted at this establishment from Friday at sunset until sunset on Saturday, when business is resumed until twelve o'clock.

BELLS FOR THE HOURS AND CHIMES.

BELLS AND CHIMES OF THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE.

Every reader of the details of the destruction of the late Exchange must recollect the mention of the chimes, which, by a singular coincidence, were playing the air, "There's no luck about the house," until the flames reached the loft in which were the chimes themselves.

In the new Exchange, chimes have not been forgotten; but they have been constructed with advantages not hitherto attempted in England. Chimes generally consist of a set of bells, tuned to the modern musical scale, and struck by hammers acted on by a pinned cylinder or barrel, which revolves by means of clockwork. Now, in this instance, Mr. Dent has, by the mechanical arrangement of the chimework, succeeded, for the first time in this country, in producing harmony in bells. The airs have been arranged by Mr. E. Taylor, the Gresham Professor of Music; which Mr. Dent has applied on the chime-barrel. The airs are:—

1. A Psalm tune, by Henry Lawes, the friend of Milton; it is in the key of B flat, so as to exhibit the capability of the chimes to play in different keys.
2. God Save the Queen, in E flat.
3. Rule Britannia.

4. An air selected by Professor Taylor to exhibit the power of the bells. The key in which the bells are set, is E flat. There are 15 bells, and 2 hammers to several, so as to play rapid passages. There are frequently 3 hammers striking different bells simultaneously, and sometimes 5. The notes of the bells are as follow:—B flat, A flat, G F E flat, D D flat, C B flat, A A flat, G F and E flat; the first bell, B flat, weighs 4 cwt. 2 lb., and its cord 8 cwt. 2 qrs. 1 lb.; the four bells,

A flat, G F and E flat, weigh severally, 16 cwt. 1 qr. 5 lb.; 12 cwt. 2 qrs. 27 lb.; 13 cwt. 2 qrs. 14 lb.; and 23 cwt. 2 qrs. 24 lb. The united weight of them is 131 cwt. 1 qr.

By certain new points of mechanical arrangement in the chimes, all irregularity of force is avoided by driving the chime-barrel through wheels and pinions. There are no wheels between the weight that pulls, and the hammer to be raised. The "lifts" on the chime barrel are all spirycoidal curves, so that the force of the action is as equal as it is possible to produce for the regularity of the music. There are about 6000 holes pierced upon the barrel for the lifts, so as to allow the tunes to be varied at pleasure.

The original intention of having the same number of bells (nine) as before the fire has been abandoned, and the number increased to 15. The alteration was at the suggestion of Mr. Dent, who, having visited Brussels and other parts of the Continent to obtain information as to the arrangement of carillons, for which the artisans of Flanders have acquired a well-deserved celebrity, was induced to recommend that the number should be so, that a more harmonious chime might be gained. Professor Taylor advised the committee to increase them to fifteen, which would then allow of playing in three octaves, thereby increasing the melody. They have been cast by Messrs. Meess, the bell-founders in Whitechapel. The largest is also the hour bell, and bears the following inscription:—"Cast for the Royal Exchange in the year of grace 1844; Richard Lambert Jones, Chairman of the Gresham College Committee; Daniel Warner, Master of the Mercers' Company; Ebenezer Trotman, Assistant; William Tite, Architect; Charles and George Meess, founders." The others only bear the words "Royal Exchange, 1844."

LEVER APPARATUS FOR STRIKING THE CHIMES.

BELL FOR PLAYING THE CHIMES.

ROYAL VISIT TO TOTTENHAM-PARK.—The Marquis and Marchioness of Albury have had the honour of entertaining their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge and the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Mecklenburgh Stralitz at Tottenham-park, their splendid seat near Marlborough, Wilts. Their royal highnesses have now returned to Arundel.

The Duke of Norfolk, who came expressly to town from Arundel Castle, to attend as Earl Marshal at the opening of the Royal Exchange on Monday, has returned to his seat.

EXTRAORDINARY MODE OF SUICIDE.—On Tuesday Mr. Baker held an inquest at the Three Compasses, Brick-lane, Spitalfields, on the body of George Dixon, aged thirty-six, late potman at a house in Broad-street, City. Frederick Grever, of 5, Old Montague-street, Whitechapel, said deceased and his wife resided in the same house, and were in very destitute circumstances, owing to his having disease of the lungs, which prevented him from working. On Thursday afternoon deceased came into witness's room in a wild state, and drank with avidity four cups of tea, and whilst with as was getting him some more, he seized a long knife from off the table, and thrust it down his throat and gullet, so far that only part of the handle protruded from the mouth. Witness immediately struck deceased's hand from the hilt of the knife, and pulled it from his throat, upon which deceased exclaimed, "I am determined to do it, and may as well do it first as last." Mr. Foster, the parish surgeon, was called in, but, despite his efforts, deceased died in three hours afterwards. Mr. Foster spoke of deceased's great destitution, and said that he died from the combined effects of the wound in the throat, causing internal hemorrhage, and inflammation of the lungs. Verdict—"Temporary insanity."

DREADFUL DEATH OF A CHILD BY FIRE.—On Wednesday evening Mr. Higgs held an inquest at St. George's Hospital, on the body of Abraham M'Donn'd, aged five years and a half, whose parent, a widow, resides at No. 12, Jamaica-street, Kensington. It appeared by the evidence of a man named Walker that, on Tuesday evening, he was passing through the above street, when he saw a burning mass rolling on the pavement, and directly after a child's moans proceeded from it. He went to it, and found it to be deceased, with all his clothes on fire, and nearly burned off. With assistance he extinguished the fire, and the child having been first seen by Dr. Merriman, of Kensington-square, it was removed to that hospital, in which it died in a few hours. The mother of deceased said she had only left her room to fetch some beer, and thought the accident was caused by the child endeavouring to take some potatoes from a saucer on the fire. Verdict—"Accidental death."

THE EXPERIMENTAL SQUADRONS.—The experimental squadrons, composed of three first-rates and eight brigs, are now at sea, and our naval annals do not present an instance of a similar effort having been made by any former naval administration justly to test the relative merits of ships of different construction, from the highest to the lowest classes of British men-of-war. The first squadron consists of three three-deckers—Calcutta, 120, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Bowles, C.B., the St. Vincent, also of 120 guns, the Queen, 110, and the Albion, 90 guns, which ship will join the others during their cruise. The second squadron, consisting of the eight brigs, is placed under the command of Captain Corry, in the Firebrand steam-frigate. It is expected that a severe trial for a period of about two months will take place before these vessels will return to port, or be dispatched to respective stations.

THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE.—WEST FRONT.

THE GREAT WESTERN PORTICO.

In our journal of last week we detailed the external façade of the New Exchange, reserving, for the present occasion, a few of the characteristics of the great Western Portico, and its interior; which, as Mr. Tite observes, "is very superior in dimensions to any in this country, and not very inferior to any in the world." The columns are 4 feet 2 inches in diameter; their height, including the base and capital, is 41 feet; the capitals, by the way, are composite of the architect's original modification. The principal western entrance is under this portico, which is ascended by thirteen granite steps from the level of the street. The whole west end is appropriated to the offices of "The Royal Exchange."

VENETIAN WINDOW, WEST FRONT.

Assurance, for assuring Shipping, Fire, and Lives;" the entrance to these offices being on the right and left of the great western entrance. The interior of the portico is strikingly magnificent; more especially the vastness of the columns, and the beauty of the roof, which consists of three lofty arches, enriched after the manner of those of the Roman palaces. Nor must we omit to notice the two lofty Venetian windows flanking the principal entrance, and reminding us of Sir Robert Taylor's elegant windows in the garden front of the Bank Parlour. We have engraved one of the former, with the architect's monogram, which is ingeniously introduced in the façade, beneath the window.

VENETIAN WINDOW AND MONOGRAM OF THE ARCHITECT.

Of the sculptural embellishments of this front, we must detail a few. In the compartments on each side of the portico are sculptured panels 7 feet 10 inches by 1 foot, of drapery and initials, and the sculptured masses of foliage and fruit, with imperial crown in the centre, 12 inches in relief, 7 feet by 4 feet 6 inches. The other sculptured enrichments on the archivolts, and the festoon enrichments, and the Spanish ornaments in panel over the central doorway, are the only remaining portions of the west front in which the sculptor has been employed, but it would far exceed the limits of this condensed notice to enter fully into their description. Over the central doorway in the Royal arms, sculptured by Carew. From the position selected, the sculptor has laboured under much disadvantage, as the limits of the opening are neither high nor wide enough, which gives a cramped and insignificant appearance to the Royal arms.

THE ARCHITECT'S MONOGRAM.—W. T.

A special train left Southampton on Monday morning, at a quarter past seven o'clock, arriving at Vauxhall at ten o'clock, with twenty carriages filled with parties to witness her Majesty's procession on the opening of the Royal Exchange, and giving them the option of returning to Southampton or before Wednesday—at one fare there and back.

The Journal des Chemins de Fer states that it forms part of the arrangement between the Saint Germain Railroad Company and the Government on the atmospheric railway from Nanterre to the terrace of St. Germain, that the various systems of Messrs. Clegg, Halcott, Perquim, Chalmers, &c., shall be tried for a certain time before the opening of the road to the public, in order to test the advantages of each.

The Seville mail was robbed on the 22nd, between Villaverde and Los Angeles, by six bandits.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 126, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 126, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1844.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 132.—VOL. V.]

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1844.

[SIXPENCE.]

CONQUEST AND COMMERCE.

UCH benevolent activity is expended in this busy land, we are sorry to say it, with little or no result. Men go to and fro, and knowledge is increased—that is to say, the knowledge of the evils that afflict us; but for the remedies, though not slow in being devised—every man and every society of men seem having their separate plan—they are very tardy in taking shape and substance. Our expedients evaporate in discussion, and are talked about so long that at last they "lose the name of action." But, if a nation has a bad or doubtful purpose to work out, the alacrity of its movements and the extent of power it displays are truly wonderful. We can only afford a few pitiful thousands for the great task of National Education, but we can sink millions in an Afghan war. Nor are we alone in our miscalculations of what is best for the good of the general mass. We have just been most forcibly struck with the mingled criminality and foolishness of the manner in which the French are wasting their national resources, pouring forth their millions of treasure, and, what is more precious still, the blood of thousands of men, upon the desert sands of a conquered territory, that not only returns no material profit, which a nation of heroes would perhaps despise, but does not yield even that military glory which we know they so highly rate. We allude, of course, to the French occupation of Algiers. The past history of their rule in that country, and the latest accounts of the state it has produced, alike show the miserable results of a mere war of conquest; the evils of which fall first on the people invaded, and then recoil on the invaders. The French have arrived at the second act of the bloody drama: they were first the sacrificers—they will be the victims.

Algiers, Morocco, and the French have lately occupied much space in the minds, or we should rather say perhaps, the journals, of all men. You could read about nothing even if you wished it, but the French and Mogador, unless it was, by way of variety, the French and Otaheite. On the whole, however, Joinville and his squadron carried it. The speculations about what the French had not done, and what they intended to do, could only be exceeded by the commentaries that were made on what they did do at last. And what was that? A number of ships, provided with all that men, money, and modern skill in the art of destruction could furnish, fired for some hours at the rotten walls of a Moorish town, battered them considerably, as might have been expected, landed for a short time on an island on the coast, spiked a few guns, and then sailed away—the latter being a movement which was not expected. What was the purpose of all this sound and fury signifying nothing? An Arab Chief had made himself, probably without invitation, the guest of the Moorish Emperor, and by appealing to the fanaticism of the said Emperor's subjects, was no doubt raising a force that might have been exceedingly troublesome to the French troops in Algiers. So to compel the Emperor to expel the Arab from the interior of his dominions, it was thought necessary to bombard a town on the sea-coast, the inhabitants of which had little to do with the matter in dispute, one way or other. This, so slenderly expedient as it was at first, was done after it had ceased to be expedient at all; for when the cannon were firing, negotiation had already done the work of war, and the poor Emperor had agreed to accept the conditions required of him, and, if he could, to comply with them. So all the battering was a sheer loss of shot and powder; but the Prince had resolved on having a bombardment, and would no more have denied himself the gratification to be derived from it than a schoolboy would have given up his squibs and staid away from a bonfire. And what has been the result of all the noise and excitement? As far as France is concerned, things seem to be pretty much as they were before. Not an inch of territory has been gained—a little plunder perhaps, including a tattered tent and a worn-out parasol, which gave Paris matter for two days laughter, but nothing more. Abd-el-Kader, the first casus belli, is again at large, hovering round the skirts of the French colony, ready for mischief as ever, and almost as likely to take the Emperor as the Emperor is to take him. It is evident the Arab will do just as he pleases, not what French treaties stipulate he shall do. Then, the condition of the French army of occupation is wretched; the men are worked and harassed, and subjected to greater deprivations than they were, except in occasional emergencies, under Napoleon. The policy of seizing an extensive territory, with only strength enough effectually to defend a small one, has multiplied isolated posts and stations, which require collectively a large number of troops to hold; ravage and waste have made what was once fertile, a desert, and scarcity to the verge of famine adds to the ravages of disease; beneath them both, more victims perish than fall beneath the sword of the wild sons of the desert. And as if all this was not enough, the French have needlessly plunged into a quarrel with the Kaybiles, a powerful mountain tribe, fiercely proud of the independence they have hitherto preserved from the Roman, the Turk, and the Moor, and they will perish rather than yield it to the French. They are eighty thousand strong, their whole district is one rocky fort, and they are wealthy withal, being more civilised—if coining money and making arms be civilisation—than the Arab tribes of the plains, who have been compelled to submit to the invaders. The Kaybiles were willing to be at peace and trade and traffic with the French—indeed they partly supplied the market of Algiers; but with that want of common sense which makes the mere soldier incapable of appreciating anything

FASHIONS FOR NOVEMBER.

DESCRIPTION OF THE FIGURES.

RIGHT-HAND FIGURE.—EVENING TOILETTE.—A tulle and lace cap, ornamented with satin ribbon. A silk dress, ornamented down the front with embroidery and lace; the carriage of drawn tulle over coloured silk.

LEFT-HAND FIGURE.—A promenade dress of African sand colour silk, ornamented with two bouillens serpentine down each side the front; carriage with plaits from the shoulder to the waist, under sleeves of embroidered muslin. Hat of Terry velvet, trimmed with rolls of the same.

RIGHT-HAND HALF-LENGTH FIGURE.—A hat of uncut velvet, trimmed with bands of narrow black velvet ribbon. A velvet cloak, with embossed border, and trimmed with corded fringe. Skirt with one very deep volute, headed with a band of the same.

LEFT-HAND HALF-LENGTH FIGURE.—EVENING TOILETTE.—Hair coiffure ornamented with a wreath of roses without leaves. A satin dress, trimmed round the carriage and down each side the front with bouillens of tulle and roses without leaves.

WINTER FASHIONS.

(Abridged from Berger's "Ladies' Gazette of Fashion.")

We never recollect a season in which so many striking and beautiful novelties have appeared in every description of costume as the present (says the "Ladies' Gazette of Fashion.") The most important novelties are the royal winter dresses, patterns of which are given exclusively in the "Ladies' Gazette," and which, from their unequalled novelty and beauty, are sure to become the favourite dresses of the season. Dresses, cloaks, pelisses, bonnets, all have undergone a complete revolution in form and materials: but to our notes, commencing with

CHAPERONS AND CAPOTES, the favourite materials for which are velvet, velours, ermine, and satin. Feathers of the lightest and most elegant kinds, will be more in vogue for trimmings than flowers. Velvet panaches will be the favourite flowers. Drawn bonnets of velvet will be very fashionable. A new style of trimming, composed of cords of shaded velvet ribbon and blonde lace, will be in vogue.

CLOAKS, PELISSERS, &c.—Cloaks of rich black silk will be very fashionable; also the Mantua House and the Paleot Grey, made either of satin or velvet. The favourite form for Pelisses is the Robe Amélie, descending on the hips, in the jacket style, and trimmed with fur velvet.

PROMENADE ROBES are made in the pelisse form, with the carriage slightly opened, showing the rich embroidery of the chemise. Close carriages will increase in favour as the season advances. They will be belted and trimmed with velvet bands and buttons, also velvet ribbons. Silks, Pekins of Tibet down, basins de laine, tartanettes, and merinos of various kinds, will be the favourite materials. Furs will be much worn.

EVENING DRESSES will be made generally with low-pointed carriages, and round at the bottom, sleeves short, but not so short as they have been. Velvet Robes have the sleeves much shorter. Flounces will be in vogue; also ruffles, and other garnitures of ribbon. Demi-trains will be worn. For Ball Dresses, an embroidery in straw, of a very light and novel description, will be introduced; also, fringes of gold and silver, and net-work of small pearl beads.

CAPE retain their vogue. The new trimming is a chicotte wreath of ribbon in five different shades. Wreaths of oak leaves for evening caps. The turban Algerienne, composed of a gold or silver gauze scarf, ornamented with diamond eyes, will be the favourite turban. Hats of crape decorated with feathers of the lightest kinds will be very fashionable. Colours, pomegranate green, dark blue, ruby, violet pomegranate, pearl grey, chocolate, and neutral tints will be most used.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

A CHILD KILLED BY A FERRY.—A child about three years old, named Charles Flinton, was killed by a ferry at Whittlesford, Cambridgeshire, last Sunday night. The mother occupied a room in the old workhouse, and left the child asleep in bed about seven o'clock in the evening, at which time a ferry belonging to Joseph Brett was in the room, in a box through the lattice of which he could pass. On her return about a quarter past nine o'clock the mother found her child so wounded by the ferry that he died a little before three in the morning.

SINGULAR AND SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—On Monday a plumber, named Lawrence, assisted by another man, was standing upon a wall about 16 feet high, at a house in St. James-street, Chelsea, pulling up, by means of a rope, a water butt. As the butt was ascending, the rope snapped under, and the impetus thus given to the unfortunate man's body precipitated him with great force upon a covered water-butt, filled with water, in the yard of the next premises. The cover was smashed to pieces, and the poor fellow's head and body became immersed in the water. He was conveyed to St. George's Hospital in a dangerous condition.

SINGULAR DEATH.—On Tuesday Mr. Baker held an inquest at the London Hospital, on the body of Thomas Sells, aged 56, of Winchester-street, Bethnal-green, carman, who died under the following singular circumstances:—On Monday week the deceased was leaving the Woodman public-house, when he struck his right arm against an open door; the blow was so slight that he took no notice of it until two days after, when it became very painful, and he applied to a medical man, who attended him until Friday, when, becoming worse, he applied and was admitted into the hospital, where he died on the following day. The house surgeon said death was caused by mortification and delirium tremens, brought on by the shock the system had sustained, and deceased's previous habits of intemperance. Verdict accordingly.

AN OLD LADY KILLED IN THE STREET.—An inquest was held on Saturday, before Mr. Wakley, at the Elephant and Castle, opposite St. Pancras Workhouse, on the body of Mrs. Mary Anderson, aged 76 years, who met her death by a cart being driven over her, on the previous Wednesday evening, near Kenish Town. The evidence went to show that a young man named Cook, a carter in the employ of Mr. Gilbert, chandler, of Howland-street, Tottenham-court-road, and a shopman in the service of the same person, were in their master's cart on the evening in question, when the unfortunate occurrence took place. Both parties were apprised of the accident, but instead of stopping, the horse was urged on at a rapid pace, and, but for a female, who was in the vehicle at the time, they would have escaped. The female, it seems, mentioned the occurrence, and they were apprehended. The jury viewed the conduct of the men as highly reprehensible, and returned a verdict of Manslaughter.

SINGULAR STRIKE OF A TRADESMAN'S WIFE.—Last Saturday, Mr. Higgs held an inquest at the Royal Yacht Tavern, Stanhope-street, Clerkenwell, on Mrs. Sarah Anne Willmer, aged 22 years, wife of Mr. Willmer, tailor-chandler, of Clare-street, who committed suicide under the following circumstances:—Mr. G. A. Walker, surgeon, of Drury-lane, said he was called to attend deceased on the afternoon of Thursday. On his arrival he found the deceased vomiting excessively. Upon making inquiries deceased told witness that she had taken two pennyworth of arsenic, but she refused to tell of whom she had purchased it. Witness attended her the whole of that day until nine o'clock in the evening, when she died. Charlotte Allen, one of the servants to deceased, said her mistress complained on Thursday morning of having a violent headache. Shortly after breakfast she sent witness for a pennyworth of sal volatile, which she divided, and drank one part herself and gave the other to her husband. About ten minutes subsequently she sent witness for a pennyworth of opium, which she divided, and drank one part herself and gave the other to her husband. About ten minutes subsequently she sent witness down stairs to ask her husband for a glass of brandy. As she entered the room again she observed deceased drinking what she thought to be the brandy, but no sooner had she swallowed it than she was seized with sickness, which continuing, her husband requested to be allowed to send for medical assistance, but deceased replied, "Oh, never mind, I shall soon get better; it is only the bile." Witness could not tell what induced deceased to destroy herself, for she always appeared exceedingly cheerful, and lived upon very happy terms with her husband. After taking the poison she said, "I took it to die, and I hope I shall," and then added, "Oh, Lord, have mercy on my soul." The jury returned a verdict of "Temporary Insanity."

ANOTHER ACCIDENT ON THE RAILWAY.—Another melancholy and fatal accident occurred on the London and Brighton Railway, near Hayward's Heath tunnel, about three o'clock on Thursday week. A man of the name of John Hobbs, who was stationed as a signal man to a number of men employed in removing a quantity of earth from the line where a ship has lately taken place, was knocked down by an engine working the waggon used in removing the earth, and dreadfully bruised on the head and many parts of the body. He was conveyed to Brighton immediately by the engine, and placed in the hospital. Hobbs has stated, it is said, that he knew the engine was coming, but he thought not on the rails by the side of which he was walking, and that on looking round, and perceiving his dangerous position, he was very much confused with fright. Hobbs is since dead. He is not a married man.

SUICIDE OF A GIRL.—On Tuesday evening a young woman named Mary Garwood, about 15 years of age, residing at No. 9, Leamouth-place, Blackwall, committed suicide by throwing herself into the river Lea.

VERDICT OF MANSLAUGHTER.—Several investigations have taken place at the Knapton Tavern, Rochester, into the death of William Everett, a waterman, who, as already stated, was drowned by his boat being run down by the Waterman steamer, No. 6, near St. Thomas Tunnel, on the 25th ult. The jury, after four hours' discussion, returned a verdict of Manslaughter against Samuel Sims, the master of the Waterman steamer.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT HACKNEY.—A lamentable accident occurred yesterday week at Cook's Circus, at Hackney. The high wind suddenly snapped the ropes of the swing, and the centre pole fell with great violence into the pit, striking a Mrs. Isbister with such force that she died soon afterwards. Her head was literally crushed, both eyes were terribly swollen, and her face altogether presented a most appalling spectacle. Near her was sitting Mrs. Laws, a relative, whose child was knocked out of her arms, and conveyed home in a dangerous state. Mrs. Laws's child has since died. An inquest was held on the bodies on Monday evening, at the Crooked Billet, Clapton; and after some witnesses had proved the above facts, Mr. Baker, the coroner, summed up, expressing an opinion that there was nothing to prove that Mr. Cooke had not exercised due caution in erecting the pole and tent that had fallen. Verdict, "Accidental death."

THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE.

We now proceed to complete our description of the New Exchange, from page 288 of our journal of last week.

The great western entrance has been already noticed. The other external features have been detailed. The cornice, which is remarkably bold, is throughout crowned with an attic and balustrade. The circular story of the tower in the east front is crowned by a dome carved in leaves. The vase is the famous grasshopper that surmounted the old Exchange; it was not much injured by the fire, and has been restored. It is of copper gilt, and is eleven feet long; the height, to the top of the vase, is 177 feet, and not 170 feet, as already stated.

THE INSCRIPTIONS.

On the exterior may be quoted here from a well timed and neatly compiled volume just published by Mr. Riffingham Wilson, who will speedily locate himself in the shop at the south-eastern corner of the Exchange.

"There is on the frieze of the portion the following inscription, recording the foundation of the original building in the 18th year of Queen Elizabeth, and its restoration in the 7th of her present Gracious Majesty:—

ANNO DNI. ELIZABETHÆ R. CONDITUM. ANNO DNI. VICTORIAE R. RESTAURATUM.

Occupying the key-stones of the three great arches, there are in the centre the merchants' mark of Gresham; and on the key-stones of the side arches the arms of the merchant-adventurer of his day, and the staple of Calais. North and south of the portion, and in the attic, are the emblems of the City—the sword and mace, with the respective dates of Queen Elizabeth's reign and the present year; and in the lower panels, mantles bearing the initials of Queen Elizabeth and Queen Victoria, respectively. Over the three centre arches, on the south side, are the arms of Gresham, the City, and the Mercers' Company; and the same arms are repeated at the east end, on the entablature. Over the three centre arches of the north front are the following mottoes, viz.—In the centre that of Sir Thomas Gresham, in old French, Forlen à moy; on the dexter side, the City motto, Domus dirige nos; and on the sinister, the motto of the Mercers' Company, "Forlen Dec." (These, by the way, are errors in Gresham's motto, which a correspondent of the Times has decided should be Forlen Amy—"Fortune, my friend;" the arms, crest, and merchants' mark, still existing on the remains of one of Sir Thomas Gresham's residences.)

THE SHOPS.

The number of shops in the present building is not greater than the number of individuals claiming a right to reinstatement. There are, we believe, 45 of these habitations: the average height of the shops is 14 feet, the basement floor 13 feet, and the mezzanine 10 feet. Each shop has a cellar below, and, with very few exceptions, a mezzanine over. All the shops are secured by party walls, and made fire-proof. The mezzanine belonging to each shop is reached by a circular staircase of cast iron.

THE INTERIOR.

Having described the external appearance of the New Exchange, it only remains to notice the interior.

THE MERCHANTS' AREA.

or Great Quadrangle, is entered from four arched openings in the centre of each side. Its form, as that of the building, is parallelogram, and the inner area exactly a double square. Mr. Tite observes, with regard to this particular part of the building and its form:—"This form has many advantages, both in point of convenience and elegance over the old form; and it is also better adapted to the shape of the ground." The lower story is a colonnade of the Doric order, each column being about 34 inches in diameter. The upper order is Ionic. The area, or quadrangle, is 115 feet long and 58 in the general breadth; the width of the colonnade, or ambulatory, being upwards of 30 feet. The principal floors of the building have large windows looking into the court, three at each end, and five on each side; the windows being not in recesses, giving them a noble appearance from the court below. There are round that part of the building sculptured shields, in addition to numerous sculptured ornaments, of the arms of different nations having commercial intercourse with this country. The four façades of this internal court are surmounted by a pierced, or ornamental, and carved parapet, the balustrades giving a finish of considerable effect to the other architectural enrichments. The area exposed to the weather is covered with tessellated pavement, in various colours and uniform designs. In the centre of this area is intended to be ultimately placed the statue of the Queen, by Lough. The only other statues in the merchants' area are those of Queen Elizabeth in a recess in the north-east corner of the colonnade, recently completed by Mr. Watson; and Charles II., in a similar niche in the south-east corner. This statue, which originally adorned the centre of the quadrangle of the late Exchange, and which escaped destruction at the calamitous fire of 1838, has been carefully restored. The object in these two statues is to commemorate the opening of the first Exchange by Queen Elizabeth; and the laying the first stone of the Exchange of 1667, by Charles II.

THE AMBULATORY.

or Merchants' Walk, has, for its great feature, the encaustic paintings executed under the direction of Mr. Sang, of Munich. Their style is Italian and Arabian; and of the devices, our engraving at page 277, conveys some idea. These paintings are not confined to the ceiling of the colonnade alone, but the divisions of the walls are likewise adorned round the whole ambulatory; the compartments being divided by pilasters, corresponding with the columns of the colonnade. The ceiling is separated into numerous compartments, the dividing beams of which are pendant and enriched with ornamental parts, so coloured as to accord with the colours and embellishments in the spaces, beautiful floral designs and masses of fruit being gracefully introduced. In each of the larger compartments are the embossed arms of the various nations trading with this country, so arranged as to be placed at the "walk" belonging to the merchants trafficking with that particular country. As you enter the colonnade by the west, the arms of the British empire, with those of Austria on the right, and Saxony on the reverse side, arrest your attention in the three divisions. Then in relation are the arms of Belgium, France, Hanover, Holland, Prussia, Sardinia, the Two Sicilies, Sweden and Norway, the United States of America, the initials of the Sultan of Turkey, Spain, Saxony, Russia, Portugal, Hanseatic Towns, Greece and Denmark. The arms of Edward the Confessor, Edward III., Queen Elizabeth and Charles II. are emblazoned in the compartments of the four corner angles. In some of the union and irregular divisions are trophies, exclusively appertaining to subjects of a commercial and trading character. The borders of the compartments are of colours harmonising with the figures, &c., introduced by the artist, all the grand work of the chief compartments containing the different national arms, being of a delicate colour, so that the embellishments are seen in relief, and give a transparency to the whole of the colouring. The side walls are bordered with beautiful paintings of flowers and fruit, and in the centre of these divisions is a small chocolate-coloured tablet, on which the respective "walk" is to be written in English characters, so as to avoid confusion in the ambulatory to parties resorting there for the purposes of their trade. In eight small circular panels are introduced the arms of the three Lord Mayors, viz., Paris, Humphrey, and Magway; and also the three Masters of the Mercers' Company, Pooley, Sutton, and Wansley, who have respectively held office during the erection of the building. The arms of the Chairman of the Gresham Committee, Mr. R. L. Jones; and of the architect, Mr. Tite, complete the heraldic embellishments.

The roofs of the three principal entrances, north, south, and east, are completed in real penetrating fresco. The ambulatory is paved with Yorkshire stone, marked out into panels by margins and lines of black stone, called Castle-hill, with squares of red Aberdeen granite at the intersections.

The open area is laid with a tessellated pavement, after the best Roman examples. The tesserae of which this pavement is composed, are burnt to great hardness, and having cast-iron channels to carry off the water, will always yield a dry and clean surface.

As may be imagined in a building devoted to business purposes, convenience and utility are the main objects to be gained.

The offices of the principal story are to be occupied by Lloyd's, the Royal Exchange Assurance, and London Assurance Companies.

LLOYD'S.

The apartments required by this important establishment are situated at the easternmost part of the Exchange, and the quarter portion of the north. It is on the principal or first story, and its entrance is by the east end, through the small or east area, an open space between the eastern entrance, over which is the tower, and the east entrance to the merchants' area. The apartments are approached by a spacious flight of stone stairs, the roof of the lobby being supported with handsome columns. From the lobby at the top of the stairway communicate the different rooms as follow:—

THE COMMERCIAL ROOM.

This spacious and elegant room ranges along the north side of the inner court, from which it is lighted by five windows in addition to five skylights in the roof. At the extreme ends are two columns of polished Siena marble. Its dimensions are 27 feet long by 49 feet wide, and height in proportion. A cornice runs round this apartment, enriched with scroll work and tablets, on which are the emblems of Lloyd's.

On the right, on coming up the staircase, occupying the north-east corner, is which has been admirably arranged for the convenience of those persons resorting to that particular department. The fittings are elegant, but are void of anything like extravagance.

THE CAPTAINS' ROOM.

THE SUBSCRIPTION ROOM.

occupies the entire of the eastern side of the merchants' area, and is lighted from three principal windows from that side, as well as six raised skylights. The purling of the walls is in accordance with the Italian style of the whole building, and the united shield of the arms of the City of London and Trinity Corporation are among the conspicuous ornaments seen in the room. Its dimensions are 38 feet long, by 43 feet.

THE LIBRARY, OR READING-ROOM.

is lighted from the roof. A cast iron gallery surrounds the room, half way from the floor; it is intended above this gallery to arrange the maps for the inspection of parties desirous of seeing different localities. This room abuts on the south-east corner, and communicates with a suite of waiting-rooms and offices along the eastern front, until the captains' room terminates the range. There are altogether ten apartments appropriated to Lloyd's on this, the principal floor.

LONDON ASSURANCE.

The rooms required for this establishment are entered from the south, and the apartments occupy the whole of the south portion of the principal floor.

THE ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE OFFICES.

are situated on the principal floor of the west front, and occupy the entire extent of that front.

The apartments at the north-west portion of the building are unoccupied, and are termed "unappropriated" from that circumstance.

"Lloyd's rooms," as they are called, may be pronounced the finest apartments ever devoted to commercial purposes. In designing them, the architect has given a just and noble expression of the purposes to which they are to be devoted. Simple, massive, spacious, and brilliantly lighted, they strike the spectator at once with an idea of fitness—of adaptation to the exact wants of a great trading community. The style used is Venetian, modified to suit the circumstances of the edifice, and enriched after the best Roman models. The whole establishment comprises a subscription-room, of which we have given an engraving, as it appeared on the occasion of the banquet given to her Majesty.

Next is a Commercial Room, which we have engraved from a view sketched during its recent exhibition to the public, after the inauguration of the building; a Captains' Room, of small dimensions, but very highly enriched; a Library, also of small size, but very conveniently arranged, and chastely decorated. Besides are various committee and officers' rooms, one of which, on the south-east angle of the building, was used as the private drawing-room of her Majesty. The approach is by a fine Italian staircase, and a spacious vestibule, flanked on the north side by a piazza of novel and beautiful construction. It will be seen from this general description, aided by our very accurate cuts, that the whole arrangements are on a scale commensurate with the dignity of that vast naval empire which our merchant-princes will here direct; and that in their details, the progress of civilization has been most aptly represented, by the use of every available ornament which the progress of science and the fine arts have presented to the selection of the architect. They stand thus a picture of the age, and a proud monument of its wealth and genius.

Our cuts make any minute description of the great rooms unnecessary. We beg, however, to call attention to the manner in which, by an enlargement of the ceiling of these rooms, a breadth and grandeur have been given to the design, which an ordinary right-angled cornice would not have commanded. The piercing of the cone for lights is also a very beautiful contrivance, and has an admirable effect. The only drawback on the proportions of both these rooms is found in a want of base, and, consequently, of apparent support to the upper members of the design—a defect, which we believe may have been occasioned by the monstrous space occupied by the tubing placed beneath the floors for the circulation of hot air. And, if we were disposed to be captious, we should find very serious fault with the staring yellow pillars—sienna marble, according to the newspaper reports—but paltry scagliola, in fact—which disfigure the Commercial-room.

The room used by her Majesty, and in which she inspected Mr. Tite's models, appeared to great advantage, fitted by Mr. Herring's splendid pattern furniture. In the centre of the room, Mr. Herring, knowing her Majesty's fondness for marqueterie, placed a table of that manufacture—but by English hands—which, for beauty of design and variety and richness of materials, has never been equalled; and around the room, as if to show the illustrious guests the superior genius of her subjects, was arranged several of the finest specimens of old French marqueterie. In other respects, the room had much the character of one of the gorgeously furnished apartments of Windsor, in which gilded chairs, enormous glasses, heavy curtains, rich carpets, &c., would seem to rival the tints of Rubens in variety and harmony. Her Majesty's toilette-table, in an adjoining room, was much admired.

Thus far the Exchange. The festivities, however, of the day, were not wholly confined to its noble halls; for at the Mansion House, and in the numerous halls of the city companies, splendid banquets and other entertainments were given. The one which was most numerous attended was, of course, at the Mansion House, where a grand ball was given to the chief of her Majesty's attendants, and the officers of the various regiments who were present in the City, and at the Exchange; the chief civic dignities, and a splendid train of handsome and accomplished women. The ball was given in the famous Italian Corridor, so deservedly admired for its size, and the beautiful arrangement of its colonnades; the supper in the Egyptian Hall; and the subsidiary enjoyment of beautiful books, prints, chit-chat, and coffee, in the Venetian and Wilkes' parlours. Our engraving exhibits a portion of the corridor near the entrance of the State Rooms, as it appeared during the first set of quadrilles.

THE QUEEN'S DRAWING ROOM.—HER MAJESTY INSPECTING MR. TITE'S MODELS OF THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.

LLOYD'S SUBSCRIPTION ROOM.—AS IT APPEARED AT THE ENTRANCE OF HER MAJESTY.

THE ROYAL EXCHANGE BALL AT THE MANSION HOUSE.

LLOYD'S COMMERCIAL ROOM.—ADMISSION OF THE PUBLIC.]

THE BEST ALMANACK FOR 1845.
Now ready, 64 pages, handsome covers, gilt edges (no advertisements), with Bigley's Register, price only 1s. 6d.

ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK,
AND PICTURESQUE CALENDAR FOR 1845.
With a Frontispiece, and 12 Allgorical Illustrations of the Months, designed by KENNY MEADOWS, and engraved by LINTON. 12 Sparring Scenes of the Month; Natural History of the Month, 12 Engravings; 30 Illustrations of the Astronomical Phenomena of each Month of the coming year; the Year-Roll at Greenwich (5 Illustrations); Two New Comets, &c. With the most copious Calendars, Anniversaries, original Explanations of Phenomena; Sports and Natural History; New Domestic Inventions; Lists, Tables, and a greater variety of information and seasonable entertainment than is to be found in any other Almanack. The Wrapper is beautifully printed in colours, and the artistic execution of the entire Almanack entitles it to a place upon every drawing-room table in the empire.

Fixed and Movable Feasts.
Law Terms; University Terms.
Holidays kept at Public Offices.
Tables showing the Interest of the Bank.
Transfers and Dividends of the Public Funds.
Bills and Notes; Bonds and Mortgages.
Apprentices' Indentures; Leases; Wills.
Calendar for each Month. Beautifully illustrated by designs from Kenny Meadows, and engraved by Linton.
The Month. Articles in Season: The Farm; Kitchen Gardens; Fruit; Flowers; Birds; Things to be Remembered.
Notes to the Month.
Astronomical Appearances of the Month. Beautifully illustrated.
Natural History of the Month. Illustrated by Vasey.
The Year-Roll, Greenwich Royal Observatory. Much Recent Discoveries.
New Comets of July and September, drawn at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.
Severance and Population of the principal States of Europe.
Monarchs of England since the Conquest.
Royal Family of Great Britain.
Her Majesty's Ministers and Household.
Private Albert's Household.
Style of addressing the several Orders of Nobility.
Sports for January, "Carling Match," with an Illustration; Hunt for Anglers; Indoor Amusements.
Foreign Ambassadors and Consuls in England.
The Governors and Directors of the Bank of England.
London Bankers.
February Sports: Horse Racing, with an Illustration, and a Part of the Million Stakes; Hunt for Anglers; &c.
Lord-Lieutenants of the several Counties of Great Britain and Ireland; Government Offices and Officers.
March Sports: Wild Duck Shooting, with an Illustration; Angling; Fishing; Simple Chess; Archery Meetings and Football.
Public Offices, with Hours of Attendance: City Offices; Court of Bankruptcy; Insolvent Debtor's Court.
April Sports: Fig-dance near Haddon Hall, with an Illustration; Quizzes; Angling; &c.
Bans of the Members of both Houses of Parliament.
A Table of English Wars since the Revolution in 1688—Years extended—and the Progress of Taxes and National Debt.
Weather Table, by the late Rev. Dr. Clarke; also Observations of Dr. Keenan, &c.
May Sports: Jack-in-the-Box, with an Illustration; Angling.
Exhibitions and Amusements of the Metropolitan; Theatres, &c.
June Sports: Grass Racing, with an Illustration; Racing; Angling, &c.
Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 159, Strand.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Nov 10.—Twenty-third Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 11.—Battle of Preston, 1715.
TUESDAY, 12.—Richard Baxter born, 1615.
WEDNESDAY, 13.—George Fox died, 1693.
THURSDAY, 14.—Latham born, 1715.
FRIDAY, 15.—Wellington Ministry resigned, 1835.
SATURDAY, 16.—Walsingham Bridge opened, 1754.

WINE MARCHES AND FOREIGN EXCHANGE, &c. &c. FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOVEMBER 16.

Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2
W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2
W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2
W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2
W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2	W. M. 2 1/2

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"A Friend of Bradford."—Dr. Meudelsahn is reputed to be the finest organist in the world.
"E. Z."—Alexandrina Victoria.
"Charlemagne."—Capt. Orlando Sutherland's "Art of Conversation," (in Fraser's Magazine) contains some really useful hints.
"L. E. L."—Spillings.—Yes.
"E. H."—Bosdon.—Referred to the Artist.
"W. P. E."—Bethering.—The Illustrated London Almanack must be ordered of a Bookseller. Our correspondent will be entitled to the Large Print. Our Agents at Exeter are Messrs. Sprell and Wain.
"C. H."—near Tarnworth, is thanked for the suggestion.
"W. W."—Longport.—We welcome the proposed institution to have originated with respectable parties.
"Sally's remarks" should address, "Athenian Club-house, Pall Mall."
"J. S."—Reford; "J. S."—Leccester.—The day of publication will be speedily announced.
"J. B."—Glasgow, is thanked; but we have not room.
"T. C. L."—Hall.—Yes.
"A Confused Reader."—Cambridge.—Refer to "De Porquell's List of French Works."
"A Dubliner Ranger."—Survey.—Certainly.
"G. H. T."—Exeter.—See the article on the Lord Mayor's Design, in our present number.
"Birk."—Barnstaple.—1. We do not remember the edition of the Spectator in question. 2. The print from Becken's Portrait of Sir Walter Scott is an admirable likeness. 3. The merits are merely balanced.
"A Subscriber."—Newcastle.—We do not undertake to decide wagers.
"A Subscriber."—Barnstaple.—The paper is forwarded by Friday Night's Post.
"W. H."—A Weichman is politically an Englishman.
"A. B. C."—Stratford-on-Avon, cannot claim the usuality.
"An Admirable Subscriber."—Exeter, is thanked.
"Polo-illustrated" should read Shakespeare's "Much Ado about Nothing."
"Country Cousin."—Horne Regis.—It is bound to execute the repairs.
"J. W. A."—(Canterbury-place) letter has been referred to our Dramatic Critic.
"A Constant Reader."—The burial cannot be legally refused.
"Orlando."—Newington-precinct.—"A Subscriber," Exeter.—See the advertisements of our last number.
"A Subscriber."—Monty.—3 dills. Certo is in Milan. We have already engaged the great Chateaufort's marriage.
"G. T."—The marriage would be within the prohibited degree.
"C. B. D."—Manchester.—The Railway Proprietors provide the carriage; but of course, fares are paid.
"A True Subscriber."—Vauxhall Gardens.—The Mace and Sword-bearers rode together in the late Royal and Civic Procession.
"F. W."—Nottingham.—The western front of the New Royal Exchange have been engraved in No. 161 of our Journal.
"J. H."—Cambridge, is thanked for the hints as to the Whigs.
"G. B."—Stanning.—1. Hennessy's Aerol Machine has not yet attended. 2. There is no law to prevent persons carrying an air-gun. 3. Dr. Reid's volume on the Steam-engine.
"M. A. N."—Mr. Emidy (of Bally's) has driven 25 horses in hand. See No. 167 of our Journal.
"A. B. C."—should apply to any Foreign Bookseller.
"A Cheshire Magistrate."—We were entirely unconscious of the announcement by the "Liverpool Mail."
"B. G. P."—Cambridge.—The error was corrected in our last No.
"Beregaria."—Certainly. The letter will be in time. Not at present.
"Cookermarie."—Tottenham.—The paper must be posted within seven days of the publication.
"Alquian" is thanked; but we have not room.
"On Prai Ami."—A lodger's goods may be seized for rent, but are recoverable by a Magistrate's order.
"Indigite (chiefly from want of room).—The Sisters' Call; Enjoyment, by J. B.; Wanderings of a Lover's Fancy, by H. M.; To a Young Lady, by L. D. L.; Lines on the Exchange, by J. R. H.
The Large Print.—In reply to several correspondents—the day of publication will be announced in a week or two.

PART XXVI., is Now Ready, Price 3s. 6d.

"A." Any Country News Agent may receive Posting Bills, bearing his address, by informing our Publisher where a parcel can be enclosed, free of expense.
"B." We are continually receiving complaints from subscribers respecting the slowness with which some newspapers forward our journal by post, much to the injury of the work. Our advice is, change the agent for one who is more attentive.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1844.

ONE of those events which are sure to put party pens in motion with more vigour than any other, has occurred this week. A Judge was to be appointed to the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Justice Eskeine, and for some days the journals were quarrelling with each other about who ought to be chosen, and who ought not. Each paper had its favourite candidate, or, at the least, was able to find fault with the one proposed by its opponent. The question has at last been settled in the only way such a matter ought to be disposed of—by the appointment of a very able lawyer, Mr. Eile, to the vacant seat on the bench, irrespective of all political considerations whatever. The great object to be kept in view by the public at large, is having the administrators of the law able in their profession, and of unblemished character. Those great requisites secured, political opinions, unless they are particularly fierce and rabid, which, in a man of clear sense and judgment they are not likely to be, ought not to be made a disqualification.

THE intelligence from India is not what is generally called interesting; it brings nothing but accounts of the continuance of tranquillity and the quietude with which the new Governor-General has commenced his functions. The news from China speaks of some anxiety on the part of the English merchants at Canton, and their dissatisfaction at being left without the protection always derived from the presence of a British ship of war; they have lately, by some oversight or mismanagement, been left without one, and have been in some degree dependent for security on the influence of the American flag. This ought surely not to happen, and we trust it has by this time been remedied. Business continues active at Hong-Kong, but the troops are sickly.

ALDERMAN GIBBS is this day installed as Lord Mayor of London. He abstained from joining in the civic procession that accompanied the Queen to the Royal Exchange, in consequence of a letter from Sir W. Magnay, expressing some apprehensions that the unequivocal voice of public opinion that would probably greet him might not be agreeable to her Majesty. There has, therefore, been considerable speculation as to how he would escape in the procession in which he must unavoidably take so prominent a part. We have no wish to join in the controversies bandied about respecting this gentleman. For all the obloquy with which he has been visited he has nobody but himself to blame. If the charges against him are unfounded, he has managed to give them every appearance of being true, by an obstinate refusal to perform an ordinary duty, which most men are as eager to discharge as he has been reluctant. What has been said of another virtue holds good also with respect to honesty. It is not enough to be honest in this world; care must be taken not to appear the reverse. This care Alderman Gibbs has not taken, and though it is possible the pending decision of a Court of Law may clear him of the real blame, it cannot free him of a culpable obstinacy, and a disregard of public opinion, that have produced all his unpopularity. If he could have avoided it and would not, he must take all the disagreeable consequences. At the same time we must protest against the violent course recommended, by insinuation, if not openly, in a leading journal. The ruffianism of London needs no encouragement to outrage, and we dislike to see the mob incited to become the judges of matters in respect to which they have no evidence, and would not examine it if they had. The Times of Wednesday contained an advertisement for the supply of a large quantity of "rotten eggs," the allusion being evident. Perhaps the advertisement was actually sent and paid for, it is very possible; but a journal is bound to use discretion in this department as in every other, and the insertion in this case, the object being so palpable, should have been refused. We hate anything like an approach to "lynch law," and here we have seen it, by implication, advocated. If Alderman Gibbs is really blameable, the Corporation and Livery of London have betrayed their trust in putting him in so prominent a position. A little of the most ordinary exertion would have left the man to sink into obscurity. Their folly, quite as much as his own seeking, have placed him on a pedestal, made him the head of the city and the chief figure in a pageant. Having done so, it is their duty, not only to abstain from pelling the idol they have created, but to prevent others from pelling him also. The dogged obstinacy of the man has involved him in a cloud of public suspicion, and we are not at all prepared to say he does not deserve it. But the citizens of London made him their chief magistrate with their eyes perfectly open to all his follies and faults, and they are bound to make the best of their bargain. As for the brutal violence contemplated in the advertisement we have above alluded to, we hope we shall hear nothing of it, and that Lord Mayor Gibbs may be permitted to go through the day in peace. A more uncomfortable Chief-Magistrate, probably, never rode in state from Westminster to Guildhall; luckily, half the day's work at least is done by water; however strong may be the support he derives from that meus cossius recti, which we hope he bears within, though he scorns to prove its existence otherwise than by the compulsion of law, yet we imagine he will more than once during his few hours of full-blown dignity exclaim with Falstaff "Would it were supper-time and all were well."

THE "bull" in Irish politics has been slightly broken this week by Dr. Maunsell, the proposer of the occasional sitting of the Imperial Parliament in Dublin, as a remedy for the social ills of Ireland. His plan was pretty generally laughed at, but the Doctor, like most men who have a crotchety, is not easily discouraged. He has just published the speech in the Town Council, in which he brought forward his scheme, and he has appended to it a "note" on the present state of the country, in which, it will be sufficient to say, he repeats something of his old arguments, again insists on the efficacy and practicability of his proposal, and traces back the present confused state of Irish party to the breaking up of the Orange Lodges. Neither his plan nor his arguments would be of much importance, but for the fact that they are put forward by a Protestant and a Conservative. On the other side of the question, O'Connell is quiescent at Darrynane, while at Dublin there are some slight symptoms of difference of opinion between the Federalists and simple Repealers, which will probably disappear so soon as O'Connell descends again into the arena; this, at least, is the opinion of Dr. Maunsell.

THE Spanish Moderados are going into excesses that altogether belie their name, and that have something of the absurd mixed with their ferocity. Thus, an order issued by the authorities at Barcelona prohibits any number of persons exceeding five from standing together in the streets, those not dispersing on being commanded to do so, to be shot or bayoneted at the pleasure of the soldiery. The same proclamation also forbids any one from carrying a stick in the streets of greater diameter than that of a real de orillon, which, as nearly as we can reduce it to our measure, would be about the diameter of a silver threepenny piece! We never heard of a revolution being effected by walking canes; but the heroes of Barcelona ought to know best what weapons are to be avoided. If sticks are so dangerous, Narvaez may thank his stars he has not got Tipperary to deal with; the "boys" and their "shille-lahs" would be the death of him.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

On Saturday last the Queen and Prince Albert went in the morning, in a pony carriage, to the riding-school, for equestrian exercise, attended by Colonel Arbuthnot and Wyke. His Serene Highness Prince Ernest, of Hesse-Philippsthal, arrived at the Castle, from Town, in the afternoon, on a visit to the Queen.

WEDNESDAY, Sunday.—The Queen and Prince Albert, the Court, and the domestic household, attended divine service in the private chapel of the Castle. The Holy Communion was afterwards administered. The Honourable and Rev. Charles Leslie Courtenay officiated.

WEDNESDAY, Monday.—This morning her Majesty, attended by Lady Portman, proceeded in the pleasure grounds and the Home Park for some time. In the afternoon her Majesty and Prince Albert took equestrian exercise in the riding-school, attended by Colonel Arbuthnot and Colonel Wyke. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Duke of Bedford, the Earl of Lincoln, Colonel Wyke, and Mr. Anson, left the Castle soon after half-past nine o'clock, to shoot in the royal preserves at Baginbun.

WEDNESDAY, Tuesday.—The Queen and Prince Albert walked out in the course of the forenoon in the grounds adjacent to the Castle. In the afternoon her Majesty and Prince Albert again promenaded in the pleasure grounds. The Earl of Mount Devon arrived at the Castle, and has relieved Lord Byron from his duty as Lord-in-Waiting on the Queen; and Captain Meynell has succeeded the Hon. Captain Dancowrie as the Green in Waiting on her Majesty.

WEDNESDAY, Wednesday.—The Queen and Prince Albert took their early morning walk in the pleasure grounds and the Home Park. On the return of her Majesty and her Royal Consort, his Royal Highness went to shoot in the royal preserves, attended by the Earl of Morton, Colonel Wyke, Captain Meynell, and Mr. Anson. In the afternoon her Majesty and Prince Albert promenaded in the Home Park for some time.

WEDNESDAY, Thursday Evening.—(From our own correspondent.)—This morning, shortly after nine o'clock, her Majesty and her Royal Highness Prince Albert left the Castle, and proceeded across the private grounds and the Home Park on foot to her Majesty's dog kennel, to inspect the progress of the model, now in course of execution, of her Majesty's late favourite hound, "Kew." The Queen and the Prince afterwards walked to the royal aviary, and returned to the Castle between ten and eleven o'clock. The Prince Consort hunted this morning with his Royal Highness's pack of hares, in the vicinity of South and Salt-hill. Colonel Wyke and Mr. G. E. Anson were in attendance upon the Prince. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, and the Princess Alice, were taken for their usual airing this morning in the Home Park; the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal, riding on their Shetland ponies. The Dowager Lady Lytton was in attendance upon the infant Royal Family. This afternoon her Majesty, who was accompanied by her Royal Highness Prince Albert, and attended by Colonel Arbuthnot, took equestrian exercise in the New Riding School. Thursday next is the day which has been definitively fixed upon for the departure of her Majesty and her Royal Highness Prince Albert from the Castle, to honour with a visit the Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter at Burling House.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO THE MARQUIS AND MARCHIONESS OF EXETER.—Her Majesty and her Royal Highness Prince Albert, according to the present arrangements, will leave Windsor Castle on Tuesday next for Burling House, on a visit to the Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter. During the short absence of the court from Windsor, which will not extend beyond a period of four days, the infant royal family will remain at the Castle, under the care of the Dowager Lady Lytton. The preparations for the reception of her Majesty and her royal consort are nearly completed. The gorgeous state bed is elevated upon a platform two steps from the door, from which it is raised by a tripod pedestal, upon which there are three lofty columns, elegantly carved and gilt. Above these is a spacious dome, surmounted by the crest of the noble house of Cecil, in the centre of the canopy is the coronet of an earl in highly burnished gold. The hangings contain 250 yards of beautifully striped coral coloured velvet of British manufacture. These are lined, together with the tester, head, &c., with 900 yards of white satin, the whole interspersed with ornaments in gold. Deep silk fringe, coral coloured trimmings, tassels, &c., give a finishing effect to the drapery attached to this superb and costly couch, which, from the ground, stands upwards of 20 feet in height. In the room in which the state bed is intended for her Majesty and her illustrious consort is fixed, the late Duke of York slept on the 5th of January, 1821, on his return from a visit to his Grace the Duke of Rutland at Belvoir Castle. The ceiling in this room is most magnificently painted. It is one of Verrio's best works, and the subject it represents is "Jupiter Preceding Remulus to Jupiter to be Deified." There are also in this room sixteen other paintings by the first masters. The apartment is 23 feet 8 inches long, 23 feet wide, and 24 feet high. Three pieces of ancient tapestry adorn this room, each of which is 15 feet square. The following are the subjects illustrated by them: "Jupiter, God of the Winds," "Vulcan at his Anvil," and "Neptune with his Trident." Latin inscriptions are attached to each of these beautiful pieces of work. Adjoining the above room is the state dressing-room, 21 feet long by 13 feet broad, and 18 feet in height. This room, now completely renovated, was thoroughly fitted up in 1759, and cost £2,140. The ceiling was painted by Verrio, and around the spacious apartment hang paintings by Rubens, Caracci, Poussin, and other masters. A superb suite of silver-gilt dressing plate, formerly belonging to William the Third, and a commode, variegated most richly with tortoise shell ornaments, form a portion of the sumptuous fittings of this ante-room. Next to these, and upon the same floor, is the jewel closet, a repository of the most rare and valuable articles. The expected visit of the Queen to Northampton has caused the greatest excitement in the town, it not having been visited by a Queen Regent since the days of Elizabeth. The Corporation have voted an unlimited sum towards celebrating the event, and are going to meet her Majesty in robes, which will be the first time they have worn them since the Municipal Bill passed; and, in anticipation of the Queen coming from Weedon, the ruins of the ancient castle are to be restored by temporary erections, so as to give it the appearance it had when the Henrys and King John held their Parliament there. Triumphant arches will be erected, the poor taxed, and a subscription opened for the purpose of erecting a dispensary, to be called the "Victoria Dispensary." Many other preparations are in contemplation. Some misapprehension exists as to the exact locality in which Bury or Barleigh house is situated. It is not in the county of Lincoln, but in the parish of Stamford St. Martin, in the adjoining county of Northampton; so close, however, to the border, that Peck, the historian of Stamford, Lincolnshire, has thought it necessary to include a description of the building, &c., in his interesting work. Barleigh house, again, is only a mile distance from the town of Stamford, in Lincolnshire, a circumstance which may have induced the supposition that it was really situate in the latter county. The name-house is undoubtedly the same as that possessed by the great William Cecil, the Chief Minister of Queen Elizabeth, who created him Bar of Barleigh, or Burgley, in the year 1571.

The Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, and Lady Caroline Leveson Gower, have arrived on a visit to the Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter at Burying House, N. B., from Daresbury Castle, whence their graces proceed to Lord and Lady Blyth's seat, Exeter House, en route to the south.

INTERESTING MARRIAGE OF MISS BURDETT COURTIS.—There is a report that Miss Burdett Courtis intends at length to bestow her hand and her immense wealth upon a young surgeon, the junior partner of a house at the west end. Miss Burdett Courtis, after a lengthened absence in Germany, has returned, and is now at St. Leonards.

VISCOUNT and Viscountess Palmerton have arrived from Germany, and are now at Brockley Hall, on a visit to Viscount Melbourne.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE COUNTESS OF BERKELEY.—We last week announced the death of the Countess of Berkeley, at Cranford House, near Hounslow. On Tuesday, the mortal remains of the late Countess were interred in the family vault, under the chancel of the parish church of Cranford, Middlesex, in which vault repose the remains of the Earls and Countesses of Berkeley, for upwards of two hundred years past.

DEATH OF LORD WESTERN.—Lord Western, the well-known agriculturist, died on Tuesday morning, at his seat, Felix Hall, Essex. His lordship was at one time an active politician, attached to the Whig interest, but for some years he had retired from public life, and long since he expressed his determination never again to mix himself up with the turmoil of politics.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.—The Royal Exchange will not be opened for public business until after Christmas. Workmen are now busily engaged in removing the decorations used at the opening, and fitting up Lloyd's, the insurance department, shops, &c.

NEW COMMON COUNCILMAN.—At a wardmote held in Broad-street Ward on Monday, Mr. Henry Marriott was elected to the Common Council in the room of Mr. Moon, lately elected Alderman of the ward of Portoken.

KING WILLIAM THE FOURTH'S STATE.—It is expected that the pedestrian status of our late monarch will be ready for erection within a fortnight. Mr. Nixon, to whom its erection is entrusted, says that it would have been long since erected, but that in consequence of its having been cut out of a solid piece of granite, it required several touches of the chisel even after he had, as he supposed, completed it.

MR. ALDERMAN GIBBS AND THE OPENING OF THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.—The present Lord Mayor (Mr. Alderman Gibbs) has published an explanation of the reasons which induced him not to appear in the civic procession at the opening of the Royal Exchange. It appears that his lordship received a letter from the then Lord Mayor (Sir William Magnay), in which his lordship stated that there was likely to be an unpopular demonstration against Mr. Alderman Gibbs. Sir William made the intimation in those terms—"As chief magistrate of this city, entertaining the deepest anxiety that no circumstance should occur to interrupt the harmony which ought universally to prevail on this happy occasion, I deem it my duty to convey to you a knowledge of the opinion which I have heard expressed in so many quarters, that you are likely to be the object of a demonstration of unpopular feeling, which the consciousness on your part of its being undeserved can form no justification for you unnecessarily placing yourself in a situation to call it forth, particularly so as your position in the procession, so near to her Majesty, would immediately make her acquainted with the existence of a feeling but little in harmony with the sentiments of the nation should express. Mr. Alderman Gibbs, after reading the letter from Mr. William Mayne, appeals to the good feeling of the public to judge whether he should not have been wanting in respect to the chief magistrate of the City, and in loyalty to her Majesty, if he had indulged his own inclination, after the receipt of such a letter from the Lord Mayor.

EARLY CLOSING OF SHOPS IN LONDON.—On Wednesday night a public meeting of the assistants of London employed in various trades, was held at the Percy Hotel, Rathbone-place, Oxford-street. Mr. Lancaster in the chair, for the purpose of forming a new London Association of all trades, on the principles of the Linendrapers' Association, to procure, if possible, an earlier closing of their respective warehouses and shops. Resolutions of a more formal nature were agreed to, the society was formed, a committee appointed, and several members enrolled. The chair was not taken until 10 o'clock, and the parties, in consequence of the present system, were not able to exemplify the principle of early closing.

INCREASED VALUE OF PROPERTY IN LONDON.—From a recent return made by order of the vestry of St. Marylebone with respect to assessments in Oxford-street, it appears that in the year 1777 a house, situated on the north-side of Oxford-street, near Orchard-street, was rated in the parish books at £15 per year. In the present year the same house lets at £220, and is rated in the books of St. Marylebone at £120.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. ELLIS, Q.C., AS A JUDGE.—On the retirement of Mr. Justice Keble from the bench, Mr. Ellis, Q.C., has been appointed to the vacant judgeship in the Court of Common Pleas. Mr. Ellis, as our readers are no doubt aware, was a Whig, and one of our contemporaries express great astonishment that he should be selected. By some of them the appointment is considered as a proof that there was no Conservative barrier of sufficient character and attainments to fill the office. Mr. Ellis was on Thursday morning sworn in before the Lord Chancellor as one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, after having gone through the ceremony of being made Sergeant-at-Law. He was introduced by Mr. Sergeant Wilde and Mr. Sergeant Talfourd. The framed judge afterwards proceeded into the other Courts, and went through the usual formalities.

LONDON AND DUBLIN SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.—On Thursday a special general meeting of the proprietors of this company was held at the terminus, London-bridge, for the purpose of authorizing the formation of the Canterbury, Ramsgate, and Margate line, and of adopting resolutions authorizing the raising of additional capital, to the amount of £1,000,000. Mr. Richards, chairman of the Board, presided. It was proposed that £1,000,000 should be raised by the issue of 40,000 new shares, of the nominal value of £25 each, to parties who shall pay for the same £15 in cash. A very lengthened discussion ensued; but the resolution for raising the capital in the above manner was unanimously carried. It was next resolved that the mortgaged debt of the Company should be repaid.

A CURIOUS WEDDING.—On Tuesday a marriage took place at the parish church of St. George-in-the-East, Cannon-street, which attracted much curiosity. The bride was Miss McCormack, an exceedingly pretty girl, who belonged to Raine's £100 School, and the bridegroom William Chancery, a smart young fellow, belonging to the Wellclose-square division of the Fencible-battalion. The benevolent donor had by his will left a sufficient sum of money to support forty girls, to be elected from the parochial schools, for four years. At the end of that period they are sent out to service, and upon attaining the age of nineteen, and their characters being irreproachable, they become eligible to draw in a lottery for a husband. Two marriages take place in every year, namely, one upon the merry first of May, or "Sweep's day," and the other on the 5th of November, or "Guy Fawkes day," and on the morning of each of these days a drawing takes place for the lot of May, or 5th of November, as the case may be, and Miss McCormack having drawn the prize on the 5th of May last, was of course the next for preferment. When the lucky ticket is drawn, the next thing to be done by its fortunate owner is to seek out for an eligible partner (not a Roman Catholic, for they, according to the will of the testator, are ineligible) in the parishes of St. George in the East, St. Paul, Shadwell, or St. John of Wapping, and this being done, notice is given to the trustees for their approval. In this instance, Miss McCormack's choice fell upon the "Waterman-drawman," and the trustees finding no reason to find fault with his good looks or fair fame, nothing more was left but to go through the happy ceremony. In the evening, according to the usual custom, a dinner took place at the institution, at which the bride and bridegroom, and several of their friends, attended, and after the health of the happy couple was given, the chairman presented the bridegroom with one hundred new sovereigns in a bag, as his bridal portion from the institution.

ROBERT AT LAMBETH CHAPEL.—On Wednesday morning early, or late on Tuesday night, some thieves entered Lambeth Chapel, and abstracted all the communion service, plate and other valuable property.

COUNTRY NEWS.

BIRMINGHAM SPECULATIONS.—One gentleman, at Birmingham, in a small way, has cleared £12,000 by land speculation; another is said to have cleared £3,000 in a fortnight; a third bought some land several years ago for £2,000, and thought he did exceedingly well to sell it some years after for £10,000, but his successor has actually sold the same land lately for £20,000.

FRAUDulent ACCIDENT AND LOSS OF LIFE AT DART.—An accident of a very serious and fatal description took place on Tuesday, at Dart. A few weeks ago the Town Council and Commissioners of the Borough agreed to arch over the Gliding mill-brook, in the Northgate, with the view of adding a large plot of land to the Castle Market. Accordingly, a Mr. Sims entered into a contract to carry out the extensive work, in connection with the large sewer just completed, at great expense to the town. The works were commenced a few weeks back, and one portion of the arch over the brook completed, all but removing the centre. About eight o'clock on Tuesday morning Mr. Sims's labourers commenced removing the centre, and whilst in the act of taking away the last piece, the whole mass of material fell in, burying the unfortunate men in the ruins. News of the sad calamity was soon in all parts of the town, and thousands of people rushed to the spot. Every possible exertion was made to remove the materials, but from the immense quantity which had fallen (the arch being an expensive one), this was a work of some time, notwithstanding there was no lack of willing hands. The first body found was that of the contractor's son-in-law, and as the mangled remains were disinterred, a thrill of horror passed through the immense crowd. Six dead bodies, all of them more or less mutilated, were afterwards extricated. The bodies presented a sad spectacle, and the melancholy event has cast a gloom upon the town. It is supposed that the centre of the arch was removed too early, the late heavy rains having prevented the materials "setting" sufficiently firm to allow of the taking away the centre.

LAMENTABLE ACCIDENT AT STOCKPORT.—On Tuesday morning a fatal accident occurred at the Churchgate factory, Stockport, belonging to Messrs. Kitchan and Samuel Howard Corbham, by the falling of a large chimney attached to the works there, and which, in its descent, unfortunately caused the death of two men, and seriously injured two or three others. The chimney stood in the yard behind the Churchgate factory, as seen from the public road. It and the surrounding buildings have probably been built between forty and fifty years.

INCREASED RAIN IN BIRMINGHAM.—On Tuesday evening a fire broke out at Hill-house Farm, Birkhury, in the occupation of Mr. Hayward, which resulted in the loss of a large quantity of corn, and the destruction of several farm buildings. The farm is situated about half a mile from Birkhury Church, and is the property of Winchcombe Henry H. Starker, Esq., lord of the manor. A labourer has been apprehended on suspicion of being the author of the mischievous calamity.

THE DOUBTful SUICIDE AT KILMARNOCK.—According to a Birmingham paper, the man and woman who lately committed suicide at Kilmarock, under the singular circumstances already mentioned, were a Mr. Joseph Barker, formerly of that town, and his wife. Mr. Barker was one of the firm of John and Joseph Barker, Cornford court, who were largely engaged in the German trade, and failed somewhere about the year 1834. Mr. John Barker, we believe, died very shortly afterwards, but Mr. Joseph Barker subsequently resided in London, and more recently travelled for some time for a house at Birmingham. This employment he left a few months ago, with a view to a connection with a house in London, in which, however, he did not succeed; and it is supposed that disappointment on this score, and probably the exhaustion of his resources, led to the commission of the fatal act. It has been ascertained that the individuals came to Ayrshire about the time when the Burns Festival was held. No letters or papers came to them at any of their abodes, and they paid their bills with extreme punctuality in all the inns. The landlady at Ayr heard them once mention their names, and thought it commenced with a "B." They represented themselves to be from London, but they gave no address. In the afternoon, when setting out on their fatal evening excursion, in going along the passage, the gentleman observed, in a hasty manner, to the landlady of the Commercial Inn, at Kilmarock, "We are going to take an evening walk. My wife is fond of a moonlight walk, and we are going like young people when they go out night courting." The woman, taking the arm of her husband, turned about and said, "I'll court no more—my courting days are over." Although they must, ere this, have fully resolved upon effecting suicide, they appeared to be in good spirits, and more like persons going to a social party, than individuals who had determined to "shuffle off their mortal coil." In the stage and yet most deliberate manner in which they accomplished it. From five o'clock, the time when they left the inn, to half-past eight o'clock, when there is every reason to suppose they immersed themselves, it is ascertained that they spent part of their time in a public house at Gatehead, which they entered and called for a glass of whisky, but of which they did not partake.

ALARMING CONFLAGRATION AT DUNDEE.—The Glasgow Chronicle states that yesterday week a fire broke out in the quiet little town of Strathaven, by which upwards of forty houses, with a brewery and tan-work, were burned to the ground, nearly one hundred poor families thrown destitute to the street, and the population of the entire town seriously threatened. The conflagration commenced at the south end of the town a little way beyond a place named Todd's-hill, where the population are chiefly weavers, and the wind being high at the time, and blowing from the south-east, rapidly spread the flames from house to house on both sides of the street, until, in the space of a few hours, notwithstanding the efforts of a body of the inhabitants who turned out to check the flames, forty houses were completely destroyed, in addition to the brewery of Mr. Vallance, and the large tan-work of Mr. Semple, where it is alleged that not less than £20,000 worth of property has been consumed. One account states that about 55 houses in all have been destroyed, and 105 families deprived of the means of livelihood, or made dependent for shelter and support upon friends, relations, and neighbours. It is calculated that from 50 to 60 looms, with webs, principally belonging to Glasgow manufacturers, have been consumed.

ALARMING SUICIDE BY A BOY.—Evan Lloyd, a boy, aged about nine years, has been committed to Carmarthen County Gaol, charged with having, on the 10th of September last, at Galloway, killed one Daniel Jones, a little boy, aged about seven years, by shooting him down on the right side of his head with a stone. The poor deceased child, it appears, had been walking out with the prisoner, who arrived home by himself. As deceased did not make his appearance, search was made for him, and he was found lying on a heap of stones, by the road side, with a ring in his blood. Many of the stones were covered with clotted blood and tufts of the poor child's hair. He had just strength left to state who his assailant was, when death overtook him. An inquest was held on the body, when, although the facts of the matter were well known to all, the jury returned as their verdict that the deceased had died, but from what cause, and for whose means, they had no evidence to determine. Notwithstanding this verdict, the prisoner was apprehended, and was committed for trial at the assizes.

IRELAND.

THE EARL OF BENDISH.—We are happy to announce a decided improvement in the case of Lord Bendish, and that no serious injury has been sustained by that excellent nobleman.

DEATH OF THE HON. MRS. BLENKINSOP.—The demise of this respected lady took place on Tuesday, at the residence of her grandson, Frederick Blenkinsop, Esq., of Blenkinsop. The Hon. Mrs. Blenkinsop reached a very advanced age.

THE REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—On Monday, at the meeting of the Repeal Association, a resolution was unanimously passed, urging the people of Ireland to use all their energies to augment the collection of the O'Connell tribute, which was to be made on the 17th instant. Some letters were read from Mr. O'Connell, upon the subject of Repeal, but they did not present any feature of interest. There was also a letter from the hon. and learned gentleman, warning the Repealers in Scotland against a society there, called the Order of Repealers, the members of which, he said, were liable to transportation. The amount of the week's rent was £200 15s. 4d.

STORM AND LOSS OF LIFE.—The gale of Friday and Saturday last has been productive of a number of shipwrecks on the Irish coast. The Shannon of Whitehaven was driven ashore about half a mile below Ballygass, at a place called Louther Lodge, and, such was the fury of the wind and waves, that she was at once dashed on the rocks, and fell over on her beam ends. Her crew consisted of eight hands, three of whom—the captain, his brother, who was mate, and a seaman—were washed off the wreck, and drowned, notwithstanding every exertion was made to save them. Another fatal casualty occurred at Clough, about seven miles from Drogheda. A large brig, name unknown, laden with wheat, supposed to be from Wexford, and bound to Liverpool, was totally wrecked, and all hands supposed to be lost, as there was no account of any of them. Another wreck took place at Annagasson, near the same place. Name of the vessel unknown. She was dashed to pieces. The Drogheda Railway did not sustain the slightest damage, although the trees and hedges adjoining the line suffered severely from the severity of the hurricane. Several cabins at Donaghadee were blown down and wrecked. A steamer was lost on Saturday morning off Lambay, and all hands perished.

ANOTHER MURDER.—On Friday week a party of young men met at a dance in the townland of Donagh, Sligo, within a few miles of Ballina. Some dispute arising, they attacked two men, brothers, named Foyde, and beat them severely. Immediately after, another brother rushed into the party with a knife, and killed one of them on the spot, by stabbing him in the heart. He also wounded several others, who are so dangerously ill that their lives are despaired of. It is surmised that the meeting was an assembly of Ribbonmen, as they had signs and passwords.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

IMPORTANT QUESTION REGARDING BILLS OF EXCHANGE.—A case was tried on Tuesday in the Court of Exchequer, McMillan v. Simmes, which involved some questions of interest connected with bills of exchange. It was an action to recover the sum of £50 upon a bill of exchange, accepted by the defendant. The defendant had put a variety of pleas on the record, amongst them several special pleas, to the effect that Webb, the drawer, did not endorse the bill to the plaintiff as alleged in the declaration; that he had not promised to pay to the plaintiff; that Webb had drawn the bill upon, and it was accepted by the defendant, for the sole accommodation of the drawer, who had afterwards endorsed it to the plaintiff; and that in violation of an agreement between Webb and Chandler, the latter had passed it to the present plaintiff—Mr. Jervis, with whom was Mr. Gyle, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. W. H. Watson for the defendant. The history of the case was simply this:—The defendant and Webb had for a long series of years been fellow-clerks in the office of the Commander in Chief at the Horse Guards, and in 1843 the latter, having got into difficulties by making large purchases of leasehold property, induced the former to accept accommodation bills for him for £2000. One of these bills was that which had become the subject of the present action. This bill, shortly after it had been drawn and accepted, Webb took to Chandler, who then lived in Hury-street, St. James's, for the purpose of getting it discounted. Chandler, however, never handed any money over to Webb, but passed the bill to the plaintiff. The bill became due June 17, 1843, and on being presented, on the faith that Webb would take it up the defendant said it would be paid that day. Webb, as it turned out, did not pay it, and, greatly to the surprise of the defendant, after the lapse of twelve months without hearing anything further from the plaintiff, an application was made by him for payment. The defendant thereupon wrote to ask that it might be held over until he had consulted his solicitors upon the matter, and eventually the action was commenced. Evidence was given which went to prove the acceptance and presentation of the bill, as well as what the defendant had stated upon the last-named occasion. In his cross-examination one of the witnesses admitted that the plaintiff was a porter or messenger only at Drummond's. Mr. Watson, on behalf of the defence, contended that the plaintiff ought to have put in evidence to show the consideration he had given for the bill. The learned counsel then entered into a history of the case, and said, in order to prove that there had not been any consideration given for the bill, he should call Webb (who was brought up from Whitecross-street Prison for the purpose), who would distinctly establish the fact that not only was this an accommodation bill, but that Chandler had never given him the smallest consideration for it. George Webb on his examination proved the statement made by the learned counsel. The witness said he had been dismissed from the Warehouse in consequence of circumstances which arose out of his transaction.—Mr. Jervis put some questions to Webb regarding his transactions, and as the witness declined to answer them, the learned counsel concluded that his case was proved. The interest was £25 9s.—Mr. Watson submitted that the plaintiff was bound to prove the consideration given for the bill.—Mr. Baron Alderson certainly considered that proof must be given of the consideration. This was required under the fourth plea, which set out that this was an accommodation bill, and had passed into the hands of the plaintiff without consideration; and, furthermore, that it had so passed in violation of the agreement between Webb and Chandler. If the jury, then, should be satisfied that it was an accommodation bill, and had been endorsed to Chandler for a special purpose, which purpose the latter had failed to accomplish, he should, in that case, be of opinion that the plaintiff could not recover, for there was no proof of consideration.—Mr. Jervis contended it was for his learned friend to give proof of the non-consideration.—Mr. Watson, on the contrary, contended that it was the duty of the plaintiff to substantiate his claim, by proving the consideration.—Mr. Baron Alderson said he was of opinion that the plaintiff was called upon, under the fourth plea, to give evidence of the consideration.—Mr. Baron Alderson then quitted the court to consult the other learned judges, and on his return he said that the rule which he had laid down was correct according to the opinion of one member of the court, whom he had just consulted. The application of that rule in the present case, however, was a different question. He conceived the rule to be that where there was a transfer of a bill by fraud, that possession was obtained through the medium of fraud, and then that in answer to an action for the recovery of the amount, it became necessary for it to be averred, in denial of the right to recover, that the party suing held it without any consideration having been given. But in the case then before the Court there was no evidence of fraud as to the transfer in which Chandler had become possessed of the bill, although there might have been a misappropriation of the proceeds arising from it. It turned out, however, that there could not have been any misappropriation unless there was proof of proceeds. In that proof the defendant had failed, and, consequently, he had not made out the fourth plea. The jury then found for the plaintiff.—Damages, £25 9s.

THE ASSASSIN BARRISTER.—In the Bankruptcy Court on Wednesday, Robert Bonazzi, the bankrupt who had carried on business as a draper at Porters, and who absconded to Madeira with a large sum of money, was examined. It appeared from the account he gave that he had sold various parcels of goods at sums infinitely below their cost. He had received £400 from the time he commenced business till the opening of the day. He said he threw himself upon the mercy of his creditors, and that he had not a shilling in the world. Among other items the sum of £278 was put down for personal expenses for fourteen weeks. The bankrupt said he spent a good deal of it in the theatres and saloons, and those sort of places in London generally. He frequently went to the Opera, and the most confess he had been rather gay. Mr. James urged Mr. Goulburn to commit the bankrupt on the ground of not having presented satisfactory accounts, but his Honour said he could not commit him the whole case was investigated. The bankrupt held that it was never too late to establish a lex non proferetur. If the bankrupt should fail to come up on the day of adjournment, he would then be proclaimed as an outlaw. The investigation had better stand adjourned.

EXTENSION OF EARL DUNDONALD'S PATENT.—In the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, on Thursday, the Earl of Dundonald (formerly Lord Colborne) appeared in person to pray an extension of the patent of his rotary engine. His lordship stated that he had incurred an expense of about £16,000 in carrying out the patent, and applying it to boats, &c. No opposition was offered, the Crown and acquiesced in the extension. Their lordships granted an extension of the patent for the term of fourteen years.

THE BARRON OF ROSE V. THE QUEEN.—In the Court of Queen's Bench on Thursday Mr. M. D. Hill moved for a rule to show cause why certain letters found for the Crown should not be set aside, and a verdict entered for the applicant. The Court granted a rule.

In his last visit to the Exhibition of Industry, at Berlin, the King of Prussia purchased a beautiful porcelain, which his Majesty intends to offer as a present to the young Sultan Abdul-Mehid.

POLICE.

TREASONABLE SMUGGLING BY THE STOKER OF THE OCEAN STEAMER.—An immense raid, in the midst of which it was evident there were several smuggling attempts at the Marston House, on Tuesday, to hear the examination of William Slack, a stoker on board the Ocean steamer from Rotterdam, who was charged with having been found on board that vessel in the port of London, the same vessel having consigned in her one hundred and forty pounds weight of tobacco, upon which the duty had not been paid.—C. Atkinson Davis, officer of the Customs, stated that, in consequence of information which he had received that a large quantity of tobacco had been brought to the river by the Ocean, from Rotterdam, he proceeded on board that vessel, at Blackwall. He and a brother officer had waited her arrival, and she came into the river, not in consequence of stress of weather, but on the regular course of business, bringing her Majesty's mail. Witness proceeded directly to the prisoner Slack's berth, and asked him to produce all the tobacco he had in his berth, or concealed near his berth. The prisoner produced three pounds of tobacco, and a small quantity of spirits, from the back of his berth, and said that was all he had. Witness told him that if that was all he could produce, he should suffer no harm, for that was but a small quantity; but he intended was sure a large quantity was concealed in that vicinity. Witness told the prisoner to wait till he came, for no harm could come to him for what he had produced, and proceeded to take up some floating boards adjoining the engine. The prisoner started up the ladder as quickly as he could, left the vessel, and went to the pier, but witness hailed "stop!" after him, pursued, overtook, and brought him back, and told him he must wait till the issue of the search. The vessel then having landed her mail and passengers, went on to London, and witness proceeded with the search. After about three hours' search he found, on the starboard side, above the prisoner's berth, that a piece of board had been, with great art, made the means of concealment. Behind the two planks, which passed up to the beam of the engine-room, a piece of timber was fixed in and pushed, and painted over like the rest. That piece, which appeared to be the part of the solid mass, was capable of being removed by the application of a screw. Upon the removal of that little door the tubercles of the vessel were to be seen, and between the tubercles of the vessel was a hollow space leading down to the bilge. A string was attached, from which a great number of packages were suspended, encased with lead, in such perfect security that they might lie in the huge water without sustaining the slightest damage. The contents were tobacco, and from the manner in which it was deposited it equally defied injury from steam or salt water. Some of the packages were hung between the tubercles to a depth of ten, others to the depth of eleven feet in the space, and some were four pound and others one pound packages. There was no possibility of discovering that tobacco was in the vicinity of the place of concealment, for the concealment was not only impregnable, but the cord attached to each package, and communicating with the beam, was strongly impregnated with pitch and tar.—The Lord Mayor observed that the time occupied in preparing and depositing the contraband articles must have been considerable.—The witness said there could be no doubt of that, as after he had found out the place of concealment he was occupied two hours and a half in removing the packages. They had been wedged in by a forcing instrument. He found the screw which opened the secret door upon closely searching one of the berths.—The prisoner's solicitor cross-examined Davis, but did not elicit anything particular. The Lord Mayor said there appeared to be no mitigating circumstances in the case at all. It was quite evident the prisoner must have had guilty knowledge that the tobacco was on board, if he were not a participant in the fraud. It was evident, too, from his behaviour when the officer went on board, as well as from the fact that a great deal of time must have been occupied in depositing the tobacco, that he was perfectly aware of everything connected with the offence. The prisoner was adjudged to be guilty, and to pay the penalty of £100.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Oxford Journal announces, that on the 15th of September last three checks of an earthquake were felt at Kichieff. On the same day a similar sensation was felt at Odessa.

On Sunday last, as the eleven o'clock train from Antwerp was passing from Vieux-Deux, to Conchit, it literally cut in two a man who happened to be passing at the time.

Last week, during a severe storm, the wall of a new market in the course of erection at Wick-head fell down, and several of the workmen received severe injuries.

For the three days the New Royal Exchange was open to the public the subscriptions for the widows and orphans of four men killed during the progress of the works, amounted to £20 0s. 3d., which was received in the following coin:—Four sovereigns, one half dollar, one crown piece, 88 half pence, 992 shillings, 848 pence, 142 farthings pieces, 5 threepenny pieces, 665 pennies, 667 halfpennies, 20 farthings.

The Hungarian Diet has come to a resolution that the nobility shall contribute a subsidy towards the expenditure of the State, but that the Government is not to have the application of the subsidy. The amount of subsidy is only equal to 6,395,080 francs, which is said to be a very small sum, considering the immense territorial possessions of some of the nobles.

The Central Committee of Statistics at Brussels has elected, as one of its corresponding members, Mr. Edwin Chadwick, secretary to the Poor-law Commissioners.

On Monday, a General Assembly of the Academicians was held at the Royal Academy of Arts, in Trafalgar-square, when Mr. William Dyce and Mr. William Gilder Marshall were elected Associates of that institution.

We are glad to state, that the accounts received from Carmarthen relative to the state of health of Major-General Sir William Nott, are much more satisfactory. The severity of the attack which he experienced has passed away, and the physicians who pronounced his case at first to be hopeless are now sanguine in the gallant General's early restoration to health and strength.

A gentleman named Morant, of Tours, who died last week in Paris, has, by his will, left 100,000fr. to the hospital of that place, to be applied to insane patients.

A Brussels journal gives an account of two attempts at suicide, both fortunately prevented, by a girl under six years of age, at a village in Belgium, from grief at being unable to assist in the support of her mother and some younger children, who had been left almost destitute by the death of the father.

Lieutenant-General Count Tolstoy, the distinguished Russian infantry general, President of the Council of Military Affairs, died at Moscow on the 10th ult. He was Military Governor of Moscow, and occupied the highest position in the military departments of the empire.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Anhalt will arrive at Naples on the 15th instant, and shortly after his arrival his marriage with the Princess of Salerno will be solemnized.

One hundred and ninety-four gentlemen have given notice of their intention to apply to be admitted to practice as attorneys during the present term, and there are twenty-two notices for re-admission.

The Brighton Guardian states that Mr. Hurst, M.P. for Horsham, has suddenly left for France in embarrassed circumstances, and that tradesmen are sufferers to the extent of several thousands of pounds. Mr. Hurst's liabilities are said to exceed £150,000, and his son, Mr. R. H. Hurst, jun., has become responsible for his father's debts to the extent of £50,000.

The cost of rebuilding the Royal Exchange, together with the improvements in its immediate vicinity, is stated to be upwards of £400,000. The cost of the Royal Exchange is estimated at about £14,000 per annum. The Royal Exchange Assurance Company is rated at £2400; Lloyd's at £3000; and the London Assurance at £1400.

By warrant from the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, dated the 17th ult. custom, imported from India, or other places on the west coast of Africa, in British ships, and sold for the first time, is directed to be paid free of the auction duty of one-half per cent, hitherto charged on the sale of that article.

Accounts from Constantinople of the 17th ult. mention the arrival of a fauvar with dispatches from the General-in-Chief of the Turkish army in Albania, announcing that he had entered the town of Dibra, after an engagement with the insurgents.

Letters from Copenhagen of the 22nd ult. state that a French commission proposes to establish a communication by steam between Harre and Travelling.

On Oct. 20, a Jack was taken by Mr. H. Poole, in the Lea, (Cook's Ferry, Edmonton), which weighed 280; and measured 3 feet 4 inches in length, and 1 foot 6 inches in girth.

An amateur has just discovered, amongst the collection of a dealer in antiquities in Brussels, twelve-one copper plates, forming a gallery of portraits of Princes of the House of Nassau, beginning with William I. and ending with William V., Prince of Orange. In compensation, also, several other pictures. The dates are from 1747 to 1755. These portraits are engraved after Morelli, by Isaac Hantken, and other artists of the school of Rembrandt. The plates are in a perfect state of preservation, and the engravings are of the greatest beauty.

The Moniteur states that accounts have been received of the arrival at Casco, on the 15th Sept., of M. Lagrange, the French Ambassador.

A Vienna letter of the 28th states that the Duke de Bordeaux has accepted an invitation to visit the Prince de Rohan in Bismarck. The writer adds, that the Duke has given very competent, and looks more like a man of forty than twenty-four.

The total number of letters dispatched from Bombay on the 1st of August by the Assa for England amounted to 28,277, and newspapers, 9127, 61,500 boxes.

All the Rabbis who attended the late meeting at Brunswick have been excluded from standing as candidates for the office of chief Rabbi of the English Jews.

M. Bonnetour Bourguiniere, member of the National Convention in 1793, or the 18th Sept., of M. Lagrange, the French Ambassador.

A Vienna letter of the 28th states that the Duke de Bordeaux has accepted an invitation to visit the Prince de Rohan in Bismarck. The writer adds, that the Duke has given very competent, and looks more like a man of forty than twenty-four.

The total number of letters dispatched from Bombay on the 1st of August by the Assa for England amounted to 28,277, and newspapers, 9127, 61,500 boxes.

LORD MAYOR'S SHOW.—THE MAN IN BRASS.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE MAYORALTY.

The 8th and 9th of November, falling on the days of our publication, we are prevented from giving any representations of the events of the great civic ceremonies of those days; but, as we are familiar with the observances of past years, and by the favour of the public officers, fully acquainted with the details of those which are at this moment passing before the public eye, we may safely introduce a few sketches of the more remarkable points of the successive pageants, without identifying them with the persons through whom they may happen to be conducted. These points will embrace the inauguration of the new Lord Mayor; the procession of the "men in armour," and the costume and official decorations of my Lord Mayor.

ANCIENT KNIGHT.

ANCIENT KNIGHT.

1.—THE INAUGURATION OF THE LORD MAYOR. This ceremony takes place in the Guildhall on the afternoon of the

CEREMONY OF SWEARING IN

8th, and is, in all respects, a most solemn and imposing one. To understand its character, the spectator should be fully informed of the nature of the wonderful corporation whose representatives are then assembled before him. Without this we have known the observant Kohl himself look on in vain, and declare that London was the only city he found it difficult to comprehend. The Corporation of London consists of the whole body of citizens, under the style of "Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens." The ministerial, judicial, and legislative management of the affairs of this Corporation devolve on the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council. The Courts of Aldermen and Common Council are distinct, but the Aldermen sit in the Common Council as of right, and its sittings are held under the presidency of the Lord Mayor. The Aldermen are elected for life, the Common Councilmen are elected annually, in their respective wards. The companies or guilds of London, are to the Corporation what the halls and colleges of Cambridge and Oxford are to their respective universities; each complete within itself, each an independent institution, yet component parts of the whole. The Guildhall is the public place of the Corporation, as representing the Commonalty of the City of London; each company has its own hall, or its own place of meeting, for the transaction of the business of the company. Eighty-nine companies are enumerated in the Corporation List, but of these eight are practically extinct. Twelve of the companies take precedence in rank and wealth; they are called the twelve great Livery Companies of London, which have large possessions in real property, money in the funds, and therefore in the receipt of large annual incomes. These are the Mercers, Grocers, Drapers, Fishmongers, Goldsmiths, Skinners, Merchant Tailors, Haberdashers, Salters, Ironmongers, Vintners, and Cloth-workers.

On the 8th of November, the multitudinous members and representatives of these venerable fraternities, each one arrayed in the garments of his tribe, assemble at a "court of hustings," to receive from the old Lord Mayor a resignation of his office, and to tender the oaths to the new one, on his acceptance of the vacant chair. The scene presents us with a model of the entire framework of the British empire, as represented by Sovereign, Lords, Commons, and all classes of people. The wards of London send their twenty-six Aldermen and 240 Common Councilmen to gaze on the transmigration of the Lord Mayor. The state that surrounds the Corporation is a type of the state that surrounds the Monarchy. In the annual election of the "King of the City," we have a memorial of the time when the king of the land was elective. In the meeting of the Corporation within Guildhall, we see a shadow—and a magnificent shadow—of the time when the entire commonalty met and acted together; yes, we have a memorial of the time when the Lords occupied the upper end of the chamber of Parliament, and the Commons humbly stood below. The Aldermen are types of the Barons; the Common Council of the Commons; while in the liverymen of the companies, who have the privilege, above their brother freemen, of electing the civic functionaries, we have a type of the constituencies of Britain. We may see, too, a miniature of the judges of the land, in the attendant Recorder and Common Sergeant; while the Sheriffs, Under-Sheriffs, Town Clerk, Remembrancer, Pleaders, Secondaries, Attorneys, Auditors, Wardens, Clerks, Officers of the Lord Mayor's Household, City Marshals, and the host of minor functionaries, who pour in among the crowd, give the ceremony an imposing air of grandeur.

The last hour of the Lord Mayor's reign approaches; but the Lord Mayor never dies—his spirit is immortal. Two chairs—a small and a large one—are therefore placed (see our engraving), that, in the presence of the representatives of the eighty-one existing guilds of London, the transformation may be seen, and the Corporation be proved to live for ever. But, before this important act takes place, a more important one is transacted—the Lord Mayor elect is sworn. This is a ceremony of high religious import. Low, on his knees, before a table covered with the City Charters, and other formal documents, his hands placed on the Gospels, he is devoutly pledged to "keep faith and a good conscience" in the maintenance of his state and dignity. This done, the departing Mayor exchanges seats with him; and, lo! the power of the Lord Mayor has passed from one body to another! Sword-bearer, Mace-bearer, Purse-bearer, advance with threefold obeisance, and lay their emblems of office on the table. They retire, and stand among the crowd, sunk to the level of common humanity. But the new Lord Mayor speaks; it is the voice of law—it is the command of authority. Sword-bearer, Mace-bearer, Purse-bearer, advance once more; they resume their insignia of office, and start up official beings. Such is the initial act of the new Lord Mayor; "now is Mortimer lord of the city." The Ex-Lord Mayor, seated on a low chair, denuded of the collar of St. John, and all the outward and visible signs of supreme power, then receives the congratulations of the company, and, after him, the new Lord Mayor, in like manner, the same.

II.—THE SHOW—MEN IN ARMOUR.

The show, as arranged by the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs' Committee, is a poor one. A different result might have been expected, as the Lord Mayor belongs to the wealthy Fishmongers, and is reputed to have made a great deal of money by his civic connections. Be that as it may, the men in armour are always interesting, and they are to ride in the show. We have, therefore, by permission of the Board of Ordnance, had a series of careful sketches made of the steel suits, shields, swords, &c., which are kept in the Tower; and these we have grouped together in the way in which they are exhibited to the public in the procession. For the MAN IN BRASS, we are indebted to Mr. Marriott, of Fleet Street, in whose custody, as the old and representative of the Braziers of London, he is ordinarily kept. The "ancient knights," as they are called, who ride in the array, stands in front of you the village ale-house, with its sign waving in the breeze, as if beckoning you to enter. Hark! you recognize that noisy, galled veteran, whose seat that old oaken bench has been from time immemorial. A walking biography in the face of the leaves of Minerva, and the wrinkles of the Plunderer war. He's a fond of beer indeed—very fond—but then, poor fellow, recollect how those sixteen years in the Punjab must have evaporated the moisture out of him. I tell you, another guess must be from that Hocking, the higher, who could never pass the door without stopping at it to gaze till he fell out of his chair. And do not the gardens smell sweetly! though autumn is no longer young, the fragrance of summer breathes from that tiny plant there, just before you reach the Cross. The village is called St. Peter's; it's where Rose Kennedy lives with her father, the parish clerk. Bless you, it isn't much larger than a flower-pot. Yet every day of the year is there but you might gather in it a songey dit for a queen.

PORTRAIT OF THE RIGHT HON. MICHAEL GIBBS, LORD MAYOR.

CEREMONY OF INDUCTING THE NEW LORD MAYOR INTO HIS OFFICE.

Among the other noticeable contributions are a few which embellish the events of the day; such are the papers on the visit of Louis Philippe, by Doctor O'Toole (the Irish Whiskey-drinker); "Some Points for a New People's Charter," glancing at Young Englandism; a paper on the "Xanthian Marbles" illustrating the latest arrival of those gems of art; "The Three Royal Exchanges" telling gossipingly, yet factually, at the history of the respective edifices; and "The King of the French in the Old Home of his Exile," in a lively, rattling string of reasons why Louis Philippe should have come to England. A paper on "The Swedish Port, Vitalis," is enriched with some graceful translations; and among the Reviews is a very interesting and extended notice of W. Thom, "The Inveny Weaver." The illustrations are more numerous than usual; and there is a novel energy throughout the number which is highly satisfactory. By the way, the group of Irish life, by Phiz, at page 13, is a masterpiece of character.

FRASER this month presents us with a Number of unusual variety. "A Fine Day at Stratford-upon-Avon" is written by a real enthusiast—fresh, chatty, and, withal, with marks of good reading. We were sorry to find the article would not be completed for another month. "The Smiths" is a pleasant passage in the lives of some members of that large family, containing some capital "bits" of description; and the "Hints on the Modern Governess System" will awaken public attention towards the miseries of that estimable class of girls, whose interest it takes up with so much natural force. "The Luck of Barry Lyndon," and "The Classics of the Table," are continued with their usual attractiveness; and there is a perceptive review of Kohl's "Scotland and England."

HOOD'S MAGAZINE is a sparkling number. The editor's "Lay of a Labourer," is introduced by some finely graphic prose. "The Brace of Birds," is another main attractive story. As usual, there is some genuine poetry; and the under-current of the grotesque humour flows towards the exposure and correction of some social abuse.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE opens with a paper of thirty pages, on "The O'Connell Case,—Was the judgment rightly reversed?" It is a most elaborately argumentative affair, relieved by springy illustration of character—for example:—

We waited with great interest to see the course which Lord Denman would take upon the great question. He is a man of strong natural talents, of a lively bearing in the administration of justice, and an uncompromising determination on all occasions, to assert the rights and protect the privileges of the subject. Nor, though a man of unquestionably very strong Whig opinions, are we aware of his ever having allowed them to interfere with his eminent and most responsible judicial duties. Whatever may be our opinion as to the validity of his conclusions on the subject of the challenge to the jury, it was impossible not to be interested by the zealous energy, the manly eloquence, with which he vindicated the right of the subject to the fullest enjoyment of trial by jury, and denounced what he considered to be any, the slightest, interference with that right.

Two papers—on Miss Barrett's Poems and on Lamartine—relieve the somewhat too strong political cast of the number.

BENTLEY'S MISCELLANY introduces a new contributor with "The House in the Teutonia; a Painter's Adventure in Paris." It is vigorously written, in the right keep-moving magazine spirit, with an untiring picturesqueness of detail—a most essential acquisition for this magazine, which frequently verges on the rapid. "Canineology" is a very dull attempt to criticise the history of the dog. "Eton Scenes and Eton Men" contains some interesting reminiscences of the boyhood of several master-spirits of the day. "The Private Secretary" is a characteristic sketch of "that most speculative and least plebeian" calling. The "Scattergood" papers have for their attractions the marvels of an itinerant showman, drawn from the life; and fresh indignities heaped upon poor Clara, the governess, contrasted with the affected flippancy of a bad continued; in all which the writer maintains his reputation for nicely observing minor points of character and conduct.

THE METROPOLITAN has attracted our notice by a paper of "Recollections of the late Thomas Campbell," penned with excellent feeling. Tours, tales, and poetry, and political economy (!) fill the remaining pages.

THE NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE opens with "Scenes of Society—Jack Grandison's Marriage," the said Jack being a brilliant scamp, and magnificent adventurer: neither of these epithets, however, apply to his written career, which scarcely has the vulgar merit of being smart. "Peter Priggin's First Meet of the Season" is not high-mettled, but lively enough. "The Talleyrand Papers," part VIII., appear to be reaching an extent characteristic of the long-protracted life of the hero. The continuations are—"The Lover's Rock," "Social Piracy," "The Robertises on their Travels," and "The Philosophy of Waiting," in all of which there is abundance of amusement for these dull November nights. The "Conversations with Mr. Beckford" (who, by the way, was a pupil of Sir W. Chambers, while he was building Somerset-house,) continue to be very attractive.

TAIT has an excellent paper on Niebuhr, from a forthcoming translation of his "Memoirs." The reviews of a batch of "Recent Poems," and of Mrs. Shelley's "Rambles," are admirable.

THE DUBLIN UNIVERSITY MAGAZINE opens with a severe castigation of certain of our book-making generation, designated "Twaddling Tourists in Ireland;" in this paper, the "mock impartiality" that results from selfish and ignorant indifference is fearlessly exposed. Next is a very interesting and well-written paper on Etruscan Art. The tales are "The Year-Market in Ravensburg" and a Captivity, a Fête, and a stirring Abbey scene, in "The Nevilles of Garretstown."

AINSWORTH'S MAGAZINE is nearly half filled with the Editor's contributions; of these, "The Revelations of London, Part II., The Dog-fancier," with its details of St. Giles's Rookery and Dog-stealing, is, from first to last, a coarse piece of Jack Sheppardism—the next-egg of an unenviable popularity. Mr. W. F. Ainsworth, who, perforce, brings his "Winter Wanderings" to a stand-still—though, at the end of ten grave pages. To the relief of the number, however, comes "Another Leaf" from Drinkwater Meadows' Theatrical Recollections. Some thirty pages are occupied by the Editor's "Saint James's; or, the Court of Queen Anne."

THE NEW EDINBURGH REVIEW contains a rambling article on "Young England and the Political Economists;" the paper is really entertaining, but lacks method; still, the spirit is good; and the number is lively throughout.

THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW, No. III., contains eight masterly papers, of well-varied interest. The opening article, "On the Political Economy of the Bible," treats with important truths, among which stands most prominently, the vindication of the paramount authority of Scripture, by demonstrating the full and unexpected harmony between the word of God and the works of God. There are two articles of intense scientific interest—on the life of Sir Humphry Davy, and the Earl of Rosse's Reflecting Telescopes. In elaborate detail and eloquent illustration these papers have, perhaps, never been surpassed. Backhouse's Visit to the Mauritius and South Africa, and the Condition of the United States of North America, are the subjects of two other papers; and the Number is wound up with an intrepid attack upon the shabby Post-Office Espionage, which is not a string of unstained assertions, but a severe examination of the Lords and Commons Reports upon this very damaging business.

THE POLYTECHNIC REVIEW and MAGAZINE continues its papers on Projectile Weapons of War and Explosive Compounds, and Captain Warner's inventions; in which, however, little novelty is elicited. A somewhat better method or system in this journal would materially add to its influence as a scientific record.

THE BANKERS' MAGAZINE contains an exposé of "The Grinding Tyranny and Unprincipled Rapacity of Money-lenders," though the remedy proposed—"the re-enactment of the usury laws"—is very questionable. "The Regulation of the Currency, and Suggestions for Decimal Money," are among the other striking novelties of this number.

SIMMONDS'S COLONIAL MAGAZINE is chiefly noticeable for the "Journal of a Voyage to Port Phillip," and an anonymous attack from Monte Viedo, on "Rosas, and the Atrocities of his Dictatorship," in which crimes are catalogued in a frightful array of figures. "A Visit of Ningpo," by an English lady, is a neat picture of Chinese domestic life.

MAXWELL'S HISTORY OF THE REBELLION IN IRELAND, in 1798, Parts XII. and XIII., details "The Progress of the Union through the British and Irish Houses of Commons;" "Summary of Opinions passed on the Union;" "State of Ireland in 1801;" and "The Trial of Robert Emmet." The illustrations, by Cruikshank, are well sustained.

THE LOVE MATCH, by Henry Cockton (Part II.), progresses with "The Hero's Expedition in a new character;" "The Hans;" and "Consequent Flight;" full of bustle and incident.

THE NEW SPORTING MAGAZINE is rife with seasonable novelties—in papers on Hunting, Pheasant-shooting, the Newmarket Meetings, &c.

THE PUNNY ALMANACK for 1845, by Momey the Younger, illustrated by Phiz, is a calendar of mirth and matter-of-fact, broad grin and quaint conceit. Besides the calendar, to each month is an engraving of some comic incident, with poetical illustration, and a few quips and puns; wound up with a comic chronology of 1844. The whole is very amusing; and the price (6d.) a marvel of cheapness.

THE WEST-OF-ENGLAND MISCELLANT, No. I., printed at Bath, proves sub-division of letters as well as labour, to be the taste of the day. The opening paper denotes the work to be a scion of Young England.

PUNCH'S POCKET-BOOK for 1845, is an opéra semi-serie, as they say in the Haymarket. The first part contains the customary Pocket-book Lists of the State, Legislature, Population, Law, Taxes, Commerce, an Almanack, Diary, and ruled columns for "stubborn things." Thus far, the fact; then come the entrées—the fun, with a poetic index:

"'Tis said an index is a pretty thing:
Punch, to re-verse it, will the index sing."

The papers, alternate prose and verse, are mostly in the style of the Scribner Directions to Servants; "The Stranger's Guide to the Great Metropolis" is one of the best specimens. Among the other subjects so quizzed are the Police, Fancy Balls and Fairs, Ransacking, Popular Authors, the Syncretics, the Bill System, Public Dinners, Farming for Ladies. The whole is amusing droilery, so that those who lose their temper over the facts and figures of Part I., may recruit their humour with Part II. We suspect that many a small wit invests half-a-crown in the purchase of Punch's Pocket-book, as a refresher for his own scanty store of jokes!—the investment is, doubtless, a profitable one, until detection, when he may be amenable to the excise for smuggling spirits. The steel illustrations, by Leech, are clever, especially the coloured frontispiece, "Farming for Ladies," and the vignette; the wood-cut head-pieces, too, are the quintessence of droilery.

THE THEATRES.

HAYMARKET.

A very funny performance took place at this house on Monday evening. We say funny, inasmuch as the humour was principally sustained by the audience instead of the actors. A comic drama, called "Sam Patch," was produced, which proved so complete a failure, that the spectators having gone through the various condemnatory stages of inattention, sibilant and indignation, at last became jocular, which fatal mood for any audience to fall into, soon decided the fate of this unfortunate production. Sam Patch was a man, who, if we recollect right, used to leap down from Goat Island into the cauldron of the Falls of Niagara, but, as is usual in such cases, took the jump once too often, and was never heard of again. An attempt to represent this feat was introduced in the last scene of the play by the aid of some revolving stage water and a shaking cloth, which increased the merriment of the spectators to the last pitch of derisive jocularity.

The bringing out of this unlucky affair was principally to be regretted, for the sake of the chief performer, Mr. Marble; of whose quaint acting we have before had to speak in high terms: and who certainly did all that could be done with a silly part in a silly play. He is, without doubt, the best American comic performer we have ever seen—natural, quiet, yet forcible—and delivering his odd sayings with a sly dry humour, far more effective than the most outrageous buffoonery. But we hope he will not appear too much in pieces written for his performance alone. Such productions are always weak; and when the principal actor is off the stage, nothing can be more than the dialogue or situations resembling those dull scenes, in what are termed "personation pieces," whilst the chief performer is changing dresses.

The piece was repeated on Tuesday, and, from some alterations, certainly went much better; but altogether only lived three nights. We wonder that Mr. Webster, with his general acumen in dramatic matters, brought such a trashy affair forward, especially at the Haymarket. Not but that some of Mr. Marble's sayings were very droll; his account of the manner in which one of his acquaintances got up an effect on illumination nights, by lighting the tail of a fat pig until all the lard was burnt out of him, produced a roar of laughter.

LYCEUM.

A dramatic sketch, entitled "To Persons about to Marry," was produced here on Monday. The plot turns upon the contrivances of a nephew, to make his uncle, Mr. Piousness Codrington (Mr. Frank Matthews), a rich old bachelor, approve of his clandestine marriage. The old gentleman, having tried boarding-houses, lodgings, and all other refuges for the destitute, at all of which he finds himself robbed, advertises for a respectable widow as housekeeper. Accordingly his house is besieged by applicants, to his extreme terror, and in the midst of his confusions the nephew introduces a young widow, who, in an interview with Mr. Codrington, so captivates him, that he at last wishes she could always remain there. Of course the lady proves to be his nephew's wife; and all is ultimately arranged to their general satisfaction. It will be seen that the materials of this little farce are very slight, but they served to keep the audience in high good humour for half an hour. Mr. F. Matthews had a part admirably suited to him, which he played very carefully; and Mr. Meadows, and Mrs. Wigan, as two pining servants, gained a great share of applause from the audience. The piece was entirely successful.

SADLER'S WELLS.

Massinger's play of "The City Madam" was brought out here last week (at a period too late for us to notice it in the ensuing number), and added another successful production to the legitimate dramas hitherto represented under this praiseworthy management.

"The City Madam" is one of the thirty-seven plays written by this last of the great dramatic poets of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries; of which only eighteen are extant, owing to the culpable carelessness of Warburton. It was first acted May 25, 1632, and published 1659—twenty years after his death, so affectionately chronicled in the parish register of St. Saviour's. It was revived at Drury-lane in 1782; and in 1810, the alteration by Sir J. Burges was brought out at the Lyceum. Since then it has been performed several times at different houses, Mr. Macready being the latest representative of Luke.

The play, as now acted at Sadler's Wells, is not Burges's adaptation—at the same time it certainly is not Massinger's original comedy. Considerable liberties have been taken with the text and the construction; and, independently of omitting the coarser scenes, which would be found objectionable at the present time, the nature of the characters have been in some instances entirely changed. The daughters, brought up, in the original, in all their mother's overbearing pride and tyranny, sink down to two mere walking ladies; and the great character of the play, Luke, retabulates upon his sister-in-law and niece, for the indignities so long suffered, not in the pride of power and alliance which bursts upon him, but in a moment of madness, brought about by his change of state. Nevertheless, the play, as now produced, acts exceedingly well; although the impression left at its termination is certainly unsatisfactory—not as regards its performance, but as relating to its story and characters.

Mr. Phelps exhibited great judgment in the part of Luke: and was warmly applauded throughout, more especially in the scenes where he pleads for the decayed merchants, and where he returns from visiting the room in which his wealth is contained. If there was any fault in his performance it was that of being somewhat too energetic towards the end of the play. Mrs. Warner's Lady Prigal was excellently acted—the spirit of the haughty purse-proud city madam broke forth in every speech and gesture, contrasting admirably with her humbled manner after her supposed reverse of fortune. The other characters deserve commendation. We were happy to see the house literally crowded by a superior and intelligent audience: the presence of a large school was a pleasing proof that the exertions of the management are approved of, not merely by the playgoers, but by those entrusted with the education and moral culture of youth. The applause was loud, and what was better, judicious, throughout; and the principal performers were called for, and warmly cheered at the conclusion.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE.—Up to our market, during the present week, the arrivals of English wheat have been on a limited scale, hence the stands on each day have exhibited a scanty number of samples. For all descriptions the demand has ruled somewhat active, and prices have been steadily supported. Barley and fresh foreign wheat have come in freely. In the latter article, free of duty, a fair amount of business has been transacted, at very fair prices. Owing to the large quantity of foreign wheat, both English and foreign, the arrival of which offers has been small, has ruled dull, at barely stationary prices. Most of the receipts of oats have been cleared off at full rates. Beans and peas have ruled in per quarter higher; but we have no correspondence to put us in the value of flour.

English—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; white, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Norfolk and Suffolk, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lincolnshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Gloucestershire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Herefordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Shropshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Staffordshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Cheshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Lancashire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Yorkshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Devonshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Dorsetshire, 10s 6d to 10s 10d; Wiltshire, 10s 6d to

SCENE FROM "THE CASTLES OF THE SEVEN PASSIONS," AT THE LYCEUM THEATRE.

SCENE FROM "THE CASTLES OF THE SEVEN PASSIONS."

The illustration shows a scene from the successful new drama of "The Castles of the Seven Passions;" it may be termed the tableau of Avarice, where Mr. Keeley (Cassius) and Mrs. Keeley (Reginette) are tempted into the Lion's mouth in quest of Gold and Silver in stupendous vases, whence leap forth the pair of demons shown in our Engraving. The terror of the pair of mortals is admirably depicted:—in the expression of this terror—mixed up with the ludicrous—the Keeleys have no parallel upon the stage.

NEW MUSIC.

HAMILTON'S MODERN INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE, &c. R. Cocks and Co.

We do not fully comprehend this title, or why the word "modern" should be used; the first chapter or section on "Musical Notation" is abstruse enough to vindicate its claims to antiquity. The rest of the book is carefully compiled, but presents nothing of any very startling novelty.

THE BAREFOOTED FRIAR. Sung by Herr Staudigl. The words by Sir WALTER SCOTT. The Music by EDWARD J. LODER.

A quaint and clever composition, admirably expressive of the words, to which Mr. Loder is always attentive. Staudigl must have made it highly effective.

THE RAGE OF PARIS. A Series of Polkas. Arranged by AUGUSTUS MEVES. R. Cocks and Co.

It is much to be deplored that this "Rage of Paris" should ever have become the taste of London. Mr. Meves has contrived to invest the music with some charm by his clever arrangements, as is his custom ever; but of the Vandal dance, which it is intended to accompany, we can only say, with Prior,

So ill the motion with the music suits,
So Orpheus fiddled, and so danced the brutes

EVENING. A Duet. The Poetry by J. J. W. MOULD; the Music by W. S. RACKSTRAW. Balls and Co.

This duet, the ornamental title-page informs us, is from the opera of "De Weldon," and has been sung by Miss M. Smith and Miss S. Flower. There is considerable poetry and feeling in the composition, but a restless anxiety to harmonise every note mars the grace of its progress. Moreover, the two voices are frequently made dependent upon the instrumental bass for anything like "concord of sweet sounds;" they are too loose. Of the words, all we can say is, that words were never cast in such a queer mould before: they are utter nonsense.

SCENE FROM THE "MYSTERIOUS STRANGER."

The accompanying sketch embodies one of the most effective scenes of this spirited piece. The Satanic tormenter of the puzzled Count Beauvoileil (Mr. Hudson) has fully performed all his predictions. The Count has lost his fortune, and with his fortune his friends and his mistress. On a rumour, however, that his runaway banker has been arrested, his mistress returns, for there is then a chance of the fortune being recovered, explains away her desertion, and renews her vows of fidelity. At this nick of time his mysterious persecutor enters, declares all the lady has said to be false, and proves it by putting the Count into a closet, declaring that the banker has escaped beyond the possibility of arrest, that the fortune is lost, and that he himself, being rich beyond calculation, will marry the lady himself; and she consents, to the great horror of the Count, who rushes forward maddened, seizes the pistols from the case his visitor has brought, with an offer of being his second in the duel that must inevitably take place with his dearest friend, for whom his mistress has deserted him, and fires! As the weapons had probably been prepared for such a catastrophe, by the agent who brought them, he stands in the doorway harmless, thus again turning a natural cause into a proof of his supernatural power; the cleverness with which this is done throughout is the great merit of the piece.

SCENE FROM "THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER," AT THE ADELPHI THEATRE.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

LYPIATT PARK, GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

This locality is interesting, from its association with the memorable Gunpowder Conspiracy.

The beautiful domain of Lypiatt is situated about three miles from Stroud, and one and a half from Bisley, upon an eminence commanding an extensive prospect of the undulating surface of the Cotswold range.

LYPIATT PARK.

The approach from Stroud is somewhat secluded; but the avenue at the entrance being passed—whether viewed near, in connection with its antique and richly-carved details, or seen from the park, as represented by our artist, with its exquisite little chapel, its bastioned terraces, and ivy-covered walls, and its grey towers and battlements peering between lofty and thickly-studded elms—this venerable mansion is, certainly, a very fine example of the ancient domestic architecture of this country.

It was originally tenanted by Mortimer, the unfortunate paramour of Isabella, Queen of Edward the Second; the property afterwards fell into the possession of the Throckmorton family, who occupied it in the eventful reign of James the First, and who figured as conspicuously in the Gunpowder Plot. The apartment still exists in which the Conspirators met to discuss their diabolical design. It is a small, wainscoted, square room on the ground floor, and may be noted in the gable compartment on the right hand side of the principal front in our sketch.

Another source of interest in this building is in the fact of its having held out against the troops of Cromwell, under Charles II., after the siege of Gloucester; and the mark of cannon still exists upon the external surface of the walls. The property has successively belonged to the family of Savens, the Earl of Ilchester, Mr. Delamere, Sir Paul Baginott, Mr. Lewis; and, finally, Samuel Baker, Esq., the present spirited owner.

There are many interesting and romantic legends connected with the spot, with which the peasantry delight in entertaining strangers: among other things, a subterranean passage is said to exist between Bisley Church, and a concealed entrance in the family chapel, though for what reason does not appear; and the curiosity of its possessors has not yet led them to explore this hidden mystery. Since the property came into his possession, Mr. Baker has made extensive additions and alterations, from the design, under the able superintendence, of Messrs. Danks and Hamilton, architects, of Gloucester; which, while strictly maintaining the ancient character of the building, have converted it into a spacious mansion, adapted to all the purposes of modern domestic life.

ANTIQUITIES FOUND NEAR THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE, ST. MARTIN'S-LE-GRAND.

The accompanying antiquities have been discovered while making a sewer near the General Post-Office, on the former site of the church of St. John Zackarie, which was destroyed by the Great Fire. From the style of the remains, they seem to have been portions of the canopy of a Gothic tomb, most likely that of Sir Nicholas Twiford, goldsmith, who was Mayor of London in 1388. Stowe carefully describes many faire monuments in this church: one to the memory of Robert Traps, goldsmith, 1526, which bears the following singular epitaph:—

When the bells be merrily rung,
And the Mass devoutly sung,
And the Mass merrily eaten,
Then shall Robert Traps, his Wife
And children be forgotten.

The church of St. John Zackarie was situated at the corner of Maiden-lane, and was built during the reign of Edward II., and founded by Nicholas Twiford, 1320.

EXTRAORDINARY DISPATCH OF NEWSPAPERS FROM THE GENERAL POST OFFICE.—On Saturday evening one of the largest dispatches of newspapers from the Post-office in St. Martin's-le-Grand took place. So great a glut of newspapers has not been known in the General Post-office since the memorable night of the coronation of her Majesty the Queen, upon which occasion it is estimated that at least 130,000 newspapers were posted. The number on Saturday evening last did not fall far short of that quantity.

BATHS AND WASH HOUSES FOR THE LANCING CLASSES.—The Queen has sent £200, and Prince Albert £100, in aid of the funds required. The poor are already anxiously inquiring at the office in Crosby-square when the wash-houses will be opened.

SIGNS OF WINTER.—On Tuesday, London, and the country for some miles around it, were enveloped during the whole day in a dense fog, and business generally had to be carried on by artificial light. The navigation of the river was very much impeded. In some of the hilly parts of Surrey on that morning, snow fell. There was also a fall of snow in Kent, at Folkestone, and other places. On Sunday last the snow was full a foot deep on the ground. On Sunday night and Monday there was a copious fall of snow in the north of France, Belgium, and Holland.

M. Libert, one of the chief clerks of the War Office in Paris, recently, without the aid of a written note, extracted in six minutes the square root of 29,511,541, and in a quarter of an hour also worked without notes the multiplication of 379,625,345 by the same figure, giving the number of 144,115,494,844,121,944. This may be recorded as one of the most remarkable instances of headwork in calculation hitherto recorded.

"BONNER'S HALL," HACKNEY.

"During the week, pursuant to notice served on the respective tenants, considerable progress has been made towards the formation of 'Victoria Park,' which is to form one of the principal entrances into the park, and some progress has already been made in forming Old Ford-lane into a straight line of road, and a row of houses, called King's Arms-row, has been levelled. Within the last three weeks, upwards of 700 loads of rubbish have been brought from the works in the formation of the new road at Whitechapel, to fill up the excavations, and for other purposes. A circle has been staked out in the Grove-road, which is to form one of the principal entrances into the park, and some progress has already been made in the drainage of many of the fields. The chief part of the tenants inhabiting the houses forming the remaining wing of "Bonner's Hall" have vacated their occupancy, prior to the demolition of this interesting structure, which will commence at once. This is one of the most picturesque parts of the locality; the venerable trees which still remain showing it to have been the remnants of a formerly well cultivated park. Bishop Bonner is stated to have resided in the old structure, long known as "Bonner's Hall;" and here it is asserted that the bishop imprisoned and tortured the first Protestant martyrs. The building consists of a centre and two wings; and, with its heavy roofs, chimney-stacks, and dormer windows, presents the scene shown in our engraving.

"BONNER'S HALL."

LOSS OF LIFE AT OLDHAM.

In part of our impression last week, we gave an account of the falling of a newly erected mill, the property of Messrs. Radcliffe, and Co., near Oldham. Twenty persons were killed by this unfortunate occurrence, 12 males, and 8 females.

The inquest was held on Saturday last, at the Black Swan Inn, Mumps, before Mr. Milesworth. The inquiry was held on the (19) bodies of Joseph Tweedale, Robert Tweedale, James Tweedale, Savannah Wright, George Taylor, Mary Ann Hussy, James Ridgway, Ann Beckley, James Kershaw, Sarah Watmough, William Manneok, John Kershaw, William Butterworth, Edward Wimpenny, Ann Ogden, Hannah Slater, Ann Hulme, Elizabeth Smethurst, and Daniel Dunckerley—in all nineteen, William Whitehead not having been found.

It was agreed to commence with evidence as to the identity of the elder Tweedale's body.

A witness named William Mills, living in Pipe-row, North-moor, being confined to his bed by his injuries, his evidence was taken at his own dwelling. He stated: I am a bricklayer, and was working at Lower House Mill, Messrs. S. Radcliffe and Sons. One of the arches in the flooring of the top story had given way about five inches in the crown, and I pulled about a third of it out, and put it in again. This was on Tuesday last. I took it out on Tuesday night, and on Wednesday it was got ready for me, and I put one length (of a third part) in on Wednesday night, and we just then had the middle part out. It was flagged over the top, and the flags of the next bay had given way, and I showed it to the master

RUINS OF THE LOWER-HOUSE MILL, NEAR OLDHAM.

(Mr. Wrigley) and one of the master's sons. One of the ends of an iron beam had broken—I mean the ear where the clip goes on, and I showed it to Mr. Samuel Radcliffe, and he said it was a pity they broke that way. One had broken before. The beam had only lost one ear, and had not lost all its bearing on the pillar. I had just pulled the middle length out, when I saw the gable end fall. One of the men working near the end (Thomas Meller) ran, and before he could reach it, it went down, and him with it. It went bay after bay, the roof following the floor, beginning with the gable (west end), and coming towards me, and I saw it going bay after bay, for perhaps a minute, and when it came to me, down I went with it. My head was badly cut, but I was never insensible. My leg is badly bruised and swollen, but not broken; the flags had not broken, but the joints had sundered a little.

By a Juror: The joister only said that the bedding of the flagging had given way. It was about the fourth bay from the gable end, where the arch had given way. I think it was the pressure towards the gable, and to resist such a pressure the gable should have had strong buttresses. The gable was the only thing to keep it up. The arch had only an inch rise per foot.

Mary Tweedale, of Lower House, widow of Joseph Tweedale, the overlooker, stated that one of the bodies lying at her house was that of her husband; he was forty-four years of age. Another body lying in her house was that of Robert Tweedale, her son, aged seventeen years, a twister-in; and the third body lying there was that of James Tweedale, a younger son, aged twelve years; he was a reacher-in. The poor woman sobbed, and was quite overcome.

After some further evidence the jury adjourned until Monday. On their re-assembling they were sworn in the case of William Whitehead, the last body missing, which had been found on the preceding day. They then went to view that body, and also to inspect the mill again. The following are the particulars as to—

William Whitehead, of Foulseach, engineer, who would have completed his twenty-second year at Christmas next. He had been in the employ of the firm twelve years. He was unmarried, and lived with his mother, who has six sur-ving children, of whom four are under twenty years of age; namely, two girls of eighteen and twelve years, and two boys of sixteen and ten years. The deceased's body was found, about ten o'clock on Sunday morning, outside the building, in the yard, near the chimney, under a heap of bricks; so that he had evidently been struck down, crushed and killed, while passing along the yard, endeavouring to escape.

On the return of the jury to the Black Swan, the first witness called—the inquiry being so far limited to the death of the elder Tweedale—was Thomas Meller, of Hey Side, in Hoyton, bricklayer, who stated:—On Thursday I was at work on the arch in the cockpit at Lower House-mill. We had taken one length out and keyed it, and had taken another length out, and I had taken a springer out (the spring-course), and was talking to the man working with me (William Mills), when I saw the beam in the same bay snap off at the collar, at the pillar; and I said "Bully, it's aw going!" and I set off as fast as I could to the door. I saw the arch next Greave's factory drop in (the second bay from the gable end). It was the centre beam of the three principal beams between the second and third bays that fell, dropping in. The different bays dropped as I quitted them, till I reached the last bay but one, next the old factory, when it fell with me.

By Mr. Fairbairn: When the beam fell, I saw the arch of the fifth bay from the old mill (the third from the gable end) give way and drop. The stage was stood on dropped with it. I jumped off the stage, and ran towards the old mill. The beam did not spring at all; but it snapped off at the collar, and fell straight down. I heard no previous noise. No arch had given way, except that which we were repairing, and which had previously dropped or sunk just four inches. The arches had a rise of twelve inches.

After some further evidence of a similar character, the inquiry was adjourned.

PROBABLE CAUSE OF THE ACCIDENT.

From the above evidence, though the facts are somewhat scattered, may be gleaned what, in all probability, is the true cause of the fall of this mill. It seems that, on Saturday week, five days before the occurrence, an arch, in the CEREMONY OF LAYING THE FIRST STONE OF THE BIRKENHEAD DOCKS.—See next page.

CAUTION—Observe the seal and address of JONES and CO., 395, STRAND on the wrapper.

THE TIME BALL,
ROYAL OBSERVATORY, GREENWICH.
FROM "THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK," FOR 1845, JUST PUBLISHED.

The keeping of true time is important to all persons; but to those engaged in navigating the "trackless seas," it is of such consequence, that the government, since the time of Flamsteed, the first Astronomer Royal, have not hesitated to expend large sums of money for its discovery, preservation, and announcement to the world. The business is now concentrated in the Royal Observatory at Greenwich, where, from the beauty of the instruments, the exactitude of the observations, and the high scientific ability of the officers engaged, the once difficult problem of finding the precise instant when one o'clock touches the world's history, is no longer a matter of doubt or difficulty.

FIG. 1.

FIG. 2.

FIG. 3.

The present establishment at the Observatory, was brought into operation about ten years ago, when the resolution of the Lords of the Admiralty to publish the mean solar time at Greenwich, once in every day of the year, at one o'clock P.M., was first observed, and where the practice, without a single intermission, or the most trifling inaccuracy, has been continued ever since.

The sidereal time is ascertained from regular observations of the transits of certain stars over the meridian, whose places have been carefully determined; and from these, the proper data are obtained for finding the mean solar time.

To go into the minutiae of these operations would be beyond our province; we shall, therefore, confine ourselves, as far as matters of detail are concerned, to a description of the apparatus by which the regular publication of the time is effected.

FIG. 4.

The hour of one o'clock is announced by the descent of a large black ball, from the summit of a pole, which surmounts the north-western turret of the Observatory; a position singularly favourable for its exhibition to mariners on their progress down the adjacent river Thames. The apparatus, described in the simplest terms, may be said to consist of a hoist for raising the ball, a trigger and discharging gear for its liberation, and a clock, regulated by observation, for giving the required moment of time. The cuts will make the mechanical arrangements intelligible. Fig. 1, exhibits an upright plan of the first, second, and third floors, on which the apparatus is placed, and a section of the turrets which carries the ball a, the supporting shaft bearing the ball on its top and terminating below, at b, in a piston, which works in an air cylinder, d, and by which the too sudden descent of the ball is prevented. m, r, s, a combination of rods and levers connected with the discharging trigger.

FIG. 5.

Fig. 2. The Ball Turret, viewed from the top of the Observatory, with the ball down.

Fig. 3. Apparatus in the Turret-house. a, the triangular supporting shaft; b, the pulley over which passes the chain for raising the ball.

Fig. 4. Apparatus of the second and third floors. a, triangular supporting shaft; b, piston rod; c, cylinder; d, a weight, having a collar A, which when raised by the chain g, elevates the supporting shaft; f, f, iron guiding rods; k, k, catches for fixing the piston, when the ball has been hoisted to the top of the pole; s, rod, by which the piston is set free from the grasp of the catches; t, t, cocks for regulating the discharge of air in the cylinder.

Fig. 5. The discharging trigger, placed in the first floor of the Time-ball apartments. m, iron discharging rod; n, trigger; o, axis of the trigger; p, spring for holding the trigger till the ball is dropped.

Fig. 6. Windlass placed in the second floor, for "winding up," or raising the ball.

FIG. 6.

Before elevating the ball at five minutes to one, a signal is made of the intention to do so, by raising it "half-mast high." Observers should then get their chronometers ready, and as the descent of the ball occupies several seconds, they should confine their attention to the moment when the ball leaves the top, as, it is that, only, which indicates the hour.

The uses of this practice are, as we have already hinted, both various and important. We have only to mention, that observations on the drop of the ball, repeated day after day, will give not only the error of clocks, &c., but also their daily rate. Thus, if your clock shows 1h. 3m. 5s. at the dropping of the ball, you will be assured that your clock is in error 3m. 5s., being that amount before Greenwich mean solar time. Again, if at the dropping of the ball your clock shows 56s. 55m. past 12, your clock will be also in error 3m. 5s., but it will be that amount after Greenwich mean solar time.

If on a certain day you have noticed your clock to show 1h. 3m. 5s. at the dropping of the ball, and the day after to show 1h. 3m. 7s., then you will know that your clock has gained 2 seconds in the 24 hours. But, if instead of 1h. 3m. 7s. your clock should show 1h. 3m. 3s., then it will have lost 2 seconds in the 24 hours.

FIG. 7.

The mean time at Greenwich being known, the mean time at other places may be ascertained, when the longitudes are known. Thus, the longitude of Portsmouth is 4m. 24s. in time, west of Greenwich; consequently, when it is one o'clock at Greenwich, it will then want 4m. 24s. to one at Portsmouth. The longitude of Cambridge is 23½s. east; therefore, at the moment of one o'clock at Greenwich the time at Cambridge will be 1h. 0m. 23½s.

Sanitary State of the Metropolis and the Provinces.—The quarterly returns obtained from 115 districts, 24 placed under the metropolis, and the remaining 91 comprising, with some agricultural districts, the principal towns and cities of England, the population having been 6,578,912 in 1841, show that the deaths registered in the last quarter, ending the 30th of September, were 28,784 or 141 1-2 per 1000 in the June quarter, and 1791 more than (37,483), the average of five previous September quarters. Allowing for the increase of population, the mortality will be found to be about the average of the summer quarter (July, August, and September); that quarter being now the least fatal in the year. The deaths in the metropolis amounted to 11,825, which are 314 more than were registered in the spring quarter, and 594 above the average uncorrected for the increase of population. In the country districts the most remarkable increase of mortality occurred in Cornwall, and the Redruth and Penzance districts. Small-pox has been epidemic in many districts all over the kingdom, and has proved fatal to great numbers, whose vaccination had been neglected.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 196, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 199, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1844.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 133.—Vol. V.]

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1844.

[SIXPENCE.]

THE THREE POOR LAWS.

IT REQUIRES but a slight degree of observation to perceive the immense importance acquired by what is known as the "condition of England" question. It was at first forced on the public by the successive years of commercial depression, from the deplorable effects of which we trust we are recovering; but the comparative revival of prosperity has not banished the recollection of what sufferings marked the years of adversity. And, indeed, it would be as difficult to forget, as it is impossible not to see, the many things that remind us, even in our rather improved state, of the immense mass of misery and destitution, the difficulty of providing for which becomes greater in proportion to the necessity of that provision. The difficulty is no new one; it has been the problem of all ages and of all countries; "the poor ye have with ye always"—such is the language of the book whose spirit is the spirit of truth. Those nations have been the happiest to whom the problem has been presented in the simplest form; none has ever been able wholly to escape attempting a solution of it. But on England that necessity seems to have fallen in the present generation, in the direct shapes it could assume. We are called on to provide for a destitution terrible in its degree of suffering, vast in the numbers over which it is spread, and complex in the forms it appears in. Nevertheless, we must not despair; our artificial state of society has imposed fearful obligations upon us, but it has also placed powerful instruments in our hands; destitution is no longer dumb, and distress and oppression find a thousand voices, which by spreading the knowledge of it far and wide, do much towards providing a remedy. We have the habit of co-operation in effort when zeal is once awakened, and we have a vast legal machinery, capable of being better worked, though the misconduct of those who put it in operation, have caused it to be, and not undeservedly, much abused. And, above all, we have wealth beyond most nations, a fact which makes the excessive misery of whole masses of our fellow beings seem a greater anomaly.

The pauperism of England differs from that of Scotland, and the destitution of Ireland differs in many points from both. We have, therefore, three systems of poor relief, which have grown up gradually, and have become national. We have, in fact, three Poor Laws, though their difference might not be easy to trace in the statute-book. What the English Poor Law is we all know; it has been introduced into Ireland, but there it neither is, nor will be, the same as on this side the Channel. And the system pursued in Scotland has but little resemblance to either. How have these differences arisen?

In England it is said the Poor Law is harsh, utilitarian, destructive of private charity. When the endowments of the Church were seized by the State, and ceased to be applied in charity at the very time when the amount of pauperism was altogether outgrowing the possibility of its being relieved from private sources, some provision for the poor became a stern necessity. Then came the Act of Elizabeth, not the first on the subject, but the one that threw our Poor Law into the form it took under what is called the old system. But those who think the legislation of that time, with respect to the poor, was directed either by a tender or merciful spirit, are greatly mistaken. Mendicancy, which was one of the most common forms of destitution, was more severely punished than theft; and any pauper demanding relief twice might be branded with a red-hot iron! The whippings and scourgings were also frequent; so that the reproach so often made to the present system—that it punishes poverty as a crime—is applicable with tenfold force to the laws of Elizabeth and her successors, for a return of whose golden days some philanthropists are sighing. These laws too were made by "our old nobility," whose virtues are so pathetically sung by the poets of the Young England school; for then the hard-hearted manufacturing system had not arisen, and Manchester and Birmingham were not. On the whole, then, we have improved; the defect of the present system is that it is too stiff and uniform, not varied enough to suit different circumstances and different localities, and that it causes much needless hardship by leaving too little to the discretion of those who have a local knowledge of local things. It centres all wisdom and omniscience at Somerset House.

This is an error, but a remediable one; and as we have to deal with an amount of population that the Legislators of the days of Elizabeth could not even dream of, it would be easier to adopt our present system more perfectly to present circumstances, than to go back to the barbarous and inhuman laws of our ancestors—though they contained the germ of that wise and necessary provision that has often saved this country from the most awful convulsions.

In Scotland, the property of the Church was confiscated and destroyed in the same manner as in England. But the country being more thinly peopled, there was less pauperism and less pressure on its resources. The manufacturing system was not developed there till much later, and then not to so great an extent, and something is also due to the frugal, hardy, and independent character of the people. But now the system of poor relief in Scotland is a very imperfect one—too imperfect it is rapidly becoming for the present state of things. In the rural districts of Scotland, the state of the destitute poor is no better than in England; in the great towns we have evidence that it is even worse. The system by which the Heritors and the Kirk Session determine the amount to be gathered, they, themselves, being often directly interested in keeping it as low as possible, cannot continue. The details of misery recently published from Scotland are far worse—considered as proofs of the working of a system—than those furnished by England.

In Ireland, till within these very few years, there was no Poor Law at all. The great mass of poverty and pauperism there is in the Catholic provinces, and the natural generosity of the people, increased by the merit universally attached to the act of almsgiving, gave rise to a system of mutual assistance, which, except in times of actual famine, was sufficient to support life. The poor shared their potatoes with the poorer, and hundreds could give relief in provisions, in this manner, who could not possibly pay a money rate. This is beginning to be discovered now; in several of the Unions the machinery of the law has been brought to a complete stop; the poor-rates, now, like the tithes of old, have to be collected by the aid of the soldiery, and it was considered lately, a rather good day's work when five shillings were gathered in—at an expense of twice as many pounds! There is a great absurdity in thus forcing a law which in some points works badly here, without modification, on a people among whom it is sure to work far worse. The rigid workhouse test is hated in England, but submitted to—there is no other resource. In Ireland it excites horror, and there being the old voluntary system to fall back upon, it is spurned. In England the property that can be rated to the poor is various in kind and immense in amount; in Ireland it is principally the land, and that, in the localities where poverty most abounds is in the hands of landlords, who notoriously squeeze the utmost penny from the tenant, leaving little for the poor-rate-collector; for after the shovel there is nothing for the rake. If no relief is to be given but within the walls of the workhouse, the law will be inoperative; if out-door relief is conceded, and if it is, as it probably will be, given in the shape of provisions, not money—what has been gained? The nation had already adopted a system that had the same effect, and in a more direct manner.

Thus the administration of the fund on which the wholly destitute are dependent in the three parts of the kingdom differs as much as the several countries themselves. Any attempt to force one uniform and similar system on all of them will fail, as it is now failing in Ireland. The centralizing tendencies of our governments may lead them to attempt to do it, and it may be useful to draw attention to the circumstances that will make the attempt a mischievous one. That some system will always be necessary, is a thing to be deplored; but, taking the whole of society together, we need not wish for the feudal times of our ancestors, nor the condition of Russia at the present day, as the price of an exemption from that system. We must not too readily believe all that is said about the superiority of the past. True we have a vast amount of poverty and destitution; but the soil of England supports more than ten times the population that it did in the days of serfdom and vassalage, when Poor Laws were unknown, and yet we are exempt from the famines that used periodically to visit the island in those "good old times." The Russian serf is fed and lodged—for the same reason that a roof and fodder are given to a horse or cow—because he is profitable; but we doubt if even the inmates of a Union-house would buy a security for food and lodging, with the liability, at the caprice of an Emperor, to be sent to be shot in the Caucasus, or to be knouted to death at the will of a drunken Boyard.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARISIANA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

Much curiosity is excited in Parisian society by a young pilgrim, a native of that country which is now becoming so interesting to France—Algeria. He is the son of Ben Salem, the chief of the Kabyles, the desert race of Algeria—who has been lately fighting the French with success in the mountains of Delhi. This boy, only twelve years of age, ran away from his father's camp some time ago, because his father would not allow him to marry, and surrendered himself to Marshal Bugeaud, declaring that the motive which led to this step was a strong inclination for domestic life. Marshal Bugeaud sent him to Paris, assuring him that he would there find numbers of beautiful ladies, from whom to make his choice; but, to the indignation of the young aspirant to matrimony, no sooner was he arrived, than he was placed at the Arab school, from which he was only exempted about a fortnight ago. At first his anger knew no bounds; but, upon reflection, he resolved to study, and acquire knowledge, in order to fit himself for the duties of conjugal life. It is the most amusing thing imaginable to hear him relate his adventures, which he does with great vivacity and wit. He was taken, in company with his countryman, Omar Roumel, to the Opera Comique, where the brilliancy and novelty of the spectacle made him actually about with delight. He is beginning to accustom himself to Parisian habits, but he takes no wine, to the great contempt of his countryman, who is far from being equally scrupulous in his adherence to the Mohammedan precept.

A very odd circumstance that has lately transpired, has caused smiles innumerable amongst the diplomatic celebrities. The day that M. Martini de la Rosa transmitted the collar of the Golden Fleece to M. Guizot, decorations of the Legion of Honour were given to various Dons of the ancient Iberia. It so happened that de la Rosa was upon the occasion, the red ribbon of Portugal, and M. Guizot, whose vision is not of the longest, imagined that Spain's late ambassador and present minister, was already in possession of the wished-for distinction; the error was, alas! discovered too late, but the order was ultimately dispatched to Spain. It is said, as a reward to the editor of the Presse journal, who was the first to notice the omission of our Minister of Peace, the same distinguished cognizance has since been accorded to the writer in that journal, who was the means of correcting the oversight.

A new militia of the church militant has been formed, consisting of members of a religious order, whose real mission is the promulgation of peace and good will to man. It is intended to found three monasteries in Algeria, on the site of Mount Athos, Carmel, and in some other advisable spot. Their object is agriculture, and the conversion of the children of Mahomet to gospel credence. Each monastery to contain six hundred able-bodied brethren, to work the plough, and wield the sword in the good cause—a sort of agricultural crusade. A vast number of young men of the noblest families are about to enlist in the holy ranks of the cross.

In our letters new visitors are constantly announced. Amongst the northern stars who are coming to shed their brightness on the horizon of fashion here, are the Marchioness of Aylesbury, whose blonde chereville and elegant four-hand experiences, as Marie has it, excites the emulation of all our sportswomen and floures. You will say mine is a cuckoo note—our lament here is still the same. The amusements of the watering places, and the great hunts which have commenced at the Chateau, will retain but too many of our fashionables, and the far-angements who base on such idleness from the metropolis at the beginning of the month of May, only return slowly, and one by one. Such is the effect of the increasing influence of English fashion here. Meanwhile, we regret to say, that the news from the watering places is woeful; that gambling is going on with increased fury at all the fashionable resorts of this nature; and we hear, that at Homburg, the losses of the banque de jeu have amounted to 250,000 francs (£40,000) in a fortnight.

"A condore un che dans la carrière."

The French have been giving grander balles de cour in the Bois de Compiègne, at which the elite of our young fashionables were assembled; whilst St. Cloud, new rooms of surpassing magnificence being added, presses to receive the French Ministry's servants from the different theatres. But they are now on the wing to Naples, accompanied by Fourgons, charged with all the elegant snuff-boxes, perfumes, silks, and treasures of every kind, the Duke of Anville's knickerbocker wealth can evoke from the mysterious penetralis of our richest persons. The bride is worthy of the gift. Daughter of the Prince of the House of Naples, most distinguished by the elevation of thought and judicious sublimity in figure, she is a beautiful diva, with brilliant black hair, of the most strikingly lovely imaginable. Her arrival in Naples will be a grand affair, which will begin on her landing at Trapani, and continue in Paris, as of these you shall have ample description in my weekly records.

FRANCE.

The only interesting incident of the week, mentioned in the Paris papers, is the announcement by the Ministry, that on the 9th of December next, 250 of the 200 millions of the loan of 1841 remaining on hand will be offered for competition by the Ministry of Finance.

The Moniteur gives, in the following terms, the royal ordinance upon the subject:—

"Art. 1. Our Minister of State of the Finance is authorized to sell, with competition and publicity, and on sealed tenders, the amount of notes Three per Centa, necessary to produce a capital of 200,000,000 francs. These notes will bear interest from the 22nd of December, 1844. The sale will be made to the company who shall offer the highest price for it, our Minister of Finance always reserving to himself the faculty of refusing any bidding under the minimum fixed by him.

"Art. 2. Agreeably to the provisions of the second paragraph of the 35th article of the law of June 22nd, 1841, the date of the sinking fund will be increased from the 1st of January, 1844, by a sum equal to the hundredth part of the nominal capital of the notes, which are to be negotiated in virtue of the above 1st article.

M. Barbet de Jouy, former tutor of the children of Prince de Polignac, has been appointed Consul of France at the Mauritius.

The Presse of Tuesday contains some violent declamation against England and everything English. The main object of the Presse is to impress on the French government the necessity of abandoning an English union for the more rational and beneficial alliance of the Continental powers.

The National states, that the French Government, enlightened by the information received as to the causes which led to the late war with Morocco, are about to appoint a special agent to reside with the Emperor of Morocco, and to remain in constant communication with him.

A letter from Algiers, dated Nov. 5, says:—"Marshal Bugeaud returned here yesterday. The marshal found a great difficulty in quelling the Kabyle insurrection. At his approach they fled to the mountains, and made preparations for a vigorous defence. The marshal, not thinking it advisable to pursue them, ordered a general rafale, and the troops commenced by cutting down the olive trees. This so frightened the Kabyles, that they sent a députation to the marshal, offering their submission; this, after some preliminary arrangements, was accepted. The marshal, however, places no reliance on the protestations of these savages, and an imposing force is to be sent into the neighbourhood of Dellys. It is reported here that Abd-el-Kader is strongly supported by the Kabyles of Morocco, and that he has succeeded in raising an insurrection against the Emperor. Should the ex-Emir succeed against Abd-el-Kader, it is his intention to pay a visit to the east of Algeria. Should this be so, and it is most likely, the submission of the Kabyles is of no great importance. Marshal Bugeaud leaves Algiers on the 10th for Marseilles."

The announcement of the new loan appears to have imparted vigour to the market in Paris.

The Moniteur contains the returns of the operations of the sinking fund during the third quarter of 1844, from which it appears that the amount of Rentes, Three per Cent., redeemed during that period was 253,884, per annum, and the capital applied thereto 8,881,665.

SPAIN.

A telegraphic despatch has been received in Paris from Bayonne, announcing that the Spanish Congress definitively voted its address on the 5th instant. The discussion on the project of reform was to commence on the 9th. Madrid was perfectly tranquil.

The court-martial for the trial of General Prim had held their first sitting, and after hearing the indictment read, and other preliminary matters, had decided that, on account of the irregularity of the proceedings, and the errors made in the drawing up of the indictment, a fresh examination should take place preparatory to another sitting, for which no day was fixed.

A letter from Valencia states that a riotous assembly had taken place in that city, but which was put down without much difficulty by the military, who were ordered to the spot. Some arrests were made. A seizure of arms had been made in a house, the owner of which was arrested.

The Barcelona journals mention the execution, on the 4th, of Don Antonio St. Just, the son of the unfortunate General who was murdered some years ago in a riot at Malaga. St. Just had been condemned to death for participation in the Centralist conspiracy last year. He preserved to the last moment an admirable serenity; he made his will, wrote to several of his friends, and received the consolations of religion with edifying piety.

PORTUGAL.

Our Lisbon letters of the 5th instant are barren so far as news is concerned, but they state an important fact, indicative of the power of the Government to follow up the despotic course in which it has embarked. In spite of the strenuous opposition given to it, the Bill of Indemnity for the recent despotic decrees has been passed by the Chamber of Deputies by a majority of 73 against 25. Thus the Ministers are likely to succeed in restoring despotism. At all events, their power is more firmly established than ever.

A convention has been entered into between France and Portugal, for the establishment of a line of steam-packets of the Royal Marine of France, communicating monthly between port St. Nazaire (near Nantes), Lisbon, Madeira, Fayal, St. Jago de the Cape de Verde, Gorée, Rio Janeiro, Monte Video, and Buenos Ayres. This convention may probably tend to increase the relations between France and Portugal.

UNITED STATES.

The packet-ship Rochester, has arrived at Liverpool from New York, with papers to the 24th ult. They contain an account of a dreadful hurricane on Lake Erie, attended with fearful loss of human life. The neighbourhood of Buffalo seems to have suffered the most severely. A letter dated Buffalo, Oct. 19, gives the following particulars:—

"After several days of rainy, disagreeable weather, the wind at the north-east, it commenced blowing pretty fresh last night about 11 o'clock. At half-past 12 it suddenly veered round to the south-west, and blew a perfect hurricane, crowding the water of the lake, which had been kept above by the previous wind, almost instantaneously upon the city."

"The flood on the flats is more destructive than any we have ever had, the water having risen in one hour over ten feet, sweeping off houses, barns, store-houses, canneries, the track of the Union and Buffalo Railroad for a mile, and drowning men, women, children, horses, cows, and hogs."

"The loss of human life is already ascertained to exceed 50; and as the gale has not subsided, it is feared there must be a great addition to the list."

"The number of houses blown down and unroofed will exceed 100. A house in Elk-street, which was deserted by the family as the water was heard coming in, was carried up to Seneca-street, and stands there precisely as when it started, not a single article having changed its position."

"The Buffalo papers go on to describe a long list of disasters, as also of steamers and a large number of other vessels driven ashore high and dry on the banks of the lake. Hundreds of small craft are enumerated amongst the lost."

There is no political news in these papers. The excitement of the Presidential contest continues.

From Canada it is stated that the elections, as far as they have gone, are in favour of the Government candidates. The commercial intelligence is satisfactory. Most of the state stocks had improved in price.

The Acadia steamer has since arrived with later accounts from New York, but they do not present anything of importance.

The steamer Great Western, which sailed from Liverpool on the 15th ult., arrived at New York on the 15th, making her passage in fourteen days and a half.

The New York Papers have advice from Mexico which allude to an infamous outrage committed in the town of Toluca on the person of a French subject, and which is likely to create some excitement in France. A French sailor had been arrested by the Alcades of the town, and taken to prison. It is not stated why or for what he was arrested; but when in prison he was asked if he was a Frenchman and answered in the affirmative; he was immediately ordered to receive two hundred lashes, attended by music; after which he was ordered to kiss the drummer's foot, and, on his refusal to do so, he was sentenced to receive 100 lashes more, and other indignities were committed upon his body, too horrible to mention; after which he was released, having become a martyr through his dreadful sufferings. In consequence of this outrage, the French Consul had refused all intercourse with the authorities, and had forwarded despatches to his government, respecting the treatment French citizens are subjected to in that department of Mexico. A French fleet was daily expected to arrive.

CHINA.

The following letter from a correspondent at Hong Kong, dated July 30, contains some information upon the subject of exports, which will, no doubt, be interesting to our commercial readers:—

Having promised in my last a few hints on exports, I now have pleasure in fulfilling that pledge.

Merchants must eagerly inquire what shall I send? Is the market not overdone? I propose to satisfy these demands at present.

Cotton goods, such as white and grey long cloths, are in demand, and pay well; and that is the staple article of our export. Tin, ratons, &c. &c. I believe, also go down; and iron, when it is low in England, may find a market here; but as it rises, the people fall back upon their own supply. I should mention for the information of printers, that the Chinese print on our white long cloths their own patterns very readily. Broad cloth does not answer. Russia beats us. I have heard that samples of their cloth, with prices, have been submitted to our manufacturers at home, and that they confessed they could not compete. I know not whether the Russia trade enjoys a bounty. The consumption is limited—the poorer classes using cotton; the richer, silks lined with fur, and very magnificent affairs these Russian cloths are.

My the by, however, small quantities of a description suitable to the market may be produced at home, and sent with safety, I think; as if Russia gives a bounty, she will soon tire of that commercial system, as other countries have done.

But vast as the population of cotton manufacture consumers is, and far as we leave their native appliances behind, there is that at work, which must, are long, limit our exports materially, unless cured.

I refer to the drain on the bullion of China, which was felt even before the late war, and which, without any new and aggravating circumstance, must continue oppressive; trade maintaining the same.

Any man of business can at once see the very great danger in which our trade is placed, by simply considering that if the object of the Emperor to open, which led to the war, were, as was formerly expected, from feeling that the secret was getting scarce, what must now be the state of affairs eight years or so later? Each year showing in trade a bulge of specie against China, to the amount of £1,000,000, and now a payment of over £5,000,000 in hard cash, to our Government, besides. Indeed, in some quarters, such is the feeling on the subject, that it is said China will not pay the station within the given time.

There is one mode by which the unobstructed intention of Providence, that one country should sustain another, may be fulfilled—one way, by which half the world, just discovered as it were, may not be lost to the other; and, if the spirit of Spain, that at one eager clutch, without a single benefit to herself, wrong the life, energy, and substance, of centuries out of the new world, do not blight the councils of our nation, it will be adopted—the reduction of the duties on cheap teas.

The power to effect this reduction is yours; common sense is with you, the people are with you, the manufacturers of course, and the intelligent farmer also.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

CITY IMPROVEMENTS.—A CITY COLONNAD.—A plan is in contemplation in the City to form an avenue, or colonnade, from near the end of Bartholomew-lane, through the street, to London-wall and Finsbury-pavement South, forming a branch avenue or colonnade, terminating at, or near to London-wall and Finsbury-circus. Though the intended alterations do not extend a very great distance, yet the various avenues pass through no fewer than six parishes, namely, St. Christopher-le-Stocks, St. Bartholomew by the Exchange, St. Margaret, Lothbury, St. Peter-le-Poor, St. Stephen Coleman, and Allhallows, of London-wall.

CURTAILMENT OF HOURS OF BUSINESS.—On Wednesday evening a meeting of persons engaged in the various branches of the wholesale drapery trade, took place at the Gresham's Hall, Beving-lane, at which several speakers complained that those individuals had no time for mental culture or recreation. A resolution was voted to the effect that the wholesale drapers in the City and elsewhere should be waited on, and requested to close their warehouses at one o'clock p.m. every Saturday.

MORTALITY IN THE METROPOLIS.—The mortality continues to augment, in the proportion of 1-34th. The deaths last week were 959; the week before, 969. The ravages of small-pox and scarlatina remain about double the average for the last five years. The number of violent deaths was last week 29—five more than the five years' average; of those a dozen were cases of drowning, nearly all of which, it is to be feared, were suicides; added to which are five or six cases of suicide by hanging.

DETENTS IN THE METROPOLITAN PRISONS.—There are now only 110 persons in Whitecross-street Prison, about the same number in the Queen's Prison, and only 25 in Horseman-lane Gaol, making the number of persons confined for debt in the metropolitan prisons about 245. Some time ago nearly 400 were confined in Whitecross-street Prison alone. It is understood that the county prisons are in a somewhat similar position.

THE POLISH BALL AT GUILDHALL.—Another ball for the benefit of the Polish refugees is to be given at the Guildhall on Tuesday next. The committee met on Wednesday last to make the requisite arrangements. Lord Dudley Stuart took the opportunity of stating that he had received the most encouraging assurances of support upon the occasion. The noble lord added that the long list of distinguished persons who had signified their desire to patronise the ball, headed by the illustrious lady who never failed them, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, and graced by such names as the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, Lord and Lady Wharncliffe, Lord and Lady Stanley, Lord and Lady John Russell, and not least in importance, Sir Robert and Lady Sale (cheers), was evidence of the favour with which their undertaking was regarded by persons in high stations of different parties.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF A NEWLY-MARRIED MAN.—On Wednesday week Joseph Ames, who has been for some years a bookseller at the Bull, Aldgate, was married in Whitechapel Church, to a young woman, several years his junior. On leaving the church, Ames, addressing his bride, said, "You want to go to the west-end of the town, don't you? But mind and be back in an hour, and then perhaps we may go out together." The bride promised to comply with his request, and was about to part with him for an hour, when her husband, as if recollecting himself, said, "Here, take care of this; you may want it, and it may be of some service to you;" and at the same time handed her a bag, containing 100 sovereigns, and also the marriage certificate, observing that the latter might be of use to her also. Mrs. Ames proceeded to the west-end of the town, and returned within the specified time to a public house which her husband had taken, and in which they were to commence business on the following day, when, to her great surprise, she discovered that her husband had not been there. She remained for some time in the greatest possible anxiety for his arrival, when a messenger brought her a note, written evidently in much haste by her husband, informing her that there was £120 in the bank, which she could have, together with some more money in his trunk, and stating that she might have all, as well as his clothes, and that, in all probability, she would never see him more. It seems that he has kept his word, for no trace of him has been discovered.

FIRE IN THE WESTMINSTER-ROAD.—Last Sunday morning, about four o'clock, a fire broke out on the premises of Mr. Callaway, draper, near Astley's Amphitheatre. The female servant and a lad were taken from the first floor down by a ladder, and thereby escaped uninjured. Mr. Callaway, however, was not so fortunate, for thinking he could subdue the flames by the aid of a bucket of water, he ran down stairs to procure one, but he was met by a huge sheet of flame and smoke, which forced him backwards, destroying the hair on his head, and burning him about the face, neck, and ears. He managed to reach the kitchen area, nearly suffocated; and before he could be rescued, the iron grating over the same was compelled to be forced. The flames were extinguished by six o'clock; but not until the buildings and the stock in-trade, furniture, &c., were nearly destroyed. The damage is very considerable, and will fall upon the Sun and Imperial Offices.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

SUICIDE OF MR. SERGEANT ANDREWS.—Late last week, an account was sent to us to the effect that Mr. Sergeant Andrews had attempted self-destruction, by cutting his throat; but as it was stated that the wound was slight, we were unwilling to give publicity to the rumour, in the hope that the act would not be attended with serious consequences. Unfortunately, however, the learned gentleman expired on Wednesday from the effects of it at his residence at Hampstead-heath. The melancholy depression of spirits, produced by long study in the legal profession, is the only cause assignable for the rash act. The learned gentleman was married, and has left a widow and two young children. The learned Sergeant, who was in his 73rd year, was the senior sergeant at law, and held his appointment by virtue of a patent granted in the reign of George III.

ALARMING ACCIDENT FROM AN EXPLOSIVE SHELL.—On Tuesday a dreadful accident occurred on Wimbledon common to a man of the name of James Taylor, an old soldier, while assisting Dr. Ryan, of the Royal Polytechnic Institution, in a series of experiments on a new explosive shell, the invention of Mr. Buckingham. Two shells which ought to have exploded having remained for two hours, and it being imagined that the shell could be kept quiescent at the will of the inventor, Taylor took up one for the purpose of washing the earth off its surface. He was in the act of stooping when the shell burst, carrying away both the poor fellow's hands, and wounding him most dreadfully in the legs. A portion of the shell entered the right cheek, carrying away the lower jaw, and then passing out on the side of the neck; yet, strange to say, without injuring the carotid artery. Tompkins were immediately applied to the arms and legs, and the sufferer was conveyed to St. George's Hospital, where he arrived, as may be expected, in a state of collapse. He rallied, however, in the course of the evening, and Mr. Tatham proceeded to remove the remaining fragments of the horribly fractured jawbone, and afterwards performed amputation on both arms just below the elbow. Notwithstanding these injuries, Taylor is perfectly sensible, and some faint hopes are entertained of his recovery.

INQUISITIVE ROBBERY.—A few nights ago a robbery of a most ingenious description was perpetrated on the premises of Messrs. De Lisle and Co., bankers, No. 16, Devonshire-square, Bishopsgate-street, by the man-servant, who immediately absconded. It appears that the firm possess what is called a "well-safe," which is drawn up during the day by means of a chain from a brick vault, and when down is secured at the top by a strong iron lid. Being unable to pick the lock of this lid, the thief proceeded down below, and worked his way through the side of the vault, which was near two feet in thickness, and, coming at the safe, broke open a drawer containing near £800 in gold and small notes. In another part of the safe was £2500 in a box, which, however, he could not come at, and a pair of diamond earrings of immense value. He also broke open several of the drawers of the clerks, from which he extracted some £270 more, and, proceeding to the drawing-room above, broke open Mrs. De Lisle's private cash-box, in which was deposited £230. The fellow's name is Charles Smith, and he is about twenty-two years of age; he has been employed by the firm for the last four years. The police are in active pursuit, but as yet have gained no clue. A reward of £100 is offered.

DEATH FROM CHOKING BY A PIECE OF MEAT.—On Tuesday, Mr. Baker held an inquest at the Police Regent, Mile-end New-town, on the body of Samuel Knos, aged sixty-eight years. Elizabeth Knos, of No. 12, York-street, Mile-end New-town, a daughter or domestic, deposed that on Saturday last he was eating his dinner, which consisted of beef and mutton stew. In the midst of his repast he was suddenly seized with a fit of coughing. Mr. Todd, a neighbouring surgeon, promptly attended. Mr. Todd stated that he found deceased quite insensible, as if from suffocation. He put his fingers down his throat, but could find nothing. He then passed a needle down his oesophagus without success, but upon a second trial with his fingers he found the top of the trachea open, and upon introducing his fingers he succeeded in drawing out a piece of gristle, about two inches in length, which had lodged in the windpipe. Death almost immediately ensued. It appeared that deceased was in the habit of "bolting" his food "without properly masticating it." Twice before he had nearly met with a similar death. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death by choking with a piece of meat."

FALL OF TWO HOUSES IN THE LONDON-ROAD.—On Wednesday morning about eight o'clock, the inhabitants of the London-road, Southwark, were much alarmed by the falling of two houses, Nos. 32 and 33, on the west side of the street. It was at once supposed that Mrs. Sears and her infant were buried in the ruins; but fortunately they slept in the attic, and the roof of the house falling outwardly saved them, and they were extricated by the police. The houses that have fallen are tenanted by Mrs. Sears and Mrs. Cohen, both dealing in china-ware. The accident occurred by Mrs. Sears having undermined his premises for the purpose of erecting a wall at the rear; and the heavy rain that has fallen since has been the principal cause of the falling in of the houses.

CAR ACCIDENT.—On Wednesday a horse which was attached to the cab 1471, whilst proceeding down Fleet-street, suddenly took fright, and proceeded at a rapid pace until he arrived at the avenue leading to St. Bride's Church, when the cab came in violent collision with the lamp-post, and was instantly upset, together with the horse. The cabman was hurried several yards from his seat into the road. The cabman sustained a fracture of the hip joint, and a dislocation of the right shoulder, and was much cut and bruised about the head and face.

NINE LIVES LOST BY THE BURSTING OF A STEAM-PIPE.

On Tuesday afternoon a very distressing and fatal accident, involving the death of nine persons, occurred on board the steam-boat Gipsy Queen, lying at one of the Blackwall wharfs off the Brunswick Pier. Seven of the unfortunate sufferers met with instantaneous death; and out of five others more or less injured by the unfortunate occurrence, and who were conveyed to the London Hospital, two have since died.

The vessel (the Gipsy Queen) is a new iron steam-boat, of about 100 tons burden, having two engines of 150 horse power each. The boat is the first built by the firm of Jacob and Joseph Samuda, who, within the last two years, took premises in Bow-creek. The engines, too, with which the Gipsy Queen is fitted are upon a new construction, being what are called "bell-crank" engines. At three o'clock in the afternoon the vessel left the creek for an experimental trip, having on board about 20 persons, including Mr. Jacob Samuda, the principal of the firm. She went down the river to below Woolwich in gallant style. On her return to Blackwall she was moored to one of the buoys, where it was intended she should remain all night. In a short time after the vessel had been made fast, an explosion was heard by persons on the Brunswick Pier to proceed from the direction of the steamer, and almost immediately afterwards cries for boats proceeded from the same quarter. Not a moment was lost in making towards the steamer, when the most heart-rending sight presented itself. Five persons were found, apparently in a state of madness, running to and fro the deck, screaming with anguish, while their appearances showed that their lamentations were real. With all speed they were conveyed on shore, and met with every attention that could be afforded, by Captain South, managing director of the Blackwall Railway, and assistants. The agonizing cries of these unfortunate persons were said to be dreadful. They begged for cold water to quench the scalding heat they were suffering in their throats, and when the cooling fluid was applied to the mouths of one or two, the skin from their lips peeled off as though under the influence of a scalding iron. They were all conveyed, without loss of time, to the London Hospital. The sufferers were in the engine-room, which was so filled with steam, that to get out was impossible until the scalding vapour had escaped. In order, therefore, to facilitate their extraction, the decks were cut up with pick-axes, adze, crowbars, and every sort of implement at hand that could be applied to the purpose. By this means the steam got a greater vent, and subsided much sooner than it would otherwise have done. As soon as the engine-room was sufficiently clear, a descent was made, and seven human forms, scalded to death, were there discovered, with features contorted with agony, some bleeding from the nose, ears, and mouth, and their flesh peeling from the bones at the touch. In fact, it may be said the clothing alone kept flesh and bone together. The bodies were taken ashore, and placed in one of the Blackwall Railway warehouses, where six of them were shortly afterwards recognized, and proved to be Mr. Jacob Samuda, the head of the firm; Henry Scobell, engineer; James Scandlers, engineer; Thomas Nugent, engineer; James Newman, fireman; Arthur M'Ghee, fireman; and Samuel Dodd, engineer. The names of those who were taken to the hospital are—Mr. W. Ryley, foreman to the Messrs. Samuda; James Hill, boiler-maker; Charles Murrell and William Donovan, stokers; and a third stoker, whose name could not be ascertained. It is conjectured that the main steam pipe to the engine became affected by a stuffing box in the junction-pipe, the giving way of which let the steam into the engine-room. It is also said that the boiler was made to stand a pressure of 45lb. per inch, and their working power was 25lb. per inch. This latter pressure had not been maintained the whole distance of the trip, but was up to that mark when the vessel arrived at the moorings. As soon as she was made fast, Mr. Lowe, principal engineer to the firm, was about to give instructions for the raising out of the fire, when he was requested by Mr. Jacob Samuda to go on deck to ascertain how she was blowing off. Mr. Lowe accordingly went upon deck, and had not got above ten feet from the engine-room entrance when the explosion took place. The preservation of this gentleman must be considered as almost a miracle—a few seconds later, and he most probably would have shared the fate of his unfortunate companions. Amongst those who are injured, and whose lives are feared, three were dragged on deck from the engine-room on the first alarm, and narrowly escaped with their lives.

INQUEST ON THE BODIES.

The names of the deceased on which the inquest was held on Wednesday, are Jacob Samuda, Henry Scobell, James Scandlers, Thomas Nugent, John Newman, Arthur M'Ghee, and Samuel Dodd.

The inquest was held at one o'clock, at the Queen's Head, Poplar, in the first instance, and afterwards adjourned to the Town Hall, before Mr. Baker.

The jury having viewed the bodies,

Joseph Reed, Orchard-place, Blackwall, was sworn. He said he was a pattern maker. He recognized one of the bodies he had just seen as that of Jacob Samuda, engineer; he resided in Somers-street, Southwark, and was about 31 years of age. He also recognized Henry Scobell; he was an engineer, and resided at 14, Halse-street, and was 44 years of age; James Scandlers, 27 years of age, who resided in Poplar, engineer; Thomas Nugent, who resided at 157, Union-street, Southwark; he was 18 years of age, and an engineer; John Newman, who was a fireman, residing in Poplar, and 37 years of age; Arthur M'Ghee, who resided in Burford-court, Robin Hood-lane, and was a fireman, 35 years of age; and Samuel Dodd, who was an engineer, residing in Orchard-place, Blackwall, and was 27 years of age.

The Coroner then addressed the jury, and said he was quite in their hands as to the description of evidence that should be adduced before them. Mr. George Lowe, who was one of the engineers, was the first, but whether it would be expedient to examine him at the outset would be for them to determine.

The jury having said that they wished him to be forthcoming.

He was sworn, and deposed as follows:—Was in the employ of Messrs. Jacob and Joseph Samuda. Mr. Jacob Samuda was at the head of the firm, and is the deceased. Did not know whether the vessel was there; they built the boat and put the engines in for a company in Ireland. She was an iron steamboat. Messrs. Samuda were builders of iron steamboats at Bow-creek, Blackwall, as well as engineers. The vessel was called the Gipsy Queen. A ship of her size and dimensions is worth about £15,000, the engines being worth about £2000. There were two engines working together, coupled by two cranks without an intermediate shaft. They are different engines to those in ordinary use, and he believed they were worked under a patent. They are both direct-acting and beam-engines, and combine the two. They are placed fore and aft the ship. The two cylinders in a common beam-engine stand abreast the ship; those stand fore and aft. The object of this arrangement, he believed, was to save room. He did not consider it any more dangerous than the common mode of placing them. The beam of a common engine revolves upon its centre; the beam of Messrs. Samuda's engine has its motion at the extreme end, instead of in the middle; the beam is in two parts. That constitutes the main difference.

The Coroner.—Do you think that difference of construction has at all contributed to the accident?

Witness.—No. Till this accident happened he had not the opportunity of seeing that part which had given way. It was kept from his view. He believed that the contract which Messrs. Samuda had was to work up all the old parts of an old steam-engine, which came out of an old vessel; and the steam-pipe which had given way appeared to him to be part of the old pipe; but he did not know whether they were or not. They were condensing engines, and never were worked higher than 10lb. to the square inch all the time they worked yesterday. He was out yesterday with the vessel, and had the management; and the engine gave about 20 to 24 strokes.

By a Juror.—The valve would not rise at 10lb. to the square inch. The power Messrs. Samuda intended to work them at was 45lb. to the square inch. The horse-power of the engines would depend on the pressure the boiler would bear. At the speed she was going yesterday he should suppose the engines were about 200 horse-power.

By a Juror.—The diameter of the cylinders was 45 inches.

The vessel left her moorings at Bow-creek at a little after three o'clock. The engines were tried for the first time on Friday last, whilst the vessel was at her moorings. This was her first trip. He was below, and did not know how far the vessel went, but he went on deck once when they were somewhere below the usual at Woolwich. He believed they went below Woolwich and back. They got back at about ten minutes past five o'clock, and the vessel was then moored off the East India Dock to a buoy, opposite the Brunswick Pier, Blackwall. He wrought one engine, and Samuel Dodd, the deceased, wrought the other. Mr. Samuda was there giving directions. The steam power was kept up when she was fastened to her moorings. Mr. Samuda told him that would do for the engines. He (the witness) said, "Well, I will draw the fire, and blow the boiler off." That meant blowing all the water out of them. Mr. Samuda said, "No, do not do that; I want to see 25lb. to the inch on the boiler before you touch the boiler."

By a Juror.—The valve was a three-tailed valve. No person could get at the valve, as it was boxed up, except by a lever, which would only open it, and not shut it. The pressure could not go to more than 25lb.; the valve being then fixed at that pressure.

Mr. Samuda said, "Fetch me a candle," which he (the witness) did, and Mr. Samuda then went to look at the valve. When they looked at the gauge it was 10lb. to the square inch. Mr. Samuda told witness to go upon deck, and observe if the steam was blowing strong off. He (witness) ordered one of the firemen to go, but Mr. Samuda would not allow him; he said, "I have plenty of men, but I cannot depend on anybody but you." So he (witness) went away up the ladder, and had not gone four paces on deck to look at the waste steam-pipe when the explosion took place, by which the deceased lost their lives. They were scalded to death by the steam and water. He escaped.

The Coroner.—I suppose you cannot tell what caused the explosion?

Witness.—No, sir.

The Coroner.—Can you form an opinion?

Witness.—The pipes are joined with spigot and faucet.

The Coroner.—Had Mr. Samuda any power over the weight over the valve?

Witness.—No, sir; he had no power over it, it was fixed in a box. No steam could blow out of the valve till there was a pressure of 25lb. to the square inch on the boiler. It required this before the valve would lift. Very little steam indeed was blowing out when I went on deck; it was just ceasing off.

At this stage of the proceedings, Mr. Pym, who introduced himself as treasurer of the Dublin and Kingston Railway, stated that he happened to be in town on some business, and was known to Messrs. Samuda. The brother of the deceased was too ill to attend the present inquiry, and he (Mr. Pym) was, therefore, anxious that the public should be set right with regard to the unfortunate occurrence, and begged leave to put a few questions to the witness.

The Coroner said he was quite at liberty to do so.

Mr. Lowe in reply, stated that neither the plan of the engines, nor the boiler, nor the quality of the materials, had anything to do with the accident, or at all contributed to it; it was occasioned entirely by the mode in which that joint was made. Witness could make a joint sufficiently strong to resist any possible pressure of steam that the boilers would generate by altering the form and materials, and it would be perfectly safe for the future. The boilers, to witness's knowledge, had been proved by water pressure, but he did not know whether they had been tested by steam.

At the conclusion of this witness's examination, the Coroner said it would be desirable that the inquiry should be adjourned, and, as he had received information that the two men, Riley and Donovan, had since died at the London Hospital, he should open the inquest upon them, and in the meantime some further evidence might be obtained, which would throw more light upon the occurrence, and afford more satisfaction to the public, who were deeply interested in inquiries of this nature.

The inquest was then formally adjourned until Saturday (this day).

ADDITIONAL PARTICULARS.

According to the latest report from the hospital, W. Riley, the foreman, and J. Donovan, stoker, were dead; and J. Hill, boiler-maker, was not expected to live. It was stated that C. Mills, stoker, might recover; another stoker had gone home.

The Gipsy Queen is still lying moored to a buoy off Brunswick-pier, Blackwall, and is uninjured. The boilers are uninjured, and the machinery unbroken. The cause of the accident was found to be the giving way of the joints of a large steam-pipe connecting the boilers with the cylinders of the machinery. It appears that the kind of joint used for such a purpose was not a proper joint, calculated to resist the force of steam, though such joints are very commonly used.

One of the joints is called a "flange" joint, the two ends of pipe to be joined being flattened out to a much larger diameter, and the flattened surfaces riveted together. This joint is as strong or stronger than the pipe, but will not yield to any vibration, and is therefore not so well calculated for steam-engines.

Another joint is called a "stuffing-box" joint, in which one pipe is made to slide into the end of the other, which is made larger to receive it, the edge of the resilient pipe being then riveted to a collar on the inserted pipe. This joint is also quite safe, and yields a little to any vibration of the engine.

The remaining joint, which was the one used to connect the boiler with the machinery of the Gipsy Queen, is called a "spigot and faucet" joint, in which the end of one pipe is simply inserted a few inches into the end of the other, without any fastening whatever beyond a packing of hemp to keep it tight. The pipe connecting the boiler with the machinery was of considerable length, having two of these "spigot and faucet" joints in it, one about the middle, and the other, after a sharp bend of the pipe, where it was inserted to the side of the cylinder. It appears that the joint so made had resisted a pressure of steam of 10lb. to the square inch; but on the vessel stopping, Mr. Samuda was anxious to see a pressure of 25lb. to the square inch, to test the valve, the boiler being calculated to bear 45lb. pressure to the square inch, and with this object directed the steam not to be blown off till a pressure of about 25lb. to the square inch was attained. His directions were attended to, and it appears from the evidence at the inquest, that on this pressure being applied, both the "spigot and faucet" joints gave way, the spigot pipe at the joint at the cylinder being forced out of its socket entirely, and the pipe at the elbow bend turned round the other end of this pipe, which also formed a "spigot," at its junction with the pipe to the boiler being also forced out of the "faucet," the whole piece of pipe being disconnected, and hanging in the slings which supported it. The steam then escaped direct from the boiler through the severed pipe, which is about ten inches in diameter, with immense force, and scalded and suffocated to death all who happened to be within its reach. Mr. Jacob Samuda was immediately under the middle joint of the pipe, which was only about a foot above his head when it gave way.

It was nearly an hour and a half before the steam had sufficiently evaporated to admit of any one entering the engine-room of the vessel, in which the bodies of Mr. Samuda and six of his workmen were found dead and frightfully scalded. On attempting to raise the body of Mr. Samuda by the hand, the skin and flesh, together with his ring, peeled and slipped off the bones. The bodies, as soon as possible, were got out and conveyed to the home-house at Poplar, where they were laid in a row—a heart-rending and shocking sight.

The above appalling accident by which Mr. Jacob Samuda lost his life, has invented the "bell-crank engine," of the Gipsy Queen, with an interest which, in our own opinion, it would never otherwise have possessed. We have, therefore, given an elevation of the apparatus, as it appears when in full working order. We believe that the unfortunate gentleman had had but little experience in the construction or management of marine engines, and that to that circumstance was the misfortune to which his valuable life has been sacrificed he is some degree attributed. It appears that the engine of the Gipsy Queen was patented by Mr. Samuda only so lately as the 10th of January, of the present year; and that, consequently, its adaptation to the purposes of steam navigation, can only be regarded at the present time as of an experimental character. No fault, however, has yet been cast upon the construction of the engine itself; the whole blame appearing to rest in an apparent want of experience in the use of its attendant apparatus. The inventor in his patent describes the principal improvements comprised in his invention in the following words:—

"The first (he says) consists in a novel construction of the steam-engine, whereby the cylinders are placed almost over the keel of the boat; the steam cylinder, piston rod, cross head, and side rods, are of the ordinary construction, but in place of the side lever beams, Mr. Samuda employs a lever of a triangular form, moving upon centres, which gives motion to the connecting rod; the cylinders of this engine are not exactly in a line with each other, but a little sideways, and in an opposite direction to each other, so that the connecting rods may work close to each other; but, if it is desirable to have the cylinders in the same line, it can be effected by cranking one of the connecting rods, so as to receive the other; the following sketch, which is an elevation of the engine, with one side removed, will serve to illustrate more clearly the novel construction of the same:—a, a, is the framework of the engine; b, b, two iron triangles, working on centres, c, c, fixed to the framework; d, d, the connecting rods, the lower ends of which are connected to the ends of the triangle by pin joints, and the upper ends to the single crank pin; e, e, the cylinders; f, f, the side rods connected at one end to the cross head of the piston, and at the other end to the triangle by a pin joint, as shown by the drawing.

"The second part of these improvements consists in a modification of the above, but in place of one cylinder being employed at each end of the frame, there are two cylinders placed abreast of one another; in this case there are four air pumps employed, which are worked from the cross head, but if preferred one only may be employed, which may be placed in the centre of the frame and worked from the crank shaft; the condensers are underneath the bed plate of the engine. The cylinders in the third part of these improvements are elevated upon brackets cast or otherwise fixed to the framework, so that the pistons descend and are connected to the ends of the triangles by short links; the condensers in this case are fixed one on each shaft, and the crank pins are connected by a link, so that the engine, in case of an accident, can be worked independently of each other. The fourth part of these improvements shows the application of the above to vessels moved by submarine propellers. Some idea may be formed of this part by inverting the above sketch. In this case the triangles are placed above the main shaft, which latter passes through the stern of the vessel, and upon it is fixed a drum, having arms of plate iron made in a spiral form, so as to have the effect of forcing a very solid body of water through, the reaction of which has the effect of propelling the vessel. The fifth improvement consists in the arrangement of two vibrating cylinders inclined at an angle of 45 degrees, and an open topped air pump placed between them, all of which are worked from one crank pin."

In popular language, these improvements may be summarily stated, as consisting in, first, a greater length of stroke, and consequently of increased power, combined with easy working; and, secondly, in the form of the engine permitting it to be placed wholly below deck, without mid-ship chambers for the rise of the piston.

The immediate cause of the accident, as well as the various parts of the evidence before the jury, in which it is technically described, will be best understood by a consideration of the following figures:—

The first represents a steam pipe with the ordinary flange joint, formed by the shoulders of each end of the pipe being riveted together. This form of joint is considered to be stronger even than the pipe, but as it is necessarily incapable of adapting itself to the expansions of the tube by heat, or the vibrations attendant on the working of a marine engine, it has lately been held, notwithstanding its strength and safety, to be ineligible for boat machinery.

The second shows the form of joint in more general use; the "stuffing-box joint," as it is professionally named. In this mode of forming a junction between two pipes, the enlarged end of one is made, partially, to receive the end of the other, while the interspace is wound round, or stuffed, with wadding. This arrangement obviously admits the required play of the two pipes, and has been found in practice to be a very safe contrivance.

The third joint is the one which has obtained such a fatal notoriety, bearing the somewhat unimpeachable name of the "spigot and faucet joint." The subjoined figures will at once make its construction intelligible. It will be seen, that in this form of joint the interspace is denuded by a metallic packing ring, trebly bolted; and a little consideration will show, that should any deficiency occur in the wadding, this ring will have to bear the whole force of the steam, a contingency which seems yet to be provided for.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.—The following gentlemen have just been elected scholars upon this foundation:—Burnett, W. B. Smith, R. Allen, Sourley, Cox, Parkinson, Gibbs, Boly, F. Brent, Madden, Willink, Foster, Vassall, J. M. Clarke, G. Frost, Ottor, Manby, Newham, Maudson, Pearce, Calvert, J. B. Mayor, Valentine, Leicester.

His Grace the Archbishop of York, Lord High Almoner to her Majesty, has appointed the Venerable Samuel Wilberforce, of Oriel College, Oxford, to be Sub-Almoner, in the room of the late Dean of Carlisle.

The following gentlemen were, on Tuesday, admitted Actual Fellows of All Souls College:—Henry Salisbury Midman, B.A., Merton College; Hon. Frederic Byron, B.A., Balliol College; Arthur Panbawe Stopford, B.A., of Balliol College; and Fairfax Cartwright, B.A., of Christ Church.

NEW CHURCH IN SURREY.—A new church at Farnham, Surrey, was consecrated on Saturday last by the Lord Bishop of Winchester. A sermon was preached by the Venerable Samuel Wilberforce, B.D., Archbishop of Surrey. The church is in the Norman style, and is capable of accommodating 100 persons.

CAMBRIDGE, Nov. 13.—The following appointments have taken place:—The Rev. Charles John Simpson, of Peterborough, B.A., of Trinity College, to a living in the neighbourhood of Scarborough, Yorkshire, of the annual value of about £500. The Rev. John Birch Reynardson, B.A., of Corpus Christi College, to the living of Carbury, with the chapel of Holywell-cum-Aunby, near Stamford. The Rev. John Robert Inge, M.A., of Trinity College, to the curacy and evening lectureship of All Saints, Haverhill. The Rev. Peter Parker Smith, B.A., of St. John's College, to be chaplain of her Majesty's ship Valcano.

ST. GEORGE'S, HANOVER-SQUARE.—It is intended to take advantage of the present vacancy in the rectory of this extensive parish, and to break it up into several smaller parishes. Within the last two days two have been formed, viz., St. Paul's Family, and St. Paul's Knightsbridge. Of the former, the Rev. Thomas Fuller, M.A., will be the rector; and of the latter, the Rev. W. J. Early Bennett, M.A., late student of Christ Church, Oxford. Other changes will take place, and no appointment to the vacant rectory of St. George's will be made until all the arrangements shall have been completed.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO BURGHLEY HOUSE.

The precise locality of this fine old manorial domain is upon the northern or Lincolnshire border of the county of Northampton, at about a mile and a half to the south-east of the river Welland, which here forms the boundary between the two counties; and separates the borough of Stamford, in Lincolnshire, from Stamford Baron, in Northampton.

Northamptonshire, at the present day, contains nearly 150 seats, many of them in picturesque parks or grounds, and interesting for their architectural beauty, and historical associations. Indeed, the county has been, for centuries, celebrated as the abode of illustrious personages; and, during the reign of Elizabeth, there lived in the shire the Lord High Treasurer and Prime Minister; the Lord Chancellor; the Chancellor of the Exchequer; and the Speaker of the House of Commons.

The most important "proper house and home" in the country, either as regards extent or architectural character, is Burghley House, either built, or greatly improved, by the Lord High Treasurer Burghley. There has been some controversy as to the propriety of the name Burghley, or Burleigh; but, as a proof of the perfect coincidence and synonym of the title, it need only be mentioned, that in the arched roof under the passage to the court are sarcophagi of the family arms, in one of which is carved the inscription, "W. DOM. DE. BURGHLEY. 1577." The author of a description of the manor, published in 1797, says that, "from ancient times to the present, both antiquaries and historians have written it 'Burleigh,' affixing to different orthography exactly the same sound." He goes on to say:—"It was sometimes written 'Burwell,' and sometimes 'Burley,' the manner in which the late Earl of Winchelsea spelt the name of his contiguous seat on the hill. To put it, however, entirely out of dispute, the Earls of Essex commanded its true spelling to be carved in the arched ceiling at the western entrance, in the year 1577; and carved it was accordingly, in letters, 'Burghley,' and not 'Burleigh.' This manor had been, after being held by a variety of persons, at length sold to Richard Cecil, the father of the great and first Lord Burghley. But, it must always be remembered, that the title was derived from the manor, and not the name of the manor from the title. It appears, however, from another statement, that the manor came into Richard Cecil's possession through his wife, Jane Herington; and the Lord Treasurer writes himself in 1585, 'My house of Burghley is of my mother's inheritance, who liveth, and is the owner thereof, and I but a farmer.' A vulgar error was prevalent at one time that the manor-house was built at the expense of Queen Elizabeth. On the death of the Lord Treasurer in 1598, the manor devolved upon his eldest son, Thomas, the second Lord Burghley, who in consideration of his great merits and eminent services was made a Knight of the Garter by Elizabeth, and elevated two steps in the peerage by James I. with the title of Earl of Essex. James I. on his journey from Scotland in April, 1603, to ascend the throne of England, came to Burghley on the 23d of that month, and passed Easter Sunday there. The youngest son of the Treasurer, the celebrated Minister, Sir Robert Cecil, was created Earl of Salisbury by James the same day that his elder brother was made Earl of Essex; but he being created in the morning, and so before Lord Essex, the descendants of the younger branch of the family had right of precedence over the elder. The first Earl of Essex (Thomas Cecil) died in 1621.

The entrance to this noble domain is situated at the southern extremity of St. Martin, Stamford, of which street it forms a chief ornament. This entrance was built by Mr. Legg, of Stamford, under the superintendence of Henry, the tenth Earl of Essex, in 1601, at an expense of about £5000. It consists of two stone octagonal towers, each containing three stories of apartments, and crowned with cupolas; these towers are connected by three arched gateways, between which is solid masonry, faced with three-quarter Doric columns, and niches, and surmounted by a twisted cornice, and other embellishments. Upon the parapet, above the entire arch, are eight pyramidal ornaments, flanking the arms of the Cecil family. Above the two side arches are balustrading and two small arches, each of which is crowned with a pinnacle similar to those already mentioned, and encloses a carriage of the family crest.

The park extends about two miles from north to south, and from half a mile to a mile and a quarter from east to west. The grounds were much improved by Brown, who transformed the several fields surrounding the house into the present spacious lawn and shrubberies. About a mile from the Lodge, is a lake three-quarters of a mile in length, across which is a stone bridge, of three arches, with paleisles supporting four stone coach-huts, also by Brown. Next is the Dairy-house, and the Gamekeeper's Lodge; the latter a cottage in the old English style. This end of the park is somewhat picturesque, and presents but few features of that rich and beautiful scenery which is to be met with elsewhere, particularly near the Lake. As you approach the mansion, the trim beeches of lawns and fairy groves prepare you for the storehouse of art which they environ. Rustic benches and mossy cells, composed of Nature's rudest materials, appear on every side; and Fancy has almost exhausted herself in forming, to these retreats Gothic doors of wild-grown limbs, and passing them with the small log-boles of sheep.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO BURGHLEY.

TRIUMPHAL ARCH AT GREAT WELDON

A boat-house, and a Gothic temple of great beauty, may be enumerated among the other embellishments; and in a recess surrounded by evergreens, stands an elegant monument to Hannah Sophia Chambers, Countess of Exeter, bearing an inscription tributary to her excellence.

On this side of the house, at the distance of a few yards, is a large oval basin, 140 feet in circumference, for gold and silver fish. Adjoining other outbuildings leading from the east wing of the house, are the stables, composing three sides of a square of about 2500 yards, with indented parapets, pointed gateways, &c. The first appearance of the mansion is extremely imposing: on approaching it from Stamford, after winding through the noble park, the stately pile suddenly opens upon the visitor from the north-west; where its singular chimneys, the variety of its turrets, towers, and cupolas, and the steeples of the chapel rising in the centre, give it the appearance more of a small city than a single building.

Before we describe the mansion itself, we must glance at the means by which the manor came to the Cecil family.

According to Walpole, John Thorpe, the palace-building architect of Elizabeth's reign, gave the designs for Burghley, and superintended the greater part of its erection. Cecil, however, appears to have taken upon himself to procure some of the materials, in which he was assisted by Sir Thomas Gresham, who procured them from Flanders, whence also he obtained the materials for his "Royal Exchange." Thus, in Gresham's Domestic Correspondence, in the State Paper Office, we find a memorandum of articles for the building of Burghley, as follows:—"Antwerp, Oct. 23, 1559: xvi little pillars of marble for a gallery . . . xvi barthes for chimneys, at 24s. 4d. . . . xl. 2s. (7)—vi chairs of velvet, at 111 6s. the piece," &c. &c. Still, Cecil only erected a portion of the mansion; and did not the several dates upon the building prove this, Cecil's inadequate income would warrant this conclusion. It is well known that Queen Elizabeth did not overpay her servants, and Cecil declared of himself, that, during twenty-six years of Elizabeth's reign, he had not "been benefited" so much as he had during four years under King Edward. Again, Cecil, shortly after his promotion to the peerage, writes to a friend: "Your's, not changed in friendship though in name; and yet that not unknown to you, when you were with me near Stamford. W. BURGHELEY. My stile is Lord of Burghley, if you mean to know it for your writing, and if you list to write truly: the poorest lord in England!"

Although Thorpe may have designed Burghley, there is evidence that Henry, the architect of the Royal Exchange, procured some of the materials, more especially the "paying stones" for one of the halls, and "a patron how they should be laid." Then we find Gresham recommending Henricke to Cecil, as "reasonable;" and, in January, 1563, Clough (Gresham's agent at Antwerp) was corresponding with Cecil respecting the fashion of his gallery and pillars for Burghley. Mr. Burton, in his "Life and Times of Sir Thomas Gresham," states the property to have been carried into the family of Sir William Cecil by his mother, and to have been even regarded as the family seat, though Cecil made Throckmold his usual country residence, in consequence of its greater proximity to the metropolis. "He demolished the old house at Burghley, and on its site raised the magnificent pile to which his elder son, Thomas, succeeded, and which is at present inhabited by his lineal descendant, the Marquis of Exeter." In Mr. Drakard's copious "Guide," we find it stated that "the east and north ends (the part looking down upon Stamford), and the kitchen, are considered to be parts of the original structure. Admitting this account to be correct, the old building, upon which the present house was founded, must have been very inconsiderable, not only from the appearance of the existing mansion, but from the several dates observable on different parts of it."

Burghley is, altogether, a magnificent exemplar of the architecture of the reigns of Elizabeth and James I.; but many of its details are in objectionable taste, and overloaded with ornament. It is built of freestone, in the form of a beautiful parallelogram, which measures by the inner court 110 feet by 70. The chimneys are formed of Doric columns, connected at top by a frieze and cornice of the same order.

Upon our front page is engraved the showing the north front, which consists of an oblong centre, with an octagonal turret, crowned with a cupola, at each angle: this is flanked by three stories of apartments, and a tower nearly square, also surmounted with a cupola; the centre containing four stories above the principal entrance. On this side, between the windows, we observe the date 1567. On each side of the door is a platform, extending 90 by 18 feet each way, which, with the intermediate breadth of the threshold, completes a frontage of 100 feet. The pierced parapet of this front adds considerably to its richness. The ascent to the house is by nine large semi-circular steps; and the entrance is by a semi-circular headed doorway.

GENERAL VIEW,

THE INNER COURT,

engraved at page 317, is approached by a grand hall, 48 feet long, 24 feet wide, the roof supported by 12 Ionic columns of imitative Sienna marble, and the floor paved with small squares of black and white marble. There is another entrance hall on the west side, though of small dimensions; and a similar hall in the south front.

The effect of this court, with its massive piles of building, is very striking. The three stories on the east side consist of Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian columns, flanking large niches; and above the Corinthian order, the uppermost of the three, are two large stone lions, rampant, supporting the family arms. The spire of the chapel rises from hence, which, although far from being ornamental, is of admirable workmanship. This part of the building appears, from the date above the dial, to have been finished in 1565. Over an arch, in front of the chapel, is a bust of King William III. The columns in the opposite, or western-side, are plain Doric; and the windows in the north and south sides of the Court are pointed. Four spacious gateways, with parallel corresponding folding doors behind them on the four sides, lace each other; each extending in an elliptical arch, about nine feet in width, and the same in height. On the rail, and at the angles of the balustrades are several small stone urns, and water vessels.

Gilpin, the excellent artistical critic, says: "Burghley House is one of the noblest monuments of British architecture in the times of Queen Elizabeth, when the great outlines of magnificence were rudely drawn, but unimproved by taste. It is an immense pile, forming the four sides of a large court; and though decorated with a variety of fantastic ornaments according to the fashion of the time, before Grecian architecture had introduced symmetry, proportion, and elegance, into the plans of private houses, it has still an august appearance. The inside of the Court is particularly striking. The spire is neither, I think, in itself an ornament; nor has it any effect, except at a distance, where it contributes to give this immense pile the consequence of a town."

Another beautiful feature of Burghley is its fine architectural gardens—the invaluable accompaniment to the Elizabethan mansion. "We delight," says Mr. C. J. Richardson, the tasteful architect, "in its wide and level terraces, decorated with rich stone balustrades, and these again with vases and statues, and connected by broad flights of stone steps—its clipped evergreen hedges—its embowered alleys—a formal yet intricate parterre, full of curious knots of flowers—its lively and musical fountains—its steep slopes of velvet turf—its trim bowling-green—and the labyrinth and wilderness which form its appropriate termination, and connect it with the rural scenery without."

Thus far, the exterior of Burghley. The principal apartments appropriated for Her Majesty and Prince Albert will be found described elsewhere; and next week, we shall illustrate several of the curiosities of the interior of this truly palatial home.

The ancient town of Stamford and the palace of Burghley, have been frequently honoured with visits by English sovereigns. In chivalric times, Stamford was the scene of tilts and tournaments; but its chronicle of splendour is dimmed with many a sad episode of battle and siege, persecution, and unjust triumph. Parliaments and councils of war have been held here; and so severely did the town suffer in the protracted strife of York and Lancaster, that it never afterwards recovered its ancient dignity. Turning to the more pacific and festive celebrity of Stamford, we find to have been entertained here, Edward IV., Henry VIII., Elizabeth, James I., and Charles I.; Cromwell's visit was a less agreeable event to the inhabitants. In 1646, Charles found a patriotic reception here, in his escape from "the Protector;" and the last night the poor King may be said to have slept a free man, was at Stamford. Elizabeth and James I. visited Lord Burghley's newly-built mansion; as did William III.; and George IV. (then Prince Regent), passed through the town in the winter of 1813.

ARCH AT KETTERING.

The visit of her Majesty and Prince Albert to the Marquis of Exeter, at Burghley, had been for some time contemplated; and, accordingly, the arrangements made for the reception of the Royal visitors have been extensive and complete. Of the magnificent mansion, a description will be found in another portion of our journal; so that we shall, in this place, confine ourselves to a detail of the Royal progress to the princely mansion, and a notice of every incident of the journey entitled to record.

ARCH AT WARKLEY.

We should mention, at starting, that the sketches for the several illustrations have been, for the most part, made by Mr. LANDELLS, who, during her Majesty's recent visit to Blair Athol, was honoured with the Royal command to execute two drawings of the above locality.

THE ROYAL DEPARTURE.

The Queen and Prince Albert left Buckingham Palace at five minutes before nine o'clock on Tuesday morning, in a carriage and four, escorted by a party of Lancers, for the Euston-square terminus of the London and Birmingham Railway.

Lady Portman, the Honourable Georgiana Liddell, Colonel Arbutnot, and Colonel Wyld, followed in a second carriage and four; and the Lord Chamberlain and Mr. George Edward Anson followed in a third carriage and four.

ARCH AT DEANTHORPE.

Her Majesty was attired in deep mourning, and appeared in perfect health. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, who also looked extremely well, was enveloped in a capacious travelling-cloak of a dark colour, lined with red.

The Royal travellers arrived at the Euston-square terminus at a quarter past nine o'clock, and her Majesty and the Prince, on alighting from the Royal carriage, were received by Mr. Glyn, the chairman of the railway; Mr. Ledsam, the deputy chairman; Mr. Young and Mr. Grenfell, directors; Mr. Creed, the secretary; and Mr. Bruyeres, the chief inspector of the line, and conducted into the state room.

ARCH AT WALTHORPE.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO BURGHLEY.

ARCH AT EUSTON.

The luggage belonging to the Court had now to be properly disposed of in the carriages appropriated to the use of the suite. This was effected in a few minutes, and at seventeen minutes after nine o'clock her Majesty and Prince Albert left the state-room, and proceeded to the Royal carriage amidst the hearty cheering of a large and respectable concourse of spectators, who had been admitted within the station. Her Majesty and the Prince appeared to be in excellent health.

The Royal train, consisting of three carriages besides the Royal carriage, left the terminus at twenty-two minutes after nine o'clock, and was enthusiastically cheered while it remained in sight of those at the station. The engine, which had the Royal standard hoisted in front, was driven by Mr. E. Bury, the superintendent of the locomotive department.

The incline to Camden Town was passed up at a rapid rate, and upon getting out of the cutting and obtaining a view of the horizon, it was seen that her Majesty, whose "Royal progresses" have been almost invariably made "midst sunshine and smiles," would, on the present occasion, have but a dull journey, so far as the weather was concerned. A drizzling rain beat against the windows of the carriage, and the huge volumes of steam from the engine dragged, or rather rolled, their slow length across the country, lending an additional haziness to the atmosphere.

At the Camden Town works, belonging to the railway, the workmen had arranged themselves along the line, and gave her Majesty a "hurrah," which was none the less sincere for being most vociferous. The Primrose-hill tunnel was passed through at great speed (about one minute), and the train went at something like 34 or 35 miles per hour, with a fine easy motion—the carriages having had improved springs attached to them—and passing Harrow at twelve minutes to ten, the Watford station was reached at eight minutes to ten, and the long tunnel immediately beyond it passed through in a minute and forty seconds.

The train reached Boxmoor station about one minute past ten o'clock. To the platform of this station several persons had been admitted in order that they might have an opportunity of seeing her Majesty as she travelled on the railroad, but, considering the rapidity with which the train proceeded, it is hardly possible to conceive that their very natural curiosity could have been adequately gratified. It was, however, an unusual sight to see a special train of this kind at all. In the centre of it was a magnificent carriage surmounted with a Royal crown. The spectators knew that it contained their Sovereign and her Royal Consort; and this was some gratification, even though they might not be able to distinguish very clearly the illustrious individuals themselves. Indeed, many a labourer and farmer on the railroad side left the labour of the field to look at the Royal special train as it rushed rapidly along.

The drizzling rain which was falling at the time had not deterred a considerable number of persons from collecting together at Tring station. This station is situated 31½ miles from London, and was reached at fourteen minutes past ten o'clock; and here the train halted for a few minutes, in order that the engine might obtain a fresh supply of water.

Among the persons assembled at this station were the juvenile members of the neighbouring population, boys and girls, who were drawn up in distinct rows, and who strained their tiny voices to the utmost in welcoming their Sovereign. Her Majesty appeared highly pleased with this specimen of infantine loyalty and enthusiasm. A sufficient supply of water having been obtained, the train again started on its course, at 18 minutes past 10 o'clock, but its onward ale was not now so great as when it started from Euston-square station.

tion. As the train approached its destination, the Weedon station, the speed became less and less, and the cause of this slackening in the progress of the train was understood to be her Majesty's desire not to arrive at Weedon station much earlier than a quarter to twelve o'clock.

At Wolverton station, which was passed by the special train at eleven o'clock, there was a large assemblage of persons on the platform, who all seemed most anxious to catch a passing glimpse of her Majesty, and who most cordially cheered her as the train passed along. At this station, several engineers and mechanics employed by the railway company clambered upon some of the engines which were lying on the side rails. It seemed that they had not had much time to pay attention to their toilet, for they wore only their rough working dresses, and their smeared faces and hands gave sufficient proof of the nature of their hard toil. Loyalty, however, is not confined to any particular class in this country, and the energetic cheers raised by these sons of toil, expressive of their joy at beholding their Sovereign, seemed as heartfelt and as honest as they were lusty. At Ilkley station, which was reached 18 minutes past eleven, the special train passed the ordinary passengers' train, which had left London for Birmingham at nine o'clock.

ARCH AT BULWICK.

ARCH NEAR STAMFORD.

THE ARRIVAL AT WEEDON STATION.

Precisely at twenty minutes to twelve o'clock, the appointed time to a second, the Royal train arrived in sight, and passed rapidly through the station.

Three of the Royal carriages had arrived from town by the eight o'clock train, and the horses having arrived from Northampton, were put to, and the whole was in readiness before her Majesty reached the station.

ARCH AT DUDDINGTON.

On the Royal carriage bringing up alongside the platform, the Marquis of Exeter advanced to pay his respects to the Queen and the Prince, her Majesty and his Royal Highness rising from their seats and greeting his Lordship.

Sir Henry Dryden, High Sheriff of Northamptonshire, Colonel Thorne, the Military Commandant of the district, and several magistrates of the county, were also present.

In the station yard a guard of honour of the 47th Regiment, consisting of 100 men, a sergeant, and a corporal, with band and Queen's colour, under the command of Capt. Haly, were drawn up, the remainder of the regiment forming in file through the village.

The Marquis of Exeter having received the Queen, and conducted her to the apartments fitted up for her recreation, shortly after left for Burghley, to be in readiness to receive his Royal visitors. The Noble Marquis rode the whole distance on horseback.

On leaving the station, the Royal cortege drove slowly through the village of Weedon, over the principal street of which an unpretending arch, composed of evergreens, was thrown. The inhabitants were all at their doors and windows, and as the Queen and the Prince passed, they joined in loyal vociferations in honour of the Royal pair. Increasing the pace on leaving Weedon, the Royal cortege proceeded rapidly on, the first object on the route being Brock Hall, the seat of Mr. Thomas Reeve Thornton. The village of Flore was next reached. Here the people were all out in holiday attire to meet the Royal pair, and the houses were gaily decorated. The villages of Heyford and Harpole were next passed through in succession. At Duston, a hamlet, closely adjoining Stamford, and the property of Lord Melbourne, the preparations were upon an extensive scale, and the Royal pair were most enthusiastically greeted.

Entering the precincts of the town by St. James's end, the cortege soon arrived at the West Bridge, where the Mayor, and Corporation, with the Clergy, and numerous inhabitants, were drawn up.

ARRIVAL AT NORTHAMPTON.

Many a long year has passed since the ancient town of Northampton presented a scene of similar bustle and activity, the whole population appearing to be vying with each other in their attempts to honour the auspicious visit of their beloved Sovereign and her Royal Consort. Along the route through which it had been arranged for the Royal carriage to pass, every house exhibited more or less enthusiasm on the part of its inhabitants in giving effect to this feeling of loyalty and affection. Festoons of evergreens and flowers floated across all the principal streets, and no fewer than three magnificent triumphal arches, tastefully designed, were thrown across the road at different parts of the town. The first of these was situated just below the old castle hill, on the Duxton side of the river. The style of this arch was Elizabethan—in keeping with Burghley House. The design consisted of three arches, a large one in the centre and two smaller ones on either side. The span of the centre arch was about fourteen feet; that of each of the smaller ones measuring five feet. Three pillars supported this ornamental piece of architecture: the two great ones upon which the centre arch was formed were six feet square and twenty-eight feet high. The other two were four feet square and sixteen feet high. Including the decorative turrets the height of the two larger much importance, for if the tube were soldered with iron, it would be as safe, as the expansive or contractile power at this point was very small. One important omission was that of an iron stay between the tube from which the steam escaped and the deck of the vessel. Two iron stays or stays acted as supporters of this tube, but none to keep it from rising up.

(Continued on page 311.)

ENTRANCE INTO STAMFORD.

The deceased Riley's brother stated, that he was on board at the time of the accident, and felt conscious that no blame was attributable to any person.

After leaving the surgical evidence, the Coroner summed up, and the jury, after a short consultation, returned a verdict of "Accidental death" in the three cases.

LATEST PARTICULARS.

The poor fellow Riley, on being brought ashore, had just sufficient power to intimate that he was thirsty; and Mr. Dyer, of the railway station, wetted his scorching mouth with a little water. Riley, at the explosion, was near the ladder, and on the steam shooting over his body and head, instantly ran up the steps, when his legs and hands more particularly were exposed to the full violence of the red hot steam with shocking effect. Another got upon the deck by the same ladder, but the three who were not instantly killed were taken up by the bucket from the hole through which the steam are drawn, the strong instinct to preserve life alone giving them power to cling to the bucket, while their limbs were almost dropping under the heat, and the skin and flesh on their hands sodden.

On their arrival at the hospital, as their desperate case demanded, the greatest attention was paid to the sufferers, superintended by Mr. Alfred Hamilton, the assistant-surgeon of the institution. They were all quite cold, and the treatment usual on such occasions was resorted to in order to restore or sustain animation. All complained of thirst—burning thirst—while their stiffened faces became every moment more arid, their eyes closing, and the mouths of the poor creatures absorbing every particle of moisture. Bottles of hot water were applied, and wine was administered; but Riley, Donovan, and Mills gradually sank, exhausted with the keenest anguish, the great difficulty of breathing finally amounting to suffocation. Poor Riley died at eleven o'clock the same night; John Donovan, the stoker, expired at three on Wednesday morning; and Mills lingered in great agony for seven hours after. These ten out of the twelve who were in the engine-room are dead. The other at the hospital, James Hill, the stoker, is going on favourably, and great hopes are entertained that he will survive. His eyesight is miraculously preserved.

The engine-room is in the same state in which it was left after the removal of the bodies, and will remain so for the purpose of being visited by the coroner and jury. It presents a horrid spectacle of desolation. Mr. Samuda's hat is lying with the leather lining drawn up into a scroll, and the caps of some of the deceased are there, lined with the hair of those who were them.

The destination of the families of the unfortunate sufferers, unless promptly attended to, is likely to be of a most painful character. Henry Scobell, who was engaged as second engineer to go out in the Gipsy Queen, has left a widow and eight children totally unprovided for; James Schlander, a wife and five children; William Riley, a wife and family (she has but recently been confined); Charles Mills, a wife and three children; Arthur McGhee, supposed to have left a wife and family; Samuel Dodd, the same.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL V. GIBBS.—It is stated that in this suit there is no likelihood of a report being made. The suit was originally referred to Sir George Rose, but from the alleged anxiety to bring the cause to a conclusion, an order was obtained to refer it to the vacation Master, who has done nothing, and sent it back to Sir George Rose.

CORONER'S INQUEST ON THE BODY OF MR. HENRY ANDREWS.—Yesterday morning, at ten o'clock, Mr. Waddy held an inquest on the body of the above unfortunate gentleman, at the Coach and Horse public-house, Hampstead. The first witness examined was a woman, named Sarah Priest, who deposed to the fact of the death, she having attended the deceased since the day he inflicted the wound. Mr. Evans, of Hampstead, surgeon, stated that the deceased inflicted on himself a large wound across the front of his throat. There had been a large opening in the windpipe, but no great loss of blood. He attended him up to the night of his death, previous to which time he had gone on very well, no dangerous symptoms having appeared. On Tuesday night, at a quarter-past eleven o'clock, there was a recrudescence of blood. Witness remained with the deceased for some time, but the blood returned more profusely, and, after a sudden struggle in the bed, he expired. Witness was of opinion that the deceased died from the bursting of a blood vessel in the lungs. Coroner: Why then the wound in the throat was not the cause of death?—Mr. Evans: But for the infliction of the wound I think he would be now alive. The Coroner said, that if death had been caused by the bursting of a vessel in the lungs, the wound in the throat could not have affected it, as the opening so made would have been the cause of relieving the deceased, rather than otherwise. He should, therefore, be obliged to adjourn the inquiry. The inquiry was then adjourned to this day (Saturday), in order that there might be a post mortem examination.

THREE MORE MURDERS IN IRELAND.—The Irish papers received to-day, contain accounts of no less than three more murders in Tipperary, making in all eight within a short period. The following are the particulars of them:—On Saturday afternoon last, about the hour of four o'clock, as a man named Pat McGinnis, was on his return home from the Quarter Sessions of Thurles, where he had been obtaining a decree for the small sum of 5s., and when near the demesne of Brittas, two men jumped out from over a ditch and pulled him off the car, on which he sat, and on which three men were also travelling, but who never interfered to save the unfortunate man. The two murderers beat their victim with stones about the head to such an extent that he died from the effects of the treatment. A man named Tracey, against whom McGinnis had obtained the decree, is in custody. On Sunday week, three men, named James Moloney, Patrick Carr, and William Carr, went into the house of Denis Bryan, a publican, at Kilkenny, and after drinking some beverage which had the effect of making them a little tipsy, they had some dispute, and after leaving the house a quarrel ensued, and the two Carrs went into the dwelling of another brother named John Carr, out of which they came, and after shouting outside the door of the house where Moloney went in for protection. Moloney jumped out of the window, and was seized by John and William Carr, and was beaten with stones on the left side of the head by Paddy Carr, which fractured his skull, and of which he died on Saturday night, the 9th of November. An inquest was held by James Carroll, Esq., coroner, and a verdict returned:—"That said James Moloney received a mortal wound on the 9th of November, inflicted by some person or persons unknown, and of which he died."—An inquest was held in Thurles (Tipperary) on Saturday last, by Michael Cornick, Esq., on the body of a man named Thomas Ryan, who had been assaulted by Patrick Ryan, on the 24 of October last, in that town. The jury brought a verdict to the following effect:—"That the deceased, Thomas Ryan, came by his death in consequence of a blow of a stone on the head, inflicted by Patrick Ryan, on the 24 of October last, of which he died on Friday, the 5th of November inst." The coroner's warrant was then issued, and Patrick Ryan has been arrested.

FOREIGN.

INUNDATIONS ON THE CONTINENT.—Letters from Paris bring accounts of inundations in various parts of France, Corsica, Italy, and Germany. These from Florence, Ajaccio, and the country of the Tyrol, are the worst. The roads have been rendered impassable; in many of the towns and villages the water was three and four feet deep, and a considerable quantity of furniture, merchandise, and cattle, had been swept away by the floods. The weather in Paris has been dreadful; it rained night and day, and the wind at times raged furiously.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO BURGHLEY HOUSE.

(Continued from page 309.)

pillars were forty feet each, that of the two smaller ones about twenty-one feet each. The whole was surmounted by a crown, over which the Royal standard floated. The inscription, "Welcome Victoria and Albert," was painted in large characters at the upper part of the arch, and the lower portion was decorated with evergreens and flowers.

The second arch, even more colossal than the first, was situated at the corner of All Saint's Churchyard. The third arch was erected at the north-east extremity of the town, at the top of Abington-street, and nearly opposite the residence of Mr. Barwell, the present Mayor of the town.

In addition to these arches, a temporary wooden structure, was erected on the site of the ancient castle, of which only a small portion of the walls remain, the extent and massive character of the fortification being gathered chiefly from the rising ground or eminence on which the original building stood.

This interesting scene, in some degree partaking of the scenic preparations for a tourney, will be engraved in our next number. The castle, which was thus theatrically restored, was built after the Conquest, by Simon de St. Liz, on whom the Conqueror conferred the Earldom of Northampton.

At the third arch the Royal cortege was met by the Mayor, Mr. Barwell, and the other civic authorities, in full costume, who, walking accompanied by their municipal insignia, preceded the Royal carriages from one end of the town to the other. The houses in this town, along the whole line through which her Majesty passed, were decorated in the gayest style. They were covered with evergreens, and banners floated from every window. A dense but most orderly crowd filled the streets, while the windows of every house were occupied by elegantly-dressed ladies. As her Majesty passed along, she was greeted with unceasing acclamations, in which all parties without distinction most cordially joined. The scene was, indeed, most animated and pleasing, and the gratification which it afforded her Majesty was plainly evident from the very kind and gracious manner in which she returned the vociferous greetings of the assembled multitudes. As her Majesty proceeded along, the streets were not only densely crowded by the inhabitants, they were also lined on each side by members of the different friendly societies of the locality, wearing across their breasts as the insignia of the different fellowships various coloured sashes, and bearing white wands in their hands, and, as the municipal authorities preceded the Royal cortege, so the members of these different societies followed in regular order. The number of them being considerable, the procession, as it slowly moved along the streets, amidst the cheering of men and the waving of handkerchiefs by the ladies, who filled every window from which a glimpse of the passing spectacle could be obtained, was one of the most animated character conceivable. Such a day, distinguished by the presence of her Majesty among her loyal subjects of Northampton, and marked on the part of the inhabitants by so much order, regularity, and enthusiasm, must ever be memorable in the annals of this town.

On arriving at the West-bridge, the outsiders slackened pace, and the horses in the Royal carriage immediately pulled up, and proceeded at a foot pace up Black Lion Hill, the Mayor and Corporation, clergy and inhabitants, heading the cavalcade in the following order:—

20 Gentlemen with white wands, 20 Special Constables.	Superintendent of Borough Police. Twelve Special Constables. Four Trumpeters. Bands of Music. County. Garrison. Corporation. Sergeants at Arms. Common and Officers of Corporation. Town Council. Four and Four Magistrates, Four and Four Marshals.	20 Gentlemen with white wands, 20 Special Constables.
Constable of the Borough.	Town Clerk—The Mayor—Rev. W. Wales.	Constable of the Borough.

The Royal cortege consisted of three carriages and four, in the first of which rode her Majesty and the Prince Consort, the second and third conveying the lords and ladies in attendance.

These were succeeded by carriages and horsemen, the rear of the procession consisting of the members of the various lodges and societies bearing wands, and having white favours on their breasts.

Nothing could exceed the enthusiasm of the people as the party passed through the town. On arriving at the top of Gold-street, the Royal carriage halted for a few moments opposite the George Hotel, where the Mayor, by the express permission of her Majesty, advanced and presented the address of congratulation from the corporation and inhabitants of the borough, of which the following is a copy:—

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

The humble address of the Mayor, Magistrates, Aldermen, and Councillors of the borough of Northampton.

Most Gracious Sovereign,—We, your Majesty's faithful subjects, the Mayor, Magistrates, Aldermen, and Councillors of the borough of Northampton, beg leave to approach your Majesty to hail your Majesty's auspicious presence in this ancient borough.

We beg to assure your Majesty of the devoted loyalty and attachment of this town, and that all classes of its inhabitants are deeply sensible of the benefits enjoyed under your Majesty's enlightened rule. We most earnestly pray, that under the protection of Divine Providence, your Majesty's reign may be long, prosperous, and peaceful; and that your Majesty's subjects may long feel the benignant influence of those private virtues which adorn your Majesty and your Majesty's illustrious Consort, and which endear your Majesty to the hearts of the people.

To this address her Majesty was graciously pleased to make an immediate reply, not reading from any previously prepared document, but framing her answer on the spot as she uttered it. Her Majesty's answer was to the following effect:—

Mr. Mayor.—We receive the address with great pleasure from the Mayor, Magistrates, and Corporation of this town. We are grateful for the reception we have met with from the inhabitants of this ancient borough. You will place the address in the hands of the Lord Chamberlain, and an answer will be sent.

Renewed cheers followed the conclusion of this ceremony, and then the procession moved forward in the same order as before, passing in its course under four large triumphal arches formed of evergreens. When the Royal cortege had passed through the last of these, and reached the Kettering road, the municipal authorities defiled off, remaining uncovered, while her Majesty proceeded towards Kettering, the horses of the Royal carriages resuming their former quick pace.

In the evening, the Mayor and Corporation, with the principal inhabitants of the town, dined together in celebration of her Majesty's visit, at the Angel Inn.

The Royal cortege soon reached Buckett's-booth, a spot about three or four miles distant from Northampton. This is not a village or a hamlet, but a place where a single road-side inn is situated; yet, as it was known that the horses of the Royal carriages would here be changed, a number of persons, naturally enough, were congregated near the place. Among these were the members of some friendly club belonging to a neighbouring village. They came to the spot with staves in their hands, attended by their band, and with colours flying; and while the horses of her Majesty's carriages were being changed, which was, of course, only an affair of a minute or two, the band of this society struck up "God save the Queen," which they executed with great spirit, evidently inspired by the enthusiasm and loyalty which manifested themselves in every quarter, and among every class. It is a curious circumstance that the day on which these villagers welcomed the coming of their Sovereign happens to fall in the week when their village festival or wake occurs, and which they are now keeping.

In passing on to Kettering the small roadside village of Broughton is passed. This, like all the rest of the places on the route, was most gaily decorated with triumphal arches, &c., and the inhabitants lined the streets, cheering her Majesty as she passed.

Kettering was reached by the Royal party about a quarter past two o'clock.

The inhabitants of this town had made extensive arrangements to demonstrate their loyalty.

covered with laurel, and surmounted with a Royal crown.—(See page 308.) The words "Welcome Victoria," were figured on it, with various flowers. In front of this arch, ranged on each side of the road, was a great number of waggons, which were occupied by the juvenile population of the town of both sexes, who evidently, from their exclamations, were highly delighted at the opportunity thus considerably afforded them of getting a peep at their Queen. They raised their little voices in the most joyous exclamations. These applauders of their Sovereign were the boys and girls belonging to the different charitable institutions of instruction in the neighbourhood, including those of the church of England and every other religious denomination. Within the town itself the same loyal feeling was manifested as at Northampton. The houses were gaily decorated, evergreens and flowers being mixed together with admirable variety and taste. Here, as at Northampton, the inhabitants had resolved to make the day one of jubilee. The whole of the population lined the streets through which her Majesty passed. Her Majesty arrived at Kettering, as before stated, about a quarter-past two o'clock, having been preceded there by the Marquis of Exeter, who reached the place ten minutes sooner on horseback, and whose arrival in advance served as a signal to the multitude of the approach of their beloved Sovereign. Her Majesty's carriages drove up to the White Hart Hotel, where suitable preparations for the occasion had been made. During the change of horses which here took place, her Majesty and suite alighted, passing (in their way to the apartments which had been prepared for them) through the entrance hall of the hotel, which was lined with elegantly dressed ladies.

Her Majesty, during her progress through Kettering, was received with the most loyal acclamations; and on her alighting during the change of horses at the White Hart, the shouts of welcome with which she was greeted, were deafening in the extreme. On her Majesty's alighting, the band of the Kettering Yeomanry struck up "God save the Queen," and simultaneously the whole of the multitude about the place joined in the chorus. The evening closed at Kettering as harmoniously as the day began; this occasion, which will never be forgotten by the inhabitants, being celebrated by a public dinner in the evening, at which the healths of the Queen and Prince Albert were toasted with the utmost enthusiasm.

About half-past two o'clock her Majesty left Kettering, amidst the cheers and blessings of the population, on her way to Weldon, escorted by a body of the Kettering Yeomanry, under the command of Lieutenant Booth.

At a distance of two miles from Kettering is the village of Weekley, on the right of which stands Boughton House, the ancient seat of the Buccleuch family. A fine view of the magnificent front of this mansion is obtained from the road. An arch was erected in the village.—(See page 308.)

The scenery here is extremely beautiful, and the attractions of the locality are much increased by the remarkably fine timber with which the domain is studded. It is estimated that on the Boughton estate there are avenues of elm trees extending to no less than forty miles, all of which, now in full growth, it is said were planted by an ancestor of the present duke, who, from his peculiar taste, obtained the soubriquet of "John the Planter."

Perhaps the most interesting locality throughout her Majesty's journey on Tuesday was that which immediately succeeded to the one just described.

At about one mile distant from Weekley is situated the village of Geddington, where still exists, in a remarkably fine state of preservation, one of those beautiful crosses erected by the pious zeal of King Edward, in memory of his beloved Queen Eleanor, at the different stages where her remains rested on their route from the north to the metropolis. Only three of those interesting memorials now exist—one within two miles of Northampton, one near St. Albans, and another is situated as above described, in the centre of the village of Geddington. The latter, however, unlike the other two, is in a perfect state of preservation.

The route from Geddington for a distance of five miles is rather uninteresting, and nothing occurred worthy remark till they reached the ancient town of Weldon—now dwindled to a village. Here the Royal party again changed horses. An arch of tasteful design was erected here.—(See page 308.) It was gaily decorated with evergreens. At the King's Arms, where the horses were changed, a small arch of evergreens was erected, and no less than five flags hung from different parts of the premises. One bore the arms of the Winchelsea family, and one those of Lord Exeter. There was also a flag bearing a loyal inscription, and two others. Of course a vast concourse of persons had assembled here also, by whom her Majesty was most enthusiastically cheered. Both her Majesty and the Prince acknowledged the salutations of the people most kindly.

A little further on, between Weldon and Balwick, the Royal party passed the seat of the Earl of Cardigan, at Dean Park. Here a very large and handsome arch was thrown across the road. It was an imitation of masonry, and very happily executed.—(See page 308.)

But a more interesting sight here was the junction of Lord Cardigan's tenantry, who mustered in great numbers by the roadside, and fell in in with the Royal cortege. They saluted her Majesty with hearty cheers.

By this time the followers of the Royal party had very considerably increased. At every point on the wayside some few additions were made of horsemen or vehicles, and the appearance of such a large body, proceeding at so rapid a rate, preceded by the soldiers and the Royal carriages, with the out-riders in their scarlet coats, was particularly striking.

The next place of any importance which her Majesty reached, after leaving Weldon, was the village of Balwick, a long, straggling, winding street, not very favourable to the rapid movement of a large body of people. Here there was a triumphal arch (See page 308)—the houses were decorated, the wayside lined with people, and the windows swarmed with faces. As the Royal party passed through, the inhabitants cheered most enthusiastically. In the centre of Balwick there is a bridge over the Welland. Here also many people were collected.

Shortly after the Royal party passed the seat of the Earl of Carbery, Laxton-park, and a little farther on, Fineshade-hall, the seat of Colonel Monckton. At this place another party of Lancers was ready to escort her Majesty. They fell in, and the previous escort returned.

From Fineshade to Duddington, at which the property of Lord Exeter commences, the distance is short, the country flat, and not very interesting, except on the present occasion, from the numbers of people who, notwithstanding the rain, thronged to see the Queen. At a short distance on this side of Duddington, the Royal cortege received another accession. The Marquis of Exeter had requested the whole of his tenantry to mount and form in line at this place on either side of the way, to receive her Majesty. The nature of the road happens to be favourable to such a display, as it suddenly widens at this part. At Duddington, a very splendid arch had been erected by the noble Marquis. There were also two smaller arches. In the village itself there was a number of decorations, and the inhabitants assembled in crowds. The houses were decorated with evergreens and flags. The children of a large school were placed on a sort of platform in front of one of the houses, bearing flags and a banner inscribed "Long live the Queen, bless Victoria and Prince Albert."

As the Royal carriages advanced towards the appointed spot, the tenants, to the number of between 400 and 500, were seen drawn up. They presented a really imposing sight. Having saluted her Majesty with a hearty cheer as she passed by, they followed, headed by Mr. Higgs, Lord Exeter's steward, in the wake of the Royal carriages on to Burleigh.

With this immense accession, the Royal cortege had grown into an enormous moving column, swelled by the addition of multitudes of vehicles. The effect, as seen from a short distance, was really grand. On no occasion during these Royal visits, has her Majesty met with a reception or with an escort more worthy of the loyalty of the gentry and yeomen of England.

From Duddington to Stamford, a distance of about five miles, the road presented a continuous scene of excitement and enthusiasm. It is scarcely necessary to repeat that the wayside was filled, at intervals, with people and with vehicles of every kind, from the carriages of the gentry down to the humblest cart. The same scene that had presented itself all the way down was repeated here, except that it was on a much larger scale from the greater number of people collected.

At Easton, a small village close to Stamford, there was a triumphal arch; and at Wolthorpe there was a splendid triumphal arch erected at the expense of the Marquis of Exeter. There were spires to the turrets which formed the sides of the arch, and in the centre the Royal arms.—(See page 308.) This point commands almost the only good prospect on the road. There is a good view of a part of Stamford, and of the fine steeples of the churches, some of which are of particularly handsome architectural design.

From Wolthorpe to Stamford the distance is very short. At the entrance to the borough a handsome arch was erected, and also an enormous platform by the side of the road, for the accommodation of visitors and residents. It was surmounted by a flag, and inscribed, "Long live the Queen!" There must have been some 2000 or 3000 people there. It is needless to say that they cheered her Majesty most warmly as she passed. As the progress of the Royal cortege was necessarily somewhat slower, owing to the conflux of people, those who were stationed on the platform must have had a good view of the Queen. This platform extended to the corner of the road as it enters Stamford, the road to Burleigh turning off to the right.

STAMFORD

The Mayor and Corporation of the borough of Stamford met her Majesty and Prince Albert at the boundary of the borough on the Wolthorpe road to the Burleigh Lodges. The members of the clubs and lodges who accompanied the Mayor and Magistrates' procession, proceeded on the road towards Wolthorpe, where they formed in single lines on each side. On the arrival of the Queen, the municipal authorities formed in procession and escorted her Majesty to the Burleigh Lodges in the following order:—The clergy, gentry, and inhabitants, four abreast; the members of the council, the magistrates, the mayor with his mace-bearers, and the several clubs and lodges, with their regalia and bands, bringing up the rear. When her Majesty arrived opposite the Burleigh Lodges, the procession filed off on either side of the road.

Of course the town of Stamford itself was in a high state of excitement. The Corporation held a meeting, at which an address was agreed to; and instead of an illumination, there was a subscription for an entertainment to the school children and the poor of Stamford, to which the Marquis of Exeter has given £50. The houses in Stamford, even where the Queen did not pass, were decorated with evergreens and hung with flags. There was an arch thrown across the street, opposite the George Hotel (Whincup's.)

In the evening about 150 of the chief tenants dined at the George, as guests of the Marquis of Exeter. A great number of the tenantry also dined by the Marquis's invitation at the other inns in the town.

At the other boundary of the town, on the way to Burleigh, there was a very beautiful triumphal arch, handsomely decorated and inscribed "Long live the Queen." Of course, the streets were filled with people, and the houses also swarmed with anxious and excited faces. From many of the houses handsome flags were hung, and the windows were decorated with evergreens. Her Majesty's reception here was most enthusiastic. At the boundary of the borough of Stamford, the Mayor and chief members of the Corporation were assembled to receive her Majesty. They formed, together with the trades of the town, carrying banners and different devices, a long procession. They preceded the Royal carriages at a walking pace round by Dr. Arnold's house, and so on towards Burleigh, to the other boundary of the town. The arch here was illuminated.—(Two of these arches, and the corporation procession, are engraved at page 309.)

A few hundred yards beyond this large triumphal arch is the entrance to the magnificent mansion of the Marquis of Exeter. The grand entrance-gate was very handsomely decorated. There was also the preparation for its illumination at night, with the words, "Long live the Queen," and a splendid crown in variegated lamps on each side.—(See page 312.)

ARRIVAL OF HER MAJESTY AND PRINCE ALBERT AT BURGHLEY. 7

A second time, ye ancient halls!
A Queen hath been your guest—
How many a change since first your walls
A monarch did invest!
A blessed page in History's book
Stands 'twixt that day and now,—
But Memory must not pause to look
On it; but let Hope's brow
With her bright star, VICTORIA, beam
And dissipate all gloom—
The present makes the past a dream,
Reverence's in the Tomb,
And nothing lives throughout the land
But one wild joyous song,
In which all bless with heart and hand
Our Queen! may she live long!

W.

THE QUEEN and Prince Albert arrived at Burghley House at half-past four o'clock in the afternoon. They were received by the noble marquis and marchioness, whose guests they are to be. The Marquis of Exeter arrived nearly three-quarters of an hour in advance of her Majesty, having, after meeting her Majesty at Weedon, preceded her Majesty at a rapid pace in order to be in time to receive her at Burghley.

Immediately on her arrival, her Majesty was conducted by the noble host and hostess to the apartments prepared for her reception. Altogether this reception of the Queen in Northamptonshire has been as gratifying as any her Majesty has received in her different progresses. Nothing could exceed the loyalty of the people all along the line. Even the unfavourable state of the weather did not deter the people from assembling, although of course they were not in such numbers as they would have been.

Her Majesty saluted the Marchioness very affectionately on her arrival.

THE BANQUET IN THE GREAT HALL.

At eight o'clock in the evening, a grand banquet was served in the Great Hall. This vast apartment, situated at the south-eastern angle of the princely pile, is 68 feet long, and 30 broad, exclusive of a recess, which is 13 feet by 9. It is lighted by two large windows, one pointed, the other square-headed. It has an open roof of oaken arches, springing from corbels, with handsome pendants. It has been supposed to be older than the greater part of the mansion; but there is nothing in the style to warrant this inference. The Hall is paved with Kelton stone. The chimney-piece is elaborately sculptured in stone, with the arms of the Lord Treasurer Burghley in the centre; and the back of the fire-grate bears the same arms in cast-iron, dated 1571. A good idea may be formed of the magnificence of this Hall, and its superb fittings, from the large engraving at page 313, representing the banquet on Tuesday evening.

Her Majesty sat at the centre of the table, Prince Albert being on her right, and the Marquis of Exeter on her left. On the right of Prince Albert was the Marchioness of Exeter, and on the left of the Marquis Lady Portman. The Duke of Bedford sat on the right of the Marchioness, and Lady Sophia Cecil on his right. Sir Robert Peel sat next Lady Sophia. The Duke of Rutland, Earl Delawarr, the Duchess of Bedford, the Earl of Jersey, Lord Stanley, and Lady Willoughby sat opposite.

The following is a correct list of the company, forty of whom sat down to dinner:—The Queen, Prince Albert, Lady Portman, the Lord Chamberlain, the Master of the Horse, Mr. Anson, Colonel Buckley, Colonel Wylde, the Duke and Duchess of Bedford, the Duke of Rutland, the Marquis of Northampton, the Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter, the Marquis of Granby, Sir R. Peel, the Earl of Aberdeen, Earl Spencer, Lord Stanley, Lord Thomas and Lady Sophia Cecil, Lord and Lady Charles Wellesley, Lord and Lady Willoughby, Lord Lorraine, Mr. Pierrepont, Captain and Mrs. Spencer, Mr. and Lady Caroline Turnour, Mr. and Lady Louisa Finch Hatton, Sir G. Clerk, Sir Henry Dryden, Mr. Maunsell, Mr. Atley, and Mr. O'Brien.

THE LONGER AT BURGHLEY.

LANDELL S. SC.

THE BANQUET IN THE GREAT HALL, ST. BURGHLEY.

In the recess of the bay-window stands a superb wine cooler or cistern of massive silver, weighing 3800 ounces. Upon a sideboard at the south end of the room, beneath a remarkably fine window, ornamented with richly stained glass, representing the family arms and the insignia of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, was a magnificent display of gold plate, some of which was presented to the family by King James II., Queen Anne, and George I.

At the north end of the room, at an elevation of upwards of twelve feet, is the Music Gallery, capable of accommodating about fifty performers, and it is said that there are few rooms in the kingdom more excellently constructed to give effect to musical sounds.

The Hall is lighted by superb Gothic chandeliers, in character with the decorations of the apartment, which are suspended from the roof.

Among the fine pictures upon the walls, is a portrait of Prince Albert, which was only hung up the previous day. The hall was lighted with ten splendid chandeliers.

The band of the Coldstream Guards was stationed in the gallery, and performed several pieces of music.

After dinner, her Majesty retired to the Drawing-room. The band was stationed in one adjoining, and performed various airs.

The Queen entered the dining-room at a quarter past eight o'clock, the band playing the Anthem. The only healths given were "The Queen" (after which the band played the Anthem), and "Prince Albert" (Coburg March).

Her Majesty retired from the dining-room about half-past nine o'clock, and from the drawing-room a quarter before eleven o'clock.

HER MAJESTY'S APARTMENTS.

The gates of the entrance porch are of a highly decorative arabesque pattern of bronze richly gilt, and approached by a flight of semicircular steps, which were covered, as well as the vestibule and the various corridors, with crimson cloth.

All the apartments are exceedingly lofty and of large proportions; those set apart for her Majesty and Prince Albert are on the south side of the edifice, and commanding a series of delightful views over the surrounding country, and immediately in front a sloping lawn and beautiful sheet of water.

Her Majesty's apartments were fitted up in the most costly and recherche style. They are approached by the grand staircase, at the bottom of which are two large and massive bronze vases, and in the centre a bust of Queen Elizabeth. The approach is between four pillars of lofty proportions, the walls being hung with tapestry, and the recesses ornamented with sculptures. At the top of the staircase is the ante-room, and beyond this the Queen's Drawing Room. The suite opens beyond this into the Queen and his Royal Highness' private apartments, all the decorations of which are of the most elaborate and costly description. The fauteuils, ottomans, couches, &c., are of the richest velvet, and the fittings of the dressing-rooms of silver-gilt.

On the ground-floor, at the foot of the grand staircase, is the Break-

(Continued on page 316.)

EVERY BODY'S COLUMN.

WOMAN'S LOVE.

Man knows not love—such love as woman feels.
In him it is a vast devouring flame—
Reckless fed—in its own strength consumed.
In woman's heart it enters step by step,
Conceal'd, disown'd, until its gentler ray
Breathes forth a light, illumining her world.
Man loves not for repose; he seeks the flow'r
To wear it as the victor's triumphal crown;
Whilst woman, when she pleases in her love,
More like the dove, in wondrous constancy,
Watches the nest of her affection, till
'Tis shed upon the tomb of him she loves.

A NEW REAPING MACHINE.

A letter from Warsaw states, that Messieurs Tymczak and Karczynski, engineers of that city, had just invented a reaping machine, which worked admirably, and in less than an hour had cut down an acre of oats, and piled up the straw with as much regularity as if it had been done by the hand. Such a machine, of the largest dimensions, would cost about £200.

OLD WOMEN EXCLUDED FROM PARADISE.

The greatest and best of men (may the Almighty shower on his head the most abundant blessings) sometimes joked, but seldom; and when he allowed a pleasure to escape him, it was sure to be in an allusive and indirect manner, and he never departed from strict truth. It is told of him, that he one day said to an old woman, "At the day of retribution no old woman shall enter Paradise." The old woman, very much troubled, said in a sorrowful tone, "Oh, prophet of God, what faults have we poor old women committed, that we should be deprived of the happiness of entering Paradise?" The elect of God (may all heavenly blessings repose on him) smiled, and withdrawing the robe veil which hid the pearls of his teeth, said, "The Creator, may He be glorified! will make all the old women young again, and will thus introduce them into Paradise."—Peking's Chinese Gleaner.

THE GERMAN THEATRE.

There are altogether 115 German theatres, with 3,375 dramatic performers (1,676 actors and 1,699 actresses), 147 singers (59 male & female), 174 principal dancers, 2,089 orchestral performers. The entire number of persons employed in the German theatres is about 12,769; the most numerous theatres are those of Berlin and Vienna, the former comprising 95, and the latter (the Kärntnerthor theatre) consists of 77 persons. The smallest theatres are that of Marburg, comprising only 13 persons. Besides the singers, and most of the directors and stage managers, to the number of dramatic actors, the whole would amount to about 3,698.

MORAL PRECEPTS OF GUSTAVUS.

Gustavus of Sweden was accustomed to teach moral precepts into his children. On one occasion he said to them, "Be steady in your faith—united amongst yourselves. If you fall in the first, you anger your Maker; if you neglect the second you will fall a prey to man. Make war by compulsion—peace without compulsion. He no longer—the morning hour has gold in its mouth. Remember that the memory of a King ought not to die away with the sound of his funeral bells, but remain in the hearts of the people." In person he was tall and well made, strong, but delicate, and faultless in every respect. His firmness and perseverance were unequalled. He was careful of money, "For," said he, "it costs the sweat and labour of the subject."

AUTUMN.

Then art come on the clouds of the year,
With thy rich flowing robe, and thy quick dashing eye,
Fair regent of earth and the bright azure sky!
And summer is borne on her loam.

To the unnumbered tombs of the past,
Though beauty's tress thy pale brow hath crowned,
The symbol of mourning hath twined it around,
And sad sounds thy voice on the blast.

Though thy cheek marks the eye of the rose,
Like consumption's bright hue is its too vivid bloom,
And o'er thy proud brow sweep the shades of the tomb;
The tear from thy beaming eye flows.

Thou wilt fade like the visions of youth,
Too brilliant—too frail—too indelibly fair
To bloom 'mid the gales of dark sorrow and care,
In the regions of tempest-throrned truth!

HER MAJESTY'S CORRECTION OF LOUIS PHILIPPE'S ENGLISH.

According to a French paper, Louis Philippe in his late visit to England, had made extensive replies to the representations of Portsmouth and Windsor; but having learnt that it was customary to communicate before hand in writing the Royal words addressed to the Lord Mayor of the City of London, he said, laughing, "This time I shall act as a constitutional King; let Mr. Guizot write my answer." The Minister of Foreign Affairs set to work, and then gave the answer to M. de Jarnac to translate. The answer being finished it was sent to the King, who requested Queen Victoria to peruse it and give him her opinion of it. Her Majesty approved of the speech, observing only that there were some words in it that were not quite English. She then took up her pen, and herself corrected it.

THE STONE IN THE NEW HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.

The Holborn quarries, from which the stone for the new Houses of Parliament is procured, and several others that have been recently opened in the neighbourhood, contain about twelve feet of workable stone, in numerous bands from eight inches to two feet thick. This stone is of a light yellowish lemon colour. It is not expensive, being cheaper than Portland stone, and worked as easily; but it does not seem to have been much used at a distance from Bolsover, except in slabs for paving.

ITALIAN STATISTICS.

The commission of statistics of the scientific congress of Milan reported to that body that there are 70 savings banks in Italy, having 40,000,000 deposited. The same commission declares that there are 114 houses of refuge for poor children, where 13,648 children are nourished and educated, at an expense of 470,000*l.*, collected from voluntary contributions. The Papal States are not included in this account.

THE CHINESE DUN.

It is said that the Chinese test, to a fraction, the capacity of a debtor's means, by sending a man to sit in his house and look at him till he pays or is driven to despair.

THE SCOTT MONUMENT.

On Saturday week the topmost stone was placed on Scott's monument at Edinburgh, with appropriate ceremony, thus exhibiting, in its full proportions, and in all the richness of its light and elegant Gothic tracery, a structure which, for beauty of design and imposing effect, is admittedly unsurpassed, if even equalled, by any similar commemorative or ornamental building in Europe. The Union Jack was immediately after hoisted on the summit, where it floated until the close of day. A bottle of brandy was also drawn up, and the first glass dedicated with all solemnity to this masterpiece of architecture, "The Monument to Sir Walter Scott."

GUY FAWKES'S LANTERN.

In the Bodleian Library, Oxford, is yet extant the lantern with which it is said Guy Fawkes intended to perpetrate the blowing up of the House of Lords, on the 5th of November, 1605. It bears an inscription in Latin to that effect, and that it was the gift of Robert Heywood.

THE HOUSE SPARROW.

Some will doubtless smile when they are told that sparrows are, when properly taught, admirable song birds. Taken when young (this is indispensable) from the nest, and brought up under a canopy in fine voice, they have been known not only to equal, but even to surpass, their masters in brilliancy of execution.

SHAKESPEARE'S RESIDENCE.

A correspondent of "Fraser's Magazine," gives the following account of Shakespeare's house at Stratford-on-Avon—"We called out before breakfast to make a rough survey of the place. A man was cleaning a gutter before a small tenement in Henley-street. On looking up we observed a sign-board shooting from the building, with the significant inscription, 'The Immortal Shakespeare was born in this house.' We stood for some time uncovered, and looked reverentially on the birth-place of so great a man. One of the few facts known about the father of the poet is his being married, in 1558, in the sum of 4*l.*, for not keeping clean the gutter in front of his dwelling."

ROYAL ECONOMY.

Frederick the Great, sending a minister to Denmark who complained of the smallness of his salary, and said that he could keep neither an equipage nor a table, the King's remark to him was—"You are a prodigal; you ought to know that it is more healthy to go on foot than it is to go in a carriage; and that, so far as eating is concerned, another man's table is always the best."

THE CHAMELEON.

It is a common delusion to suppose that the food of the chameleon is the air. It lives on more substantial diet; but this supposition may have arisen from the following circumstance:—The lungs are exceedingly voluminous, and these the creature is able to fill with air, so as to puff itself up, and in this state it often remains for hours, without any movement of respiration being perceptible; on exhausting the lungs of the air, the sides of the body fall in, and the frame has a more appearance till the lungs are again inflated, when it becomes suddenly bloated as before.

STATISTICS OF THE BAR.

It appears by an examination of the records of admission to the bar by the four Inns of court—Lincoln's Inn, the Inner Temple, the Middle Temple, and Gray's Inn—that at the present time there are no less than 2243 members of the bar. Of this number, 7 were called there 50 years since, 17 between 45 and 50 years since, 28 from 40 to 45 years ago, 122 from 1804 up to 1834, from 1834 up to 1844 the number is 308. Of those who were called 10 to 20 years since, there are now 703 members of the bar, and of those called during the last ten years, there are no less than 1160 who appear as members of the bar at the present time.

THE PROCESSION ON LORD MAYOR'S DAY.

We repeat the following account of the procession and banquet on Lord Mayor's Day, as, from the lateness of the hour, it could of course only appear in our last edition.

This day (Saturday) being the period so well known as Lord Mayor's Day the City, and particularly the neighbourhood of Guildhall, presented a scene of bustle and interest from an early hour.

The Lord Mayor arrived at Guildhall a few minutes past ten o'clock in his state carriage, drawn by six beautiful bay horses. His lordship was received with loud cheers, intermingled with some hisses. The splendour and chauciness of the state liveries attracted universal attention and admiration.

The late Lord Mayor, Sir William Magnus, Bart., arrived in his private state carriage, drawn by six bays, at 11 o'clock. He was most enthusiastically cheered by the assembled crowd.

The procession having been marshalled, left at twelve o'clock, in the usual order.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

On arriving at Westminster, the Lord Mayor, attended by the late Lord Mayor, the Recorder, the Sheriff, Aldermen T. Wood, Farncombe, and Challis, a few Common Councilmen, and the usual civic authorities, were ushered into court shortly after half-past one o'clock, and were received by a full Court, consisting of the Lord Chief Baron, Mr. Baron Parke, Mr. Baron Gurney, and Mr. Baron Rolfe, all of whom were their scarlet robes.

The Recorder, in introducing Mr. Alderman Gibbs, the Lord Mayor, to the Court, entered into a recapitulation of the offices that gentleman had filled in connection with the City of London for a period of eighteen years.

The Lord Chief Baron, in very high terms, congratulated the Lord Mayor on his election, and expressed a confidence he would discharge the duties he had undertaken to the full and perfect satisfaction of his fellow citizens. The learned Judge also congratulated Sir W. Magnus upon the conclusion of his year of office, and upon the well deserved honours which he carried with him into his retirement.

Proclamation was then made by the officer of the court for Sir William Magnus, the late Lord Mayor, to come forth and render an account of all issues, profits, &c., which had come to his hands in his office of exchequer of the Crown. Sir William Magnus immediately presented himself.

Mr. Baron Parke, (as senior justice baron) administered to him the following oath, the terms of which excited some laughter, in consequence of the reference made to the subject of accounts, the expressions being considered as somewhat appropriately applying to the present Lord Mayor:—

"Sir William Magnus, you, as late mayor and exchequer of the City of London and suburbs of the same, shall swear that you shall yield to her present Majesty a true and faithful account of the issues and profits of your office as exchequer, due to her Majesty, from the 8th day of November, in the seventh year of her said Majesty's reign, until the 8th day of November, in the eighth year of her Majesty's reign—that is to say, for one whole year; and in the same account you shall make a true answer of all felons' goods, outlawed men's goods, waives, strays, and other profits whatsoever, which have come to your hands, or to the hands of any of your deputies or ministers, by reason of your said office of exchequer, or by reason of her said Majesty's prerogative royal; and in the same account you shall charge yourself with all such sums of money as you, or any of your deputies or ministers for you, have levied to her Majesty's use; and furthermore, you shall well and truly behave yourself in yielding the same account, as a true accountant ought to do, without omission or concealment—so help you God."

The usual oath having been administered to the Lord Mayor,

The Recorder then, in the usual form, invited the learned Judges to partake of the entertainment at Guildhall.

The Chief Baron replied that the invitation would be accepted by some of his learned brethren.

THE BANQUET IN THE GUILDHALL.

The guests began to arrive at half-past three o'clock; the interval between which time and the hour of dinner, half past six, being agreeably occupied with presentations in the Drawing-room (Council Chamber), and identifying the more distinguished guests as they passed through the hall. The presentations were numerous: the Lady Mayors wore a superb broadened white satin dress; a crimson velvet robe; head-dress, feathers, and diamonds. The Lord Mayor was in excellent spirits, and, with the Sheriff (Aldermen Hunter and Sidney), received their guests very courteously. The recognitions of the public characters were "few and far between." Sir James Graham was received with loud applause.

At length, the dinner-hour arrived. The Lord Mayor, with his distinguished guests, made the début of the Hall; the Count St. Aulaire leading in the Lady Mayors. The Lord Mayor and the Sheriff were received with unqualified approbation. Grace having been said, the work of reflection commenced: the dinner (by Messrs. Gurney and Rolfe, of the London Coffee-house) was both abundant and excellent; the supply of wine was unparelleled, especially Champagne. The host of applicants for the barons of best continued so that they were not the more symbols of old English feasting, but the demand for them indicated a sympathy with Young England. The appearance of the hall, throughout the evening, was very brilliant; the superb cut-glass star, at the west end, was especially admired. The vast apartment was tastefully decorated with armour and flags, arranged in picturesque groups, and the salonnette reminded us of the Duke of Wellington's remark, that "it is the noblest room in Europe." Still, it has the disadvantage of being extremely ill-adapted for hearing. The conversations being dispersed, the more intellectual enjoyment of the evening commenced; but, such was the lack of science, and so adversely were the company throughout the evening, that the speakers were rarely heard beyond the upper tables. Nevertheless, a spirit of unanimity pervaded the whole company, and the west responded to the east without any need to the topic of approbation.

On the removal of the cloth, "Non Nobis Domine" was sung by the professional ladies and gentlemen.

After the usual loyal and patriotic toasts had been drunk with the greatest enthusiasm.

The Lord Mayor proposed "The health of the greatest of living warriors, the Duke of Wellington," which was received with tremendous cheering.

The Lord Mayor next proposed the health of the late Lord Mayor, for which Sir W. Magnus returned thanks, during my year of office, not unworthily of its responsibilities, and transferred it unhesitatingly to his present possessor." (Loud cheers.)

The Lord Mayor next proposed "The health of the Count St. Aulaire, and the Foreign Ambassadors."

The Count St. Aulaire returned thanks in French. His speech consisted of some sensible general observations in favour of peace, but he alluded more particularly to the subject in reference to the visit of Louis Philippe. The Count said:—

"Many among you heard from the lips of my sovereign the sentiments which he entertains towards England, and those which your reception inspired in him. It is in the name of all my fellow citizens that I thank you to-day, gentlemen, for that reception. Yes, gentlemen, all Frenchmen, whatever may be their opinions or their position in society, have felt deeply, and they will long remember, the kind sentiments expressed by you towards the representatives of the French nation. With the people of antiquity hospitality was a religion. In our own days, its rights, its duties, and the sentiments which it inspires, have lost nothing of their potency. The people of England and France have cause to rejoice in seeing the sovereigns of the two most powerful nations in the world become the hosts of each other. They may consider it as one guarantee the more in favour of general peace."

The Lord Mayor having proposed the health of Sir James Graham, the right honourable baronet acknowledged the compliment, and proposed, "The health of the Lord Mayor of the City of London." (Three times three, and one cheer more.)

The Lord Mayor, in returning thanks, said—"My lords, ladies, and gentlemen, I feel deeply indebted for the very kind manner in which Sir James Graham has done me the honour to propose my name to your notice. I feel on the present occasion that I ought to speak with deep humility. It becomes not him who putteth on the harness to boast like him who putteth it off. All I can say is that all my anxiety shall be to endeavour firmly to discharge the duties of Lord Mayor." (Loud cheers.)

The company having left the dinner-tables, tea and coffee were served; and within half an hour sets of quadrilles were formed in the council-chamber, and were kept up with spirit for some time.

THE THEATRES.

DRURY-LANE.

Two occurrences worthy of record have taken place at this house during the past week. The first was the visit of her Majesty on Monday, when Anber's "Syrén" was played. The Queen evidently wished to remain unnoticed, but the audience, with more loyalty than good taste, would not let the opera proceed until the National Anthem had been sung, when her Majesty graciously acknowledged their hearty cheering.

On Tuesday, Mr. Balfe's opera of "The Bohemian Girl" was performed for the hundredth time—a circumstance which the bills of the evening stated to be unprecedented in the annals of British opera. The house was very full; the opera, beautifully performed in every department, never went better; and at the conclusion, Mr. Balfe, who conducted upon the occasion, was loudly called for. A wreath of laurel, with small silver shamrocks, was thrown to him. It was the intention of the management to have presented him with a testimonial upon this occasion, but the list was not filled up in time.

LYCEUM.

A very pleasant divertissement, as it was termed in the bills, was introduced between the pieces at this house on Monday evening, and to judge from its cordial reception, met with the unqualified approbation of the audience. First, there was the marching and evolutions of the female warriors from the burlesque of "Aladdin;" then a clever pas de deux by Madies, Louise and Clara, the former of whom appeared during the last season at the Opera; next two of our native artists, Miss Farebrother and Miss James, danced a very dashing Polka; and lastly, the "Bolero de Cadix" was gone through by the French ladies above mentioned. The whole affair formed an agreeable interlude, and gave a little breathing-time to the industrious usual performers of this establishment.

PRINCESS.

On Saturday evening a new ballet, called "The Enchanted Bell," founded on that version of the story of "Aladdin," already known to the English stage, in which a bell—not a lamp—is the magical instrument for summoning the assistant genius, was produced at this theatre. Madie, Caroline Rousset, a clever dancer, with more power and vigour than elegance or finish, plays the principal character, and has made quite a hit by the brilliancy of her achievements. The other Roussets also deserve a favourable mention; and Miss Marshall, as the Genius, has a character which she plays with charming vivacity. The excellent performance of this young lady in "Don Cesar de Bazan" proves that she has intelligence as well as physical dexterity. Mr. Gilbert merely has to appear in an isolated pas des trois. In the scenic department a great reform appears to have been effected, by the engagement of Mr. Beverley, who has given some beautiful paintings in place of the dabs occasionally seen here.

On Wednesday a comedy was brought out, called "The Widow Bewitched," a translation (of course) of a French piece, "Le Mari de la Veuve." We think we have seen another version, some years back, of the same piece. The plot, which our space will not allow us to detail, is smart and lively. There are several excellent situations, and the "tag," as it is termed, told admirably. The dénouement having arrived, the lady appears about to inflict a long story of explanation upon the audience, when a servant announces a dinner, and the narration is postponed until the dessert. Mrs. Stirling played the supposed widow, Mrs. Lorrimer, to perfection; and Mr. Walter Lacy was, as usual, lively, bustling, and gay, as the young barrister. Mr. Granby, Miss Noel, and Miss Honner, also performed with their accustomed care. The piece was entirely successful.

OLYMPIC.

This house having been thoroughly redecorated and cleaned—which in good truth it needed—was once more opened on Monday evening, "under the direction of Miss Davenport," and with the charitable intention of providing a home for the legitimate drama.

After an opening address, somewhat confusedly delivered by Mr. Rayner (in place of the fair lessee, whose province it was to have done so), "Romeo and Juliet" was performed, the young lady playing the heroine. Miss Davenport was, we believe, formerly known to the London playgoers as an "infant phenomenon;" since then she has been playing with success in America and the West Indies. Her acting on Monday was careful and intelligent; she possesses a pleasing expressive face and good stage figure, but lacks passion and energy sufficient to assume any very high position. She was, however, applauded throughout by a very full house, and loudly called for at the end. Romeo met with a fine burly iron-lunged representative in Mr. Hudson Kirby, a gentleman whose name we remember to have seen in various "statements" connected with some squabble at one of the over-the-water houses; and Mercutio was played by Mr. Roxby, who was lately at the City Theatre. It was judiciously performed, but the actor's voice is against him. None of the other characters call for especial remark; the greater part of them being below mediocrity. A farce called "A Cup of the Old Block," in which Mr. Rayner appeared, followed; and we escaped before the hackneyed and worn-out "Don Cesar de Bazan" concluded the entertainments.

We cannot predict any great success to this new management. Because Mr. Phelps and Mrs. Warner have wrought so remarkable a change in the fortunes of Sadler's Wells, by the careful introduction of the works of our great dramatists—because Mrs. Keeley's name as the directress of the Lyceum so turned the destinies of that establishment—managements far inferior in judgment and component parts have imagined that like success would arrive by pursuing the same track of placing a lady's name at the head of the bills, or talking about "a home for the drama." This dreary imitation cannot be too much deprecated. The total failure of the "City National," a few weeks back, proved that the path was anything but a safe one, without a good company. At the same time, the legitimate drama loses far more than it gains by such dismal attempts to represent it. Any person watching the mass of the audience who filled the Olympic gallery on Monday evening would readily have perceived how little their sympathies were excited by the tragedy; on the contrary, when a Mr. Flexmore performed a "comic dance," he was, to their thinking, far beyond Shakespeare, or any other great dramatist that ever lived. We would recommend Miss Davenport, or any one else to whom the management is confided, not to make the legitimate drama the life-buoy of the establishment, for if such is the case, the ship will be sure to founder.

STRAND.

There is something singularly original and funny in the writings of Mr. Gilbert Allcock. No one like him can throw an air of ridicule round a popular topic so quietly, or toss the English language about into such a laughable confusion of puns and allusions. His pathos is remarkable; he can sink anything, albeit, certainly not by weight; and he makes the creations of romance and poetry—spirits, kings, and lovers—always appear intimately acquainted with the most common-place methods of living, or the direst destitution. Unpaid water-rates, cheap ready-made clothes, "tremendous sacrifices," and front parlours or third-pairs back, are the subjects which occupy their minds; and these antitheses are sad provocatives of your laughter. A burlesque from the pen of this gentleman, assisted by Mr. Lemon, was produced here on Monday, founded on the story of Undine, and called "The Knight and the Sprite; or, the Cold Water Cure." The story was pretty closely followed, although in the extravagant style; and the dialogue so charged with jokes, that the audience had scarcely time to laugh at them, or even to applaud, except at the fall of the curtain, when they did so most lustily. Mrs. Walter Lacy and Mrs. Montgomerie appeared as two dashing young gentlemen, speaking every word set down for them with proper emphasis—a rare thing in the majority of burlesque performers. A very pretty young lady, with a very sweet voice, Miss Bromley, was the Undine; and Mr. Hall, as a water-sprite with webbed hands and feet, imitating O. Smith and Wilkinson, and singing comical American banjo melodies, deserves the warmest thanks of the authors for his clever acting. The other ladies and gentlemen deserve commendation, especially Mr. Rouer and Mrs. Melville. The piece has been put upon the stage with good care; and the scenery and mechanical effects are the piece. We may mention a triple pas de Foudre as one of the best. It was announced for repetition amidst loud applause, and will, we doubt not, prove attractive.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Are the palmy days of pagantry to be accounted among the things that have clean departed from the land? And was it for a sign and a warning that the elements arrayed themselves against its latest passage attempted by the elvish of Eglinton? Else would it not have been a dainty concert for the Lord of Burghley to have fêted Victoria, as he of Leicester did Elizabeth at Kenilworth? Who so truly could have mounted a grand Olympic spectacle, graced with the fairest of British couriers, and furnished with all befitting their nature; and would it not have been a characteristic show to set before a Queen of these isles? To be sure the weather was atrocious, and if the clouds are not lost to all sense of propriety, they must feel heartily ashamed of having thrust themselves into the way of the sun, and prevented his offering the royal guests a warm welcome to the north. Truth to tell, festivities, of freedom, are not in the ascendant just now. If there be one month of the twelve more shrouded of Duns than another—it is November. Mountain sport is at an end, for unless men were Polar bears they cannot at this season tolerate the Highlands—even the partridge of the valley is as fugitive and unsustainable as hope. Pleasant-shooting, indeed, may be carried on by those who can command the necessary well-stocked manors, keepers with relays of guns, and footmen with relays of carriages—but it's not every one who can go to Cornhill, as the proverb says. In short the only popular fun for the furiously in woodcraft, at this moment, is to be met with in the vicinity of the metropolis, where the Royal hounds furnish the citizens with a pretext for riding over each other, and the proprietors of the kitchen gardens. We see the loyalist people on the face of creation, or the occupiers of the soil in the Harrow country would long since have purchased Captain Warner's combustible care for stag-hunting. Fancy a lillous nabob retired for rural ease and undisturbance to his villa at Pinet, treated, during breakfast, to a view of three hundred distracted fellows upon horseback—one half chasing across the meadow, where his daughters gather their earliest violets, and the other stuck fast in his favourite hedge, the screen of lawns, that turns his spring-tide to fragrance. You suppose this an extreme case?—thelast stag at whose capture the penitent penner of this paragraph assisted, was secured in a lady's bonnet, standing at bay on a pink satin ottoman.

This, however, is the affair of the outlanders, those thick-and-thin patriots who take jiggering about their lawns and gardens with a philosophy which would have astonished a Stoic. Our office is to deal with things as we find them, and, since there is such a paradise of the hunter of deer—such a nook remaining from the Golden Age—to point out its geography to all who may contemplate a pilgrimage thither. The district hunted by her Majesty's hounds is now, by means of the Great Western Railway, within two hours of every Londoner's fast-room, a noble apartment, and very magnificently furnished. The staircase (engraved at page 316) is remarkable for its elaborately decorated vaulted roof; its pendants correspond with those of the timber roof of the Great Hall.

CURIOUS STAIRCASE, AT BURGHLEY.

(Continued from page 313.)

On Wednesday morning the Queen rose at an early hour, and breakfasted with the Prince Consort in her private apartment.

Before taking breakfast, however, her Majesty, accompanied by Prince Albert, proceeded to the private chapel of the mansion (where the other guests had already assembled) to perform her morning devotions.

The chapel is a beautiful apartment, ornamented by a variety of superb carving, by Gibbons. Arranged on each side are ten antique figures, as large as life, in bronze.

It is asserted that Queen Elizabeth, when a visitor at Burghley, regularly attended divine service in this chapel, and that it was her custom to place herself on the left side, nearest the altar, which has ever since been distinguished by the appellation of Queen Elizabeth's seat.

STAMFORD, Thursday.

Throughout the whole of yesterday the rain continued to fall without intermission until nearly four o'clock, when it ceased, and the evening became fine. Her Majesty, in consequence of the unfavourable state of the weather, did not leave the house, but devoted the day to inspecting the splendid collection of pictures, one of the first in the kingdom, belonging to her noble host. Among those which especially attracted her Majesty's attention was a painting of the "Virgin and Child," by Castiglione, which was presented to Brownlow, Earl of Exeter, by Gangannelli, Pope Clement XIV., in 1774, under somewhat singular circumstances. His lordship being in the streets of Rome when the Pontiff was passing in procession on a public occasion, joined in the adoration of the Catholics, which so forcibly impressed his Holiness that he wished to show some token of respect to so polite a Protestant nobleman. Shortly afterwards, the Earl amusing himself at the Vatican, expressed his admiration of this picture, and observed he had none of the works of Castiglione in his collection at Burghley. This information no sooner reached the ears of the Pope, than he ordered the picture to be conveyed at an early hour the next morning to his lordship's lodgings. A "Salvator Mundi," a chef d'œuvre of Carlo Dolce, and the "Death of Seneca," by L. Giordano, and also a fine picture of "Adam and Eve," by L. Caracci, recently added to the collection by the present marquis, also engaged her Majesty's special attention. When it is considered, that in the collection at Burghley there are paintings by Titian, Corregio, Raphael, Claude Lorraine, Maratta, Spagnoletto, Rembrandt, Caravaggio, Rubens, Guido, Domenichino, Murillo, Baptiste, L. Da Vinci, and numerous others, it may be readily imagined that her Majesty, who is a connoisseur in paintings, found ample subjects of amusement.

Her Majesty was conducted over nearly the whole of the magnificent rooms in the house by her noble host, and afterwards went to look at the kitchen, which is one of the most ancient and curious apartments in the house. The whole of the decorations and arrangements in her Majesty's own suite of apartments have been much praised by her Majesty. They have been fitted up by E. Browning, Esq., his lordship's architect, who also designed the triumphal arches so much admired by the Queen on her entry to Burghley.

This morning the weather was remarkably fine, and formed an agreeable contrast to that of yesterday. Immediately after breakfast, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by the Marquis of Salisbury, Sir Robert Peel, Lord Stanley, and the Marquis of Granby, went out to shoot in the preserves at Butlands, adjoining the park. Her Majesty intends to drive out this afternoon, and her carriages are ordered to be in readiness at one o'clock. It is stated, that she intends to drive as far as Exton, the seat of the Earl and Countess of Gainsborough, to pay them a passing visit, but nothing certain is known. The Mayor and Corporation of Stamford are to present their address to her Majesty this evening; but the time is not yet fixed. It was generally thought yesterday that Prince Albert would go out with the hounds, which meet a few miles from Burghley this morning, and in consequence of which there was a greater field than has been known for many a day—many of the hunters coming from a considerable distance.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S STATE BED.

THE CHRISTENING IN THE CHAPEL.

Oh! happy infant! blest in each degree,
The child of wealth and pow'r,
The promised care of Royalty
Pledg'd at this sacred hour,
Thy dawning on the world has been most bright,
May'st thou live through a joyous day,
And when thy night
For night must come, will steal thee hence away,
Let it be calm—serene—
As ever clos'd a soft Italian scene,
When in tramontane skies
The sun sinks down to make more glorious rise!
Oh! bless thee, Babe! and her who gives thee name
And both alike be consecrate to Fame!

W.

The ceremony of christening the infant daughter of the Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter, took place yesterday evening at six o'clock, and was performed by the Bishop of Peterborough, assisted by the Rev. H. Adley. It has been stated that her Majesty was to have stood sponsor to the infant; this, however, is incorrect, the sponsors at the christening being His Royal Highness Prince Albert, Hon. Lady Middleton, and Lady Sophia Cecil. Her Majesty attended at the ceremony, and occupied the seat in which it is stated Queen Elizabeth usually sat, when attending divine service at Burghley. The infant was named after her Most Gracious Majesty. The Queen appeared to be very much interested in the ceremony. After it had concluded, her Majesty kissed the young godchild of her Royal Consort. The child was dressed in a white satin slip, over which was white muslin, trimmed with elegant point lace. Her cap was of silk, and also trimmed with point lace. When brought into the chapel the infant was fast asleep in its nurse's arms. Immediately after the ceremony, Prince Albert presented to his little god-daughter a gorgeous gold cup, with the inscription—"To Lady Victoria Cecil, from her godfather Albert." The whole of the nobility and other guests of the Marquis attended the ceremony, which took place in the chapel, a beautiful apartment, 42 feet long, 35 wide, and 18 high, ornamented by festoons of fruit and flowers, carved by Gibbons. The ceiling is of fretwork, and the sides are wainscoted half-way. The pulpit, desk, and chairs, are of mahogany, and the communion-table and rails of cedar—all modern. Arranged on the side are the antique figures, as large as life, in imitation of bronze, standing on altars and bearing lamps in their hands.

There is a large ante-room attached to the west end, and forming part of the Chapel, which is 31 feet 6 inches in length, and 24 feet in breadth; it is wainscoted from the ground to the ceiling, and fitted with open seats, for the use of servants.

At eight o'clock the dinner took place in the large dining-hall, as on the previous day. Besides her Majesty, Prince Albert, the Royal suite, and the noble host and hostess, there were present—Sir R. Peel, Sir J. Graham, the Duke of Rutland, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Marquis of Granby, the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord and Lady Gainsborough, Lord and Lady Aboyne, Lord Stanley, Lord Brooke, Lord Lovaine, Lord Alford and Lady Marianne, Lord Thomas and Lady Sophia Cecil, Lord and Lady Charles Wellesley, the Bishop of Peterborough and Mrs. Davys, Captain and Mrs. Spencer, Mr. Pierrepont, Sir George Clerk, Mr. Adley, Sir John Trollope, Sir William and Lady Middleton, and Lord Burghley.

In the evening, as soon as the christening was over, there was a display of fireworks in the park, and the bridge across the lake was brilliantly illuminated, as also were the lodge and the triumphal arches.

THE STATE BEDS.

Burghley is sumptuously furnished with "State Beds"—(see page 316)—and one of the most superb of them is in "Queen Elizabeth's Bed-room," in the western first floor of the mansion. This state bed has hangings of green velvet on a ground of gold tissue; and a set of chairs with covered seats of the same manufacture. The room is hung with tapestry, the subjects being Actæon and Diana, Bacchus and Ariadne, and Acis and Galatea. Queen Elizabeth is stated to have occupied the above state bed on her visit to her Lord High Treasurer.

The State Bed fitted up for her Majesty on the late visit is altogether in a different style from the Elizabethan meuble. The carving is of very elegant design, and the walls of the apartment are hung with choice paintings.

The arrangement and decoration of her Majesty's apartments have been designed and executed, with great taste, skill, and convenience.

In one of the northern rooms, known as "the Black Bed-chamber," is an ancient state-bed of black satin, superbly embroidered with flowers, and lined with gold colour; the whole of which has recently been restored by Miss Graham, and is an exquisite specimen of needlework. This room is hung with fine old tapestry; over the chimney are some of Gibbons's carvings; and the windows are beautifully painted.

HER MAJESTY'S STATE BED.

The following addresses from the Corporation of Stamford to her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert have been presented.

TO HER MAJESTY'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.
We, the mayor, aldermen, burgesses, clergy and other ministers, and the inhabitants at large of your Majesty's ancient and loyal borough of Stamford, most humbly and respectfully solicit permission to approach your Majesty.

We feel that we cannot adequately express the deep sense which we entertain of your Majesty's condescension in honouring Stamford with your presence, and we desire most gratefully to acknowledge the distinguished privilege accorded to us of thus conveying to your Majesty the assurance of our devoted attachment to your Majesty's sacred person, family, crown, and dignity.

That your Majesty's life may be long preserved for the happiness of your faithful subjects, that your reign may be distinguished by the continued glory and increasing prosperity of this great country, and that a gracious Providence may visit your Majesty and your Royal Consort with every personal and domestic blessing, is our most sincere and earnest prayer.

Given under the common seal of the said borough the 12th day of November, in the eighth year of your Majesty's reign.

TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT.
We, the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses, clergy and other ministers, and inhabitants at large, of the borough of Stamford, beg to approach your Royal Highness with the tribute of our unfeigned respect.

As the faithful and devoted subjects of our Queen, we feel that we cannot but most thankfully acknowledge the goodness of Divine Providence, in uniting her Majesty to a consort so calculated to promote her happiness.

The personal qualities which distinguish your Royal Highness, while they add lustre to your position, have greatly endeared your Royal Highness to the British people, and we rejoice in the opportunity thus specially afforded us of testifying the admiration which we, in common with the rest of the people of this realm, entertain for your character and station.

That every blessing may attend your Royal Highness, is our fervent trust and prayer.

Given under the common seal of the said borough, the 12th day of November, in the eighth year of her Majesty's reign.

"THE COTTAGER'S DAUGHTER" AT BURGHLEY.

In the Billiard-room, at Burghley, hangs a large picture, from the pencil of Lawrence, to which is attached a romantic interest. The circumstances are narrated as follows:—

The present Marquis of Exeter's father was married three times: first, to the only daughter and heiress of Thomas Vernon, Esq., which marriage was dissolved by act of Parliament; secondly, to Sarah Hoggins ("the cottager's daughter"); and thirdly, to a daughter of Peter Burrell, Esq. By the second marriage there were three children, viz.—Lady Sophia, who died in Nov. 1823, after marrying the Right Hon. Henry Manvers Pierrepont; Brownlow, the present and second Marquis; and Lord Thomas Cecil. The visitors to Burghley generally request to be shown the above picture, known as "The Cottager's Daughter." It contains three portraits—the late Marquis, Countess Sarah, and Lady Sophia; and the following history of it appears in the "Guide to Burghley."—"Sarah Hoggins was the second wife of Henry, afterwards Earl and Marquis of Exeter, to whom she was married October 3, 1791; she died January 18, 1797, aged 24 years. The Earl died in 1804. The amiable woman whose virtues gave a lustre to the title of Countess of Exeter, and who died lamented by all who knew her, has something so uncommonly interesting in the history of her life, that a detailed sketch cannot but be acceptable to every reader of sensibility. When the late Earl was a minor, he married a lady from whom he was afterwards divorced. After the separation had taken place, the Earl (his uncle) advised him to retire into the country for some time, and pass as a private gentleman. Mr. Cecil accordingly bent his course into a remote part of Shropshire; and fixing his residence at an inn in a small village, he amused himself there for some months, passing by the name of Jones. He took a dislike to this situation, and sought out a farm-house where he might board and lodge. Several families refused to receive him, but at length he found a situation which answered his purpose; and in consideration of his liberal offers, and the knowledge of his possessing money, a farmer fitted him up rooms for his accommodation. Here he continued to reside for about two years; but time hanging heavy on his hands, he purchased some land, on which he built himself a house. The farmer, at whose house Mr. Cecil resided, had a daughter about 17 years of age, whose rustic beauties threw at an infinite distance all that he had ever beheld in the circle of fashion. Although placed in a humble sphere, Mr. Cecil perceived that her beauty would adorn, and her virtue shed a lustre on the most elevated situation. He, therefore, frankly told the cottagers that he was desirous of marrying their daughter, and the celebration of their nuptials was accordingly consummated. Shortly afterwards, the news arrived of his uncle's death, when he found it necessary to repair to town. Mr. Cecil (now Earl of Exeter), taking his wife with him, set out on his journey, and called at the seats of several noblemen, at which places, to the great astonishment of his wife (now, of course, a Countess), he was welcomed in the most friendly manner. At length they arrived at Burghley, where they were welcomed with acclamations of joy. As soon as he had settled his affairs, the Earl of Exeter returned to Shropshire, discovered his rank to his wife's father and mother, put them into the house he had built there, and settled on them an income of £700 per annum. He afterwards took the Countess with him to London, induced her to the fashionable world, where she was respected, admired, and adored, until it pleased the Great Dispenser of events to call the spirit of life to a more lasting region of happiness." In Shropshire, Mr. Cecil represented himself to be a landscape painter. Upon the above interesting subject, Mr. Alfred Tennyson (a son of the late Rev. Dr. Tennyson, rector of Somersby, Lincolnshire, and nephew of the Right Hon. Charles Tennyson d'Eyncourt, formerly M.P. for Stamford), has produced the following beautiful ballad-form composition:—

THE INNER COURT, BURGHLEY.

THE LORD OF BURGHLEY.

In her ear he whispers gaily,
"If my heart by signs can tell,
Maiden, I have watched thee daily,
And I think thou lovest me well."
She replies, in accents fainter,
"There is none I love like thee."
He is but a landscape painter,
And a village maiden she.
He to lips, that fondly foster,
Presses his without reproot;
Leads her to the village altar,
And they leave her father's roof.
"I can make no marriage present;
Little can I give my wife,
Love will make our cottage pleasant,
And I love thee more than life."
They by parks and lodges going,
See the lordly castles stand;
Summer woods about them blowing,
Made a murmur in the land.

From deep thought himself he rouses,
Says to her that loves him well,
"Let us see these handsome houses,
Where the wealthy nobles dwell."
So she goes by him attended,
Hears him lovingly converse,
Sees whatever fair and splendid
Lay betwixt his home and hers;
Parks with oak and chestnut shady,
Parks and order'd gardens great,
Ancient homes of lord and lady,
Built for pleasure and for state.
All he shows her makes him dearer;
Evermore she seems to gaze
On that cottage growing nearer,
Where they twain will spend their days.
O but she will love him truly!
He shall have a cheerful home;
She will order all things duly,
When beneath his roof they come.

Thus her heart rejoices greatly,
Till a gateway she discerns,
With ancestral bearings stately
And heraldic gate she turns;
Sees a mansion more majestic
Than all those she saw before,
Many a gallant gay domestic
Beats before him at the door.
And they speak in gentle murmur,
When they answer to his call,
While he trends with footstep firmer,
Leading on from hall to hall.
As, while now she wonders blindly,
Nods the meaning can divine,
Proudly turns he round and kindly,
"All of this is mine and thine."
Here he lives in state and bounty,
Lord of Burghley, fair and free;
Not a lord in all the county
Is so great a lord as he.
All at once the colour flushes
Her sweet face from brow to chin;
As it were with shame she blushes,
And her spirit changed within.
Then her countenance all over
Pale again as death did prove;
But he clasp'd her like a lover,
And he cheered her soul with love.
So she strove against her weakness,
Though at times her spirit sank;

Shaped her heart with women's meekness
To all the duties of her rank,
And a gentle consort made he,
And her gentle mind was such,
That she grew a noble lady,
And the people loved her much.
But a trouble weigh'd upon her,
And perplex'd her night and morn,
With the burden of an honour
Unto which she was not born.
Faint she grew, and ever fainter,
As she murmur'd, "Oh, that he
Were once more that landscape painter,
Which did win my heart from me!"
So she drooped and drooped before him,
Fading slowly from his side;
Three fair children first she bore him,
Then before her time she died.
Weeping, weeping, late and early,
Walking up and pacing down,
Deeply mourned the Lord of Burghley,
Barleigh-house by Stamford town.
And he came to look upon her,
And he look'd at her and said,
"Bring the dress, and put it on her,
That she wore when she was wed."
Then her people, softly treading,
Bore to earth her body, dress'd
In the dress that she was wed in,
That her spirit might have rest.

THE MARKETS.

COAL MARKET.—(Friday.)—In consequence of the strong adverse sales the arrivals of English, and indeed, all other coals, up to the market this week have been small. The show of what is known as the "best" coal is small, and the demand for that article is in a sluggish state, at least for the time being. For the best fire coals, the inquiry was somewhat active. In other parcels there was nothing doing. No little barley and malt were offered, but the sales were unusually quiet. Oats, beans, and peas were sold at very high prices.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

WHEAT.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

GRAIN.—Wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Irish wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Foreign wheat, 1000; barley, 2000; oats, 200 quarters. Malt, 2000 quarters.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, of St. Vincent Lodge, in the County of Bedford, G.C.B., and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The TRANSPORTATION OF PROTEUS will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties. The PROTEUSCOPE, and other novelties, will be illustrated by the PROTEUSCOPE, and in the evening, and continued, with other Novelties.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

It is now stated that the anxiously wished-for brevet will take place in January next.

The Royal steam-yacht Victoria and Albert, Capt. Lord A. Fitz Clarence, has been taken into dock at Portsmouth for further alterations. All her magnificent furniture has been landed, and her Senior Lieutenant, Tringham, is promoted to be Commander, and succeeded by Lieut. Hobson, who will have charge of the brig Neptune, 10, fitted for Channel service.

The steamer Veneria, Commander Ommanney, recently arrived from the Mediterranean, will be paid off at Woolwich on Tuesday, at which port the new steamship Rattler, awaits being commissioned, being quite ready for the post.

The Cornwallis, 72, Captain Richards, having struck the flag of Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, is gone to Plymouth, there to be dismantled and paid off.

The Countess de Sonnaz, consort of the Grand Chamberlain of his Majesty the King of Sardinia, died recently at Turin. The Noble Countess's death was occasioned by a most shocking and lamentable occurrence. The Countess, while engaged in searching for some article in a cabinet in her boudoir, by an unfortunate accident shook the pane of furniture, which overbalanced, fell on the Countess, and crushed her to death on the spot.

A letter from Tangiers of the 30th ult. mentions a report that Abdel-Kader, after having taken refuge at Melilla, one of the Spanish presidios on the coast of Morocco, had withdrawn to the south, to avoid the execution of the orders communicated to him by the Emperor.

It appears by a letter from Berlin of the 3rd, that the project of a canal from Sweden to the Baltic Sea, by which vessels which now pass from Finland to Helsingborg and pay the sound duties, would avoid that tax, is seriously contemplated.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Advertisements cannot be received after Eight o'clock on Thursday Evening.

THEATRE ROYAL, COVENT GARDEN.—M. JULIEN'S ANNUAL SERIES OF CONCERTS.—M. JULIEN has the honor to announce that his Annual Series of Concerts commences on FRIDAY, Nov. 16, 1844. The programme of the Theatre Royal, Covent Garden, having long placed their splendid theatre entirely at M. Julien's disposal, allowed him thereby an opportunity of testing the attention of his Entertainment in a building of greatly increased dimensions. That opportunity having been secured with the most complete success, it is with feelings of great satisfaction M. Julien is enabled to state that he has entered into a new arrangement, and that the present series of Concerts will also be held at that National Entertainment. M. Julien has composed an entirely new Quadrille, and has also arranged the large additional display of an entirely new Quadrille. This includes a most elaborate arrangement of Quadrilles, and a new and original Ballet, to which was awarded the first prize at the late Meeting of the Académie. The March from the Orchestra of ATHENS, by Beethoven, performed (except at the Philharmonic Concerts), for the first time in this country. NEW OVERTURE TO KING LEAR, by Beethoven, performed at the Concerts of the Académie Royale at Paris, with greatest success. (First time in this country.)

The Waltzes, Quadrilles, Galops, and Polkas, composed by M. Julien and Herr Kopp and performed at the Nobility's Assembly during the last season, including the Tante and the Bride of Venice Quadrilles, the Quadrilles of the Quadrilles, and the Butterfly Waltzes, also the New Fast Horn Galop, composed and performed by Herr Kopp.

A NEW GRAND FANTASIA, composed by Rich. Albert, and founded on Eugene's celebrated romance of "The Wandering Jew."

The Programme will be changed every Evening, and arrangements made so that two or more Novelties will always perform.

Notwithstanding the short period to which the present series of Concerts is unfortunately limited, M. Julien has determined to preserve the general completeness and excellence of his entertainment in every department, and has therefore secured the large additional display of an entirely new Quadrille. This includes a most elaborate arrangement of Quadrilles, and a new and original Ballet, to which was awarded the first prize at the late Meeting of the Académie.

The March from the Orchestra of ATHENS, by Beethoven, performed (except at the Philharmonic Concerts), for the first time in this country. NEW OVERTURE TO KING LEAR, by Beethoven, performed at the Concerts of the Académie Royale at Paris, with greatest success. (First time in this country.)

The Waltzes, Quadrilles, Galops, and Polkas, composed by M. Julien and Herr Kopp and performed at the Nobility's Assembly during the last season, including the Tante and the Bride of Venice Quadrilles, the Quadrilles of the Quadrilles, and the Butterfly Waltzes, also the New Fast Horn Galop, composed and performed by Herr Kopp.

A NEW GRAND FANTASIA, composed by Rich. Albert, and founded on Eugene's celebrated romance of "The Wandering Jew."

The Programme will be changed every Evening, and arrangements made so that two or more Novelties will always perform.

Notwithstanding the short period to which the present series of Concerts is unfortunately limited, M. Julien has determined to preserve the general completeness and excellence of his entertainment in every department, and has therefore secured the large additional display of an entirely new Quadrille. This includes a most elaborate arrangement of Quadrilles, and a new and original Ballet, to which was awarded the first prize at the late Meeting of the Académie.

AIR GUNS AND CANES.—An entirely new and further improved assortment of these portable and efficient weapons, now being made by HILL, Jun., for killing rabbits, hares, foxes, &c., with ball; small birds with shot, &c., with hares, &c. We particularly invite inspection and trial on the premises, of the recently invented, &c. Each diameter, under 14th weight.

OLD GILDING.—Lacquers, Silver, and Bronze, are rendered equal to new by UPTON'S PATENT DETERGENTS.—Tremble men's sparkling the surface, and expense only a few pence for the largest gilt frame. Fly spots are at once removed. Gold detergent, 2s. 6d.; a bottle; lacquer, silver, and bronze, 1s. 6d.; a bottle. All are innocuous and infallible.—Old, Cassin, and Lamp Washhouse, 25, George street, Hanover square, and 65, Brompton street, City.

LESSONS IN MILLINERY AND DRESSMAKING

Nearly Ready, in two vols. 8vo. 2s.
FLOWER, FRUIT, AND THORN PIECES; or, the Married Life, Death, and Wedding of the Ancient of the Poor, Firmian Starveland. By JEAN PAUL FRIEDRICH RICHTER. Translated from the German, by EDWARD HENRY NOEL. London: Published by WILLIAM SMITH, 113, Fleet-street.

ILLUMINATED PRESENT FOR CHILDREN.
Just Ready, price 6d.
THE CHILD'S ILLUSTRATED BOOK OF PRAYERS
—A First Book for Children, enriched with Illustrations of original designs and appropriate engravings, printed in gold and colors.
London: Published by WILLIAM SMITH, 113, Fleet-street.

HOW TO LIVE.—Price 1s. 6d. by post, 1s. 6d.
WHAT TO EAT, DRINK, AND AVOID; addressed to the Nervous and Dyspeptic.
By M. J. CULVERWELL, M.D., M.R.C.S. &c.
Barnwood, 23, Paternoster-row; CARVALLO, 147, Fleet-street; HARRIS, 43, Oxford-street; MARK, 39, Cornhill; and the Author, 21, Arundel-street, Strand.

Just published, price 6d., with maps and colored plates.
DR. MADDOCK'S POPULAR TREATISE ON A Successful Mode of treating Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Chronic, Nervous and Spasmodic Coughs, and Affections of the Throat.—Full of important and remedial facts.
—Glasgow. London: Printed by M. J. CULVERWELL, 113, Fleet-street; and by Dr. Maddock at the post, at his residence, 16, Hargrave-street, Brunswick-square.

FOR NOTHING.—A PAMPHLET ON NERVOUSNESS, with Testimonials.—The Nervous are respectfully invited to send to the Rev. Dr. WILLIS MORRELL, Charlotte-street, Bloomsbury, London, for the small pamphlet just published, on his most successful TREATMENT OF MIND or Nervous Complaints, by which he cures these diseases as certainly as water quenches thirst, which he will return, if a stamp is enclosed, free of charge.

NEW SONG.—"ART THOU IN TEARS!"—Words by E. J. GIBB; Music by F. N. CROUCH.—Mr. CROUCH, the gifted composer of "Kathleen Mavourneen," "Desert Antoon," &c., has again delighted us with a charming Ballad, "Art thou in tears?" is of a plaintive and touching character, admirably calculated to display to advantage harmonies or contralto voices.—Times Musical Review.—Derry and Henson, 64, Oxford-street.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURES ON DENTAL SURGERY.
—The FORCEPS, price 4d., stamped 1d. of SATURDAY, 10th INSTANT, will contain, in addition to its usual Professional Papers, the First of a COURSE of LECTURES ON THE DISEASES AND OPERATIONS OF THE TEETH, by EDWIN BAUNDERS, Esq., M.R.C.S., Surgeon-Dentist to St. Thomas's Hospital, and to the London Dispensary for Diseases of the Teeth. All orders for the Stamped Edition should be addressed to the Editor, at the Office, 55, New Congress-street, Soho.

This day, royal 8vo., 21s. 6d.; India proof, 42 12s. 6d., morocco.
THE BOOK OF BEAUTY, for 1845. Edited by the COUNTESS OF ELEANOR. Comprising a Series of Portraits, engraved under the superintendence of Mr. Charles Heath; and Contributions by the Countess of ELEANOR, Walter Savage Landor, Esq., Sir R. S. W. Lytton, Mrs. Sigourney, Camilla Toulmin, R. M. Milnes, Esq., &c. &c.
London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS.

This day, royal 8vo., 21s. 6d.; India proof, 42 12s. 6d., morocco.
THE KEESPAKE, for 1845. Edited by the COUNTESS OF ELEANOR. With splendid Engravings, engraved under the superintendence of Mr. Charles Heath; and Contributions by the Countess of ELEANOR, Walter Savage Landor, Esq., Sir R. S. W. Lytton, Mrs. Sigourney, Camilla Toulmin, R. M. Milnes, Esq., &c. &c.
London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.—BAKER'S HISTORY AND ANTIQUITIES OF THE COUNTY OF NORTHAMPTON; large and small paper: fine plates. In two thick vols. 8vo. bound, or in five parts, unbound.
ROSE'S ARCHITECTURE IN ENGLAND, from the Earliest to the Present Time. 8vo., plates 7s., elegantly bound. In this Work special reference is made to the Churches in Northamptonshire.
T. WALKER, Publisher, Northampton.

NORTHAMPTON GENERAL BIBLE WAREHOUSE.
—Testaments, handbooks, 6d. each; Prayer-books, 1s.; Bibles, 3s. 6d.; Church Services, 3s. 6d.; and a large assortment of each, elegantly bound, various patterns, in calf, morocco, velvet, &c., for presbytery. Writing Papers, Envelopes, Pens, Ink, Wax, Water, Account Books, and other articles in plain and fancy Stationery, at extremely reduced prices. Music and Musical Instruments, Violin Strings, &c.
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS kept in stock, and delivered to order every Saturday morning, in any part of the Kingdom.
THOMAS WALSH, Bookseller, opposite the George Hotel, Bridge-street, Northampton.

WONDER-EXCITING ROMANCES!—Pleasing Novels!
—Delightful Poetry!—and Splendid Engravings!! Every admirer of Fiction should read the ILLUSTRATED PENNY NOVELIST, and LIBRARY OF ROMANCE for October 20th; which contains the extraordinary Tale of the WANDERING JEW, by the famous EUGENE SUE, and a New Romance of thrilling interest, entitled the WHITE CLOUD, or THE FOREST WARRIOR! Remember, sixteen large double-colored pages (beautifully illustrated), for ONE PENNY!
London: CHAPMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS.

EUGENE SUE'S MASTER PIECE!
New Publishing, in Weekly Penny Numbers, and Monthly Parts, at Sixpence.
THERESE DUNOYER; or, the Manor House of Treff Hartlog. By EUGENE SUE, Author of "The Wandering Jew." Beautifully Illustrated.—This is the most original of all the admirable Novels of Eugene Sue.—National.
London: CHAPMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS; FARRER, Gumpston-street, Soho; and all Booksellers and Newsellers.

This day, royal 8vo., 21s. 6d.; India proof, 42 12s. 6d., morocco.
CATERMOL'S HISTORICAL ANNUAL; being the Second and concluding Volume of "The History of the Great Civil War of Charles I. and the Parliament." By the Rev. RICHARD CATERMOL, B.D. With Thirteen Engravings from Designs by G. Cartermole, Esq.; and Portraits of Charles I. and Oliver Cromwell, after Van der Stroom, engraved under the superintendence of Mr. Charles Heath. "A Second Edition of the First Volume, uniform with the first, 7s.
London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS.

TO PIANOFORTE PLAYERS.—THE SIX ROYAL POLKAS, danced at Almack's, and played by all the Military Bands, are given exclusively in the "PIANISTA," No. 45, with plate instructions for dancing them. 10th Edition, price 1s. by order of all Booksellers, or sent post-free for seven stamps, addressed to Editor of Pianista, 23, Paternoster-row. No. 45 of Pianista contains two sets of Polka Quadrilles, by Mousset, for 1s. Supplements to 45 and 46 of Pianista, each 2s., post-free thirty stamps, containing thirty-one dances, songs, &c., by Mr. Wilson, making his two entire volumes complete.—Barnwood: TUNNICLIFFE, 18, Finsbury. "A" The Pianista is published Monthly by Barnwood and Co., 23, Paternoster-row.

LIBRARY EDITION OF EMERALDA.
On the 23rd of November will be published, in Pocket-size, containing 16 pages, 8vo.,
LA ESMERALDA; or, THE HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME. By VICTOR HUGO. Profusely illustrated with Engravings, after designs by the Beaucaumont, J. Delaunoy, Boulanger, &c. &c. This work will contain three chapters never before published in England, having but just appeared in the sixth edition, now in course of publication in Paris.
TWO STEEL ENGRAVINGS.—"The Cathedral of Notre Dame," and "Emeralda Dancing in the Place de Grève—GRATIS with the FIRST NUMBER.
London: GEORGE FARRER, 310, Strand; and all Booksellers.

On Saturday, November 26, will be published, containing 16 pages, double columns, printed in a wrapper, price Threepence, the First Number of a new Weekly Periodical, entitled
THE NOVEL TIMES; consisting of original works of fiction, by the first writers of the day, and translations, by approved English authors, of foreign popular tales and romances. No. 1 will contain the commencement of an original Novel, by the author of "The Subaltern," &c.; and of an entirely new work, by the Countess Hulse Hulse, entitled "Letters from the Orient," translated from the German expressly for this work, by the Author of "Cady Bockley."
Office, 15, Wellington-street North, Strand, where Orders, Advertisements, and communications, are requested to be addressed; and to be had (Prospectuses gratis) of all booksellers and newsmen throughout the Kingdom.

THE ONLY ENGLISH EDITION AUTHORIZED BY MR. EUGENE SUE.
Publishing in Weekly Numbers, price 4d. each, and in Monthly Parts,
THE MYSTERIES OF PARIS; a new and splendid Edition, adapted to the English reader. Illustrated with upwards of 700 Engravings on Wood of all the Characters, Scenes, Costumes, and Localities described in this extraordinary Work, executed expressly for this edition, by the first artists in Paris. Under the superintendence of Mr. Charles Heath.
Already published Parts 1 to 8, and Numbers 1 to 24.
"This work is continued with undying spirit. We never saw a series of more life-like illustrations. The most finished effects are produced without risk or elaboration. There is the highest art, with what seems to be the most rude and careless vigour."—Examiner.
CHAPMAN and WALKER, 100, Strand.

AMUSING BOOKS AT REDUCED PRICES.
Published at 21s., reduced to 10s. 6d.
VALENTINE VOX, THE VENTRILOQUIST, with 60 Steel Plates by GUY RAY. Thick 8vo. Volume, cloth, 6d.
Published at 15s., reduced to 7s. 6d.
JAMES (G. P. R.) THE COMMISSIONER; or, TRAVELS OF A GENTLEMAN, with 20 Steel Plates by PIERCE. 8vo., cloth, 6d.
Published at 12s., reduced to 7s. 6d.

COMIC ALBUM FOR EVERY TABLE, by the Contributors to Punch, with upwards of 110 Engravings. 4to., beautifully bound in Arabesque patterns of colors and gold.
London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE, 35, Abchurch-lane; and, by order, of all Booksellers in the Kingdom.

SUITABLE BOOKS FOR PRESENTS.
Just published in post 8vo., price 10s. 6d., handsomely bound in a new kind of cloth, silver gilt, or 6s. boards.
IMAGINATION AND FANCY: OR SELECTIONS from the best ENGLISH POETS, illustrative of those First Requisites of their Art; with Markings of the best Passages, Critical Notices of the Writers, and an Essay in Answer to the Question: "What is Poetry?" By LEIGH HUNT.
Ninth Edition in 3 Vols. 8vo., 2s. 6d., handsomely illustrated, price 7s. 6d. each, in a handsome and uniform cloth binding, or 15s. 6d. morocco.

PICTURES OF PRIVATE LIFE. By Mrs. ELLIS, Author of the "Women of England," &c. &c. Contents: Vol. I. "Observations on Picturesque Narratives." "The Hall and the Cottage." "Eden Revisited." "The Curate's Widow." "and "Marriage as it May Be." Vol. II. "Miscellaneous," and "The Palace of Fiction." Vol. III. "Fiction; or, the Fables of Female Education." Each Volume is complete in itself, and may be purchased separately.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 55, Cornhill; Dublin: J. CROWE; Edinburgh: BELL and BRADFUT.

SIX POUNDS OF TEA, whether Black or Green, for 17s. 6d. and small bright Gunpowder, in 12lb. boxes, at 4s. 6d. per lb.; 4lbs. of Coffee for 3s. —EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY'S OFFICE, 5, Great St. Martin's Churchyard, Bishopsgate-street.

ALERE! ALERE! ALERE!—Best, Brightest, Purest, and most in esteem by connoisseurs, to be had in Rightness or Nine Gallon Casks, at 11s. 11d. per Gallon, by addressing to the John Bull Brewery Office, 26, Philip-lane, City. Sent to any part of London carriage-free.

ROYAL EXCHANGE HANDKERCHIEFS, patronised by the Queen and Prince Albert.—Just published, a splendid Reviewing of the new Royal Exchange, upon a Silk Handkerchief, showing the Eastern End, with the Clock Tower, &c., from a beautiful Drawing by WILLIAM TURNER, Esq., F.R.S. To be had only of W. TUNT, Hatter, 22, No. 1, Birch-lane, Cornhill. Will shortly remove to No. 21, Royal Exchange.

EAST INDIA APPOINTMENTS.—CADETS and ASSISTANT SURGEONS appointed to India, may receive, on application to Messrs. THREMPER and GLENNY, 55, Strand, a detailed list of the necessary OUTFIT for India, with full particulars of shipping, passage, the overland route, &c.—N.B. Thrempers' India Goods Warehouse, the most essential article of India clothing, can only be procured at this establishment.—151, Strand.

CITY OF PETERBOROUGH.—ROYAL PATENT PIANOFORTE DEPOT.—THOMAS CHADWELL has constantly for Sale or Hire Square, Round, Cottage, and Grand Pianos, of the best quality, for style, price, and quality of tone, cannot be surpassed in Town or Country.
The Cheapest Establishment for Stationery, Bibles, Prayers, Jewellery, &c., &c. General Repository for Materials used in the Fine Arts.
CITY New Music at Half-price.

CITY OF PETERBOROUGH.—BULLEN, HATTER, TAILOR, and WOOLLEN DRAFTER, respectfully invites the attention of his friends and the public generally, to a select STOCK of GOODS, which will be found of the best quality, and at the lowest prices. Waterproof Beaver Cloth, Devon Kersey, Buckskin, and Water-silk; Great variety of the best made Suits, Do, and Winter Gloves; Gaiters, Breeches, Umbrellas, &c., &c.—Nov. 13, 1844.

THE SEA.—TO PARENTS and GUARDIANS.—TWO YOUTHS of Respectable Parents, to proceed in a fine First-class Ship, under the tuition of an Experienced Commander, and Fatherly Man. Any Youth that is willing to study their English, French, and Mathematics, would receive every encouragement as to their eligibility for command. For further particulars, see to persons and designation of the Ship, apply to Captain AUSTIN, ELPHINSTONE, in the care of Messrs. JAMES HALES and Co., 94, Lower Thames-street, London.

TO THE MEDICAL OFFICERS OF THE ROYAL NAVY.
NAVAL MEDICAL SUPPLEMENTAL FUND.—A MEETING of the Members of the Naval Medical Supplemental Fund will be held at the FREEMASON'S TAVERN, Great Queen-street, London, on THURSDAY, the 7th INSTANT, to receive the Report of the Committee appointed at the General Meeting of the 5th April, 1843, and to take into consideration circumstances that have arisen since that General Meeting. The Chair will be taken at one o'clock precisely.
Admission, 10s. 6d. per ticket.
W. CRANDELL, Secretary.

DAWSON'S AUXILIARY, a Production of Modern Science, setting aside the old system for securing the Hair from Baldness or Greyness, and restoring it when become so, however extreme, making it luxuriant and graceful, and medicating the scalp. It establishes a permanent cure in Children's hair, which they decay; is indispensable in every family who consider the hair ornamental or useful; and renders the use of dyes, which are all destructive.—Sold at 3s. 6d., 7s. 6d., and 12s. 6d. per Bottle, by Barclay, 35, Farringdon-street, Wholesale; Messrs. 150, Oxford-street; 100, Strand; 100, St. Paul's; and most Chemists, Perfumers, &c.—Caution: A Particular ask for DAWSON'S, and observe the signature, "D. Dawson," on the wrapper. A warning in the larger bottles. The genuine are not sold at any house in Holborn.

CAUTION.—SALMON, ODY, and CO., caution the Public against the numerous pretended new inventions for Ruptures; all of them are old, and are mentioned in "Arnold's Treatise on Ruptures," published at Paris in 1748. No essential improvement was made from that date until Salmon's invention in 1830, which has been, and continues to be, recommended by the most eminent Surgeons in Town and Country. SALMON, ODY, and CO.'S PATENT SELF-ADJUSTING TRUSS will answer for right or left side, requiring no undergarment, buckles, or any gelling bandage; distinct of injuries and decrease in size and force. N.B.—Persons in the Country are requested to send the Correspondence of the Body each inch below the Hip. Sold by one or more Druggists in every City and principal Town in the United Kingdom.—Manufacturers, 39, Strand, London.

THE ORTHOCHRONOGRAPH.—A Patent Instrument to determine the Correct Performance of Chronometers, Watches, and Clocks, whenever the observer may be situated. Manufactured by WEBSTER and SON, Chronometer-Makers to the Lords of the Admiralty. Its simplicity, portability, and the ease with which results are obtained, will enable the most inexperienced person to ascertain mean time to a correctness not hitherto obtained but by those experienced in the use of astronomical instruments. The adjustment of the Orthochronograph for use may be effected in two minutes on its removal from the case. It was introduced by Dr. Robinson, astronomer, at the late meeting of the British Association, and met with universal approbation. Price 45 10s. An extensive and superior stock of Chronometers, Watches, and Clocks. The price and directions for use free; the book forwarded upon the receipt of sixteen stamps to cover the price and postage. Webster and Son, 75, Cornhill, London.

BETTS'S PATENT BRANDY CAPSULED.—Consumers of Brandy are respectfully informed that J. T. BETTS, Jun., & Co. will not be responsible for any BOTTLED BRANDY that is not protected against fraudulent substitution by the Patent Metallic Capsule, enclosed with the words, "Betts's Patent Brandy, 7, Strand, London." Sold by the most respectable wine and spirit merchants in Town and Country, at 3s. 6d. per bottle, the bottle included. Betts's Patent Brandy is used in preference to foreign, at Guy's, St. George's, and the other principal Hospitals, &c., throughout the Kingdom. Attention is especially requested to the security afforded by the Patent Metallic Capsule. Country dealers are advertised in the provincial journals; and lists of London dealers may be obtained at the Distillery, where quantities of not less than two gallons may be supplied, in bulk at 18s. per gallon, and in bottles, the case and bottles included, at 20s. per gallon.—7, Strand, London.

WINTER OVER COATS, WRAPPERS, &c.—Messrs. BURCH and LUCAS (late J. Albert), respectfully invite gentlemen to view their new and fashionable assortment of PATENT and BEAUFORT WRAPPERS, FANCY VESTINGS, TROUSERS, &c. for the approaching season; the style and cut of every garment are guaranteed equal to any of the first houses at the West-end, at prices in union with the economy of the times, feeling confident that gentlemen who may do them the honour will be perfectly satisfied with any garment that leaves their establishment. A large assortment of Great Coats kept ready made in all the different and most approved forms accessible to the prevailing taste, being made under the superintendence of the proprietors, they are enabled to speak confidently as to their all-around excellence. A full description, which are entirely excluded from this establishment.—55, King William-street, London-bridge, opposite the Stores.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE.
Under the patronage of her Majesty the Queen, H. R. H. Prince Albert, the Royal Family, and Nobility.—A fragrant White Powder prepared from Oriental Barks of insensibilized virtue for strengthening, preserving, and dissolving the Teeth. It facilitates the accurate formation of enamel, and by the removal of the extraneous substance, the salutary growth and freshness to the gums. It removes from the surface of the teeth the spots of insipid decay, polishes and preserves the enamel, substituting for discoloration and the aspect of impurity, the most pure and pearl-like whiteness; while, from its salubrious and disinfecting qualities, it gives sweetness and perfume to the breath. Price 2s. 6d. per box, 4s. 6d. per dozen.

CAUTION.—To protect the public from fraud, the Hon. Commissioners of her Majesty's Stamp have authorized the proprietors' signature to be engraved on the Government Stamp, thus:—A. KOWLAND & SON, 20, Hatten Garden, which is affixed on each Box. "A" All others are fraudulent Counterfeits!!

WOLLASTON'S PATENT GELATINE, for immediately making Jellies or Blanc-mange, being quickly dissolved in boiling water. It is of equal strength with the finest Russian Isinglass, and perfectly free from any unpleasant taste or smell, requiring less flavouring than any other preparation of Gelatine or Isinglass, being a perfectly pure, celestine, and soluble substance. For Jellies, it will not be found necessary to use eggs, as, by passing through a flannel bag, it is sufficient. It will not fail in any variety of valuable restorative, from the great fortitude and restorative with which it is used, and not being liable to become sour so soon as Isinglass.—Manufactured by E. WOLLASTON, Druggist, 100, Strand, London; and by Messrs. 150, Oxford-street; 100, Strand; 100, St. Paul's; and most Chemists, Perfumers, &c.—Caution: A Particular ask for WOLLASTON'S, and observe the signature, "E. Wollaston," on the wrapper. A warning in the larger bottles. The genuine are not sold at any house in Holborn.

OPENING OF THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE.—Future English Historians have a due field for diligent research in recording the gorgeous spectacles of Queen Victoria opening the New Royal Exchange. The town of thousands who witnessed this ever memorable event, when they beheld their Queen, it was as if the very wonders spoke; each eager look, each vivid, sparkling, animated eye, getting with rapture on the glorious scene! while the all-attending throng of the aristocracy, the nobility in their power, and the white and swart-limbed, the rich, illustrious, and the poor set of teeth, formed a noble and sublime picture of the immortal qualities of ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, and ROWLAND'S ODONTO. The salutary patronage accorded by our gracious Queen, and the several Sovereigns of Europe, together with the benefits which accrue to the citizens of privacy and regal magnificence, and the confirmation, by experience, of the salutary efficacy of these restorative, remove all doubts, have characterized them with perfection, and given them a celebrity unparalleled. They have proved the theme of the poet: they are celebrated in the periodical literature of the whole civilized world; the lips of Byron, and the voice of the universal press, have proclaimed the incomparable virtues of the "Old Macassar," and of its accompanying preparations.—Reviewing Paper.

COD LIVER OIL.—Read the following Undeniable Testimony of the extraordinary value of this natural remedy in the CURE of GOUT, RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, DISORDERED JOINTS, SPINAL and GLANDULAR AFFECTIONS, LUMBRAGO, SCROFULOUS ULCERS, and other essential Diseases.
Gentlemen.—If any case is of any value to you, I beg you will make the best use of it, as I have suffered too much from Gout and Rheumatism not to have the strongest sympathy for all who may be similarly afflicted. I purchased only one bottle of your Cod Liver Oil, and after a few applications was completely cured. I could say much in praise of this invaluable remedy, and shall be happy to reply to all enquiries.
I am, Gentlemen, your faithful and obedient servant,
Sept. 1844.
George's Picture Gallery, St. Martin's lane, London.
Gentlemen.—About a month since I was attacked with a disease of the legs, for which I was admitted into St. Thomas's Hospital, and remained there a month subject to all kinds of treatment. I left the hospital to try the advice of several medical men, and all without the least benefit. I was at length advised by a friend to try a small bottle of your Cod Liver Oil, and from the very first application experienced relief, and before using the whole of the small bottle, was perfectly cured and have remained in perfect health to this day.
Oct. 1844.
Sold in bottles, at 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 12s. each, by JONES and CO., 201, Strand; 150, Oxford-street; 100, Strand; 100, St. Paul's; and all respectable Booksellers, Druggists, and Chemists in Town and Country.

CAUTION.—Observe the seal and address of JONES and CO., 201, STRAND on the wrapper.

COUNTRY PUBLISHERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.
ENGRAVINGS ON WOOD executed in the best style, and with the greatest despatch, by F. SMYTH, Designer and Engraver. Address, 26, Strand.

GENTLEMEN Visiting LONDON will find superior ACCOMMODATION, on moderate Terms, at EVANS'S GRAND HOTEL, King-street and Piazza, Covent Garden. Bed and Breakfast One Guinea per Week. All the Railroad Omnibuses pass within a short distance of this Hotel.

JONES'S 24 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufacturers, 210, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction of price at once sets aside all rivalry either of the Swiss manufacturers or any other houses.—Read Jones's Sketch of Watchwork, sent free for a 2d. stamp.

CROSBY HALL VAULTS, 35, Bishopsgate-street Within. OLD BOTTLED WINES.—Port, 4s. and 4s. 6d.; Do., six years in bottle, 4s.; Do., superior Brandy, 5s. and 5s. 6d.; Sherry, pale and brown, 4s. and 4s. 6d.; Brandy, 4s. and 4s. 6d.; Sherry (an excellent dinner wine), 5s.; Martell, 5s. per dozen. 4s. 6d. per dozen; Champagne, 1s. per dozen. "A" Martell, per Quarter Pipe, 4s. 11s.

WINTER HOSIERY, manufactured by POPE and PLANTE, 4, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, of White and Coloured Merino, Lamb-Wool, Real Cashmere, and of other Choice Woollen, in Socks, Hosiery, and Underclothing. Elastic Socks and Cashmere GAITERS for Ladies, and every description of SILK and COTTON HOSIERY.

MR. GEORGE YATES has re-commenced for the Winter his LECTURES and INSTRUCTIONS in PERSONAL DEPORTMENT, also the present mode of Dancing. Classes of Eight formed in private Families, attended on School Terms.—Lectures addressed to St. Peter's, Hammer-smith, or at Mr. Green's, Robinson-square.

H. WALKER'S NEEDLES (by authority, the "Queen's Own") have large eyes, easily threaded, (even by blind persons), and improved points, straight, and bent. Each paper is labelled with a Number of her Majesty, or his Royal Highness Prince Albert, in relief, on coloured grounds. Every quality of Needles, Fish Hooks, Hooks and Eyes, Steel Pins, &c., for shipping. These Needles or Pins for the home trade are sent free, by post, by any respectable dealer, on receipt of 15 penny stamps for every 1s. value.—H. WALKER, Manufacturer to the Queen, 1, (late 20), Maiden-lane, Wood-street, London.

EMPLOYMENT.—Persons having a little time to spare, are approved that Agents continue to be appointed in London and Country Towns by the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY, for the sale of their celebrated TEAS (Office, 5, Great St. Martin's Churchyard, Bishopsgate-street). They are packed in showy leaden caskets, from an ounce to a pound, with the price and weight marked on each packet, and but little trouble is occasioned by the sale; the business is only 10s. per annum, and many, during the last thirteen years, have realized considerable incomes by the Agency, without its, let or loss. Application to be made (if by letter, post paid) as above.

COGAN and GILLO'S NOVARGENT, or SILVER SOLUTION, is offered with Priced Articles, by instantly depositing a Guinea of Pure Silver, and Preserving and Cleaning Silver, Plated Ware, and German Silver. It is used with less trouble than cleaning, and is warranted not to contain Mercury or anything injurious. It has been highly approved by Dr. Ryan, Professor of Chemistry to the Royal Polytechnic Institution, and other eminent Chemists and Silver-smiths. Sold by ROBERT and SON, 5, Farringdon-street, London; and by J. JONES and SON, 6, North-street, Sheffield; in bottles, with full directions, at 3s. and 2s. each, and to be had of all respectable Chemists, Silver-smiths, and Furnishing Ironmongers in the Kingdom. Beware of Imitations: the Genuine are all signed on the wrapper, by J. D. COGAN and R. GILLO.

BERDOE'S VENTILATING WATERPROOF WINTER WRAPPERS, Outside Garments of all kinds, Shooting Jackets, &c., also his well-known Frocks for all seasons. An extensive and superior variety of the above (really waterproof) is now and greatly improved materials, in lieu of the unsightly and vulgar Twaddles, now ready, of which an inspection is confidently invited. As winter approaches, attention is again solicited to the above invention, introduced by the advertiser more than six years ago, the complete success of which in rendering any garment thoroughly impervious to the rain is now established beyond all contradiction.
W. BERDOE, Tailor, Waterproofer, &c., 48, Cornhill (North side).

TEAS at Wholesale Prices, 2, Bucklersbury, Cheapside.
Fouching 2s. 6d., 3s. 10s., 4s.
Congee 2s. 6d., 3s. 10s., 4s. 6d.
Buckling 2s. 6d., 3s. 10s., 4s. 6d.
Tweed 2s. 6d., 3s. 10s., 4s. 6d.
Young Hosiery 2s. 6d., 3s. 10s., 4s. 6d.
Hosiery 2s. 6d., 3s. 10s., 4s. 6d.
Gaiters 2s. 6d., 3s. 10s., 4s. 6d.
MANNELL and CO., 2, Bucklersbury, Cheapside. Six pounds of the above forwarded free of carriage to any part of the Kingdom.

NELSON'S PATENT OPAQUE GELATINE, Half the Price of Isinglass.—CAUTION: From the increasing demands for NELSON'S OPAQUE GELATINE, many spurious articles are issued on the Public; to guard against which, and for a protection to purchasers, it is sold in packets only, by most respectable chemists, grocers, and others, in Town and Country, at 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 4s., 6s., and 12s. each packet, bearing the Patentist's signature. Extract from Dr. Ure's testimonial, June 5, 1840:—"I find Mr. G. Nelson's Patent Opaque Gelatine to be at least equal in strength and purity, if not superior, to the best Isinglass, for every culinary purpose; it is entirely free from any impregnation of acid, such as I have found to exist in other kinds of Gelatine in the London market." The Opaque Gelatine is an article well adapted for hordis, covers, cases used with ship stores, and a safe and profitable commodity for exportation.—Ramsbottom Mills, Warwick; and 14, Bucklersbury.

FIELD'S CHEAP STATIONERY AND BOOK WAREHOUSE. 41, Regent's Quadrant (Corner of Air-street).—Envelopes with the penny stamp, 1s. per doz.; plain envelopes, 6d. per 100; superfine satin envelopes, 6d. per 100; good letter paper, 3d. per quire; superfine not pressed paper, 4d., 6d., and 8d. per quire, or 5s., 7s., and 9s. per ream. Note paper, 3d., 4d., and 6d. per quire, or 4s., 5s., 6s., 7s., and 9s. per ream. The Queen's, Albert, and diamond size note papers, in packets of five quires, at 1s. and 1s. 6d. per packet. Was, red or black, 10 sticks for 1s. the finest quality; mourning letter paper, 1s. per quire; mourning note paper, 4d., 5d., and 6d. per quire—a reduction by the ream; mourning envelopes, 3d. per 100 (the celebrated superior bottom pens, 6d. per doz., 3s. the gross). Good cases and portfolios, 6d., 1s., 2s., 3s., 4s., 5s., 6s., 7s., 8s., 9s., and 10s. each. The above are all sold at the lowest prices, and are all of the best quality. A full list of 200 volumes in every department of literature, a selection of which are in elegant bindings, suitable for Christmas presents, &c.

COX'S PATENT SPARKLING GELATINE FOR MAKING JELLIES, BLANC-MANGE, &c. stronger than Isinglass, at one-third the price, is particularly economical and convenient for the use of Families, Hotel-keepers, Invalids, and others, and a prodigious article for Exportation.—Sold, in packets only, by the principal Druggists, Grocers, and Others in the United Kingdom, at 6d., 1s., 2s., 3s., 4s., 5s., 6s., 7s., 8s., 9s., and 10s. each packet, bearing the Patentist's signature. Extract from Dr. Ure's Testimonial:—"London, 20th February, 1844.—I have much pleasure in certifying that the Patent Sparkling Gelatine of Messrs. J. and G. Cox is prepared by an excellent process, which, while it preserves entire the virtues of this alimentary substance, renders it equally pure and beneficial. Examined by chemical tests, it is found perfectly free from acid, and fully stronger than the best Isinglass in the London market, and affords a Jelly (in a few minutes) equal in all respects to, if not firmer and more crystalline than, that prepared from calves' feet."—Agent in London, Mr. R. W. WATSON, No. 11, Old Fish-street, City.—Patent Gelatine Works, George Mills, Edinburgh.

THE HAIR.—Of the numerous compounds constantly an- nounced for promoting the growth, or reproduction, of the Hair, few exert even in name, beyond a very limited period, while ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, with a reputation unparalleled, is still on the increase in public estimation. The singular virtues of this successful invigorant for restoring, preserving, and beautifying the Human Hair, are too well known and appreciated to need comment. The very facts of the high and distinguished patronage it enjoys, its general use in all countries, together with numerous testimonials, and the fact of its being sold in all countries, wherever it is sold, are sufficient to prove its superiority and value over all attempts of a similar nature. Being universally preferred, the consequent great demand evinces the equality of unparagoned superiority, who read the most glowing track as the "Macassar Oil," whereas the genuine article is really the invention (and property) of A. ROWLAND and SON, and the adulteration of its really exotic materials (and property) by others, renders abortive any attempt to discover its component parts.—Thus proving the superiority of all other articles bearing the title of "Macassar Oil." The genuine article has the words ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, engraved in two lines on the wrapper, and on the back of the wrapper, nearly 1500 times, containing 20,000 letters.—Price, 6d., 7s., 8s., 9s., and 10s. each bottle (equal to four ounces), 10s. 6d., and double that size, 21s. per bottle.—"A" All others are FRAUDULENT COUNTERFEITS!!

SELF-MEASUREMENT.—GREAT ACCOMMODATION.
No longer let those who are desirous that Trowsers from the Warehouse of Messrs. J. and G. Cox
By adopting our plan, which has proved a failure.
Every gentleman now may become his own Tailor!
E. MOSES and SON are desirous of directing special attention to their plan of "Self-Measurement." The extreme simplicity and the minute exactness of this admirable plan are such as cannot fail to answer the purpose designed. No failure in point of fit can arise from its use; or, should anything of the kind occur, the proprietors will hold themselves responsible. Thousands are thus enabled to avoid the expense of the Custom Clothing of Messrs. J. and SON, without any inconvenience arising from distance, &c. A Book with a wood cut and full directions may be obtained on application (gratis) and free of postage. Residents in the country cannot do better than avail themselves of so favourable an opportunity of purchasing at the greatest Tailoring Establishment in the Kingdom.

SPORTING CHASES, in every variety.
From 10s. to 100s. 6d.
Yellowing do., 7 packets .. 10s. 6d.
Tweed Trowsers .. 10s. 6d.
Hosiery, all sizes, collar and cuffs .. 10s. 6d.
Cashmere Coat, in every shape .. 10s. 6d.
Cashmere Trowsers .. 10s. 6d.
Cashmere Vests .. 10s. 6d.
Cashmere and Persian do., in every variety .. 10s. 6d.
Black Satin Vests .. 10s. 6d.
Cloth do. .. 10s. 6d.
Cloth Trowsers .. 10s. 6d.
Single-cuffed do. do., from .. 10s. 6d.
A great variety of Summer do. .. 10s. 6d.
Dress Coat, edged .. 10s. 6d.
Frock do. do. .. 10s. 6d.

TOWN AND HARBOUR OF HAVANNAH.

HAVANNAH.

Havannah, the capital of the island of Cuba, and the whole of its northern and southern shores, have just been the scene of a dire calamity, by which the prospects of the sugar crop are rendered infinitely worse than before. By a letter just received from Messrs. L. Mariategui and Co., of Havannah, of the 10th of October, to their correspondent in London, Mr. F. Scheer, of Adam's-court, Old Broad-street, we learn that "a strong gale commenced on the 1st of October, and increased on the night of the 4th to the most terrific hurricane that was ever experienced in the island, which lasted until the middle of next day, accompanied by a violent deluge of rain, mixed with spray from the sea. Houses were thrown down, and trees rooted up; several small towns and villages in the interior are said to present little more than heaps of ruins. The accounts from the estates announce the most serious injury; whole fields of cane appear as if fire had passed over them, and the buildings on the plantations have been thrown to the ground. It is difficult as yet to form an estimate of the vast amount of property destroyed, or of the probable influence of the calamity on the quantity of sugar next season; the most moderate calculation at present is, that the crop will be deficient by at least one half. The cane that is most forward has suffered most, having been snapped asunder, while the young cane bent before the storm; many estates will not grind at all. In Matanzas a great part of the little stock of sugars remaining has perished, as the water penetrated into the warehouses, and even rose several feet. The damage suffered on the south side of the island seems, if possible, to have been still greater than on the north side. In our harbour (Havannah), and that of Matanzas, scarcely a vessel escaped without injury, more or less serious, and the greater part of the coasters employed to convey produce to the ports of shipment, and to supply the estates with necessaries, have been entirely destroyed."

"Our Government has issued an order admitting free of duty, from yesterday, rice, potatoes, beans, corn, and corn-meal, as well as all kinds of timber used for building; lowering also the duty on cattle. Further relaxations on other articles are contemplated, if the necessity should become apparent."

"We may now expect that planters will retain the remaining stock of this year's sugar, with a firm hand, and that little or no business will be done for some time to come. They will naturally anticipate that the news will occasion a considerable advance of prices in Europe, particularly if the calamity should have extended to other West India islands. As for the coffee crop it is almost destroyed, and we cannot hope to see any exported from this port and Matanzas."

Our engraving, from a sketch by Lieut. W. T. Bellairs, R.N., shows the harbour of Havannah, which is one of the most commodious in the world, communicating with the sea by a channel little more than half a mile in length, and from 300 to 350 yards wide; its depth varying from 8 to 10 fathoms. The harbour itself is an oblong basin, surrounded by heights which usually shelter it from the wind. Hence, the violence of the late gale must have been tremendous. The town is built on the western side of the basin, near the channel, on a kind of promontory. The channel is protected by two strong fortresses, El Morro and La Punta, and a continuous series of batteries along both shores. The town is equally strong towards the land.

The streets are narrow, crooked, and generally unpaved, but they contain some well-built houses. There are, too, several good buildings among the churches, one of which contains the remains of Christopher Columbus. The other large edifices, as the Palace of the Government (shown to the right of the engraving), that of the Commandant of the Marine, the Arsenal, the Post-office, and the buildings used for the manufacture of tobacco, are less remarkable for their architecture than for their solidity. The town has also a theatre, a circus for bull-fights, two fine promenades, a university, a seminary for Catholic priests, a patriotic society, and a botanic garden. The town is the seat of the Captain-General and of a Bishop. The most important manufactures are those of cigars and chocolate. More than half the produce of the island destined for foreign markets is shipped at Havannah. The climate of the town is very unhealthy and the ravages of the yellow fever there are truly frightful.

CHESS.

In resuming this department of our journal we have obtained the co-operation of a distinguished member of the London Chess Club, and are enabled to promise our readers a considerable accession of amusement; at the same time we invite communications relative to matches pending at clubs, problems, or any well contested games, all of which will receive insertion, should they be deemed sufficiently interesting to the amateur.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White playing first, to win in three moves.
The Solution in our next.

CHESS STUDIES. By GEORGE WALKER, Esq. LONGMAN.

Mr. Walker, to whom all Chess players are under great obligations, has, in the compilation and arrangement of this admirably printed volume, shown himself to be possessed of untiring perseverance and industry. It is certainly the most valuable Chess publication that has hitherto appeared, containing, as it does, the best games of the finest players in Europe, both living and dead.

THE WEATHER.—On Tuesday nine raspberries were gathered in the grounds of Mr. Park, gardener and florist, Victoria-road, Kensington, and ripe strawberries also in the grounds of another gardener near Hounslow, the richness and flavour of which could only be equalled by those produced in the height of the summer season.

We are sorry to announce the death of Mr. William Griev, of Drury-lane Theatre, whose talents as a painter of the highest rank have on so many occasions been appreciated by the public. He died on Tuesday morning. Mr. Griev has left a widow and several children.

LIGHTING OF THE CHAPEL ROYAL.—The Chapel Royal at Buckingham Palace has recently been fitted up with gas lights, enclosed with large glass globes, ornamented with appropriate inscriptions, and fixed upon handsome ornate columns. They are ventilated upon Professor Faraday's principle of conveying away from the lights all the noxious products of combustion, by means of a descending draught, which is obtained in this instance by the assistance of Dr. Reid's ventilating shaft and apparatus. Prince Albert visited the chapel Monday evening, and expressed himself much pleased with the perfect success of this application of that invention, as well as with the elegant and brilliant effect produced by the lights.

RAPID CONVEYANCE OF GOODS FROM SOUTHAMPTON.—A novel and other important experiments in the fruit trade has been tried by the enterprising brokers Messrs. Keeling and Hunt. The Eleanor, Captain Wickham, armed from Falmouth in eleven days, discharged her cargo of 500 boxes of oranges at Southampton on Saturday evening last, which were immediately despatched by the Southampton railway to London, and had not Sunday intervened, they would have been on sale in London twenty-four hours after they had been landed at Southampton. Every facility was afforded by the Customs in expediting the unloading of the cargo; and the railway directors were so impressed with the importance attached to the result of the operation, that special engines were ordered to be applied, if found necessary, to increase the speed to London; and the result being attended with the best success, will, no doubt, be productive of much increased business to the port of Southampton.

MELANCHOLY CASE OF DESTITUTION.—On Monday an inquest was held at Camberwell, on the body of a Mr. Mason, aged 79, who had died under very lamentable circumstances. It appeared from the statement of the daughter of the deceased that her father had formerly been a principal partner in the firm of Mason and Meyer, opulent lead-merchants and refiners of antimony, in the Blackfriars-road, but latterly they had been so reduced, that they had been compelled to sell their furniture and pawn every article of wearing apparel. They lived in East-street, Walworth, and afterwards went to a miserable lodging in White-street, Borough, where they both slept in the same room. The parsonal authorities of St. George, Southwark, gave them some relief, and ultimately the poor old man was taken, much against his will, in a very debilitated state, from want of food, to Camberwell workhouse, where he died. Mr. Thomas Knap, surgeon to Camberwell parish, said death had been caused by serous apoplexy, which the want of food and proper ventilation of dwelling would sometimes cause. Deceased would have died, if he had not been removed, though removal had probably accelerated it, as he was not in a proper state to bear it. The jury returned a verdict of "Natural death from serous apoplexy." The unfortunate daughter subsequently stated that she should be most thankful if any kind individual could obtain her a situation as a governess or some other suitable occupation, in order that she might be able to quit the workhouse, which, she stated, was equally as repugnant to her feelings as to those of her deceased parent. The unfortunate woman, who is about forty, appeared to be of elegant manners, but was attired as a pauper.

LITERATURE.

DRAWN BY PHIZ.

There's our beautiful eye of grey, Sir,
And our blue eye that seems to say, Sir,
If your intentions lie in that way, Sir,
His reverence lives hard by!

Such is the verse from Doctor O'Toole's "Grand Historical Lilt," in the "Illustrated Magazine" for the present month, which Phiz has illustrated in true poetic vein: it is, indeed, a masterpiece of graphic humour.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 128, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 128, Strand, foreman.—SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1844.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 134.—Vol. V.]

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1844.

[SIXPENCE.]

THE AMERICAN PRESIDENCY.

HE periodical election of the American President is now almost the only remaining instance of the elective principle applied to creating the head of a state. It has been abandoned by the Monarchies of Europe, but it flourishes in the Republic of the Western World. If it is found to work well and tends to promote the strength, peace, and unity of the States, we hope it will long continue to be the main and vital principle of the Constitution. But in the Europe of former ages, the election by the people of its head or chief, produced disputes, hatreds, division—then the weakness consequent upon them, and slavery last of all—for a weak nation never long remains a free one. Poland was an elective Monarchy long after all the other states of Europe had allowed their Kings to become such in virtue of their birth—a thing that could not be disputed,—rather than for the claims afforded by their virtues, talents, or wealth; in all which, let a man be as wealthy, as virtuous and as talented as he may, he will find others ready to dispute the choice with him on the same grounds, either as to one quality or even all. It may seem irrational enough that men should prefer to have their rulers determined by accident rather than by their fitness for the office. But this very fitness is the most difficult thing to get generally acknowledged; and the controversies created by the freedom of choice, work more harm in a State than even the bad qualities of a ruler by right of birth. Nearly every existing Monarchy has its definite laws and constitutional forms, which prevent the power of the ruler going too far for the safety of the people. If those safeguards are broken, and the compact violated, the people can exercise another kind of privilege—that of deposing, as they have often and very effectively proved. Such Monarchies as that of Russia are fortunately not universal; nor does the complete despotic power of the Emperor there arise from his succeeding to his throne by hereditary title—not by the choice of a popular suffrage. Victoria wears the crown of England as much by right of birth as Nicholas; but in all else how different is their power! We know our American friends are inclined to pride themselves considerably on their political liberty to a degree not altogether reasonable; many of them believe that no liberty can exist under any Constitution that differs in form from their own. They prize their periodical election of a President as a sort of constantly-recurring triumph of the democratic principle. They are at present in the midst of a contest for that office; and much excitement is a consequence. The name of England is mixed up with it; a suspicion of a greater or less bias towards England will probably do much to turn the scale one way or other. We will therefore take the opportunity, while giving a full and fair account of both parties and their proceedings, to say a few words in vindication of that quiet and settled principle, which, leaving the highest office of the State hereditary, gives a fixed centre from which all the governing powers proceed. This is one advantage; but a far greater one is the absence of all that fever of excitement—that almost madness of party spirit—which in America hardly ever ceases. The strife during which one President is elected is hardly over before it begins on the prospect of the election of another.

As long as the United States continue to be the great preponderating political power of the Western Continent, there may be less danger in these contests; but if time and circumstance divide them—and it is not impossible—into two rival powers, the elective principle will break down. If the Republic were at the present moment the near neighbour of a strong and wealthy Monarchy, she would not preserve her independence; her divisions would ruin her. Poland is the last kingdom in Europe that preserved an elective Monarchy—and it destroyed her; of all nations she is, at this moment, the most completely and cruelly enslaved. Venice was a Republic with an elected head, and thought the Dukes were chosen for life, and that by the nobles only—not the people—a Monarchy has absorbed it. Nearly every Republic has ended by becoming a Monarchy; only once in modern history has a Monarchy become a Republic, and a few brief years saw it trodden beneath the hoof of a military despotism—of all forms of Government the worst.

MR. POLK, CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

MR. CLAY, CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

GREAT WHIG PROCESSION, AT NEW YORK.—See next page.

While the Americans, then, are mustering their strength for the elective battle, in monster meetings, processions on wheels, speeches, shoutings, canvassings, with much that is stirring, much that is picturesque, perhaps, but more that is mischievous—let them not imagine that all political liberty is enshrined in the Constitution of which they are so often, and sometimes, we must add, so inordinately proud: there is, at least, something to be said on the other side of the question.

The rival candidates for the office are Mr. Polk and Mr. Clay; we have given portraits of both of them, and a sketch of a "Procession" in New York.

APPROACHING ELECTION OF THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT.

We have just received the annexed interesting sketches from our correspondent at New York; they are accompanied by the following important details:—

The great political contest for the ascendancy between the two powerful parties of Whig and Democrat in the United States, is now (Nov. 1) near at hand; and three respective juntas are marshalling their forces, discussing the best practices of their doctrine and political faith, exciting the multitude by cannon-firing, song-singing, stool-sitting, music, processions, banners, &c. Colloquial questions seem to be merged in the chief subjects of protective tariff, or free-trade; United States Bank, or no bank; Texas with the Union, or the Union without Texas; equal distribution of the land funds, according to the ratio of the population of each state, or no distribution, &c.

Within the last few years, another question, too, has sprung up, which has given rise to a new party—this is the question of the naturalization of foreigners. The Constitution of the United States provides that a foreigner shall have been seven years in the country before he becomes a voter, and shall have gone through the regular forms of naturalization. It also stipulates that a native-born citizen shall have arrived at the age of twenty-one years, before he be allowed the privileges of citizenship and the right of suffrage. These stipulations are separate and exclusive of questions of respective states, where a property qualification is necessary. This has been a question of serious agitation among all classes, whether a foreigner should attain his citizenship and the right of suffrage in one-third less time than a native-born citizen. A party called the "Native Americans" has been formed, which seeks to repeal the present naturalization laws, and render it compulsory on the foreigner to have completed a residence of twenty-one years, in the United States, before he becomes a voter for any office in the gift of the people. One subject compounding a part of the principles of this party, on account of which they are anxious to extend the time of naturalization, is that of passivity. They disclaim holding any hostile feelings towards that system of Christian faith as such, but they are distrustful of the influence it may yet exert over the politics of this country.

This party is now becoming very popular, and at the late canvassing, has elected several of its candidates in different states. The native American party is probably stronger in the states of Pennsylvania, New York, and Louisiana, than in other states of the Union, for the reason that these states have suffered more from the innovation of foreigners, and their influence at the polls. It is not yet known for which candidate for the Presidency this party will cast their votes; but it is presumed they will favour the Whig candidate, as the Democratic party has heretofore received the suffrages of naturalized foreigners.

There are, virtually, three candidates for the Presidency, but really, only two; for the abolition candidate Mr. Berry has been put in nomination only by a few of the states, and will receive but a small number of votes. The grand contest, then, is between Messrs. Polk and Clay, and present appearances indicate that it will be a close one. In a brief manner as possible we shall give a sketch of the political histories of these distinguished men, and of their claims to the high office for which they are named.

JAMES KNOX POLK is the Democratic candidate for the office of President of the United States. He is a North Carolinian by birth, and at present a citizen of Tennessee. He was born in Mecklenburg on the 2nd November, 1795, and is consequently in the forty-ninth year of his age. His ancestors, whose original name, Polk, has, by obvious transition, assumed its present form, emigrated from Ireland. His uncle, Colonel Thomas Polk, was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and the prime mover of the formal Manifesto of Independence issued in North Carolina, one year before the Declaration of the states, on the 4th July, 1776.

Mr. Polk emigrated to Tennessee with his father in 1806, entered the University of North Carolina in 1810, where he distinguished himself as the first scholar in mathematics and the classics. He returned to Tennessee, and became a practitioner at the bar; in 1818, was chosen representative to the State Legislature; in 1825, a member of Congress; placed in the Committee of Foreign Affairs; in 1833, elected Speaker of the House of Representatives, and also in 1837, in 1839, was sworn Governor of Tennessee under a Democratic gain of 27,000 votes. He has now received the unanimous nomination of the National Democratic Convention for President.

Mr. Polk's political character has always been of consistency. He is of the school which puts a strict construction upon the powers of the Constitution, and consequently, is an enemy to the various projects of the Whig party; to the making of public roads and canals within the States by the General Government; to the creation of a National Bank; to the distribution of the surplus revenue among the States, &c. When General Jackson was President of the United States, Mr. Polk supported, with ability, the principal measures of his administration.

Mr. Polk's talents are respectable. His private character is spotless, his demeanor courteous, but manly, and his impulses generous. His predilections are in favour of the admission of Texas into the Union; but, should he be elected to the office of President, it is by no means certain that such an event would transpire.

HENRY CLAY is the Whig candidate for President. He is a native of Hanover county, Virginia, and at present a citizen of Kentucky. He was born on the 12th August 1777. His father was a Baptist clergyman. Mr. Clay first became distinguished as a prominent pleader in Lexington, Kentucky, where he practiced at the bar. He was chosen in the celebrated trial of Aaron Burr, when arrested in Kentucky, for high treason. He was chosen a member of the Kentucky Legislature; and in 1800, he took his seat in the Senate of the United States, to serve the fraction of a term on account of the resignation of Hon. John Alden. Having been elected to the United States Senate, he was again chosen to the Legislature of Kentucky. In 1808, he took on seat a second time in the Senate. He opposed the renewal of the charter of the United States Bank. He was in favour of the war with Great Britain. He was chosen a member and afterwards Speaker of the House of Representatives. In 1813 he was appointed one of the commissioners to Ghent, to arrange a treaty of peace with Great Britain. Returning home in 1815, he was again elected to the Congress of the United States. He now advocates the re-chartering of the United States Bank, which he opposed in 1813. In 1824, he made his greatest speech in favour of American industry. He was the candidate of his party for President of the United States. Messrs. Jackson, Adams, and Crawford were the highest candidates, but neither having a plurality of votes, the choice devolved on the House of Representatives, of which Mr. Clay was a member. Mr. Clay and his friends turned the balance in favour of Mr. Adams, and he was elected. Mr. Clay was immediately appointed Secretary of State by Mr. Adams, which office he accepted. This circumstance gave rise to a charge of bargain and corruption on the part of Mr. Clay, which, it would seem, has never been fully substantiated, though it has been the means of prejudicing the public mind against the political history of this distinguished man. In 1831, in the administration of President Jackson, he was again sent to the Senate of the United States. The same year he was nominated by the National Republican Convention again for President of the United States, and was defeated by General Jackson; was re-elected to the Senate in 1835, and was elected, in 1842, by Mr. Crittenden.

Mr. Clay, in person, is tall, erect, and commanding. He is a most eloquent and impressive speaker. Our engraving is a capital likeness of his face, which indicates a powerful and brilliant intellect.

MODE OF ELECTING A PRESIDENT.—In all the states, with one or two exceptions, Presidential Elections are chosen by the people. The electors constitute one from each congressional district in the respective States, and are chosen in November, once every four years, when is the term of office prescribed by the Constitution for the President. The electors having been chosen, meet in electoral colleges, cast their votes for the man of their choice, which votes are transmitted to the seat of Government under seal, and opened before both Houses of Congress. Should a plurality of votes appear for any one man, he is declared elected, and the same system is observed with regard to the Vice-President. Should neither candidate have a plurality of votes, the choice devolves on the House alone. This event has occurred but twice since the formation of the Constitution. No one person is eligible for more than two terms in succession. In one of two States, the electors are chosen by the Legislatures.

The excitement throughout the United States at the present moment is intense. The most powerful parts of all parties are traversing the country, conducting meetings, and haranguing the multitudes in homes and in open-air language, never tiring to denounce their opponents with unmeasured mal. A new system of canvassing and agitation has come up within a few years, and all sorts of luxury is resorted to now a-days to excite the passions and passions of electors. At the election of President Harrison, in 1840, log cabinets were erected by his party throughout the country, where they congregated in mass meetings, sang Whig songs, and drank hard cyder; soon skulls were fastened upon the doors and walls, all of which were symbols of their candidate's place and unenviable mode of living—for he lived in a log house, in a new country; occasionally went "across hunting"; and hard cyder was his principal beverage. This may be said to be the commencement of song singing at political meetings, which is now adopted by both and all parties, and puts us in mind of the Jacobite times in Scotland.

Mass processions are now becoming very popular. On the eve of an election, and for months previous thereto has been a continued series of marching and counter-marching throughout the country; gun-firing, drum beating, horn-blowing, and a waving of banners, and the whole Republic seems alive and under arms.

Our engraving is a correct representation of a Whig procession in New York, drawn by J. Kibb. The procession was headed with a cavalcade bearing banners with various devices. Then came carriages and waggon, with implements representing the mechanic arts, which were followed by a body of men and boys, some carrying flags and banners, and the whole under the direction of a choir of marshals and assistants. The view is taken from the corner of Chamber street and Broadway.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARISIANA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

The spirit of hostility towards England appears much assuaged in Paris. The spirit of angry has been singularly marked as regards the English plays, whose performances, although treated by some narrow-minded persons, have received the cordial will of the public as well as the Government. Sent some vapour and smoke will every now and then arise from the old crater of Anglomaniac. One of these eruptions has assumed, beyond measure, the English residents in Paris. Bartolomey, the national poet, writes a weekly feuilleton in verse in the Siècle. Of his last libellous satire the perillous Albion is his devoted quarry—and in his attack he commits the most innumerable mistakes on the subject of our language and habits—for example, take these three lines:—

"Les Anglais et les Anglais échappent de leurs bouches,"

"Le chaste Polignac condamne sans appel,"

"A cinq francs sterling un petit tenail."

Our fashionable salons are preparing to give a brilliant reception to the members of fair and noble foreigners, who are shortly expected in the capital. In addition to those we have already mentioned, are the Countess of Galloway, Lady Pauline, Lady Cardigan, the Countess of Tarkenton, and Lady Bessington. These fair visitors will, doubtless, draw Parisian society this season by a display of all that splendour and luxury which render your continent so conspicuous abroad, and with which the Parisian salons find it so difficult to compete. Every circumstance continues to infuse spirit into Parisian society. Independently of the arrival of persons of fashion, the prelude to the opening of the Chambers is now begun. MM. Thiers, Rulland, Vivien, Odillon Barrot, &c., have already arrived. From every quarter the foreign representatives of the Government come to give personal explanation—Ramon de Montaner, from Constantinople; the Marquis de la Valette, from Egypt; M. de Noye, from Morocco, &c. The Duke de Glücksberg, from Spain, and the Duke d'Alby, from Algeria, are but a few of those that will follow. The arrival of the Duke d'Aumale is to be a pretext, one of those Parisian society is so ready to seize, for balls, gait, and magnificence. The young durbles' new household is already nearly complete. Amongst her female attendants are named the Countess de St. Maurice, niece of the Marquis de Dolomieu, as lady of honour, and Madame Collier, as Dame d'honneur.

Amongst other English tastes, albums are becoming the rage at our Court. The ingenious method of uniting and commemorating artistic talent has great success in France. The press and the boudoir team with this elegant product of art. The album of Queen Victoria, which has been so greatly admired, has given this fashion fresh impetus. Apropos, if the worthy Vermorel de Lamoignon be believed, the prevailing taste is the cause of the marriage which, it is confidently reported, is about to take place between the daughter of Lord James Hay, the cousin-german of the Duke of Wellington, and the celebrated marine painter Guérin. The Arlequinade, at least so relates the Vermorel, retired, last winter, the present at a fair, painted in an exquisite style by Winterhalter, bore showed this elegant offering wherever she went with enthusiastic praise. The fair lady was to M. Guérin what the laurels of Milady were to the Thémistocles. Ardent emulation filled his mind, depriving him of rest or peace, and he set to work to compose an offering worthy of being presented to the fair daughter of Albion. The result of his labours was an album, which might with propriety have been dedicated to Neptune and Amphitrite, for the sea, the waves, the calm, and the tempest, were there represented with wondrous truth. They perhaps imagined the coldness of his mind, for the fair and noble Union, touched by the splendour and talent of this homage, is about to reward the fortunate artist with her hand.

Even in the absence of the Princess on their wedding excursion, pleasures and gaieties are still in vogue at the Court. Yesterday, at the Theatre of the Palais St. Cloud, the actress of the Comte de Frensch performed "L'École des Vieilles," the celebrated piece of Camille Delavigne, and a little one act Maître, entitled "Faut-il s'enrichir," in which the actor, Samson, was greatly applauded by the august spectators. Amongst the audience we distinguished Alderman Moon.

It is reported that the King on his journey to Fontainebleau was robbed of a silk pocket handkerchief, a splendid snuff box mounted in diamonds, and a portrait of the Queen of the Belgians, by Madame de Maber, which were taken from his coat pocket.

The Baron Silvestre Rothschild has just returned to Paris.

A company have offered to build a new and immense opera-house in the Champs Elysées at their expense, on condition of being put in possession of the space occupied by the present one, on which they propose building houses, which on that site would be of immense value. Sixty years ago, when the Grand Opera was splendidly burnt, one of the former shades of the Académie Musicale was built in forty days. Paris then could not live without an opera; it was the work of magic art; now, the construction will take years.

The sixth and last volume of the "Histoire des Arts" (from 1838 to 1844), by M. Louis Blanc, has just appeared. Written by a gentleman of extreme liberal opinions, this work nevertheless bears testimony to the remarkable genius of its author, who, a man of diminutive stature with gentle manners and almost infantine physiognomy, nevertheless unites brilliant talents with great acquirements and depth of scientific knowledge.

Although somewhat abused on statues and fountains in the Place Louis XV, every foreigner has admired the gilding of constructions in Paris. The spear-points of railings and the roofs of edifices acquire thus, at moonlight, the enchantment of a fairy scene. An offer has been made to Government by a company, who propose to gild, by the Roche process (Kington's), the vast dome of the Invalides. It may be remembered that a short time after the Revolution the same offer was made by an individual, who, however, instead of gilding, as this company does, 200,000 francs for the purpose, proposed to pay the Government 50,000 francs for being allowed to do it. The motive of the singular offer was explained by the fact that, the gilding of the dome being of great thickness, the speculator intended merely scratching off the surface, which was blackened by the soot, and the profits of the gold thus procured would, after the expenses were paid, have amounted to 250,000 francs.

A member of the Geographical Society, a highly-gifted Jesuit missionary, recently returned from the Celestial Empire, vouchers for the truth of the following singular admixture of civilised feeling and barbaric superstition of the present Emperor Taek-wang. His favourite daughter, Yuhanna (Pearl of Evening), was betrothed to her cousin, the Prince Tsung-pi. It is usual for the bridegroom to present to the lady the skin of some fierce animal on the day of marriage; in the pursuit of which custom the prince was killed. The lady mourned, and her life was despaired of. The court physician, Koa-lun, prevented melancholy; it availed not, and the "Pearl of Evening" died. The Emperor sentenced the physician to take his own drug. He was incarcerated for three years; when the Emperor, finding that the drug was innocuous, liberated the M.D. The Emperor was praised as the most equitable ruler that ever blessed the plumed tails and the chopsticks of China.

FRANCE.

The Paris papers do not contain any intelligence of importance. The Chambers are to meet on the 25th of December, until which time, probably, there will be some stagnation in the political world.

The Commerce states that last Tuesday a considerable mass of earth detached itself from the Hill of Montmartre, on the side of the Barrier of Rochefort, Paris, and fell upon a horse kiln, a cartwright's factory, a weaver's workshop, and a dwelling-house, which were partly buried under it. The inhabitants were fortunately awake by the cry of some dogs, and escaped in time. At six o'clock another house experienced a similar fate, and a third was surrounded with earth up to the feet. Fragments of earth and stone continued to roll down the hill, which is extremely steep on that side, during the whole day, and the alarmed inmates of a number of dwellings situated at the bottom of the delivery abandoned their homes, carrying away their furniture and most valuable effects. The event had been long foreseen, from the extreme excavations made in the hill to procure "plaster of Paris." It seemed probable that there would be a further sinking of earth, but precautions had been taken to avoid accident.

The Journal des Débats publishes a notice from the Intendant-General of the Cord Islands, announcing to all artists that the annual exposition of their works will open at the Louvre on the 15th of March, 1845, and close on the 15th of May following.

The papers mention the death at Angoulême on the 12th inst. of M. Galar de Branne, Count of Branne, former Chamberlain of the Emperor Napoleon, in his 74th year.

Mr. Adelman Moon, who is in Paris, has had the honour to dine at the palace with her Majesty.

A Naval Court Marshal was held at Toulon on the 14th inst. for the trial of Captain Benson, of the French navy, for the loss of the steam frigate Grainland on the 16th of August last, on the coast of Morocco, within two leagues of Larache. It appeared from the examination of Captain Benson, that the steam frigate Grainland, constructed at Rochefort in the commencement of the present year, and which had joined the squadron under the orders of the Prince de Joinville on the coast of Morocco, went on shore during a thick fog whilst on her passage from Mogador to Cadix. All the efforts made to float her having proved ineffectual, it became necessary to destroy the wreck, to prevent its falling into the hands of the Moors, who come in multitudes to the coast, and who never ceased to keep up a heavy fire from the crew of the Grainland. After the witnesses for the prosecution and defence had been examined, the Admiral-General, in a long speech, accused the captain of gross negligence, and called on the Court to declare him guilty, and to dismiss him from the navy. After a very able defence by Captain Benson, the President, in the name of the Court, declared that the Court was unanimously of opinion that the accused did not lose the vessel wilfully, but that the Court was divided on the question, whether it had been lost from neglect and want of experience, four members being for the affirmative, and four for the negative. The law requiring that an accused can be declared guilty only by a majority, Captain Benson was acquitted.

The Moniteur contains a Royal ordinance, authorising the Minister for Foreign Affairs to open, in his department, a credit of 115,000, for unforeseen expenses.

The pupils of the Polytechnic School at present in Paris, between 60 and 80 in number, assembled on Sunday to consider the line of conduct they should pursue in the situation in which they had been placed by the Government. They pledged their words of honour, two months ago, to participate of the fate of, and to remain staunch to each other, all being culpable or innocent in the same degree. After some discussion, as the time for opening the school had not yet arrived, they drew up an address to the King, expressing to his Majesty the painful anxiety in which they had been placed by the Government—feeling, on the one hand, to pass for rebels, and bound, on the other, by an engagement of honour not to allow a few to be sacrificed for the fault of all.

SPAIN.

Our Spanish news this week records the progress of insurrection in the Peninsula. There has been a serious outbreak at Logrono, in the province of Old Castile, at the head of which the celebrated Martin Zurbarán has placed himself. The 17th was General Zurbarán's jour de fête, and he celebrated it by proclaiming the Constitution of 1812 in its integrity. To the cry of "Viva la Constitución de 1812," was added the cry of "Viva Isabella II., and death to the tyrants." Zurbarán was at the head of 400 men, and was hourly gaining additional followers. He marched from Logrono to Nájera, a town of 7000 inhabitants, where he met with no opposition, and was directing his steps towards Burgos. The part of the country where this insurrection has broken out has been the focus of several insurrections, both liberal and carlist. In the neighbouring towns of Cimbrón, Azo, and Burgos, there are thousands who are disaffected to the present Government, and only wait for an opportunity of rising.

There is reason to believe that this insurrection has various ramifications throughout the country, and fresh outbreaks are expected in various places. The kingdom of Old Castile, as well as the neighbouring provinces, is described as being in a state of the greatest excitement.

From Madrid our letters are to the 15th instant. The Chamber of Deputies was still occupied with the proposed reforms of the Constitution. The Opposition is quite unable to carry any amendments to the Bill.

Letters from Barcelona announce that Prim and his co-accused are still confined in the tower of the barracks of the Body Guard, to which several persons arrested in the provinces, as his accomplices, had been likewise removed. Prim, who had been allowed to communicate with his friends, continued to protest his innocence, and loudly vowed vengeance against General Narváez and the Political Chief of Madrid. It was reported that Commander Abarca, who, after being implicated in the conspiracy, had turned Queen's evidence, had been arrested.

There have been some riots at Cadix, but nothing of a very serious nature appears to have occurred.

There are reports of the intended marriage of the Queen of Spain with Count Trépol. The Memorial Borda positively asserts that the marriage between the Queen and the Count will take place next month at Valencia, and that the recognition of Isabella by the Courts of Vienna and Rome will immediately follow.

PORTUGAL.

Our private correspondence from Lisbon on the 14th, records the continued triumph of Costa Cabral. Not only did his Cabinet obtain a majority in the Chamber of Peers of 37 votes against 13 on the question "of the use made of the extraordinary powers conferred on Government for the suppression of the revolt," but there seems every probability that the Ministers will be successful on the question of the Bill of Indemnity for the unconstitutional acts performed by the Government after the cessation of the discretionary powers. Towards the close of the debates which have taken place on the subject, Costa Cabral made a long speech, in which he not only justified himself and his colleagues for all they had done, but went a step further, and showed, by the production of documentary evidence, that Count Lavradio, and others of his political opponents, and, upon the same plea of necessity, committed much greater infractions of the charter, or rather had made a much more free and extensive use of the discretionary powers with which they had been invested, when they were in power, in 1826, on the occasion of the Marquis of Chaves' revolt for the restoration of Absolutism, and in 1841, when the question of the navigation of the river Douro was on the point of bringing about a rupture with Spain.

The well-known capitalist José Bento de Araújo, one of the wealthiest merchants of Lisbon, died on the 9th instant. He entered the Portuguese capital, in 1771, with one cruzado in his pocket.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

We have received Cape of Good Hope papers to the 15th of September. The accounts from the eastern frontiers are much more favourable than those last received, the placing of the military detachments at intervals on the neutral ground having evidently produced a beneficial result. Four Caffres implicated in the murder of Mr. de Lange, the Dutch boer, had been delivered up by the chief of their tribe, to be sent with by the Colonial tribunals, and sixty head of cattle had, at the same time, been restored to the widow. The rains had been copious, and the weather in every respect favourable for the crops, and securing the season's crop of wool. The Governor had received the patent for erecting Natal into a separate province, with a Lieutenant-Governor, but subordinate to the Central Government of the Cape, and subject to the same laws, &c. The Lieutenant-Governor to be assisted by an executive council of five members, and a Recorder was to be the head of the judicial establishment, from whose court there will be a right of appeal to the supreme tribunal at Cape Town. The temporary laws in force in Natal were to be abolished, from whatever authority they had emanated. The road from Graham's Town to Cape Town was a valuable project with the inhabitants, and had greatly enhanced the value of the land situated in the districts through which it was to pass.

UNITED STATES.

The packet ship Oxford has arrived at Liverpool, with accounts from New York one day later than those received last week by the Aradix. The Presidential election was the only subject of importance discussed by the papers. The chance of Mr. Clay's return was said to be impossible. W. Peters, Esq., her Britannic Majesty's Consul to Philadelphia, was robbed of his wallet, containing two hundred dollars, on the 26th inst., at the Harrisburg Railroad depot. He had just returned from Ohio with a newly-married wife. There is a good deal of business doing in railway shares. The New York Stock Market was flat, and prices rather lower than by the quotations received by the steamer. The rate of exchange had not varied.

TAHITI.

Later accounts have been received from the Society Islands, by way of the United States, from which it appears that there has been another battle between the French and the natives, in which a great number of the latter have been butchered by their well-armed and well-disciplined assailants. Louis Philippe's new officer of the Legion of Honour, Captain Brunet, is, we suppose, the hero of this new slaughter. The Piquaque English frigate has conveyed Queen Pomare to the island of Bora-Bora.

According to a Paris paper, intelligence from Papeiti to the 6th June had been received, through the United States. The most perfect tranquillity reigned there; the garrison was hard at work at the fortifications of the town. The insurgents had not laid down their arms, but, under the terror inspired by the affair of Mahahena, they dared not take a step out of their entrenchments.

A letter from Rio Janeiro, of the 12th of September, announces the arrival, there of Admiral Hamelin, in the Virginie frigate, and states that he was about immediately to proceed to Tahiti.

THE WEST INDIES.

The Royal West India mail packet the Clyde has arrived with mails from the West Indies. She sailed from St. Jago de Cuba, October 19th; Jamaica, 24th; Demerara, 28th; Trinidad, 31st; Barbadoes, 34th; Grenada, 36th; St. Thomas, 31st; and Papei, 12th November. The Clyde brings home 13 passengers, and on freight 100 dollars, 4 in British money, 75 ounces gold dust, 699 ounces silver, 399 ounces platinum.

It appears that the season throughout the West Indies has been unusually hot, causing great sickness and mortality. Demerara was particularly unhealthy, typhus and scarlet fever raging, in addition to the indigenous fever of the colony.

The Jamaica House of Assembly was opened by the Earl of Eglinton in the 15th of October. The Bill Coote proposition was brought forward in a very full house, and, after a lengthened discussion, was carried; the number, however, being limited to 3000, instead of 300, as proposed by the home Government.

A dreadful fire occurred on the Canal Coffee Plantations, near Demerara, on the 14th of October, and was burning on the 20th, whereby nearly the whole of that valuable district would be destroyed. The plantations were fired by the peasantry, in consequence of a tax on the sale of plantains having been recently exacted by the collector of the district.

The Georgetown Royal Gazette contains accounts of other incendiary fires in Demerara.

A severe hurricane had destroyed numerous vessels in Montego Bay, and along the coast on the 18th ult.

The Jamaica Times contains an important piece of news, indicative of the determination to discourage slavery in Cuba. That paper says:—"By late advice from Havannah, we have the gratifying intelligence that the Captain-General has issued a proclamation, notifying that 'on and after the 1st of January next, all vessels, under whatever flag, arriving at any of the ports of Cuba, with slaves, will be confiscated.' By all accounts, both from Cuba and the old country, never was the Captain-General in greater favour than he is at present; while the promptitude with which he put down the late attempt at insurrection has been made the theme of praise among men of all parties."

A dreadful accident has happened at Turnhout (Belgium) at the funeral of M. de Net, deputy of that district. As the funeral was to be with all the honours due to his rank, a great number of persons were attracted to it; among these were fifty who stationed themselves in a gallery, built on the outside of a neighbouring window. This gallery not being constructed to support a great weight, suddenly gave way, and the whole were precipitated to the ground from a height of thirty feet. Four persons are already dead, above twenty others have received very serious injuries, many having their legs or arms broken, and it is feared that several of these will not recover.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

LORD HUNTINGTON'S BANKRUPTCY.—In the Bankruptcy Court on Monday, Lord Huntingtower came up for his final order. Mr. E. James, who appeared on behalf of his lordship, said that this matter was adjourned upon the understanding that some proposal should be made by Lord Huntingtower to his creditors, and his lordship had hoped to be able to effect a compromise with them on this. His lordship had never received one shilling from his father, the Earl of Dysart, from the time he had been sent to Kinnaird up to this moment would any appeal to his father's humanity produce one shilling? Lord Huntingtower had, therefore, to place his reliance entirely upon his mother. The sheriff now allowed to Lady Dysart, Mr. James asked a year, but she had appealed against the allowance, as being thoroughly disproportionate to Lord Dysart's income, which exceeded £10,000 per annum, and the judgment of the Court was about to be given. Lord, therefore, the proper amount of income which would be directed to her ladyship was known, it would be impossible for her to ascertain what sum his mother could allow him annually to liquidate the claims which were made upon him, as such amount would bear some proportion to her ladyship's income. If his Honor, under the circumstances, would allow a short adjournment, it would further the justice of the case to all parties, and give Lord Huntingtower an opportunity of knowing better the means he should have of effecting an arrangement with his creditors, which he was most anxious to do. Mr. Montague Chambers expressed his assent, on behalf of a creditor, to a further adjournment. Some further allusion having been made to the assistance to be rendered by Lady Dysart to her son, Mr. Commissioner Ponblanque said: I would rather it rested upon the justice of the father than the affection of the mother. After a short conversation as to the period of adjournment, it was ultimately arranged that the matter should stand over until Monday, the 30th of January next.

THE EARL OF DYSART V. THE COUNTESS OF DYSART.—In the Chancery Court, on Tuesday, Dr. Lushington gave judgment in this suit, which has excited some interest from the circumstances connected with it, as well as from the hearing indirectly upon the case of Lord Huntingtower. The suit was instituted by his lordship, to protect himself from the responsibility of being held good for her ladyship's debts, and also to enforce her return to her conjugal duties. To which her ladyship pleaded that his lordship made it unsafe for her to return to his house, and therefore prayed the Court to reject the suit entered by his lordship. The learned Judge said he had to reconcile evidence of the most conflicting kind, extending over a considerable space of time, and at periods somewhat remote. He had to weigh the credit due to the several witnesses, to make allowance for their bias as parties. He then recapitulated at considerable length the evidence. He could not think that Lady Dysart would run any personal danger by returning to his house. The unhappy differences which had arisen might be attributed, in a great measure, to the violent language used in the first instance by her ladyship, to her frequently absenting herself from his house, in order to enjoy the greater comfort and indulgence of her father's roof, and to her not studying, to that degree, commanded by her marriage obligations, the tastes, the habits, and even the eccentricities of her husband. But he did not justify Lord Dysart in the use of language which he could not otherwise characterize than as most degrading and infamous. But the question for that Court was, was it likely that Lady Dysart incurred personal risk by returning to his lordship's roof? He thought on his conscience no, and with that conviction so strongly impressed upon his mind he could not do otherwise than dismiss her petition. Dr. Lushington, in conclusion, said he must pronounce in favour of the prayer of Lord Dysart. The Court expressed a hope that Lady Dysart would know her duty was submission, and that Lord Dysart would recollect the Divine command, not to be better to his wife.—The Proctor for Lord Dysart prayed that the Court would issue its judgment in the ordinary course for the return of the countess to cohabitation.—The Proctor for the Countess of Dysart, with all due submission, gave notice of an appeal from the decision of the learned Judge.

THE PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.—There have been several days argument in the Court of Queen's Bench in the case of Howard v. Gossett, the well-known action of trespass against the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Commons, for having, as it was alleged, arrested the plaintiff under a warrant, which it was alleged was deficient in form. The case came before the Court on a demurrer to the defendant's plea of justification. Lord Brougham intimated that the Court would give judgment on as early a day as possible.

THE COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH AND THE ROYAL COURT OF JERSEY.—Our readers will recollect that a short time ago application was made on the behalf of a Mr. C. Charles Wilson to Mr. Justice Patteson, for a writ of Habeas corpus to bring him up before the Court of Queen's Bench, in order that the reasons of his imprisonment might be examined into, and decided upon. The writ was granted and addressed to the governor. This jurisdiction, instead of complying with the writ, referred it to the Royal Court of Jersey; and that Court, after hearing the Attorney-General upon the subject, and after due deliberation has decided that the governor "should take no notice whatever of the writ, their opinion being that the Court of Queen's Bench has no jurisdiction in Jersey, and that the writ of Habeas corpus does not run in that island." In the Hall Court, on Thursday, the Solicitor-General moved for and obtained a rule to show cause why the writ of Habeas corpus, obtained on the part of Mr. Charles Wilson, should not be superseded, on the ground that the Court had not the power of issuing such writ.

SWINDLING BILL-DISCOUNTERS.—The case of William Law, a mercer at Reading, was brought before the Court of Bankruptcy on Wednesday. The bankrupt's debts, it was stated, amounted to upwards of £12,000, and his assets would, it was asserted, be sufficient to pay between 9s. and 10s. in the pound. The only remarkable feature in his case was, that he had been made the victim of one of the many bill-swindling concerns which have recently sprung up in various parts of the metropolis. The bankrupt having been examined by Mr. Lums, as to an alleged removal of goods, which he denied, the further hearing was adjourned to the 24th of January.

A CERTIFICATE WITHHELD.—In the case of Mr. Casman, who carried on business as a wine merchant in Fenchurch-street, application was made for a certificate. His debts were about £12,000, and his assets £500. It appeared that he had bought wine at 4s. a dozen, which he immediately sold at 10s. This was his usual course of trading; and under all the circumstances Mr. Commissioner Ponblanque said that in justice to the creditors and the public, he must withhold his certificate for three years from this period.

MR. BARNARD GREGORY AND THE "HATVINT."—In the Court of Queen's Bench on Thursday, Mr. Platt made two applications on the part of the defendant, Mr. Gregory—one, that the period of his being brought up to receive judgment upon an indictment to which he had pleaded guilty, should be postponed; the other the postponement of a trial upon a criminal information filed in Trinity Term, 1843, in which Mr. Gregory was defendant, and which at present stood fixed for the present month. Mr. Platt read an affidavit from the defendant, in which he stated that he was wholly incapable of preparing for his trial, owing to his illness, and also to the regulations of the goal, which did not permit the free use of writing materials or the access to private papers necessary thereto; and that this application was made bona fide, and not merely for the purpose of delay. He (Mr. Platt) believed that if the defendant were compelled as present to attend this Court, his life would be placed in jeopardy thereby. After some discussion the Court intimated that the medical attendants of the defendant ought to make an affidavit, and time was allowed for the purpose.

POLICE.

THE CLAIMANT AGAINST LOUIS PHILIPPE.—At Bow-street, on Tuesday, the Frenchman Barthélemy, whose alleged claims against Louis Philippe have several times been brought before the public, applied to Mr. Jardine for leave to post a number of large placards he held in his hand at different places through town. They were printed in the French and English languages, setting forth that the King of the French was indebted to him to the amount of several thousands of pounds for the expenses he had incurred during the revolution in supporting two regiments to establish the King on the throne, and extracting of the Queen to mediate with his Majesty for the settlement of the alleged debt.—Mr. Jardine, having glanced over the contents of the papers, said he could perceive nothing illegal in them to prevent them being published, provided the applicant could obtain the permission of persons to have them affixed to their premises.—The applicant appeared gratified at the intelligence, and thanked the magistrate.

VIOLATION OF THE LIBERTY OF THE SUBJECT.—At the Thames Police-office on Tuesday Mr. George Walton, a respectable plumber and gas-fitter, of No. 5, George-terrace, Commercial-road, Stepney, and George Scudford, a lad in his employ were brought before Mr. Brodrip, on a charge of stealing one of Deffries' patent dry gas meters, value £7, stated in the police sheet to be the property of William Cornack, of the firm of Banks and Cornack, gas purifiers, at Church-row, Lamb-house. Mr. Walton, who was much agitated, said, that a few days ago he entered into an agreement with Banks and Cornack, to fit up a gas apparatus for them, and after the job was commenced Mr. Cornack requested the loan of a meter which he kept in his shop, for the purpose of trying some experiments on a gas-meter the firm had lately erected. He agreed to lend them a patent dry meter, on their promising to take particular care of it, and conveyed it to their premises. Having done work and furnished materials to the amount of £15, and knowing very little of the firm or their resources, he waited upon Mr. Cornack that morning, and asked him for an advance of money. Mr. Cornack refused to advance anything, and he would not pay a farthing till the job was completed. He said he could not proceed with the work till he received an advance of £5, and Mr. Cornack immediately directed his foreman to proceed to the nearest gas-fitter's, and bring him to the premises to complete the fitting-up of the apparatus. He then said he would take home his gas meter, and took it up and gave it to his boy. Mr. Cornack immediately sent for a policeman, and gave him instructions for searching his own property.—Mr. Brodrip: Then you are in custody for merely taking away your own property, which Mr. Cornack refused to give up?—Mr. Walton: Yes, Sir; I lent it to the firm of Banks and Cornack for a day or two. It is my property; and there are persons in court to prove it. I have had the mortification of being taken through the streets as a felon, pointed at by my neighbours, and followed by a crowd of persons, to many of whom I was known, in open day. It is too bad, Sir.—Mr. Brodrip: Too bad! it is indeed. (To the policeman.) You should not have taken these parties into custody as well. You should not have arrested a man for stealing his own property, under such circumstances. What time did you apprehend them?—Policeman: About 10.—Mr. Brodrip: And it is now twenty minutes past two. The man and his associate have been illegally in custody for about three hours and a half, and no prosecutor has ventured to appear against them. The policeman said he took the parties to the station-house to settle the matter amicably (laughter).—Mr. Brodrip: I must beg of you, Mr. Symonds, to mention this to the superintendent of the division. It has happened before, and must not be repeated. The liberty of the subject is not to be trifled with in this manner. Keep persons arrested in the detention of Mr. Walton and his servant are liable to an action. This, the other, said he knew Mr. Walton to be a most respectable and upright tradesman.—Mr. Brodrip: He leaves this court without a stain on his character. It is a monstrous infringement of the liberty of the subject. The prisoners were then set at liberty, and Mr. Walton took home his gas-meter. (There are frequent instances of a disposition on the part of police constables to take people into custody upon charges which they know cannot be sustained; and, although disposed to do full justice to the New Police, as a body, yet we think these individual cases of the arbitrary exercise of power ought to be watched narrowly and punished. The liberty of the subject would be but a mere delusion if such conduct as that above noticed were of frequent occurrence.)

TWO OXFORD DRIVERS COMMITTED TO THE HOUSE OF CORRECTION.—At Union Hall, on Wednesday, Henry Key and Richard Day, the drivers of two "hammer" omnibuses, were summoned for furious driving, and endangering the lives of the passengers of their respective vehicles, as well as others passing along the road.—Mr. George, of the firm of Courage and Doolittle, the owners of said Thames, stated that on Wednesday he was a passenger in one of the omnibuses, and that soon after they left the Elephant and Castle, the defendants, who were the drivers, commenced driving at a very rapid pace along the road. They seemed to be vying with each other as to who should be foremost, and, in endeavouring to obtain this point, they put their horses into a gallop, and, from their close proximity to each other on frequent occasions, witness ascribed every moment that a collision would have taken place, and that an onset of either one or both the vehicles would have occurred. Even when the defendants got into Camberwell they still continued driving at the same furious speed up High-street, which is very narrow; and when they arrived at the Red Cap, witness got out and remonstrated against such conduct, and determined to appear against them. There were ten passengers in the omnibus in which he rode, one of whom was a lady.—Mr. Allport, a gentleman, who was a passenger in the other omnibus, also gave evidence corroboratory of the furious manner in which both vehicles were driven by the defendants. A collision did take place in the course of their career, and it was only a matter of surprise that an accident of a most serious nature had not occurred.—Other evidence having been given, Mr. Cottingham said that it was the worst case of that description that was ever brought before him—that he considered he would not be doing justice to the public if he did not exercise the power which the late act had given magistrates in cases of this kind, and instead of imposing a fine on the offenders, which it was certain had not the effect of deterring them from furiously driving against each other, inflict a punishment that would be attended with much more beneficial effects for the public safety. The magistrate then sentenced the defendants to be imprisoned for six weeks, each to hard labour, in Prison House of Correction.—Mr. Courage subsequently applied for a mitigation of the punishment on the ground that it was the first time of the defendants' conviction, and that one of them had a wife and family dependent on him for support.—Mr. Cottingham said that there were no mitigating circumstances, and he could not accede to the application. [Mr. Cottingham has done nothing more than his duty in punishing these omnibus drivers by imprisonment. The lives of passengers are continually placed in jeopardy by the misconduct of such men, to whom a fine is no punishment, as it is frequently made up by a subscription, or paid by their masters. The dread of imprisonment and hard labour, it is hoped, will induce them to reform their conduct altogether.]

THE CASE OF THE FRENCH BANKRUPT.—The Act for the EXTRACTION OF OFFENDERS.—The French fraudulent bankrupt case was brought before the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House on Wednesday. Mr. E. James applied for a warrant to arrest Jacques Beest, a French merchant, residing in London, accused of the French crime of fraudulent bankruptcy. The learned counsel after alluding to the recent decision of the Court of Queen's Bench on the matter, urged the Lord Mayor to grant the warrant, as it would afford an opportunity of initiating proceedings de novo, and thus clear away a difficulty only occasioned in the first instance by the illegality of the instrument upon which Beest was committed to the custody of the keeper of the goal. The necessary documentary proofs recognised by the French law were ready, and the learned counsel submitted that there could be no valid ground for refusing the warrant under all the circumstances. Mr. James called some witnesses who deposed to the legality of the proceedings in France, after which the Lord Mayor said, that he had in fact very particularly into the act, and, as the person accused of fraudulent bankruptcy could not be committed for such an offence in this country, he did not see how he, as a magistrate, could be justified in giving a warrant for the apprehension of an individual so charged. Mr. James contended, that the decision of the Lord Mayor would neutralise the important objects of the late Act of Correction, but his lordship said he could not come to any other conclusion.

COUNTRY NEWS.

ALARMING ILLNESS OF GENERAL NOTT.—We have much regret that we cannot report at all favourably of the present state of General Nott's health. The gallant officer has had a relapse, and is now very ill in Wales. It is conjectured that this change for the worse has been brought about by the change in the weather.

PUBLIC WALKS AND BATHS IN BIRMINGHAM.—On Tuesday there was a very numerous and respectable meeting at the Town Hall, Birmingham, the Mayor in the chair, for the purpose of considering the propriety of allaying the necessary measures for securing to the people of Birmingham public baths and places of recreation. A resolution, moved by Lord Leighton, was carried, stating "that the meeting, considering the great extent, the dense and increasing population of the borough of Birmingham, and the growing difficulties of obtaining for a large portion of its inhabitants ready access to places for ablution, fresh air, and beneficial recreation, declares its opinion that the formation of public baths and public walks, or other open spaces for exercise and active sports in the vicinity of the borough, would contribute greatly to the health, rational enjoyment, kindly intercourse, and good morals of all classes of our population." A resolution for the establishment of at least four sets of public baths in the most convenient parts of the borough was also agreed to, and a subscription was set on foot to carry out the objects of the meeting. No less a sum than £1000 was collected.

LORD HARBOROUGH AND THE MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY.—During last week, there were some rather serious affairs between the agents of Lord Harborough and some persons employed on the Midland Railway, arising out of a notice given on the part of his Lordship to the Railway Company, that they would not be allowed to send any one to survey the park. The most violent skirmish was yesterday week at Saxby-bridge, adjoining the lordship's park. The surveyors were defeated on the previous day, and it was generally understood that another attempt on a larger scale was to be made on the following morning. Consequently, by nine o'clock between thirty and forty of his lordship's servants assembled at the spot above named, to prevent the surveyors of the company taking their levels, &c., on the towing-path of the Oakham Canal, and along disused Park. Very soon parties of gentlemen in the employ of the company arrived in chains, &c., from Melton and Oakham, heading a number of reckless-looking rascals, carrying flag-staffs, &c. A longed-for party took place on the bridge, between his lordship's steward and skinner, the clerk and treasurer of the Oakham Canal Company, and the collectors and surveyors of the railway company, as to the mode of proceeding to be adopted. Meanwhile, Lord Harborough's men made preparations for a determined stand on the towing-path on each side of the bridge, by fencing the path with traps, &c., close to the water's edge. An attempt was then made by the surveyors to force their way through the party stationed on the Oakham side of the bridge, but the barrier was too firm to be broken, and they had to beat a retreat. Four or five of the county police now also came up. Both parties were then ordered to lay aside their weapons, consisting of "about shillings," &c., and desired not to strike any blow, but simply to try their strength by pushing. A "grand stand" was then made by Lord H's party below the bridge, and nearest Melton, who stood "wedged together," and forming a living and very formidable-looking barrier. The surveyors next placed rows of their men with their backs to the faces of the earl's party, and set others in opposite position to force the way. An almost indestructible scene now took place. The railway men exerted their utmost strength, but so firm did his lordship's party retain their ground, that more than one was severely felled by "high in the air" between and rolling over the heads of the contending parties. Others were forced through the hedge, tumbling over each other, and nearly filling the ditch beneath, amidst the shouts of the "barriers" and the numerous spectators. Great confusion now ensued, the two parties mixing together, and in the tumult and dust becoming almost indistinguishable by each other. There were some broken heads during the fray. In the midst of this confusion, the surveyors succeeded in getting the chain on the fortified ground. Lord Harborough's men then took forcible possession of the chain, which in the scuffle to recover it was broken in one or two places. A fine chase was then had for about a quarter of a mile down the towing-path. Another barrier was then about to be formed, when a horse was shot by the railway men, and it was finally agreed that each party should withdraw their forces, and that the matter should be judicially brought before the magistrates by issuing a summons for assault against one or two of the men of each party.

SERIOUS CASE OF INFANTICIDE AT WOLVERHAMPTON.—An investigation is now going forward in Wolverhampton, in which a lady, of hitherto respectable character, together with a married sister and a young surgeon, are charged as being implicated in a case of infanticide. A coroner's inquest, under the presidency of Mr. Phillips, one of the coroners for Staffordshire, has been held some days, and stands adjourned for further evidence. There was an examination of the parties at the Police-office on Monday, when the charge was regularly heard. The mother of the child is a Miss Radford, and the other accused persons are Mrs. Radford (her sister), and Mr. South (the surgeon); Mr. Radford has also been taken into custody since the inquest. The evidence was such that the magistrates expressed their intention of sending the case for trial, but the prisoners were remanded until the conclusion of the inquest. The inquiry is the engaging topic of conversation in the neighbourhood. Miss Radford is the sister-in-law of Mr. Darby, the post-master, and resided with him.

THE PROPOSED INCORPORATION OF BRIGHTON.—A meeting of the inhabitants of Brighton was held at the Town-hall, on Monday afternoon, for the purpose of receiving the report of the committee appointed at the public meeting held on Monday, the 21st ult., to consider whether it will be beneficial to the inhabitants that the borough should be incorporated, and the propriety of petitioning her Majesty in Council for a charter of incorporation under the provisions of the Municipal Corporations Act of Parliament. A proposal was made by way of amendment, to receive the report that day three months, and after a very long discussion, it was finally determined to postpone the meeting for a month, and in the meantime to have the report printed and circulated through the borough, in order that the inhabitants might have an opportunity to consider it. Captain Perbell and Lord A. Harsey, the borough members, were present, but did not address the meeting.

MASSIVE FESTIVAL AT NOTTINGHAM.—On Tuesday there was a grand Masonic Festival at Nottingham. The town began to fill at an early hour, and the day appeared like a general holiday. At eleven o'clock, a procession of some 1000 men and high respectability proceeded to St. Peter's Church, where services took place. At four o'clock the Grand Lodge was opened for the transaction of business of the day in the immense Exchange Hall, which was completely filled. Colonel Williams, the president of Nottinghamshire, the seat of the late Lord Byron, took the chair, supported by the Right Hon. the Earl of Scarborough, the Lord Lieutenant of the County; Lord Rossmore, past Grand Master for Lancashire; Charles Roberts Esq., M.P. for South Dorsetshire, and past Grand Master for Dorsetshire; Pope in Campbell, past Grand Master for Angliensis; and numerous other superior officers of the order. In addition to the Grand Officers for Nottinghamshire, a considerable number of Grand Officers were present from Leeds, Derby, Wakefield, Leicester, Birmingham, Sheffield, Belvoir, Chesterfield, York, and all towns in the North. At the conclusion of the Grand Lodge business, a Craft Lodge was opened for the address of visiting brethren, and members presented themselves to the Grand Masters. At four o'clock there was a splendid banquet.

THE MANCHESTER CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND SIR HENRY POTTINGER.—The Manchester Chamber of Commerce has presented an address to Sir Henry Pottinger, expressing its admiration at his general administration of affairs in China, but particularly in reference to the commercial arrangements effected under his auspices. Sir Henry, in his answer, expresses a hope that China will in due time reap the full reward she so well merits for her liberality in the arrangements; and that all other nations wishing to participate in one trade with that vast and wonderful empire will take example by the moderation which England exhibited in the discussions, and in their final settlement.

TRADE AT MANCHESTER.—During the week rather an increased demand for grey cloth has existed, and this is the case more particularly to-day in shirtings, long cloths, &c.—Prices calculated for the East and China. The latter are again steady, and even buoyant, and the market closes very high for all descriptions. The velvet trade, whether plain or printed, is brisk, and understood to give fair profits to all parties engaged in its production. Yarns continue in undiminished demand, a thing never before known, and at so late a season of the year.

MOOR INCENDIARY FIRE IN NORFOLK.—There have recently been two more incendiary fires at Reepham, Norfolk, one attended by considerable loss of property, the other not so extensive. Soon after midnight on Thursday week, a servant in the employ of Mr. Hickling, who holds a large farm at Cawston, perceived flames issuing from some barley and straw stacks, which stood in a part of the yard remote from the dwellings-house or other buildings. By great exertions, the house, farm buildings, and livestock were saved, but the stacks in which the fire originated were entirely consumed. Mr. Hickling was insured.—About the same hour, on the preceding Monday night, another fire broke out in a shed standing in a meadow, which was then a mile of Reepham, belonging to Mr. Barnham, farmer. The shed, which was a considerable distance from the farm-yard, was burned down before assistance could be procured. Two tramps, who were seen in the neighbourhood within a short time of the fire breaking out, are suspected to have caused it, but no trace of either has been obtained.

ATROCIOUS MURDER AT YARMOUTH.—A most brutal and unparalled murder was committed on Tuesday at Yarmouth, Norfolk. As far as the facts are already known, it appears that the deceased, named Harriet Chandler, who was a widow woman, very quiet and respectable, was a member of the Wesleyan Society, and managed a kind of charity shop, selling shoes, oatmeal, pollard, &c. The night policeman on duty found her street door partially open; he called to her, but receiving no answer proceeded to examine the sill, suspecting some robbery had been committed. As he lay down by the side of the sill, with her head turned under the counter, he found the deceased, literally delivered in her own blood. Her skull had no less than five wounds inflicted upon it; one of them in the left side so severe as to throw the upper portion of the bone so as to overlap another broken part of the skull. On the right side of the neck a wound had been inflicted sufficiently severe to sever a portion of the tendons of the neck, and one of her fingers was cut off, probably whilst agitated in defence. Deceased lay quite alone in the house, and went to a public-house opposite to purchase her supper beer, leaving the street door closed, but unlocked, whilst she was gone. During an absence of ten minutes, the murderer or murderers (probably two) crept themselves in a low window near the door, and the deceased sat for a time reading a religious work, and drank a portion of the porter; she then went into the shop to take the money out of the till, when she fell to the ground by the murderer's hammer. The first blow rendered her insensible; the remainder were given but the "intent and not the deed" should condemn them. A knife covered with blood lay by the side of the deceased, but the surgeon was of opinion that the wound in the neck was inflicted with the cheese-cutter (a kind of short axe) which contained a portion of blood upon it. Last Saturday deceased had taken a division of property amounting to £150, left by her husband's mother and uncle. Several of her relatives live in Yarmouth and neighbourhood, and received similar sums; it became common talk amongst them, and the deceased was incautious enough to say that as the £150 was for her son, she should put it under her bed so that she could hear from his trustee, as she expected a much larger sum. This got noised abroad, and parties, doubtless, anxiously watched her movements on the night in question, in order to plunder her, and as they were recognised and known by her, to murder her rather than be detected. The £150 was taken without disturbing the bed; it was in a cheque on Messrs. Gurney and Co's bank. During the night a portion of money, consisting of gold, silver, and about £30 or £40 in copper, were found near the bath, in a bag which was taken from the deceased's premises the night of the murder—the contents of the till, doubtless. It had wrapped up in it a man's gurnee, containing a token, enveloped in four papers, and written upon, in a man's writing, "The Lord and under my lord, Sit thou on my right hand, until I make thy enemies thy footstool." No clue has been at present found. A reward will, we believe, be offered; but at the moment no tidings of any notice in the next house, or anything likely to lead to the detection has been discovered. There were several places where the murderer had wiped his hands upon, and the till was found thrown upon its corner on the shop empty. On Tuesday an inquest was held before Mr. A. Woods, deputy coroner for the borough, on view of the body. Seven witnesses were examined, who deposed to the facts above stated. The jury, after a short deliberation, returned a verdict of "Willful Murder" against some person or persons unknown.

FATAL COAL-PIT EXPLOSION NEAR WIGAN.—On Monday afternoon a most extraordinary and unaccountable eruption of water and mud, followed by an explosion, occurred in the coal-pit belonging to the trustees of Mrs. Williams, situated immediately behind the Hare and Hounds public-house, Pemberton, about a mile and a half from Wigan, on the road to Huddersfield. The result of the accident is the death of two youths, about sixteen years of age, the serious injury of three boys and two men, the slight injury of two other boys, and also a few casual bruises to another workman in the mine. The following are the names of the sufferers:—Richard Fairweather and William Parkinson, drawers, dead; Henry Taylor, Thomas Taylor (the two who carried the lights which caused explosion), and John Parkinson all drawers, seriously injured; Thomas Topping and Edward Stockley, two men, seriously injured and burnt; James Derbyshire and William Fairweather, drawers, slightly injured.

MURDER IN FAVES.—An inquiry took place at Nantwich, Fares, last week, before Mr. Lewis, the coroner, touching the death of Martha Phillips, the wife of a labourer, who was found dead in a field in that parish. It appeared from the evidence, that the deceased was found lying on her back in one of Mr. Burke's fields; an umbrella and a can of beer were by her side, her clothes were in disorder, and her pocket turned inside out. On her being removed some blood came from the night eye. There were appearances about the ground as if there had been some struggling. The coroner having summed up, the jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against John Young, and he was committed to take his trial.

SCOTLAND.

REJECTION OF LORD RECTOR OF GLASGOW.—Mr. Butherford has been elected Lord Rector of Glasgow, by rather a large majority over his opponent, Lord Eglington.

DEATH OF DR. ABRECHTSON.—Dr. Abrechtmis, the well-known physician of Edinburgh, died in that city last week, suddenly. What the cause of death was is not yet ascertained, but it has been ascribed to an affection of the heart, with which the doctor was afflicted some years ago, and by another account to apoplexy. Dr. Abrechtmis was in such health on the day of his death as to be preparing to go out on his usual professional visits, when he was found dead. Dr. Abrechtmis was the author of two valuable treatises on the "Intellectual Powers," and the "Investigation of Truth," and on "The Philosophy of Moral Feeling." In 1843, Dr. Abrechtmis was elected Lord Rector of Marischal College and University, Aberdeen, and published his inaugural address, which afterwards appeared in an enlarged form under the title of "Culture and Disposition of the Mind."

FATAL COLLECTOR ACCIDENT.—An accident of a fatal nature occurred at Dalry College, near Hawick, belonging to the Messrs. Wilson, on Saturday last. Three brothers, of the name of Lamb, were ascending from their work, when, owing to some mismanagement on the part of the engine-man, the engine was drawing up the barle, and one of the brothers, named George, was dragged, falling man, and died in a few minutes; another brother, named John, was the third, his leg broken; another man, named Philip, was in the cage, but when he came on a level with the engine, seeing the danger he was in, he ran the risk of jumping off, and was caught by someone on the pit-head, which prevented his falling down the shaft. The engine-man has since been apprehended, but failed out.

LOSS OF NINE LIVES.—On Thursday week a boat belonging to the island of Rhay left Kirkwall for home, with nine persons on board—viz., three brothers, named Gieroth; two brothers and a sister, named Tulloch; a young man, John Kothiergham; a girl, named Elizabeth Gieroth; and a girl named H-russ; all belonging to the same island. It is thought that, finding the vessel rather rough, the boat was home returned, and that she was upset in Kirkwall Bay, or near the mouth of the Strag, off Skye-shay, as the boat was found and recovered near Skewack, driven ashore, with the body of one of the men still in it. The watch found on the body had stopped at half-past five o'clock, when the accident had probably happened.

MAP OF THE RHEINGAU.

THE RHINE, THE RHEINGAU, AND ITS WINES.

We trace in the elevated Alps, in Switzerland, and near Mount St. Gothard, the sources of the Rhine, the Tessin, and the Aine, or the king of the German—nay, of the West European rivers. The visitor, on ascending the Rhine, or on his arrival at Strasbourg, calls to his recollection how this stream has hastened his course through the Lakes of Constance and Zellern; how he precipitated himself over the rocky ramparts at Shaffhausen, then strengthened by the collected waters of Switzerland—the influx of 370 glaciers and upwards of 2700 rivers of various sizes—he commences his majestic course near the ancient Roman city of Bâle; how he expands between the upper Black Forest, amidst ranges of mountains encircling a valley of nearly 30 miles in breadth, through which he playfully winds, and receiving, besides other streams, the important Neckar and Main, until a rocky gate at Bingen seems to arrest his further career, but which he powerfully bursts, and strengthened by the Nahe and Moselle, overcomes a similar obstacle at Andernach, when he continues his victorious course towards the sea.

Most travellers think they have seen the beauties of the Rhine when a steamer has carried them up or down between Düsseldorf and Strasbourg; but nothing is more erroneous than this, for however beautiful the sight may be from the river, nothing can equal the scenes when viewed from the heights: Bingen, Rudesheim, St. Goar, and Godesberg, are the points at which the traveller should stop and make his excursions towards heights and valleys which irresistibly fix his admiration. Without dwelling on the description of towns, remarkable castles, and hamlets comprised in the direction between Frankfurt and Coblenz, we shall merely confine ourselves to the small district within Wiesbaden and Bacharach, or rather, properly called the Rheingau, between Walluf and Lorch, where the Rhine bends his course from east to west. The Rheingau is but a small tract of land, and strictly on the right bank of the Rhine, only occupying an area of about 25 miles. The fertility and riches of production as to the cultivation of wine is concentrated in this little spot. It is the celebrated vineyard of Germany.

As early as the third century the Emperor Probus is said to have planted the grape of the banks on the Rhine. According to more correct history, Charlemagne is said to have observed from his castle, Ingelheim, how early the snow commenced melting on the Rudesheim mountain, planted Orleans grapes, and history sufficiently establishes the fact. The vineyards in the Rheingau are of considerable extent, and those belonging to Prince Metternich are the most celebrated: they are known by the name of Johannisberg.

The wines produced in Germany are mostly white: the red wines are those from the Burgundy grape. The white grapes are the Riesling; they are small, require a hot summer, ripen early, and give the best flavoured and finest wine. The Orleans grape, a larger kind, likewise requires a hot summer, produces a high-coloured and glowing wine, but is inferior to the former; the Orleans grape is therefore little cultivated. The Traminer, a light red grape, ripens early, gives a strong sweet wine, but is deficient in flavour. So is the deep red Ruland grape introduced from Hungary. There are a variety of other grapes, but their qualities are inferior.

The cultivation of the vine, especially the Riesling, has been much improved since 1815; such as open planting, low props, repeated and suitable manuring, classification of the grape in gathering, proper and timely pressing, confined fermentation, &c. The vine yields the choicest wine in the fourth year, and attains the age of from 25 to 30 years. The Rheingau is considered a model school for wine-growers. An acre will hold about 4000 vines, and yield from eight to twelve ohms in a favourable autumn. Besides the excellence of the soil, consisting of clay and slate, the Rheingau is particularly adapted for the maturing of the grape. Along the course of the Rhine here a range of hills extends from east to west on the right bank, and the fertile valley and the hills themselves, sloping towards the river, are warmed on the southern side, sheltered against the north winds, and there being no hills on the opposite side, no shadow is thrown towards this direction, and therefore this delightful country is never deprived of the congenial warmth which the longest sunny day gives it. To this must be added the regular morning vapours ascending from the Rhine. We may easily conceive why the Rheingau stands so pre-eminently as a wine country; for here are combined excellence of soil, natural advantages of position, choice of grape, and unremitting attention on the part of the intelligent cultivator.

The limits of our columns prevent us from entering into details as to the treatment of the various vines, but we may briefly mention that the best wine is produced about the middle part of the hills; lower down, or at the foot of the hill, the flavour is inferior, and the taste somewhat earthy. The most magnificent of all vineyards is the Rudesheim mountain, of nearly 400 acres: it is surrounded by its very top with walls, and has the appearance of a fortress. Those walls, or belts, form a series of terraces, which sustain the ground on the steep ascent; and where the old castle Ehrenfels towers over the Ruigerloch, there thrive the most luxuriant of the Rudesheim wines.

The cultivation of wine occupies more hands than any branch of agriculture, for it requires indefatigable labour throughout the whole year, it absorbs attention, and demands capital. The wine-grower considers himself happy if one season out of five he meets with a favourable autumn; he is then sure to be richly compensated.

That the reader may form an idea of the great importance resulting to Germany from the cultivation of wine, we may state that the last returns of the Zollverein proved that the produce is not less than 300,000,000 of litres, which, even as unfermented wine, is valued at 77,500,000 florins, or £6,458,518. We read in romances that the vintage is the happiest and merriest life the labourer enjoys, but in the Rheingau it certainly is not the case. The undivided attention in the collecting of grapes different in their stage of maturity, the proper time of pressing, are duties which make the labourer forget his cheerfulness, and force on his countenance a seriousness and care. It being a branch of industry which requires constant attention and subjects them to great responsibility, yet do we see the labourers, women, and children, or the musical Germans go at day-break singing to the hills, and returning in the evening with a cheerful tune, occasionally, at the end of the harvest, enjoying a dance.

The German wines are considered good at five years, but the better qualities require double that time. Some of the finest sort do not improve after five. Of all wines, white wines are the most durable; this is ascribed by chemists to their perfect fermentation. Old German wines deepen in colour, and acquire an agreeable acidity.

Among the many celebrated vineyards in the Rheingau, the Johannisberg has always been prominent. The Johannisberg is an isolated hill, and is protected, like the other hills of the Rheingau, from the northerly winds. It was formerly the property of the Priory of Fulda, belonged afterwards to General Kellermann, and now to Prince Metternich. The castle hill yields, in favourable seasons, 40 hogheads of wine, valued at 50,000 florins; the quality is most exquisite, and precaution is taken in sealing the bottles with the Prince's crest. The best Johannisberg of 1831 is sold at 31 florins the bottle, and a few hogheads of 1822 were sold at 1000 to 1200 florins per hoghead. The vineyards around the castle produce a wine somewhat inferior. Until lately Johannisberg had no equal, but it has now found its decided rival in the Steinberg: the area is about 100 acres, surrounded by a wall, and is acknowledged to be the most perfect model, as showing the management of a vineyard. The quantity produced is somewhat more than the Johannisberg, but the value varies from 1000 to 2000 florins per hoghead; and as an instance of the superior quality of Steinberg, a sale took place in the year 1836, and a cask (of 25 ohms, or 630 bottles) of Steinberg, of 1827, was sold for the enormous price of 6185 florins (£549). No wine is known ever to have fetched such a price.

In addition to the places marked on our map as the Rheingau, we must mention Hochheim as sometimes included in the district of the Rheingau; and our English connoisseurs will recognise the celebrated Hock as being a wine imported from that place.

HER MAJESTY'S LATE VISIT TO BURGHLEY.

We now proceed to the completion of our illustrated chronicle of this Royal Visit, with details of the Progress supplementary to the report in our Journal of last week.

Our first Engraving represents the Royal cortège passing the scenic Castle, constructed for the occasion upon the site of the large fortress, by which, together with embattled walls and bastion towers, Northampton was formerly defended. Leland describes the Castle as standing "hard by the West Gate," and having "a large kepe." "The area of the residue is very large, and bulwarked of yeth be made afore the castle-gate." The walls and gates, and parts of this Castle were demolished in 1692. The temporary Castle had a capital scenic effect; and we are informed by a correspondent it will be kept up for some time, together with the four triumphal arches at Northampton. One of these, the arch at West Bridge, is engraved in the next column.

The next illustration shows the loyal reception of her Majesty in the market-place at Northampton. The festal preparations in the town are thus described in the Northampton Herald:

"Many a long year has passed since the ancient town of Northampton presented a scene of similar bustle and activity to that which it bore for several days previous to her Majesty's visit, and as the hour of her Majesty's approach arrived, the whole population appeared to be vying with each other in their attempts to honour the auspicious visit of their beloved Sovereign and her Royal Consort. Along the route through which it had been arranged for the Royal carriage to pass every the George. This also bore a similar inscription, and was, like the others, a very imposing structure. The fourth arch, the most admirable of the whole, was erected at the eastern extremity of the town, at the top of Abington-street. In addition to these arches, a temporary wooden structure was erected on the site of the ancient castle, of which only a small portion of the walls remain. In the front of All Saints' Church a spacious platform was also erected, for the accommodation of all the Sunday-school children in the town."

In the Northampton Mercury are the following additional particulars:—Her Majesty expressed herself in warm terms in approval of her reception, and evinced a considerable degree of gratified surprise, at the extent of the decorations, observing—"They are, indeed, very beautiful." The procession once more moved on, amidst the clanging of the bells, the strains of the National Anthem, and the acclamation of the people, round the front of All Saints' Church, under the triumphal arch at the end of Mercers' Row, and also Mercers' Row, which, like Gold-street, was so profusely decorated with evergreens and gorgeous flags and streamers, as to rather wear the appearance of a grove decked out for some triumphal occasion than a street, and finally, up the long line of Abington-street, which, like the other streets, exhibited a profusion of laurels, banners, and other decorations. At the end of this street, was the last, the most tasteful, and the most imposing of the triumphal arches, extending across the street from the residence of the Mayor to the garden wall of the house of S. Percival, Esq., at the corner of Church-lane. Here the civic procession filed off on each side of the Royal carriage; her Majesty and Prince Albert graciously acknowledged the final obeisances of the Corporation, and the Royal pair proceeded rapidly on their road to Burghley."

A correspondent mentions among the celebrations of the event at house exhibited more or less enthusiasm on the part of its inhabitants in giving effect to this feeling of loyalty and affection. Festoons of evergreens and flowers floated across all the principal streets, and no fewer than four magnificent triumphal arches, tastefully designed, had been thrown across the road at different parts of the town. The first of these was situated just below the old castle hill, on the Dalington side of the river. The second was placed in Mare Fair. The style of this arch is Elizabethan—in keeping with Burghley House. The design consisted of three arches, a large one in the centre, and two smaller ones on either side. The span of the centre arch was about fourteen feet; that of each of the smaller ones measuring five feet. Three pillars supported this ornamental piece of architecture; the two outer ones upon which the centre arch was formed were six feet square and twenty-eight feet high. The other two were four feet square and sixteen feet high. Including the decorative turrets, the height of the two large pillars was forty feet each, that of the two smaller ones about twenty-one feet each. The whole was surmounted by a crown, over which the Royal standard floated. The inscription, "Welcome Victoria and Albert," was painted in large characters at the upper part of the arch, and the lower portion was decorated with evergreens and flowers. The third arch, even more colossal, was situated at the side of All Saints' Churchyard, and nearly opposite

ARCH AT WEST BRIDGE.

HER MAJESTY PASSING THE MARKET-PLACE, NORTHAMPTON.

HER MAJESTY PASSING "THE CASTLE," NORTHAMPTON.

Northampton, a large dinner at the Angel Hotel, a splendid ball at the George Hotel, whilst almost every private house had its hall party. "Not only," says our correspondent, "does the town feel honoured by the visit of the Queen, but that honour has been much increased by the Mayor being invited to Burghley, and by the gracious reception he met with both from the Queen and the Prince, who expressed themselves gratified with their loyal reception by the Northamptonians."

Among the incidents, it is stated that more than sixty pairs of horses were supplied from the George Hotel, during the week, solely on account of her Majesty's visit. A valuable charger died at a hotel stables on Sunday, it is supposed of exhaustion; it was the property of one of her Majesty's escort, Sir A. Chichester, of the 7th Hussars, who is stated to have been lately offered a considerable sum for this fine animal.

Among the lasting memorials of the Queen's visit to Northampton is the foundation of "the Royal Victoria Dispensary," the subscription for which has already approached £1000.

On Thursday, a pair of patent Wellington boots, manufactured by Mr. H. Hull, was presented by E. H. Barwell, Esq., the Mayor of Northampton, to His Royal Highness Prince Albert, at Burghley, as a specimen of the staple trade of this town. The workmanship is very splendid. The front, of scarlet velvet, is interlaid with scrolls of black patent leather. The Prince of Wales's plume is neatly stitched in the centre; the scrolls round the top and front are in white silk, and the Royal arms inside the lining, in gold. His Royal Highness personally expressed to the Mayor his approbation of the skill exhibited by the manufacturer, who has since received a formal acknowledgment of the present.

The next illustration shows one of the most tastefully constructed arches, in the village of Broughton, between Northampton and Kettering, where the preparations were extensive. "The entrance to, and exit from the place," says the Northampton Herald, "were ornamented with triumphal arches, formed of evergreens and flowers tastefully arranged, and the whole population of the village decked in holiday attire, lined the wood on either side, testifying in every possible manner, as the Royal party passed, the intensity of their gratification at even the momentary glance of her Majesty which the rapid progress of the Royal carriages allowed. The Hon. and Rev. James Douglas, a relative of his Grace the Duke of Buccleuch, who is the incumbent of the parish, had taken an active part in the arrangements here; and he was worthily seconded by the yeomanry of the neighbourhood, the occasion being observed as a gala day by all classes, from the highest to the lowest grade."

The following is quoted from the Northampton Mercury—

"Between Weldon and Balwick, the Royal party passed the seat of the Earl of Cardigan, at Deene Park. Here a very large and handsome arch was thrown across the road. It was an imitation of masonry, and very happily executed."

"But a more interesting sight here was the junction of Lord Cardi-gan's tenantry, who mustered in great numbers by the roadside, and fell in with the Royal cortege. They saluted her Majesty with hearty cheers."

"By this time the followers of the Royal party had very considerably increased. At every point on the wayside, some few additions were made of horsemen or vehicles, and the appearance of such a large body, proceeding at so rapid a rate, preceded by the soldiers and the Royal carriages, with the outriders in their scarlet coats, was particularly striking."

Deene Park is situated on the confines of the Royal Forest of Rockingham and presents very beautifully diversified scenery. The mansion is built entirely of stone, and with several embattled turrets. The hall has a timber-framed roof, the windows are emblazoned with family arms, and the walls are hung with fine paintings.

HER MAJESTY'S DEPARTURE FROM BURGHLEY-HOUSE.

On Friday morning her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the suite left Burghley at half-past nine o'clock, on their return to London. Her Majesty had previously taken leave of the Marchioness of Exeter and the rest of the family. The Marquis accompanied her Majesty on horseback one stage, and then went on in his carriage to be ready to receive her Majesty at Weedon.

All along the route from Stamford to Kettering the same demonstrations of loyalty and affection were made by the people as on her Majesty's journey down. The triumphal arches had all remained up, and the houses were very gaily decorated with flags, evergreens, &c. The Royal party changed horses at the same stages as on their journey down.

HER MAJESTY'S DEPARTURE WEEDON STATION.

ARCH AT BROUGHTON.

At Kettering, also, there was a great demonstration by the people. At Northampton her Majesty was received by the Mayor and Corporation and a procession of the town-trades, in the same manner as on her journey down. They preceded the Royal carriages as they went at a walking pace through the town.

At the town and station of Weedon great numbers of people had collected. The military (47th Foot) lined the road, and there was a guard of honour (of the 47th) under the command of Captain Gordon. The Marquis of Exeter, who had arrived previously, and Sir Henry Dryden, the high sheriff of the county, were at the station to receive her Majesty.

At a quarter past two the approach of her Majesty to the station was announced by the elevation of the Royal standard, and in a few minutes more the Royal party entered the station. Her Majesty and the Prince went to their apartments.

On the departure of the Queen and Prince Albert, the Prince shook hands with the Marquis of Exeter, and the train started, amidst the cheers of the people, at five minutes to three o'clock. The regular train had not long preceded it, so that great precaution was required.

(Continued on page 328.)

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, NOV. 24.—Twenty-fifth Sunday after Trinity.
 MONDAY, 25.—British Calendar of New York, 1783.
 TUESDAY, 26.—Christmas, 1791.
 WEDNESDAY, 27.—Dr. Watts died, 1749.
 THURSDAY, 28.—Cardinal Wolsey died 1530.
 FRIDAY, 29.—Police Revolution, 1834.
 SATURDAY, 30.—St. Andrew.

Rise and Fall of London-bridge, for the Week ending November 30.

Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
5. 30.	5. 25.	5. 20.	5. 15.	5. 10.	5. 5.
5. 30.	5. 25.	5. 20.	5. 15.	5. 10.	5. 5.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

- "D. H." Guy's Hospital.—We have not room.
 "An Engineer" should send his suggestion to a scientific journal.
 "The Song" La Palme, will not send.
 "J. E." Chesapeake.—The defect shall be remedied.
 "Julius" has a "very peculiar" notion as to the size of the print.
 "H. M." Summerhill, Dublin.—The address is 35, Great George-street, Westminster; or Railway Station, Euston-square.
 "Justly"—Lines to my Mother on her Birth-day.
 "Alpha." Birmingham, is thanked.
 "J. D." Liverpool.—The ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK will only appear in its present form.
 "W. D." Broughton, is thanked for the sketch.
 "E. B." Denbigh.—The letter is destroyed; it was an absurd hoax.
 "A. N. B." Van Amburgh is, we believe, in good health.
 "Terror." Bridport, may probably hear of the print, if there be one, at the place named.
 "A Subscriber" should order the work on Photography of any bookseller.
 "W. M."—Thanks.
 "J. B."—The tale was reprinted from the Burying Guide.
 "P. B. C." Dover, should apply to a picture-dealer.
 "G. H." Sudbury.—The completion of the Census (Part II.) was published in October last. The postage of the almanack will be 1d.
 "G. T. C." is probably correct in his guess as to Crumphy.
 "T. K. G. C." Gloucester.—The public are only admitted to the State Apartments in Windsor Castle.
 "A Constant Reader." Chard.—The exemption, we infer, extends only to the tuition charges.
 "J. M." Stone, Guildford.—The weight of her Majesty's State Carriage is 4 tons.
 "I. A. F." a Subscriber.—The height of Golden's Hall is not stated in the printed descriptions; but, judging from the breadth of the wall or principal front, which is 154 feet, we should say the height from the pavement to the top of the attic is about 195 feet.
 "L. H. A." Newcastle.—Address Appleby-house, London.
 "Amicus." Liverpool.—We cannot give any information as to the Picture Gallery in question.
 "Harold." Loughborough.—1. The ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK may be obtained, by order, of any bookseller. 2. The Self-Instructing Latin Grammar. 3. Our subscriber will be entitled to the large Print.
 The Member should consult the Biquette Society, at Uppingham.
 "A. P."—The supposition we shall not be but a bit of.
 "E. S." Market Buses.—We know nothing of the merits of the picture.
 "G. H." should make interest with one of the officers of Bernal's College, or write to the Secretary to the Earl Marshal.
 "J. P. P." may purchase the journals in question at any circulating library.
 "Dry Nurse."—Impossible.
 "A Stationer." St. Columb, should write to the Secretary of Stamps, Somerset-house.
 "—."—The tale of the Gipsy Girl is declined.
 "Sexton" is thanked. Scotland receives its due share of illustration.
 "The Author." Newcastle.—An opportunity has not offered.
 "X. Y. Z."—Drawing and engraving—a week.
 "M. C. M."—The address is Mr. H. Nicholls, Clerk to the Grocers' Company, 35, Poultry, London.
 "Richmond" cannot receive, as the Statute of Limitations is six years.
 "W. B." Worcester.—The illustration can only be obtained in our Journal, or in the Magazine.
 "C. D." Coventry.—1. The length of the Birmingham and Gloucester Railway is 55 miles. 2. We believe, between £3000 and £4000 per annum.
 "Mercator." Gainsborough, informs us that a pair of self-acting engines were fitted in the Trent steaming to long ago as 1824.
 "H. C." Langton.—Bradshaw's Railway Guide contains a Map, with the new lines in course of construction.
 "—." Richmond.—The "Illustrated London Almanack" may be obtained of Messrs. Jackson, Dublin, or of any other Booksellers.
 "J. G. O."—Stoneford, is thanked for the autograph.
 "Fulmar." Bristol.—The originator of the Penny Postage System is Mr. Rowland Hill.
 "C. M. A."—We have not room for the Poem.
 "A Subscriber."—The bridge, is bound to provide for the children of the deceased soldier.
 "R. B. M."—News-papers may be sent free to India and China, and South-Africa.
 THE LARGE PRINT.—H. J. M., Dulston; J. C. B., W. M., Briner; J. D., Toulson; J. B., Lysons; J. B. D., Mansfield; J. D. D., Fredington; L. M., W. M., J. M., Chasler; A. Suberter, Wolverhampton; T. A., Louth, will be entitled to the large Print, on the first week in January 1845.
 CRUSA.—Thanks for communications from "C. D." and "W. S. Kenney, Esq." (author of several works on chess). The game played between Napoleon and the Sultan at Vienna, sent by Mr. Kenney, will appear in the next number.
 A correspondent, "M." writes to say that he cannot understand the problem, as solution, of Problem No. 24 in the "Chess Player's Chronicle," for October and November. We have referred to the numbers, and find that the solution is incorrectly given. If "M." plays it thus, he will find that the black can be mated in four moves:—

White.	Black.
K to Q 7th	K to his 4th
Q Pawn	K to K B 4th
K to K 2nd	K to his 4th
K to K 6th, and mate

* In our account of the Triumphal Arches at Northampton, we have omitted to state that they were constructed by Mr. Hull, Architect to the Corporation.

ERRATA.—Through the inadvertence of the stereotypers the following errors occur in the List of Occupations, in the Census, Part II.:—Servants, Domestic: for females 58, read 77; 588. Shawl Manufacture: for females 77, read 167. Shawl Merchant and Dealer: for females 14, read 4.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1844.

A dispute is pending between the "tight little island" of Jersey and her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench, which promises to produce some curious discussion. It was, we believe, generally supposed that in no place within the British dominions was a writ of habeas corpus of no effect. Many of our readers must remember the prisoners brought into the Court of Queen's Bench at Westminster from Canada, shortly after the outbreak there. In that case the writ was effective across the Atlantic. And it would be the same in Australia, in Calcutta, in our settlement in the Island of Hong-Kong. Wherever, in fact, the English Constitution is known at all, this, one of the best powers of the Constitution, must be obeyed. What a safeguard it is against oppression and abuse of authority we need not point out; our fathers thought it worth fighting for—we should be but degenerate sons if we did not consider it worth the trouble of preserving, or if we permitted it to be sacrificed to any absurd notions of local rights, or to the prescription of exemption claimed by an obscure and insignificant spot of earth, that would be scarcely heard of at all if it did not now and then make itself ridiculous.

The island of Jersey has preserved a code of laws which is now a mass of confusion, being made up of the old Norman-French legal system, combined with portions of the jurisprudence of the twelfth and fourteenth centuries. It has been exempted from most of the statute law which applies to England, and, locally, may pretty well be said to govern itself. But the exemption from these different laws does not, we should apprehend, place it out of the pale of the Constitution. No special acts of Parliament have been necessary to make the writ of habeas corpus obeyed in our most distant settlements, and we do not see that the personal liberty of English residents should be placed in jeopardy at the caprice of the Royal Court, merely because that body chooses to assert an independence of England in one of the most vital of our Constitutional privileges.

It has been found necessary, at various times, to suppress every claim to peculiar jurisdictions, and exemption from the general operation of the law, in many small places and localities scattered through the kingdom. The sovereignty of the Isle of Man was purchased from the Derby family, because an exemption from the general revenue law of England converted the island into a den of smugglers. The old rights of sanctuary claimed by various places in England, made them at last perfect nuisances to the commonwealth. The holiness of the altar of the Church of God once shielded from arrest the criminal who could take refuge at its foot. It was not exclusively a Christian usage, for the same, or at least a similar protection was given within the precincts of the temples of the Heathens. That privilege was often abused, and when, as it afterwards did in Christian Europe, it became extended to whole districts, some of them lying in the heart of crowded cities, it may easily be perceived that there could be neither peace nor safety in a society that permitted these "harbours of refuge" for all that was dissolute, vile, and desperate to remain without the pale of the law. The "Alsatia" of old, the space lying between Fleet-street and the Thames, and bounded on the east and west by Blackfriars and the Temple, was one of these privileged spots, and the crime and disorder that abounded in it have no parallel in modern London. Who does not recollect the use made of it by Sir Walter Scott in his "Fortunes of Nigel," and the vivid picture he gives of the revels of Duke Hildebrand and his crew? But amid all their brutal riot he places the dark deed of the murder of the miser; and in so doing he adhered to the probable and the true, for the knife was as familiar to the hands of the privileged and protected ruffians as the handle of the wine flagon. Another place of the same sort was the Mint in Southwark, which has fallen for imaginative illustration into the hands of Mr. Harrison Ainsworth. His description is far enough from Scott's in dramatic effect, but we fancy it is very near the literal truth. Let the reader try to imagine what such dens would have become in the present day, and he will at once see the wisdom of our predecessors in abolishing, without condition or reserve, all the "exemptions," and charters, and privileges, which these places pleaded on behalf of a continued immunity from the wholesome supervision of the law.

The island of Jersey is not an Alsatia nor a Mint. It is not a rogue's paradise, nor in that sense of the term, a refugium peccatorum. It is liable to the visits of Bow-street, and cannot exclude the presence of Daniel Forrester, should occasion render it necessary, for the detection of a thief, the recovery of property, or the apprehension of a forger. But it claims something else, which is quite as great an exemption from the law of the kingdom, and to the occasional English inhabitants of the island may have even a worse effect. That exemption cannot be safely allowed. If the letter of the law permits such an abuse, the sooner an Act of Parliament places the matter beyond a doubt the better.

Nothing can exceed the courtesy of Railway Directors, when it is known that Royal and noble personages are travelling or going to travel by "the line," in special trains for special purpose. The accommodation is hountful—even excessive. But the public at large—that very comprehensive and at times very ill-used body—frequently find the managers of the Boards, of whom every one must now purchase locomotion, rather the reverse of attentive. Trains do not start, or do not arrive at the times specified, luggage goes astray, tickets are issued with so little rigour, and demanded with a little too much; all kinds of small misfortunes happen, of which some of the blame may be ascribed to the Railway Company, as a good deal, perhaps, to the travellers themselves. But beyond long piloried in the grievance column of a morning paper, by me Senex or Viator, very little can be done to these gigantic contractions of conveyances. The equanimity with which they sit of the mishaps of the public is astonishing—as long as they are mere common, plodding, commercial people. What earthy sequence can punctuality of arrival or departure be to them? But it may happen that a railway train may carry a Duke in the most private and unostentatious manner, and being guilty of the same want of punctuality, may then hear of it in a manner that produces more effect on them. This, according to a story that appears in Chapman, has just happened. The Duke of Wellington coming from Dover to London to attend a Privy Council was delayed by the train an hour beyond the time it ought to have been, and thus arrived too late. It is said that he, in consequence, rebuked those who had the management rather sharply. The deprecatory reply that if they had known his Grace was a traveller they could have had a special train for him, by which they only made matters worse; they were told plainly that it was not the convenience of the Duke of Wellington they were bound to consult, but that of the public at large; the times announced they ought to keep, whether their passengers were dukes or draymen. Such was in effect the lesson said to have been read them by his Grace. We cannot vouch for the authenticity of the story, but we hope it may be true in the first place, and that the railway officials will profit by the rebuke in the next. The reply to those of special accommodation, certainly reads very much like what we think the Duke would say, and agrees completely with a direct, clear, and common-sense view he is known to take on such questions. If the anecdote is not true, it certainly ought to be.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINNERS, Sunday.—This morning the Queen and Prince Albert went out as usual. The Queen, Prince Albert, and the Duchess of Kent, attended service in the private chapel of the Castle with the Court and the other household this morning. The Hon. and Rev. Charles Leslie Courtenay visited.

MONDAY.—The Queen and Prince Albert took their accustomed early promenade, and on the return of her Majesty and her Royal Consort Prince left the Castle on a shooting excursion, accompanied by Lord Glenelg, Sir James Graham, and attended by the Earl of Merton, Mr. Anson, Capt. Maynard, and Colonel Wyld. The party went to the Royal preserves in Great Park.

TUESDAY.—The Queen and Prince Albert walked for some time this morn'g. His Royal Highness afterwards went to shoot in the Royal preserves, ended by Colonel Wyld, Querry in Waiting. In the afternoon her Majesty and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Princess Royal, took an airing; a pony carriage and four, attended by Colonel Wyld. The Marchioness of Drogheda arrived at the Castle, and has relieved Lady Portman in the duty lately in Waiting on the Queen. Lord Rivers has succeeded the Earl of Merton as the Lord in Waiting, and Mr. Ormsby Gore has succeeded Captain Maynard as the Queen in Waiting on her Majesty. The Queen and the Prince (Wales) honoured Mr. Thoburn with sittings for their portraits to-day.

WEDNESDAY.—Their Royal Highnesses the Reigning Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and his Royal Highness the Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg arrived at the Castle this morning from Ostend. The Queen and Prince Albert received their illustrious visitors at the grand entrance, attended by the Marchioness of Drogheda, the two Maids of Honour, Lord Rivers, Mr. Ormsby Gore, and the Querry in Waiting. In the afternoon the Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg, walked in the pleasure-grounds, return to the Castle in a pony phaeton.

THURSDAY EVENING.—From our own Correspondent.—This day being the anniversary of the birth of the Princess Royal, when Royal Highness completed her fourth year, the band of the Royal Horse Guard (all) attended at the Castle, in the morning, and stationed themselves beneath the window of the Princess, where they remained in Royal Highness from seven till eight o'clock. Her Majesty and the Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by their distinguished relations on a visit at the Castle, took their usual early promenade in the private grove this morning. The infant Royal family were also taken out for their accustomed airing. This afternoon her Majesty, accompanied by the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, left the Castle in an open poor carriage and four, for an airing, proceeding through the Long Walk into the Great Park. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, his Royal Highness's brother (the reigning Duke of Saxe-Coburg), and his Royal Highness's sister (the reigning Duchess of Saxe-Coburg), and the Royal carriages and four. Colonel Arbuthnot and Colonel Wyld, the Equerries in Waiting were in attendance on horseback. The Royal dinner-party this evening included the Duchess of Kent, the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, the Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg, Countess Josephine Wratlaske, Madame de Bismarck de Wagram, the Marchioness of Drogheda, the Hon. Harriet Paget, the Hon. Georgiana Liddell, Lady Fanny Howard, Le Baron de Alvensleben, the Earl of Liverpool, Lord Rivers, Mr. R. Ormsby Gore, Colonel Arbuthnot, Colonel Wyld, Captain Vyner, Colonel Sir George Cooper, Mr. G. E. and the Hon. Mrs. Anson, &c. The Band of the Royal Horse Guards performed during dinner; and her Majesty's private band of musicians, led by Mr. Anderson, were in attendance the remainder of the evening.

PRESENTS FROM LOUIS PHILIPPE.—Last Saturday Baron Talleyrand, the Comte de Noailles, and M. de Blandy, went to Windsor from the French embassy, for the purpose of having an interview with Mr. T. Clarke, the newly elected Mayor, having been commanded by his Majesty Louis Philippe to present the worthy chief magistrate with the sum of 5000 francs (£2000) to be distributed among the poor and necessitous of the town during the ensuing winter. Two beautifully executed gold snuff-boxes have been presented from the King of the French to Messrs. Russell and Stoddard, the inspectors of police who were on duty at the Castle during the visit of his Majesty to the Queen. The female domestics also, connected with the suite of apartments occupied by his Majesty, were likewise presented with valuable rings set with diamonds and other precious stones.

DEATH OF SIR GORE QUINCY, BART.—Sir Gore Quincy, Bart., expired at his house, Hall Barn Park, on Monday last. The late Sir Gore Quincy was a Knight of the Russian Order of St. Alexander, and of the Persian Order of the Lion and the Sun. In 1810 he proceeded to Persia as Ambassador Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, and subsequently went to St. Petersburg. He is succeeded in his title and estates by his son Frederick Arthur Gore, the present Baronet, who was born in 1825.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.—The Duke of Wellington has arrived at Appleby House from Walmer Castle. His Grace proceeds to Strathfieldsaye for the winter.

ROYAL VISIT TO ARUNDEL CASTLE.—Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, accompanied by her Royal Highness the Hereditary Grand Duchess of Mecklenburgh-Strelitz, and attended by Baron Kneisebeck, arrived at Arundel Castle on Monday afternoon, on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Norfolk. The Grand Duke has since returned from the Continent, and joined the Royal party.

SIR ROBERT PEEL, accompanied by Lady Peel and Miss Peel, arrived in Whitehall Gardens from Brighton on Monday morning. We are happy to state that Sir Robert has quite recovered from her late severe illness, and is now in possession of her usual good health. Sir Robert, we understand, has given up the mansion he took for a limited period at Brighton.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &amp;c.

ILLNESS OF THE REV. STURGEY SMITH.—This reverend and facetious gentleman has been indisposed for some time, but we are glad to hear that the disease (which) has assumed a favourable form. The reverend gentleman's duty at St. Paul's has been undertaken for the last few Sundays by the Rev. Thomas Dale.

CONSECRATION OF THE NEW CHURCH OF ST. PAUL, AT MALTA.—This church, which was built at the sole expense of her Majesty the Queen Dowager, was consecrated on the 1st instant, by the Lord Bishop of Gibraltar. The body of the church and the portions are not much unlike those of St. Martin-in-the-fields in their exterior aspect. The interior aspect is still better. The church is to be called the English Collegiate of St. Paul in Malta.

CONSECRATION OF CANNESWELL NEW CHURCH.—On Thursday this magnificent church was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Winchester, with the customary solemnity. We shall next week present to our readers an engraving of the impressive scene, with a description of the embellished interior of the church. The exterior was engraved in our journal for January 20, in the present year.

OPENING OF ST. OLAVE'S CHURCH.—This edifice was opened for divine service last Sunday morning—the Rev. Archdeacon Wilberforce, chaplain to his Royal Highness Prince Albert, preaching an impressive sermon. The cost of the repairs is about £9000.

THE PARISH OF TOTTENHAM.—We regret to state that a dispute has taken place in the parish of Tottenham, between the incumbent and his parishioners, a rising out of the attempted introduction by the reverend gentleman of some alterations in the rubrics and other matters relating to the reading of Divine service.

OXFORD, Nov. 16.—The following gentlemen were yesterday elected Fellows of Brasenose College:—William Henry Scott, R.A., Scholar of Trinity College; John William Knott, B.A., of Magdalen Hall, Lushy Scholar.

CAMBRIDGE, Nov. 15.—At the last congregation the following degrees were conferred:—Doctor of Medicine: William Francis Price, Emmanuel College; Masters of Arts: George Nicholas Vanantart, Trinity College; Clotworthy Gilmore, St. John's College; Bachelors of Arts: Alexander Anderson Weston, Trinity College; Edward Sandell, Trinity College; Augustus Barker Hemmingsworth, Trinity College; John Warren Trotman, Trinity College; William Barker, St. John's College.

The following students have just been elected scholars of St. John's College, Cambridge:—Fourth Year: Bennett, W. B. Smith, R. Allen, Spier, Cox, Parkinson, Chubb, Brier, F. Brett, Madden. Third Year: Wilkin, Foster, Vassall, J. M. Clarke, G. Frost. Second Year: Otter, Manby, Newham, Munson. First Year: Pearce, Culbert, J. B. Mayor, Valentine, Leicester.

The following students have been elected Proper Sons, of Cambridge University: W. W. Howard, Matthew W. A. White, Vintners, Paterson, J. Newton. DUNELM UNIVERSITY.—A Professorship of German has been founded in this University, to which Herr Lowenberg has been appointed.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

OPENING OF THE GREENHAM CLUB HOUSE.—The neat extensive stone building, recently erected at the corner of St. Swithin's-lane and King William-street, City, known as the Greenham Club-house, was opened on Tuesday evening for the accommodation of the members, for the first time.

CABINET COUNCIL.—The first Cabinet Council of the season was held on Tuesday afternoon at the Foreign-office. The Ministers present were Sir Robert Peel, the Duke of Wellington, Lord Wharfedale, the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Stanley, Sir James Graham, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Earl of Haddington, Sir Edward Kitchin, Lord Granville Somerset, and Mr. Gladstone. The Lord Chancellor subsequently joined his colleagues. The council sat two hours.

IMPROVEMENTS IN HYDE PARK.—The pond of dirty water in Hyde Park, facing the new gate at Knightsbridge, called Albert-pond, which formerly flowed from a waterfall in connexion with and at the east end of the Serpentine River, has now been entirely removed, and the vacuum filled up. In its place appears a well-gravelled road from the new gate to the side, being for equestrian use only, as the celebrated side called Rotten-row is devoted entirely for the use of equestrians, no carriage, except those of the royal family, being admitted within the drive, and the privilege is rarely, if ever, availed of by them. This new road, in place of the unsightly piece of water, is a very great improvement, in addition to its being a vast convenience to the wealthy inhabitants of the numerous splendid streets and squares recently formed on the Marquise of Westminster's estate in Piccadilly. A new grand walk has been formed across the park from Grosvenor-gate, leading from Grosvenor-square to the small gate opposite the Chinese Exhibition.

THE NEW ROYAL EXCHANGE.—The workmen during the week have been engaged in raising the splendid stone statue of Sir Richard Whitington, so well known in nursery history as "Whittington and his Cat," thence Lord Mayor of London. The statue represents him in his robes of office, and weighs three-and-a-half tons, and is placed in the niche over the northern entrance to this magnificent commercial edifice. The statue of Sir Thomas Gresham is expected to be put up next week.

THE BALL AT GUILLIARD FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE POLES.—The fancy ball at Guillard for the benefit of the distressed Polish refugees, took place on Tuesday night, and went off with considerable effect. The hall was decorated in the same manner as when the Lord Mayor's inauguration into office was celebrated on the 9th of November. The company began to arrive soon after eight o'clock, and at half-past nine o'clock dancing commenced. The arrangements of the evening did not entirely consist of dancing, but were varied by the introduction of a vocal concert, in the course of which Miss Sarah Flower, Mrs. Rodwell, Miss Steele, Signor Ferrini, &c. sang various pieces. This concert took place in the Common Council chamber, and very pleasantly diversified the enjoyments of the evening. Dancing was then resumed, and kept up with great spirit to an early hour of the morning. Among the company were the Earl and Countess of Ebro, the Earl of Munster, Lady Adelaide Fitzclarence, Countess of Lankarville, Countess of Gleggall, Lady Mary Fox, Lord Dudley C. Stuart, Colonel Fox, M.P., Colonel Leicester Stanhope, Mr. C. Villiers, M.P., the Hon. Mr. Abbott, Sir H. Webb, Sir W. Magnay, Mr. H. Saring, M.P., &c. As the company was very numerous, it is to be hoped that the ball realised a good sum for the Poles.

ARTISTS' AMICABLE FUND.—In our journal of last week, we inadvertently omitted to notice the fourth anniversary dinner of this excellent society, which was held at the Crown and Anchor Tavern, on the 11th instant. Amongst the company, were many eminent professors of the Fine Arts, with Dr. Leonard Sturges and Mr. Kirkwood, medical officers of the Institution. The chair was taken by Mr. A. J. Mason; and after the customary toasts, the company were more ably addressed by the chairman, Mr. Cooper, R.A., Mr. G. Chant, Mr. Falley (the secretary), Mr. C. E. Wagstaff, and other gentlemen, on the advantages which must accrue to the members of the Institution in creating, by their own annual subscriptions, an independent provision for sickness, old age, and the distresses attendant upon death. Such a principle of co-operation and self-support can only require to be known among artists to become extended.

ST. MARTIN'S BANK FOR SAVINGS.—Open deposit accounts, 1843, £14,130; ditto, 1844, £15,124. Sums invested: 1843, £239,405; ditto, 1844, £239,000.

THE NEW POLICE-COURT IN THE BOROUGH.—This police-court, which has been built on the west side of Blackman-street, Borough, adjacent to the Queen's Removal, is completed; and the Secretary of State has issued orders for the removal of the public business from Union-hall to the above court by the early part of the ensuing month.

EQUESTRIAN PORTRAIT OF THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.—An equestrian portrait of the Duke has just been completed for the Worshipful Company of Stationers of the City of London, and at this moment adorns the grand staircase of their hall. It is painted by Mr. Lely, already favourably known by his former picture of the Duke as Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, and represents his grace in his uniform as Field Marshal, on horseback, and of the size of life.

MORTALITY OF LONDON.—The total number of deaths in the metropolis, during the week ending last Saturday, was 1072, showing a considerable increase of mortality, probably caused by the unseasonable warmth of the last ten days. The weekly average for the last five years has been 945.

THE LOST BAINESBROOK FORTUNE.—A paragraph appeared in our paper last week relative to the mysterious disappearance of Joseph Ames, who has been book-keeper of the Hull Inn, Aldgate, immediately after being married at White-chapel Church. It has been already stated that previously to the wedding he made arrangements to come into the company of the Kent and Essex public-house, High-street, Whitechapel, and had paid a deposit. On the receipt of his extraordinary letter, his wife and her friends were naturally greatly alarmed, and began to fear that he contemplated suicide; although they knew no cause to which to attribute any mental distress or annoyance. They have, however, since been relieved from all their fears and anxieties by the return of the fugitive, who, having "thought better of the matter," resolved to come back and claim his wife. The odder part of the business is, that he could assign no motive for his strange conduct, merely saying that he experienced a feeling of despondency with regard to his new undertaking. He is, however, now in possession of the house in question.

FIRE IN THE STRAND.—On Thursday morning, about eight o'clock, a fire broke out at No. 7, Southampton-street, Strand, which in a very short time completely gutted the house, and destroyed the greater part of the property it contained. The premises were jointly occupied by a bookseller, named Trev, and a tailor, named Anderson. The fire originated in the carelessness of a servant, who had placed a candle near the bed-curtains as to envelope them in flames. The house contained a great deal of wood, to which it is attributed the fact of its falling so speedily a prey to the flames. The fire was extinguished by half-past ten.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The 200th anniversary of the birthday of William Penn, and the 160th of his landing on the shores of the new world, was celebrated on the 23rd ult., at Philadelphia, with appropriate exercises.

Thorwaldsen's statue of Byron, secluded from the sacred precincts of Westminster, is about to be erected in the cemetery of Kensal Green.

There are now residing near Hubberton, Pembrokeshire, a brother and sister, Henry and Margaret Banner, of the respective ages of 97 and 101, the latter of whom can read well without the use of glasses.

According to a letter from Alexandria of the 26th ult., Mehemet Ali is determined to monopolize the transit between that city and Nore, and with that view has refused to allow the steamer Delta, which had just arrived from England, to navigate the Nile, and had given notice to the Peninsular and Oriental Company that the two steamers now plying on the river must be forthwith withdrawn.

The "Eunuchus" of Terence will be performed this year by the Westminster scholars. The three nights will be Monday, the 9th, Thursday, the 12th, and Monday, the 16th of December; on the two latter of which there will be a prologue and epilogue spoken.

The Journal de Granville states that three Jersey oyster boats were taken by the French cutters a few nights back, dredging for oysters on the French banks. They were taken to Granville.

Four men have lately been "lynched" in Fannin county, America, by the most sanguinary process. Their names were Andrew Jones, Harvey White, L. Wray, and Mitchell, all lately from Missouri, and all notorious for their rascality before they left. The cause was, for harbouring murdering three friendly Indians. Upwards of 200 persons attended the trial and execution. Three others, named Benjamin Jones, Asward, and Harris, were arrested and convicted of theft, and were made to hang the others, and ordered to leave the country in ten days.

A few days ago a lady named Sauvage, an inhabitant of the lower town at Roulogne, celebrated her 100th anniversary, surrounded by her friends, relatives, sons, grandsons, and great grandsons. The officiating clergyman, M. Dufour, was himself 99 years of age. The two sons of Madame Sauvage are aged 72 and 76. This respectable lady sees four generations of her descendants. She is in the enjoyment of all her faculties, and no infirmity alters her sweet temper.

Letters from Constantinople, of the 27th of October, announce that the recent plot against the reigning Prince of Serbia had given rise to a new and serious misunderstanding between Austria and the Porte. The origin of this dispute is said to have arisen in the belief that 40 of the partisans of the Obrenovitchs passed the frontier with the knowledge and connivance of the Austrian authorities.

The Angsburg Gazette of the 13th inst. states, that the King of Saxony, having read the pamphlet published by Prince de Joinville on the advantage of a steam navy, has determined to construct a steam frigate as a trial. His Majesty left Paris for Genoa on the 18th inst., accompanied by the Duke of Genoa and Prince Eugene of Savoy, for the purpose of carrying his design into execution.

On Saturday, and again on Monday night, an extra Gazette was published, containing together of fifty-six sheets, containing almost exclusively notices concerning railway and other private Bills. The ordinary Gazette of Tuesday night contains a great many similar notices. If the country be not wholly cut up into railways the Legislature will be overwhelmed with the toil of examining and rejecting the numberless projects which will next season be submitted to it.

Mr. Washington Irving, Chargé d'Affaires of the United States, at the Court of Spain, arrived at Bordeaux on the 18th, on his way to Madrid.

Letters from Trieste say that the new Tariff, which has been in operation since July last, has proved so advantageous, that the Austrian Government intend to make further reductions, and some articles which had been prohibited will be admitted in the Austrian ports under certain duties, such as woollen and cotton goods, plain or coloured.

Accounts from Rome to the 5th of November state that the water of the Tiber is over its banks, and that a large part of the Roman country is under water.

A Vienna letter of the 9th instant says the Princess of Salerno, who is about to marry the Duke d'Anjou, will receive a considerable fortune from her aunt, the Queen Dowager of Sardinia, who is even stated to have declared her sole heiress.

From the records in possession of the London Fire Brigade, it appears that no fewer than 805 fires have occurred in the present year; but that they have not been of so extensive a character as in former years. The number of fires lost, however, is much greater than the average.

The Neuville de Bruges says that a prayer has been published in Belgium, humbly asking God to be pleased to recollect Belgium to the Catholic faith.

Letters from Constantinople, of the 30th ult., state that fresh disturbances had broken out in Syria, and that towards Latakia the country was in such a state, that troops were marching towards it with all possible rapidity.

A letter from Amiens states, that on the 11th, the Nouvelle Elise brig, Captain Lilliet, from Bordeaux, and bound for Abberlin, foundered in the bay of the Somme. The crew, consisting of four men, were lost.

About a week ago M. Eugène Chassier, of Etliche, in the department of Maine et Loire (France), being out shooting with a double-barrelled fowling-piece, was so imprudent as to blow into one of the barrels after having fired at a bird. By some mischance the other barrel went off at the same moment, and killed him on the spot.

M. Daubrée, who keeps the large bookseller's shop in the passage Vivienne, Paris, on Thursday evening week perceived a woman stop at his doorway, and take away a book from amongst those placed outside for display. He ran out, she caught her with the stolen article, a penny almanack, in her possession. He was taking her before the commissary of the district, when, as they ascended the staircase, the prisoner drew a pointed knife, and plunged it to the hilt in the body of the unfortunate man, who fell dead on the instant. She then fled, but was apprehended almost immediately, and taken before the commissary, who, after investigating the matter, committed her for trial.

Accounts from Gabas, on the French frontier of Arragon, state that, within a period of forty years, there has not been at this early season so much snow on the mountains, and that even the upper valleys are so charged with it, and the passage into Arragon rendered so bad, that the noted Mingara, who last year made a journey of 34 leagues (54 miles) in one day, has lately very nearly lost his life in making the attempt.

On Sunday last, a butterfly of "the Admiral" species was seen upon the wing, in the neighbourhood of Bristol.

According to letters from Berlin of the 13th instant, the King of Prussia, having received an invitation from the King of Hannover to join his Majesty in a hunting party, was about to leave Saxony for that purpose.

According to the last census, the population of Bohemia amounts to 4,467,150 souls.

A new regulation has been made at Aix-la-Chapelle, in order to encourage depositors in the savings banks. Every person who deposits twenty crowns is entitled to a premium of three crowns. The fund from which these premiums are given is derived chiefly from the payment of a crown by the parents of children who are sent to the Salles d'Asile, or Infant National Schools, where the education is gratis, after this entrance-fee has been paid.

Ministers have advised the Queen to confer a high distinction on Sir Henry Pottinger for his diplomatic services in China.

A woman died on the 5th at Courtrai (Belgium) from the effects of a piece of bread having lodged in the respiratory channels, whilst she was indulging in a fit of laughter. Her death ensued in a quarter of an hour afterwards.

A letter from Frankfurt mentions that business was extremely dull ever since the illness of Madame Meyer Amshel Rothschild, who is now 99 years of age. The effect of her illness had made a vow to give the poor a sum of 40,000 florins if his mother accomplished her 100th year.

POSTSCRIPT.

FATAL AND MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT ON THE MIDLAND COUNTIES RAILWAY.

We regret to announce that a very serious accident took place on Thursday on the Midland Counties Railway, at Beeston, near Nottingham. In consequence of the fog, the down-train from Nottingham came into contact with a train coming to that town. A second edition of the Nottingham Journal contains the following particulars of this fatal event. It says the collision was quite unavoidable, and the destruction tremendous.

In consequence of the down-train being driven at so much more rapid a pace than the train from Nottingham, and being a much heavier train, and having a powerful and very heavy engine, the up-train from Nottingham sustained the principal part of the damage. So great was the force with which the down train met the up-train, that the engine of the latter was actually driven from its position downwards, and the boiler was elevated to the height of many feet above it, the tender of the engine was driven through the parcel-carriage, and the two passenger second-class conveyances were so completely smashed to pieces as a nutshell when trodden under foot. The unfortunate passengers in these two carriages were dreadfully crushed and mutilated.

Mr. Dean, of Hounds' Gate, Nottingham, commission-agent, who had received severe injuries about the head, was first taken out, and was able to stand, but speechless; a Mr. Varnish was extricated in a similar condition; Mr. Robinson, in the spirit trade; and Mr. Bowlesbridge, of the Three Horse Shoes, Derby-road, were released in a state of great suffering. Mr. G. Baker, who had taken a second-class ticket, but had by some accident, along with Mr. Tutin, senior, been put in the first-class carriage, escaped without much injury. As soon as he was able to collect himself and alight, he assisted, with Mr. Wilby, who had been riding in the third-class, to release their more unfortunate fellow-travellers, and he proceeded as rapidly as he could across some ploughed fields, and over hedges and ditches, to procure assistance; and about an hour after the occurrence of the accident, two carts, containing scraw, and some other conveyances, were procured, and some of the sufferers were conveyed to Beeston, some to Lenton, and others, by a train sent up for the purpose, down to Nottingham, when those who were able reached home, and others were taken to the Infirmary. Twelve or fourteen were thus conveyed away seriously hurt.

It does not appear that either Mr. Lightfoot, the chief clerk at the Nottingham station, or the engineer or the stoker (whom he accompanied) have sustained any damage; we understand they threw themselves from the engine, which was proceeding at a slow pace, just before the collision took place. The persons who sustained the most serious injuries were those in the two second-class carriages, those in the first and third classes having come off much more favourably. It appears that a person from South Wingfield, who was in the third-class, and who had set open the door of the carriage to facilitate his escape, in case the collision, which he seemed to expect, should take place, was thrown by the concussion with so much violence with his head against the iron rod, round the top of the third class carriage, as to break the iron rod in two, yet without suffering much injury himself.

We subjoin as complete a list of the passengers and the nature and extent of the injuries they sustained, as we have been able to procure.

LIST OF KILLED AND WOUNDED.

Mr. Dean, Hounds' Gate, dead.
Mr. John Neep, of middle age, of Retford, lies at the General Hospital, but hopes are entertained of his recovery. The extent of injury cannot at present be ascertained, and besides being badly bruised, it is feared some of his ribs are broken.
George Barley, about 30 years of age, stoker, seriously scalded and burnt—the fire and boiling water having fallen upon him from the engine, when forced upwards by the collision. We understand he was on the engine coming from Derby.
Mr. J. Bowlesbridge, landlord of the Three Horse Shoes, Derby Road, and Miss Ann Greeting, of Stoke Cliff, Staffordshire, were conveyed to the Three Horse Shoes, Derby Road. They were much bruised.
Mr. Greeting, Barton-on-Trent, severely crushed.
Mr. Bradley, Southwell, farmer, leg broken.
Mr. Varnish, formerly butler at Colwick Hall (dead). The distressing news of his death was instantly despatched to Mrs. V., who is housekeeper at Mr. Strutt's, Derby.
Mr. Arnold, medical instrument-maker, seriously hurt.
Mr. Garrett, surgeon, of London, extensively injured.
Robert Thornhill, lace-manufacturer, slightly crushed.
David Fox, employed at Mr. Gill's silk-mill, arm broken.
Misses Ann and Maria Lewis, of Sanction (seriously hurt), owing to the violence of the concussion, were thrown out of the carriage, and their dresses becoming entangled, they were nearly stripped. One of them had actually the sole of her shoe torn off.
We regret to say that the conduct of the inhabitants was characterized by anything rather than humanity; the Misses Lewis (who were close to the unfortunate Mr. Dean in the railway carriage) were permitted to remain in almost a state of nudity in a field for upwards of an hour, before they were removed. At length they were taken in a baker's cart to Mr. Hammond's, to whom they were paying a visit, and were afterwards conveyed to their homes. Mr. Dean was also treated with similar neglect.
Mr. Robinson, traveller (very much bruised).
Mr. Threlwood, of Lincoln (died).
Mr. Nixon, Hounds' Gate (died, and tooth broken out).
Mr. George Baker, Woolpack-lane (slightly bruised).
Mr. John Wilby, Fetham-street (bruised).
Mr. Tutin, senior, butcher, Nottingham (bruised).
Miss Surplice, of Beeston, escaped injury by leaping out of the carriage.

We understand that Her Majesty has it in contemplation to invest His Royal Highness the reigning Duke of Kent, of Saxe Coburg and Gotha, with the insignia of the illustrious order of the Garter, as an honorary knight, during his visit to the august relatives in this country. A distinguished circle of personages of high rank are expected to assemble at Windsor Castle in the course of the ensuing week, by Royal invitation, to meet their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Saxe Coburg and Gotha.

A Cabinet Council was held at the Foreign Office yesterday, at three o'clock.

ACCIDENT ON THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.—A fatal accident occurred yesterday morning on this railway. Two men were working upon the line beyond West Drayton, during the intense fog which prevailed. From this circumstance they did not perceive the approach of the down train, and although the engineer blew the whistle this was not heard. The consequence was, that both men were swept from the line, the train passing on without the conductors having the slightest knowledge of the accident. On arriving at Slough, however, the front part of the engine was discovered to be marked with blood, and on another engine being sent slowly back towards West Drayton, the mutilated bodies were discovered. It would appear that no blame can attach to any one engaged in conducting the train.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO A DISSENTING MINISTER.—Yesterday Mr. Baker held an inquest at the Golden Eagle, Slough, on view of the body of the Rev. Edwin Parsons, aged 67, a Dissenting minister, attached to Naalam chapel, Mile-end. It appeared that the deceased was residing in Assembly-row, Mile-end. On Friday morning he was alarmed by a noise. He immediately went out of his room to go down stairs, when his foot caught against something, and he fell down nearly half the flight of stairs. In his fall he knocked down some flower pots. Mrs. Parsons afforded him immediate assistance, and he was carried into his room. The deceased gradually sank from the effects of the injuries he received, and died on Tuesday last. Verdict, "Accidental death."

INCENDIARY FIRE AT COCKSHILL.—About three o'clock on Thursday, the uninhabited mansion of Charles Skingley, Esq., of Great Cockshill, was maliciously set on fire, and with the excessive premises adjoining, was completely burnt to the ground, nothing but the naked chimneys being left standing. There is no clue at present to the vile incendiary.

SUICIDE IN KIPPING FOREST.—On Wednesday last a gentleman, named Scott, hung himself from a tree in that part of Kipping Forest which is known by the name of Phillipson's Warren, High Beach.

FOREIGN.

THE INSURRECTION IN SPAIN.—Our latest advices from the north of Spain represent the rising of Zarbano as an important movement. The Indicador of Bordeaux states that news had been received there that Burgos, Santander, and St. Sebastian had joined in the movement. This, however, requires confirmation. One thing is certain, that General Zarbano is at the head of a body of men who are formidable, as much by their character and past exploits, as by their numbers. They are mostly old soldiers, who served under him during the civil war, and who knew their commander well, and trust him. The country, too, in which the insurrection has broken out, the Sierra de Cameros, is most difficult of approach, and with a very small body of troops he may be able to set Navarre's army at defiance for months. From Madrid we learn that the court-martial appointed to try General Prim and his co-accused assembled on the 14th, under General Ribera. The Fiscal having laid before the tribunal the new facts and proofs which he had obtained since the last trial, General Shilly, Prim's defender, rose and demanded that time be allowed him and the counsel for the other prisoners to prepare their defence. The Court only allowed an hour and a half for this purpose. At 6 o'clock p.m. it resumed its deliberations. General Prim himself presented his defence, in a lengthened and impressive speech. He declared that he was not afraid to die, though he had not as yet attained the age of twenty-nine; that there was only one motive which induced him then to plead for his life, and that was, he had a widowed mother and an orphan sister, who depended on him only for their existence; and he should, indeed, regret leaving the world while those so dear to him were left behind helpless and unprotected. At nine o'clock the Court adjourned, without pronouncing judgment.

LATEST NEWS FROM FARIT.—Accounts to the 13th of June have arrived from Otahiti, when Her Majesty's ship-of-war, Thalia, 43 guns, and Salamanca (steamer), were both off the port of Papeete, in which harbour the French had the Uranie frigate of 56 guns, and the Ambuscade, 32, with a steamer. The Thalia, 46, was gone to the Marquesas for more troops. The oppressions and cruelties of the French continued unabated, and their insolence towards the English was even greater than before. One letter says:—"The French had hired one of the traitor chiefs to go on board the Basilia to assassinate the Queen! but the base intention was happily discovered in time to guard against it." Captain Hope, of the Thalia, refused to salute the French flag, which had been so unaccountably hoisted on the island. The French were fortifying in every direction.

EVERY BODY'S COLUMN.

THE REMEMBRANCE OF EARLY DAYS.

There's a peaceful spot in a quiet vale,
Where the blackbird sings his song,
And the lark rises in the morning gale,
Gives earl and lord along.
With a note so soft, and sweet, and clear,
That 't seems to come from another sphere.
That happy home, with its birds and flowers,
And the stream that murmurs by,
And the trees, where in summer's early hours
It was wont to lie,
Was the scene of my early years,
And memory thinks of it with tears,
O that childhood is a happy time!
I have never known a joy
Such as when at morning I would climb,
A young light-hearted boy.

LOVE, HONOUR, AND THE ATTORNEY.

An attorney in Dublin having died extremely poor, a shilling subscription was set on foot to pay the expenses of his funeral. Most of the attorneys and barristers having subscribed, one of them applied to Tober, afterwards Lord Chief Justice Nairney, expressing his hope that he would also subscribe his shilling. "Only a shilling!" said Tober, "only a shilling to bury an attorney? Here is a guinea: go and bury one-and-twenty of them."

INVENTION OF STEAM NAVIGATION.

An Irish paper asserts that the merit of the discovery of steam navigation is due to a man named Taylor, a native of Cork, who first succeeded in propelling a boat by steam, in the year 1789. In acknowledgment of his claim, a pension of £500 per annum was settled upon his widow by Government, and a donation of £500 was subsequently made to each of his four surviving sisters; but, as this is justly deemed a poor remuneration for such important services, it is now suggested that a national testimonial should be made to the family of Mr. Taylor.

GEORGE THE THIRD AND THE SHIP-BUILDERS.

An anecdote is told of George the Third, that, when inspecting the large dock forming at Plymouth during his reign, he inquired "why its dimensions should so greatly exceed those of the other docks?" The builder replied, that "The French were building larger ships than any we had; and therefore it was necessary to have a dock in England fit to receive them." He instructed, amongst others, the Commerce de Marseille, one of the finest three-deckers, and sure enough, that ship was the first which entered the large dock, having been sent to England by Lord Hood, at the evacuation of Toulon in 1791. She was found, however, to be so badly timbered, as not to be worth the expense of repairs, and she was broken up in August, 1802.

GAS FROM ANIMAL MATTER.

A process has been discovered by which animal matter can be converted into an odoriferous gas, which burns with extreme brilliancy. It can be obtained at a very cheap rate, and may be rendered of great utility for domestic purposes, although it is not likely to supersede coal gas in lighting streets.

THE LATE DUCHESS OF ST. ALBANS.

It is stated in the first number of the "Leigh Monthly Magazine," that Miss Stollen, who married the late Mr. Courts, the banker, and afterwards the Duke of St. Albans, made her first appearance on the stage among an itinerant company in Leigh, in an old barn behind the Old Boar's Head.

TRIAL OF THE ATMOSPHERIC RAILWAY.

A first trial of M. Hallette's atmospheric system of locomotion for railroads was made a few days ago, to the extent of a hundred yards, in his factory at Arras (France). The result is said to have been sufficiently satisfactory to warrant an invitation to M. Arago, M. Segnier, and several other men of science, to witness another trial to be shortly made, and which invitation they have accepted.

A SPECTACULAR NEW LIGHT.

A new electro-magnetic light has been invented at Cincinnati, of such power, that one of them, at a height of 200 feet, is expected to illumine the whole city.

ELECTRICITY OF THE EARTH.

MM. Lissac and Palmari have succeeded in obtaining an electrical current from the earth, sufficient to give a shock, decompose water, and to afford a spark. Their apparatus consists of hollow cylinders of iron, covered with seven superimposed coils of copper wire. These cylinders are rapidly rotated by means of wheel works, and the spark is produced by breaking contact with mercury.

INDIA RUBBER STOCKINGS.

This material, which is now employed for almost everything, is now devoted by the French to another purpose. They have introduced a new material, by making stockings wholly of India-rubber thread. They are made by machines, and are said to be excellent in preventing rheumatic pains.

ADULTERATION OF WINE.

The ancients formerly used salt water to clarify and preserve wine. This discovery is said to have been owing to a slave having drunk part of a cask of wine committed to his care, and concealed the fruit with salt water. The wine thus falsified was found to be superior to the wine of the same growth contained in the other casks. The Romans were but children in the art of adulteration when compared with the Greeks. Pany, in enumerating the several kinds of adulteration practised in his day, exclaims, "How can we wonder if wine, produced by such practices, should rather possess the qualities of poison than of wine!"

PAINTFUL COINCIDENCE.

A police report of last week says, there is a "Buck Protection Society" in existence, which bring lost every year to the amount of £25,000. The stock which the East India Directors have given Lord Ellenborough has cost his lordship nearly a similar sum.—Punch.

CURIOUS ATMOSPHERICAL PHENOMENON.

A Bath paper notices a curious fact respecting the weather last week. In the early part of Wednesday the mercury in the barometer had fallen considerably below "rain," but in the night, without any apparent cause (for the rain came down in torrents, and so continued during the whole of the succeeding day), the mercury rose to above "fair," at which point it has, almost without variation, continued ever since.

AN EQUIVOCAL ANSWER.

Bishop Porteus, when in all conversations about him George III. called the Queen's Bishop, was asked by her Majesty, at a period when all the ladies were employed when they had nothing better to do in knitting, whether she might knit on a Sunday. He answered, "You may not!" leaving her Majesty to decide whether, as knotted and not worn in sound alike, she was, or was not, at liberty so to employ herself on that day.

EGYPTIAN MODE OF TANNING VICIOUS HORSES.

Barrkhardt says that the Egyptian horses, unlike those of the pure blood of Arabia, are often vicious, and that he has seen such animals cured of the habit of biting, by presenting to them, while in the act of doing so, a leg of mutton just taken from the fire; the pain which a horse feels in biting through the hot meat, causes it, after a few lessons, to abandon the vicious habit.

POPE LEO THE TENTH.

Pope Leo the Tenth had often been heard to say, that he should die contented if he could gain possession of Parma and Piacenza. When he won them, his joy was so excessive that it brought on a fever, of which he died.

RAILROADS IN BELGIUM.

A Belgian journal states that the number of leagues (the Belgian league is about three miles English) travelled over on the railroads of Belgium during the first nine months of the present year was 353,665, that the expense of working per league was, in 1841, 13fr. 67c.; in 1842, 14fr. 79c.; in 1843, 12fr. 88c.; and that this year it is only 12fr. 30c.

THE FUNCTIONS OF THE BRAIN.

At an inquest held on Monday upon a person who survived for three days in dreadful injury of the brain, Mr. Wakley said that a short time ago a man was struck on the head with a pickaxe, and that although his brains escaped from the wound and bemastered his hand, he was able to run without assistance to the London Hospital. Upon arriving at the hospital he was asked how he felt, when he replied that he was much better since he lost his brains. Mr. Wakley further said that it was almost incredible how long persons survived injuries of the brain.

THE STYLE OF PERSIAN WRITERS.

Persian writers have always been fond of long pompous periods; and Abul-Fazel, who seems to have thought the essence of all good writing consisted in this, has been so eminently successful, that his nominatives and verbs are often posted at the distance of three pages from each other; and the space within is occupied with parentheses within parentheses, where the sense, if any, has been concealed behind such a number of interchments, that the Council of Trent would be puzzled to discover it.

THE FOLLY OF PRIDE.

The most beautiful flowers that ever graced the table or head of royalty, sprang from the earth. And whence sprang man? Let the Holy Bible speak:—"And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." How vain then the pride of birth and ancestry! What a perfect delusion is he stated and puffed up, when he, from whom we are descended, was himself formed from the dust of the ground. How clearly, how forcibly does this say "pride was not made for man."

DR. JOHNSON'S IMITATIONS.

It happens unfortunately that Dr. Johnson's style is particularly easy of imitation, even by writers utterly destitute of his vigour of thought; and such imitations are intolerable. They bear the same resemblance to their model that the armour of the Chinese (as described by travellers, consisting of thick quilted cotton covered with stiff glazed paper) does to that of the ancient knights; equally glittering, bulky, and cumbersome, but destitute of the temper and firmness which was its sole advantage.—Whately's Rhetoric.

THE PROCESSION, ST. MARY'S HILL, STAMFORD.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO BURGHLEY.

(Continued from page 325.)

The special train, however, came on at a rapid rate, and reached the Camden-town station at ten minutes past five o'clock. From here the train was backed, and turned on the down line; and it reached the Euston terminus at twenty minutes past five o'clock.

Some parts of the journey were performed at very great speed. At Watford, where the train stopped for a few seconds, the Prince remarked to the Directors how very fast they had come. At the terminus her Majesty expressed to Mr. Glyn her satisfaction at the arrangements that had been made for her accommodation on the railway.

RETURN OF HER MAJESTY AND PRINCE ALBERT.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert arrived at the terminus of the London and Birmingham Railway on Friday afternoon, on their return from Burghley House, at twenty-five minutes past five o'clock.

A detachment of the 17th Regiment of Lancers, under the command of Lieut. Annes, arrived at the station before three o'clock, and remained until her Majesty arrived.

After the Royal carriages entered the station yard, the crowd, which before was inconsiderable, greatly increased, and the most intense interest was manifested to obtain a view of the Queen and her illustrious Consort.

The passage leading from the railway to the rooms appropriated for her Majesty's use, were, as on Tuesday last, covered with scarlet cloth.

Shortly before five o'clock, the workmen employed in the carpenters' shops and other departments of the railroad, amounting to upwards of 200, formed themselves into a line at the end of the terminus, and when the Royal cortege arrived, they gave loud and hearty cheers, which were warmly responded to by those who had been admitted to witness her Majesty's arrival.

The Earl of Delaware, Lord Chamberlain, accompanied her Majesty to town. The Earl of Liverpool and Lord Jersey left the station at Weedon about an hour before the Royal train, in order to be in readiness to receive her Majesty on her arrival at Windsor.

At Euston-square, her Majesty and Prince Albert were received by Mr. C. Glynn, the chairman of the Birmingham Railway Company, and several of the Directors, and after a short delay, conducted to the Royal carriage, followed by the members of the Court.

The Royal cavalcade then drove off at a rapid pace for the terminus of the Great Western Railway at Paddington, escorted by a detachment of the 17th Lancers. A train was in readiness to convey her Majesty to Slough en route to Windsor.

The reception which her Majesty and her Royal Consort received was most loyal and enthusiastic; the cheers of the populace, as the Royal carriages passed under the principal entrance to the station were unanimous, and appeared as if given from the heart.

Her Majesty, who did not appear at all fatigued by travelling, was heard to say that she had had a very pleasant journey.

The proceedings at Stamford were detailed last week. At the entrance of the borough a handsome arch was erected, and also an enormous platform by the side of the road, for the accommodation of visitors and residents. It was surmounted by a flag, and inscribed, "Long live the Queen!" There must have been some 2000 or 3000 people there. It is needless to say that they cheered her Majesty most warmly as she passed. As the progress of the Royal cortege was necessarily somewhat slower, owing to the conflux of people, those who were stationed on the platform must have had a good view of the Queen. This platform extended to the corner of the road, as it enters Stamford, the road to Burghley turning off to the right.

Our Engraving represents her Majesty and her loyal escort passing St. Mary's Hill, at Stamford, with the fine old church in the distance: it is principally of the thirteenth century: the height of the tower and steeple, to the top of the vane, is 163 feet. The church has some rich chapels, and an ancient canopied altar-tomb.

The next illustration shows the procession passing the handsome church of St. Michael, altered and modernised, by Mr. John Brown, architect, Norwich.

On Thursday, the Queen honoured the town of Stamford with a visit. At two o'clock most of the shops in the town were closed in honour of the occasion, and exactly at half-past two, the Royal cavalcade left Burghley. The first carriage, which was drawn by four horses, and contained the Queen, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Marquis of Exeter, and Lady Portman, was preceded by the Lord Exeter's outriders. The carriage was an open one, and every one had an excellent view of the Royal and illustrious party. In the second carriage, which was also an open one, were seated Sir Robert Peel, Earl de la Warr, Lady Sophia Cecil, and the Hon. Miss Liddell. In a pony phaeton which followed were the Hon. Mrs. Spencer, and Lady Middleton. The Royal cavalcade proceeded through St. Martin's-street, St. Mary's-street, St. John's-street, up High-street, to the west entrance of the Infirmary, and then by St. Leonard's.

RUINS AT WOTTON.

The cavalcade returned in front of the Infirmary through St. Paul's-street and Ironmonger-street, Broad-street, and Red Lion-square to Burghley. During the Royal progress through the town the bells of the various churches of the borough rang merry peals.

Every window along the entire route was decorated with Royal standards, union jacks, streamers, and flags of every description, or some other token of love and attachment. When opposite the Bede House, in Broad-street, the carriage in which were the Queen and the Prince stopped for a moment, which afforded the Marquis of Exeter an opportunity of drawing the attention of her Majesty to that excellent institution.

The streets through which her Majesty proceeded were crowded by her loyal and devoted subjects, who evinced their affection by hearty greetings, which were acknowledged by her Majesty in a most gracious manner.

On leaving the borough the Royal and Noble party proceeded to Wothorpe, where they inspected the ruins of the mansion and other antiquities in the neighbourhood. This seat is stated by Camden to have been built by Thomas Cecil, the first Earl of Exeter, who pleasantly said, he built it only to retire to out of the dust, while his great house at Burghley was sweeping. After the Restoration, the Duke of Buckingham, with his family, resided in it for many years. There are only the turrets, (with cupolas similar to those at Burghley) and the fragments of some walls remaining, which are shown in the annexed view. The greater part of the house was taken down in 1758-9, and the materials employed in building the stables at Burghley.

The arrival of her Majesty at Burghley was reported last week; as was the ceremony of the christening of the infant daughter of the Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter, on Wednesday. (See page 316.) The ceremony is represented in our engraving. After it had concluded, her Majesty kissed the young godchild of her Royal Consort, Prince Albert presented the infant with a very rich and handsome gold cup after the ceremony.

The cup stands about fifteen inches high, and bears a crown on the top of the cover. The sides are ornamented with figures of Cupid bearing cymbals, and the whole is elaborately chased. This work of art bears the following inscription in the three compartments into which it is divided:—

To the Lady Victoria Cecil,	from her Godfather, Albert.	Burghley, Nov. 12, 1844.
-----------------------------------	-----------------------------------	--------------------------------

THE CHRISTENING CUP.

of which we annex an Engraving at page 332, was a gorgeous work in

THE PROCESSION, PASSING ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH, STAMFORD.]

THE KITCHEN AT BURGHLEY.

confectionery, reflecting great credit upon the skill and taste of the manufacturer, Mr. Oswin, of Red Lion-square, a native of Stamford. Its weight was about 600 lbs., exclusive of the ornaments. The cake was surmounted by a font, with a white satin flag, fringed with silver, at each corner. The height of the cake was 2 ft. 2 in., and its circumference 57 inches. Its decorations were very superb, and, placed upon a handsome silver stand, it was, altogether, a splendid affair.

Her Majesty's visit to the kitchen at Burghley was incidentally mentioned in our last. This apartment, as we intimated at page 308, is a portion of the original mansion, built by the great Lord Burghley. It is a noble room situated on the south side of a spacious court. It stands at the east end of the mansion, and measures 48 feet by 30; the roof is very lofty, and has a groined ceiling, of earlier style even than the old mansion. At one end is a large painting of a carcase of beef—an exhibition of the true ensign armorial of English hospitality; though to place the semblance amidst so much reality, seems extrinsic. Lastly, the engraving at page 332, shows the Buffet of Plate in the Great Dining Hall, described at page 313, last week.

(Continued on page 331.)

THE CHRISTENING IN THE CHAPEL.

WYON'S ROYAL EXCHANGE MEDAL.

The "Jetteau" designed to commemorate the opening of the Royal Exchange was executed by W. Wyon, Esq., R.A. It bears on the obverse a bust of her Majesty in high relief, with the legend, "ROYAL EXCHANGE, OPENED BY H. M. QUEEN VICTORIA, OCT. 28, 1844." The reverse is composed of a wreath of oak and laurel, which is displayed three shields—the bearings of the City of London, the Mercers' Company, and Sir Thomas Gresham; the latter, surmounted by his crest—the famous Grasshopper. The legend consists of the words, "FIRST STONE LAID BY H. R. H. PRINCE ALBERT, JAN. 17, 1842." Of this medal, 1500 have been struck, and 200 more are in course of preparation, for distribution by the Gresham Committee, amongst the guests present at the opening of the Exchange, and persons, both at home and abroad, of high commercial reputation. The medal—as we prefer to call it—is of silver, the surface of the metal burnished, and the raised parts dead. Our cut has been enlarged from the original for the sake of greater clearness.

ROYAL EXCHANGE MEDAL.

The committee, feeling that so important an event should be celebrated by the execution of a higher work of art, than the mere striking of a "Jetteau," have ordered Mr. Wyon to prepare a large medal, whose beauty of design and workmanship shall be commensurate with the great event it is intended to commemorate. The model submitted by Mr. Wyon, and which has been approved by the committee, has, on the one side, the full length figure, in profile, of the Queen, from the statue by Lough, which is to be placed in the centre of the Merchants' Area. Her Majesty is represented standing in her Robes of State, holding in her left hand the Orb, and in her right which is inclined downwards, the sceptre of the Dove; behind the figure is a portion of the Quadrangle of the Royal Exchange. On the other side of the medal is a freely executed bust, in high relief of Sir Thomas Gresham, dressed in the characteristic cap and ruffed frill of his time.

ROYAL EXCHANGE MEDAL.

FINE ARTS.

"The Emperor," winner of the Ascot Cup; painted by W. Shayer; engraved by C. Hunt. "Foigh-a-Ballagh," winner of the Great St. Leger; painted by G. Swandall; engraved by C. Hunt. "Alice Hawthorn," winner of the Doncaster Cup; painted by W. Shayer; engraved by C. Hunt. Moore.

Certainly, if industry in the publication of sporting realities in the class of art most appropriate for the illustration of such subjects be a recommendation to popularity, Mr. Moore attains it beyond doubt, and has a good right to call his "nobby" establishment the Bee-wing gallery. He is for ever working with the bee's wing. We have here three most spirited portraits of three of the most remarkable animals that ever made speed famous, and taught the lightning of rapidity to play along the turf.

The first is "The Emperor," the winner of the Ascot Cup, named in hospitable honour of the Emperor of Russia, who, during his presence in England, by his munificent donation to the race-course, well deserved the compliment from the sporting world. He was formerly called The Defence colt; but, having been promoted in his title, and won the cup, now requires no defence whatever. His portrait is here beautifully drawn by Shayer, and coloured to the life.

What ho! Foigh-a-ballagh! Clear the way! That is the English way of saying it in Irish—Clear the way for Foigh-a-Ballagh. "By Japers, yer honour," says a Paddy at our elbow, "There's small need of that same; Foigh-a-Ballagh has cleared the way for himself." And so he has; and a fine rollicking Irish dandy of steppier he is and looks; he beats Banagher, and Banagher beats the devil—and so we have small chance for his opponents. Nothing could be more true and spirited than the portrait of him, which, although just now staring us in the face, looks as if it could run away from us in a moment.

A third exquisite reflex of horseflesh in prints is Alice Hawthorn—the darling of the turf, and the winner of forty-three (!) cups! Who would not be proud to drink out of a cup won by Alice Hawthorn? It is enough to say that she is to be framed and glazed to make every body run after her likeness. All three prints are capital, and now reader Foigh-a-Ballagh for Mr. Moore.

LITERATURE.

THE POST-OFFICE LONDON DIRECTORY, 1845. KELLY and Co. Twenty years have made strange alterations in the bulk of this almost indispensable Directory. Well do we remember the mean, spare volume of other days, with its long lines of large type, and its shabby sheepskin binding; in place of which we have here a ponderous, large octavo volume, of some 1800 pages, of two and three columns each, of small type, comprising, inter alia, directories, official, street, commercial, law, court, parliamentary, postal, City, conveyance, banking—thus combining the advantages of the old "Directory" with those of the "Court Guide"—the east with the west—and comprising all the information which the merchant or trader, or any other London resident or visitor, can reasonably expect to find; and, by excellent classification and arrangement, any portion of this information may be found without difficulty. In this volume, the 46th annual publication, the Street Directory contains twenty-eight pages, or upwards of 4000 names, more than that for 1841. The Postal Directory, of instruction as to the despatch of letters and newspapers to all parts of the world, and the list of the principal places in England and Wales, with the view to facilitate the operations of the Money Order Office—have also been greatly extended. Among other additions, we perceive some important and interesting statistics of London—as the area in acres, population, and assessment, and a statement from the "Occupations" Abstract of the Census of 1841. The "Directory" is, in fine, as complete as untiring industry and vigilance can make it; for they have uniformly kept pace with the increase of the number and extent of our metropolitan and national establishments and interests.

THE LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC REGISTER AND ALMANACK FOR 1845. By J. W. GUTCH. Simpkin and Co.

This is a kind of Register of Facts and Information, such as must be useful to all persons of an inquiring turn of mind. Moreover, it contains a host of aids to general conversation, which often flags or comes to a stand-still for want of some definite information on an abstract subject. Thus, we have an Almanack, with anniversaries of inventions; a list of customs duties; the usual calendar and commercial lists; a compendium of facts, data, or "constants," as Mr. Babbage would term them, in acoustics, aerial phenomena, agriculture, anatomy, arguing, architecture, astronomy (very copious), biblical chronology, building, chemistry, domestic economy, gardening, geography, heat, hydraulics, insurance, mathematics, mechanics, mensuration, miscellaneous, optics, painting, pathology, pharmacology, physiology, statistics, therapeutics, useful tables, weights, measures, &c. To this enumeration we should add our note of confidence in the authenticity and excellent arrangement of the information. This pocket-book, like its predecessors, is dedicated, by permission, to Prince Albert; and it appears to be, in every respect, worthy of his Royal Highness' distinguished patronage, for its very extensive sphere of utility.

INSTRUCTIONS TO YOUNG SPORTSMEN IN ALL THAT RELATES TO GUNS AND SHOOTING. By Lieut.-Col. P. HAWKER. Ninth Edition.

To give a note of commendation to this work, of which nine editions, numbering more than a hundred thousand, have been sold, would be supererogatory. The original edition was printed some thirty years since, and the book has gone on increasing in bulk with the author's trial and experience; taking for his aim, "particular directions for (what gentlemen least understand) getting access to wild birds of every description." The work has, of late, been in many parts materially altered and enlarged; and the Colonel considers that the improvements introduced in this edition may be considered, in some degree, as "finishing lessons to those young sportsmen who have done him the honour to attend to his earlier instructions." Among the entirely new matter, we find detailed accounts of Greenfield's new machinery for making waterproof copper caps, of Colonel Hawker's improvement on Wilkinson's musket, the patent breeching musket, &c.; with several pages of valuable observations on coast-guarding, more especially on the Hampshire coast. The following is the

POSTSCRIPT ON PARTRIDGE SHOOTING.

P.S., 1844.—When this group was drawn (several years since), it was not an uncommon occurrence to bring home from fifty to sixty birds of partridge in a day. But within these few years the shooting has so fallen off, that we can rarely get our ten brace even on the 1st of September. Many people say, "How do you account for this? Why, the reason is obvious, from a combination of circumstances, all against the sportsman; viz., the march of intellect in partridge—of a sale of game act without a summary proceeding against trespassers who are without guns—the increased demand for partridges, &c.—the farmer's cutting up the grass banks for fuel, and thereby driving the birds to feed in open fields, at the mercy of hawks, wet weather, and dry haw—putting among their seed wheat vernal to prevent snail, which poisons many birds that would otherwise be left to breed—and mowing their wheat, by which means they destroy all fine stubbles for shooting. In short, the only wonder is that we have any brace at all; and the scarcity will, no doubt, increase every year, unless some alteration be made in the game-laws, and the landholders adopt some restrictions in their leases, taking care, at the same time, to make amends to the farmer for any new claims they may choose to introduce; or he will either destroy the game himself, or encourage his labourers to do so."

KNIGHT'S WEEKLY VOLUME—X. to XXII. C. Knight and Co. This already popular series of Reading for All proceeds well. Possibly, the selection of Tasso's "Jerusalem Delivered," translated by Fairfax (X. and XI.), is too much in advance of the reader; but it is a very venial error. Mr. Reanier's "Bird Architecture" deservedly forms No. XI. The two succeeding numbers complete Miss Lane's "Englishwoman in Egypt," and Mr. Davis's "The Chinese." No. XV. is devoted to a reprint of the volumes on "The Elephant," in the charming series entitled "The Menageries," in the "Library of Entertaining Knowledge;" it is, indeed, a most fascinating work, from the first to the last page. We are by no means so well pleased with No. XVI., "Rambles by Rivers," by James Thorne, reprinted from "The Penny Magazine." The "rivers" are the Dodon, the Mole, the Adur, Arun and Wey, the Lea and the Dove. This is, throughout, a very flimsy and unsatisfactory performance, and, by some degrees, the least meritorious volume yet printed in the series. The author affects to be above his task as a topographer, while he proves himself unequal to it in information. The next work, XVII. and XVIII., is of more sterling worth: it is entitled "Sketches of the History of Literature and Learning in England from the Norman Conquest to the Accession of Elizabeth;" in which the author, Mr. Craik, brings to his labour untiring research, and admirable tact in illustrating points of popular interest. The first volume extends to Piers Ploughman; and although the chronicles of our early literature are not uniformly attractive, by aid of "the improved archaeological scholarship of recent times," Mr. Craik has enriched his survey copiously with new lights. One, however, appeared to have escaped him, viz., a communication made to the Royal Society of Literature, in 1829, maintaining the existence of Gildas, our earliest historian, to be a fiction. The work, excepting in its arrangement, is of a cyclopaedia character, and must prove acceptable to a very large class of readers thirsting for knowledge. No. XIX. consists of a reprint of Lord Brougham's "Dialogues on Instinct," and his "View of the Researches on Fossil Osteology," from his lordship's "Dissertations," in the two supplementary volumes of the edition of Paley's "Natural Theology;" the Latin quotations being translated; this volume, it need scarcely be added, is a "pearl of great price" in the series. No. XX. is another of Mr. Craik's contributions—the first of three volumes to be devoted to the "History of British Commerce," reprinted from the "Pictorial History of England;" this is a most laborious production, more to be prized as a book of reference than entertainment: in a long note, we perceive old Camden is caught tripping, so that Mr. Craik himself must take our correction in good part. No. XXI. is "A Volume of Varieties," by the Editor, and containing some very agreeable papers, occasionally of the magazine cast—all reprinted from various works. No. XXII., "The Camp of Refuge," is the first volume of "Old England Novels;" it is a tale of the Norman times—four years after the Battle of Hastings—the scenes being the Grand Abbey of Crowland, the Great House at Ely, &c., in the Fen country: the period is not attractive overmuch.

MURRAY'S HOME AND COLONIAL LIBRARY, Nos. XII. and XIII. The first of the numbers contains Dr. Southey's Lives of Oliver Cromwell and John Bunyan, reprinted from the "Quarterly Review;" if we mistake not, with the advantage of additional notes. Southey was, altogether, the best prose writer of his day; and, although the "Lives" before us are somewhat too discursive (from their being written for a review) to be considered as regular biographies, they, on that account, are the more attractive, from the extraordinary mass of illustrative anecdote which author and editor have here collected. At the close of the life of Bunyan, is Dr. Southey's honourable notice of one towards whom he was, doubtless, embittered in earlier life; it is really worth quoting: "In one of the volumes collected from various quarters, I observe the name of W. Hone, and notice it that I may take the opportunity of recommending his Every-day Book and Table Book, to those who are interested in the preservation of our national and local customs. By these very curious publications their compiler has rendered good service in an important department of literature; and he may render yet more if he obtain the encouragement which he well deserves."

No. XIII. of the "Library" contains an original work—"Notes and Sketches of New South Wales, during a residence in that colony from 1839 to 1841," by Mrs. Charles Meredith; the preface being dated from Van Diemen's Land. The scenery, people, and the various objects which strike a new-comer, as novel or remarkable, are described in a very lively vein, and the book is altogether an appropriate and valuable contribution to the series. A few years since its contents would have been expanded to an expensive octavo volume.

POINTS AND PICKINGS OF INFORMATION ABOUT CHINA AND THE CHINESE. By the Author of "Soldiers and Sailors." Grant and Griffith.

The younglings of the next generation will, doubtless, be better acquainted with China, than are the children of a larger growth, in our day; and, towards this end, the present volume will contribute its quota of information, cleverly picked from books of travels and recent records; for, the author's experience, we judge, scarcely extends beyond his own room. The voyage is, however, confessedly supposititious: it is narrated in a lively style, which the author evidently fears may lead to his descriptions being impugned; and we must add that somewhat less of the gaudy would have improved the work; for example, it is beneath the reformed manner of writing books for children to say, "Were I called on to decide what people beneath the stars are most worthy of estimation, I should certainly point to my own countrymen." Again, sentences are occasionally obscure, as the following: "There is little doubt that the Chinese nation is the oldest in the world, if we except that of the Jews, but you must know something of what they (?) say of themselves." With these incidental blemishes, the volume is very amusing and instructive: it is profusely illustrated with woodcuts.

THE STAR OF THE COURT. By Miss S. BUNBURY. Grant and Griffith.

This is a narrative of "the Maid of Honour and Queen of England, Anne Boleyn," written for young persons, with the intention of illustrating the rightfulness of ambition and candour in the character, history, and fate of the fair maid of Norfolk. The historical facts are related in a very entertaining manner, and the moral purpose continually kept in view, so that the book may very safely be placed in the hands of the young. It is embellished with an illuminated title-page, a portrait, engraved initials, &c.

SONGS AND HYMNS FOR THE NURSERY. BATES. A thin quarto of songs and hymns, with music set low, in the hope of its being found within the compass of very juvenile songsters; and accompaniments added for their less juvenile friends.

PICTORIAL LIVERPOOL: a new and complete Handbook for Resident, Visitor, and Tourist. H. Lacey.

This is a very neatly-compiled picture of the annals, commerce, shipping, institutions, public buildings, sights, &c., of the Modern Tyne, as Liverpool has been felicitously termed, from its extensive commercial and maritime connexions: it is very ably put together, but is almost disfigured by some engravings of very questionable execution. With this exception, the work is entitled to high praise.

THE BEAUTIES OF THE OPERA. Parts VI. and VII. Bogue, Fleet-street.

This truly elegant work maintains its attractions. Part VI. is a continuation of "The Huguenots," and presents a nicely engraved portrait of Trillette-Nathalie as Valentine in that piece. The prose, in many instances, is more a translation than a description of the plot and incidents of the French libretto, and affords a very lively notion of the original, both by its own fidelity, and the illustrative woodcuts which are inserted in the text.

Part VII. has the ballet of "Onfide" for its subject, with a portrait of the fascinating Cerito, as the Nymph of the Waters, such a one as the creator of the character, M. le Baron de la Motte Fourné, would have hailed as the realization of his supernatural dream—for it was he who, in his "Onfide," first gave to the world that modern description of the "Naiad" which has been embodied by Cerito so felicitously. Independent of the engraved portrait, we have another from the pen of the writer, which describes Cerito truly, and which, for its graphic fidelity, we here transcribe—"The dancing of Cerito has been particularly germane to British audiences, and for her have been produced the two most original ballets that have ever given fame to the Italian Opera in the Haymarket—"Alma" and "Onfide," which have been constantly performed; and, to judge by the applause that has greeted and followed them, have been "Ever charming, ever new."

The numbers are got up in the elegant style of their predecessors, but there is too much bad, hard, French drawing about many of the illustrations. Some of the borderings are extremely beautiful—viz., page 72.

MUSIC.

MUSICAL STATISTICS OF THE METROPOLIS.

The following enumeration will afford the best answer to those grumblers who are eternally deploring the low state of music in England, and comparing its present degradation (?) with its former grandeur. In the season—and that is nearly all the year round—what city can boast of such a full of fare as the following? We shall begin, by grace, with that theatre which her Majesty so particularly patronises—the Italian Opera. Where can be heard such a congregation of the first artists in the world? Not elsewhere is our reply. Where can we hear the immortal works of Mozart, Haydn, Brethoven, Weber, &c., performed as they are at the Philharmonic; or the sublimer conceptions of the great HANDEL at the Ancient Concerts, or Exeter Hall? Does not the Societa Armonica prove the love for, and high state of the art amongst us? The same question will apply to the Society of British Musicians. Look, moreover, at the thousand and one concerts by day and by night—the matinee musicales—the soirees musicales—the quartet reunions—the modest meetings—the glee clubs—the musodists, &c.; and then cast about the want of a lover for music in the land of PUNCH! The quantity of music printed in this country, and the exorbitant price paid for it, alone would prove that it is almost a waste with us; and go into any society, do we not find amateurs who can rival the most distinguished professors in either vocal or instrumental ability? There are more musical amateurs in this metropolis than are to be found in all the world beside.

THE THEATRES.

HAYMARKET.

The definitions of comedy given by our greatest critics, are so at variance, that we are at a loss to discover the actual limits of the art. Johnson considered the ultimatum of comedy to be merely laughter; but this is a most degrading conception of its powers. Pope declared that it was a matter of doubt, which was the highest aspiration of the human mind—a comedy or a tragedy. Warburton, Dryden, Warton, and others, are equally undecided. Again, farce is considered to be a deteriorating ingredient in high comic writing, yet it is copiously used by Shakespeare, and all the old dramatists. The "Comedy of Errors" is not only a farce, but a most outrageous impossibility. It is no excuse to urge that it is an adaptation of the "Eugenia" of Plautus: Shakespeare has lent his name to it and given it a position in the dramatic creation. If we might be permitted, amongst such mighty disputants, to give our opinion, we should say that comedy should indicate the manners, foibles, vices, and general anatomy of the conventional world. Tragedy is as fixed in its rules as nature itself—it professes to be the action of the passions common to all times and nations; but comedy is the picture of society as it is; and must change in its forms and texture with the times which it delineates. If, therefore, adventure was the business of fashionable life in 1744, and wit was its common parlance, the representation of its comedy would admit of what is technically termed, "Spanish intrigue" and epigrammatic point; but if the present era reveals nothing to the eye of the dramatist but routine and rapidity, he is compelled to parody his situations and impose a violence on his creation, to render effective that which faithfully depicted would only be tedious and unprofitable.

The new comedy of "Old Heads and Young Hearts," by Mr. Bourcicault, produced at this house on Monday evening, is the very best which has appeared for years—an assertion possibly borne out by its triumphant success. Year after year have comedies been brought out, and the same date has seen them quietly on the shelf. Some of them had very fair plots—others most brilliant dialogue—but, in spite of puns and placards, boxes grew thinner and receipts less each night of their representation, until they retired altogether to be heard of no more. The reason was, that there was in them no attempt to depict the manners of the day; or, rather, there was an attempt, resulting from imagination, and received conventional notions. Persons came to see existing society portrayed, and were disappointed; or else they were wearied with long heavy dialogue and tedious sentiment. This will not apply to "Old Heads and Young Hearts." The writing was sparkling and pungent; the portrayal of character natural and unaffected; and in the scenes of society introduced, nothing was outraged by ignorance of the class from which they were drawn.

It is unnecessary to detail the plot: we will mention merely the characters. The two chief parts of the piece, Jessie Ransel, a kind and simple country curate, and Flem Cooke, a fair-spirited Yorkshire squire, were in the hands of Messrs. Farren and Webster. The former was beautifully played: the old man's joy at his mistakes contrived for promoting everybody's happiness, and subsequent distress when he finds how his innocent mismanagement has turned out, was in the highest style of acting. Nor was Mr. Webster less effective as the warm-hearted countryman—more especially in the fifth act, respecting his reconciliation with his brother, Littleton Cooke, a young brother barrister, was not sustained with any remarkable effect by Mr. Charles Mathews. His first scene struck us as most ingeniously played; and he hurried some of the speeches with a careless rapidity, which entirely destroyed their point. As the piece proceeded he improved greatly, possibly, warmed up by the continuous applause. Colonel Rocket, an old Indian officer, was admirably enacted by Mr. Strickland; Mr. Holl showed average ability as Lord Charles Ransel, son of Lord Pompton (Mr. Tilbury); and Mr. Buckstone's Bob was amazingly dull. The female characters were Lady Alice Hawthorn (a high-spirited meteor of fashion, who insists upon being balloted into the "omnibus box"), most spiritedly played by Madame Vestris, as was Miss Rocket by Miss Julia Bennett. Lady Pompton also found a very efficient supporter in Mrs. W. Clifford.

Some trifling disapprobation in the second act was immediately suppressed; and then the comedy went with continued bursts of cheering, until the curtain fell amidst a whirlwind of applause. Mr. Bourcicault, in reply to the calls of "author!" bowed from a private box; and the whole of the dramatis personae subsequently appeared on the stage.

There were so many clever things said that it is difficult to select one or two for quotation. Perhaps the following went best with the audience:—

Lit. Gold is the Median bath of youth, possessing also a magnetic attraction for every cardinal virtue, while all the plagues of Egypt are shut up in one English word, and that is poverty: the exhibition of which, like that of the Gorgon's head, turns the hearts of your dearest friends to stone.

Rev. Can May-day legislation repeal the laws of nature? By Jove! the weather, at last, will cut the sun because it rises in the east, and lives by was light.

Lit. You, perhaps, may never see the world as I do, Charles, because I am poor—but a rich man's view of life is haunted by his parasites—he feels but through his glove and thinks all things are soft.

Pom. Since I came into this city I haven't seen a fair inch of blue sky, or a blade of green grass. Stop—I did though—yes, I did see a pair sickly plums perched up in a place they called a square, looking, for all the world, as if they'd put nature in a pound for straying into town.

Old Rocket's disbelief in the battle of Hastings because there was no account of it in the Army List, was also very effective, as well as his anger at the Earl's allusion to his ancestors, who came over after the battle, in which the old soldier could not see much credit. This produced a round of applause.

LYCEUM.

"A Trip to Kissenzen"—which multifarious name indicates the locality of some German battles, in fashion with our autumnal tourists—is the name of a new farce, produced towards the close of last week at this house, and with triumphant success. It is stated to be the first production of Mr. T. Taylor, of Trinity College, Cambridge; and, if that be the case, gives strong indications of a very fresh and original vein of dramatic writing, with much less reliance on conventional stage business and hackneyed situations than is usually the case. The story may be thus told:—Count de Carandole (Mr. Wigan), a foreign scamp, such as might have been seen lately hanging about the low bells of Leicester-square, and his wife, Fine (Mrs. Wigan), arrive at the principal gasthaus at Kissenzen in danger of being arrested for some bank forgeries upon letters of credit, which have been discovered at Frankfurt. At the same time arrives Mr. Craik (Mr. Keeley), the "exclusive correspondent" of the "Scourge" London newspaper, who has left his wife in the dismal solitudes of Helene Bay, and come to the baths of Kissenzen on a wild spree. Fine pretends, at the table d'hôte, to be struck with him, and, finding out who he is, tells him that he is in jeopardy from some articles which have appeared in the "Scourge," reflecting on the Bavarian Government; but that, to serve him, she will exchange her husband's passport for his own—of course, out of devotion. Mr. Craik agrees to this; and we next see him as Count de Carandole, playing the part of a gallant faisant in front of the bath-house. In the meantime his wife (Mrs. Keeley), accompanied by her uncle, Mr. Louisa (Mr. Turner), has arrived at Kissenzen, and finds her husband flitting with Fine, just as he is arrested for the Count de Carandole, upon the strength of his boasting and his false passport. Mrs. Craik is so enraged, that she denies all knowledge of him, and the wretched little journalist is at once marched off to prison. A variety of distressing situations now commences, in which Keeley must be seen, for their drudgery to be conceived; and he is on the point of being condemned, when two Bow-street officers arrive and recognise the real Count de Carandole. An explanation takes place; his wife, having punished him sufficiently, forgives him; the real culprit is marched away, and the piece terminates happily.

This is the outline of the plot; but the dialogue is so smart and good-tempered, and the allusions so clever, that a double vivacity is given to its progress; and a quaint pleasant humour runs through it from beginning to end. To say that both Keeley and his wife played with the same inimitable drollery which characterises all they do, is indeed praise enough; but we must, at the same time, speak most especially of the acting of Mr. Wigan, as the French swindler. To this gentleman belongs the sole credit of effecting a reform in the representation of stage foreigners. His personation of them is perfect: his Waterloo Guide in "Gertrude's Cheries;" his Sporting Count in "The Turf;" his French Viceroy, in everything, are characteristic studies of no low order; and he speaks also, as they might, in reality; not in the theatrical broken English of a few years back. His making up also from his hair to his pentagone en queue was a picture: he was the living representative of the "shy" foreigner that Mr. Leech can portray so well with his pencil. Not less clever was Mrs. Wigan's Fine; her townsman and broken English were also carefully taken from nature, and we could sometimes close our eyes and fancy we were listening to Celeste or Eugenie Prosper. Mr. Turner was comically harmless as Uncle Louisa. The piece went with a roar of laughter throughout, and was announced for repetition amidst loud applause.

PRINCESS.

A drama, called "Prediction," was produced here on Monday evening, which, we were somewhat disappointed to find, was merely another version of the "Mysterious Stranger," now performing at the Adelphi, and scarcely so effective. Miss Emma Stanley is a very clever young lady, but she does not play the assumed Evil One equal to Madame Celeste. Her performance, nevertheless, was highly creditable; as was that of the lover of the piece, sustained by Mr. Walter Lacy. Mr. Granby, a useful member of this company, also played carefully; but there was nothing in the other characters to call for any particular remark. The piece went tolerably well, and the audience were perfectly satisfied; but it will not do to rely upon alone, in drawing an audience.

Mr. Balfe bids fair to rival Donizetti in the number of his operatic productions—for between the Opera Comique, at Paris, Drury-lane, and the Princess's here, he contrives currente calamo to keep three establishments constantly supplied with something new, and has not made a single fiasco yet. On Wednesday last an English version of "Les Quatre Fils Aymon," the title of the libretto which was performed at Paris last summer, was produced at this house, and proved successful in the highest degree. It is called "The Castle of Aymon," or "The Four Brothers," but the story bears no resemblance to the legend so well known in Germany as the "Haimonkinder;" it seems rather to have been founded upon our own juvenile romance of "Jack

THE BUCKLEY CHRISTENING CAKE.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO BURGHLEY.

(Continued from page 329).

At the Ball at Burghley, on Thursday evening, Adams's band was in attendance, and performed in the presence of her Majesty and Prince Albert, an entirely new selection of quadrilles, polkas, waltzes, &c.

A correspondent has forwarded us the accompanying anecdote:—

A lady, residing not an hundred miles from Wolverton, was commanded to be at Weedon on Tuesday, should the Queen stop there, as her services would be required. The lady started for the occasion; but, to her great grief, found the train would proceed to Rugby, and not stop at Weedon. Her feelings may be better imagined than described when she heard this, and, of course, all hope for her was lost. When near Crick, the whistle sounded, and the train slack-ened its pace; and from some cause, which proved fortunate in the end, it eventually stopped, and the lady alighted, determined to remain there rather than proceed. To use her own words, she was heedless of the consequences of being on the line, and burst into tears. An engine-driver near at hand saw her distress, and on hearing her case, offered to take her back to Weedon on his engine, if she had the courage for the journey. She gladly accepted the offer, although in a delicate state of health, and arrived at Weedon in time, having performed the journey in four minutes and a half. This, we believe, is the first instance of a lady riding on an engine, and some of our fair ones would faint at the bare idea of such a flying visit through the air—standing, not seated.

* * * Erratum at page 312: for "Kellon-stone," read "Kellon-stone."

BUFFET OF PLATE, BANQUETING HALL, BURGHLEY.

"THE COTTAGER'S DAUGHTER." *

"This ballad was suggested by a well-known and interesting story told of a certain noble family in England."—Note by Thomas Moore.

"You remember Ellen,"—Irish Melody.

You remember Ellen, our hamlet's pride,
How meekly she blessed her humble lot,
When the stranger, William, had made her his bride,
And Love was the light of their lowly cot.
Together they toiled through winds and rains,
Till William at length, in sadness said,
"We must seek our fortune on other plains!"
Then, sighing, she left her lowly shed.

* See our last Number.

They roam'd a long and a weary way,
Nor much was the maiden's heart at ease,
When now, at the close of one stormy day,
They see a proud castle among the trees.
"To-night," said the youth, "we'll shelter there;
The wind blows cold, the hour is late!"
So he blew the horn with a chieftain's air,
And the porter bowed, as they pass'd the gate.
"Now welcome, lady," exclaim'd the youth,
"This castle is thine, and these dark woods all."
She believed him crazed, but his words were truth,
For Ellen is lady of Rosam Hall!
And dearly the lord of Rosam loves
What William, the stranger, woo'd and wed;
And the light of bliss, in these lordly groves,
Shine pure as it did in the lowly shed.

SHAKESPEARE'S JUG AND CANE.

SHAKESPEARE'S JUG.

The first of these accredited relics of Shakespeare was formerly the property of Edwin Lees, Esq., of Fortnampton Cottage, near Tewkesbury, Gloucestershire, and was sold by auction in May, 1841. It has since been exhibited in the west of England, and has attracted very considerable attention. The accompanying details are from a handbill, printed by Mr. Bennett, of Tewkesbury:—

This Jug is of cream-colored earthenware, about nine inches in height, and sixteen round in the largest part, and somewhat in the shape of a modern coffee-pot. It is divided longitudinally into eight compartments, each horizontally subdivided; and within these the principal deities of the Grecian Mythology are represented in rather bold relief. Jupiter and Juno, Bacchus, Diana, Mercury Apollo, Mars, &c., are all plainly distinguishable by their thrones, chariots, or characteristic animal attendants.

To preserve the interior from dust, and the rim from accident, a silver top and earring were added about forty years ago, with a small medallion of Shakespeare upon it, inscribed "William Shakespeare, at the age of 48." The precious relic is kept beneath a carved covering, shown in the engraving.

As this interesting relic was never, until within the last six years, out of the possession of the collateral descendants of the "Immortal Bard of Avon," it becomes necessary to trace its history. Its possessor (Mr. Lees) purchased it from a daughter of the late James Kingsbury, Esq., of Tewkesbury, whose wife inherited it from her mother. This lady, whose name was Richardson, was, through her husband, whom she survived, related to the Hart family, direct descendants of Shakespeare's sister Joan; and the Harts, having fallen into depressed circumstances, gave up the Jug to their relative, Mr. Richardson, in compensation for a considerable debt owing to him, about 1787. Sarah Hart, who thus disposed of the Jug, was the fifth in descent from Shakespeare's sister Joan, who married William Hart, of Stratford-upon-Avon, and previously to this the Harts had constantly kept the Jug as brought into their family by Joan Shakespeare.

It appears, from Shakespeare's will, that he left his sister Joan all his wearing apparel, together with the house in which he was born; besides which, other property that had been Shakespeare's was devised to the Hart family by Lady Bernard, the great-granddaughter of Shakespeare, in whom the line of Shakespeare's own body terminated. It therefore, becomes certain, that various relics of Shakespeare were at one time in their possession. Of these, however, none appear to have been treasured with any care except this Jug, which was ever denominated Shakespeare's, as having truly belonged to the immortal bard. The facts here stated, however, challenge the fullest investigation—the Hart family yet existing in Tewkesbury, and the Jug having been long ago noticed and described by Sir Richard Phillips, in the Monthly Magazine, and in Mr. Bennett's Tewkesbury History and Register.

The present possessor of the Jug, Mrs. Fletcher, a descendant of the immortal bard, tried to prevent it from going from the Shakespeare family. She was outbid, and Mrs. Mary Tuberville, of Charlton-house, bought it for £30. At the second day's sale of her effects, however, at a cost of nineteen guineas, Mrs. Fletcher re-bought the Jug, and, during the week of the Festival, hundreds of persons availed themselves of the opportunity of inspecting it.

The Cane is of the Malacca species, in beautiful preservation, the enamel being untouched. In length it is 4 feet 7½ inches, 4 inches in circumference at the thickest part, and at the set-off for the hand of 18 inches it is 3½ inches round. It has evidently, at some time or other, been mounted, and has had a ferrule 5 inches long, but these mountings have been removed. It was long in the family of the Harts of Tewkesbury, and it is only a few days ago that the stick was purchased by Mrs. Fletcher, one of the few surviving descendants of the venerated owner.

THE CASE IN WHICH SHAKESPEARE'S JUG IS KEPT

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

ABBEY OF ST. BENET'S, NORFOLK.

The county of Norfolk literally teems with ecclesiastical antiquities: her very villages, in many instances, can boast of a plurality of churches, while the magnitude of her monastic institutions attests the piety or pride of bygone generations, and offers an interesting study to the modern antiquary.

Constructed at an epoch more remote than the generality of similar structures in the same county—endowed with large possessions, occupying a fertile and well-watered site, and combining within itself the conventional characteristics of a religious house with the solidity of a Norman stronghold—the Abbey of St. Benet's appears at a very early period to have borne a high degree of importance as an ecclesiastical foundation, and to have assumed a very belligerent aspect as a fortified place. Founded by royalty (in the reign of Canute), we find it assuming the defensive, and stoutly resisting a very unceremonious visit from royalty, in the reign of the Conqueror. The siege then carried on was, however, brought to an abrupt conclusion by the perfidy of a monk, who yielded up the place upon condition of succeeding to the Abbacy. He gained his point, and was very properly executed as a traitor. In 1469, the Abbey was again visited by royalty, but on this occasion the visit was a friendly one, and a very showy equestrian procession repaired hither from Norwich, for the purpose of presenting a petition to the King's mother. In the reign of Edward IV., the parsimonious administration of the revenues of this Abbey gave rise to the perpetration of some doggerel, which is preserved as a literary curiosity.

At the period of the Dissolution, the revenues of the Abbey are stated by Speed to have been £677 9s. 8d. One Bishop Huges exchanged these for those of Norwich, but binding himself at the same time to maintain the prior and twelve monks, he found himself unable to do so, and resigned, upon an annual pension of 200 marks. A contemporary versifier has thus commented on the circumstance:—

"Poor Will, thou rugged art and rugged all,
Thy Abbey cannot bless thee in such fame;
To keep a palace fair, and stately hall,
When gone is thence what should maintain the same.
First pay thy debts, and hence return to cell,
And pray the blessed saint whom thou dost serve,
That others may maintain the palace well—
For if thou stay'st, we all are like to starve."

ST. BENET'S ABBEY.

It is worthy of remark that the Abbey of St. Benet's is the only one in England which can still boast of an abbot, and a mitred abbot—the Bishop of Norwich taking his seat in the House of Lords as Abbot of St. Benet's.

All that now remains of this once magnificent edifice is the gateway, shown above, upon the walls of which a draining-mill has been erected. The ground-plan of the building and its appurtenances may, however, still be traced, and a melancholy contrast drawn, by the help of imagination, between its past grandeur and its present desolation.

NEW MUSIC.

MORE POLKAS! Lanner's John Bull Polkas. Arranged for the Pianoforte. By AUGUSTUS MEYER. R. Cocks and Co. Cleverly arranged, but time thrown away. We are heartily sick of these salubrious barbarisms.

CLARE'S PSALMODY. Parts I to VI. Cocks and Co. This collection of Psalms, Hymns, Chants, &c., contains many beautiful melodies, adapted to the purpose professed by the author or editor, Mr. Clare, in a very happy manner. But still there is a monotony about it which would satiate and fatigue the most devoted psalmist. Moreover, we do not like to see melodies detorted from their original purposes, even to make psalm tunes of them; and, again, why should not rhythm be attended to in their arrangement for the conventicle as well as for any other locality. The frequent occurrence of the horrid, expletive ninth bar is intolerable. To introduce rounds into psalmody is bad taste. The canon of "Non nobis," by Byrd, is not in the fifth, but in the fourth and eighth below. Mr. Clare's canon, "Non nobis," after the other's, was a bold attempt; but he seems to have had Cherubini's "Perfidia Clori" more in view than the immortal production of old Tallis's pupil. On the cover of this publication it is stated to be "complete in three parts," and yet six have been published. What does this mean? On the whole, it is neatly got up, and, no doubt, will prove a favourite with those whose taste inclines them to the style of music contained in its numbers. Chorus à son goût.

JULLIEN'S CONCERTS.—Not content with the Procrustean task of making English, Irish, and Scotch airs fit the measure of quadrille, whether they would or not, M. Jullien has turned the principal airs of the Principality into most amusing distortions. The set commenced very appropriately with the bold air "The Rising of the Sun," which was admirably instrumented and performed. Mr. Roberts, the Cambrian minstrel, of whom some time ago we gave a portrait, next followed, and executed some variations on the air of "Sweet Richard," which excited universal applause. The various solos by Barret, Lazarus, Baumann, and König, were given in their usual delicious and finished style. The total ensemble produced a splendid effect.

CURIOUS LEADEN COFFIN.

This interesting relic was lately found by some workmen in the employment of Mr. Forster, of Bow, while excavating near the Old Ford, at Stratford. It is preserved at the Bombay Club, at Bow, for the inspection of the antiquary, and such persons as cherish respect for objects which throw a light upon the customs of other days; whilst it presents a rare example of ancient art, illustrative of one of the modes of sepulture in this country. Mr. Forster gave early information of the discovery to the Society of Antiquaries, in consequence of which, Mr. C. R. Smith, accompanied by Mr. Stock, of Poplar, have examined and made drawings of the coffin, which is considered by those gentlemen to be either Romano-British or Saxon. The field in which it was found is near the ancient road; on the sides of highways, the Romans and other nations were accustomed to bury their dead, either entire, or in sarcophagi of stone or lead; or in urns, when the bodies were burned.

LEADEN COFFIN FOUND AT BOW.

SCENE FROM "THE CITY MADAM," AT SADLER'S WELLS THEATRE.

SCENE FROM "THE CITY MADAM."

Our artist has here portrayed an effective scene from Massinger's play of "The City Madam," lately revived, and performed, with some alterations, at Sadler's Wells Theatre. It is the scene in which Luke, frantic with his vast accession of wealth, revenges himself upon Lady Frugal, her daughter, and servant Millicent, by turning them out of doors. The following is from the text of Massinger:—

Luke. I'll cut off
Whatever is exorbitant in you
Or in your daughters, and reduce you to
Your natural forms and habits: not in revenge
Of your base usage of me, but to fright
Others by your example: 'tis decreed
You shall serve another, for I will Allow no waiter to you. Out of doors
With these useless drosses!

Lady Frugal. I am sick, and meet with A rough physician. O my pride and scorn!
How justly am I punished!

Mary. Now we suffer
For our stubbornness and disobedience
To our good father.

Luke. Get you in,
And exorcise in a corner.
Lady Frugal. There's no contending.
(They go off.)

We had occasion, when noticing the production of this play, to speak highly of the acting of Mr. Phelps and Mrs. Warner in the two principal characters. There was a fine contrast between the humility of Luke in the earlier scenes of the play and his terrible wrath upon his elevation. Equally marked was the performance of the lady in her two positions of arrogance and utter dependence. We may honestly recommend our readers to go and witness this representation.

SCENE FROM THE COMEDY OF "OLD HEADS AND YOUNG HEARTS."

Our illustration represents the fifth act scene, wherein the good Rural is overwhelmed with the reproaches of everybody, just as he imagines he has been serving them. Mr. Farren's transition from the natural to the hysterical laughter, and subsequent weeping, was a wonderful piece of acting, alone sufficient to stamp him a great artist.

Enter Lady Alice Hawthorn, Littleton Coke, Miss Rocket, and Roebuck, to Rural.

Rur. Ah! at last they are here, my blest ones, and I am free—give me your hands.

Rur. When you have severed our hearts for ever.

Rur. Eh!

Kate. Oh, Sir, you have destroyed the only hope of my existence.

SCENE FROM THE NEW COMEDY OF "OLD HEADS AND YOUNG HEARTS," AT THE HAYMARKET THEATRE.

Rur. What!
Lady A. What could have actuated you to such a deed; or did you betray us to the Earl and the Colonel, and agree to compromise us into obedience.

Rur. Bless me,—Littleton—
Lif. Do not look to me for help.
Rur. I—ah—(aside) the scul is keeping up the joke because the old people are here.

Lady A. Exonerate yourself, Sir.
Rur. Ha!
Rur. What excuse can you—
Rur. Ha! ha!

Kate. You could not have mistaken.
Rur. Ha! ha! ha!
Lif. Can you not see, Sir, this is reality?

Rur. Ha! ha—(chokes & laughs)
ha!

Lif. Is my ruin a subject for your mirth?
Rur. Ha! ha! (in wonder, but continuing to laugh.)
Lady A. It is inhuman!

Rur. Ah! ah! ah!

Lif. Or have you—yes, her suspicions are true, and you have betrayed me.

Rur. Ah! ah! ah!

Lif. And over such a deed you can laugh. Farewell for ever.

(Rural bursts into a paroxysm of hysterical and convulsive laughter. Lady Alice Hawthorn runs to Rural on one side, Miss Rocket on the other, while Roebuck and Littleton Coke walk up and down on opposite sides.)

Lady A. Don't weep, it was no fault of yours. You would have saved our love if our foolish young hearts had not puzzled your kind old head.

Rur. He's gone! he's gone!

Lif. No, my dear friend, pardon my crudity to you: I have slighted your affection—(looking at Lady A.)—and for what?

Rur. My heart, but I have ruined you.

Lif. No!

Rur. I have, I know I have; I have ruined my child—my—oh! forgive me, will you Littleton?

The following sums have been already subscribed—further contributions will be published proportionately to the adoption of such details as may appear best calculated to accomplish the object in view.
	£	s.	d.
Joseph J. Gurney, Esq.	25	0	0
J. Kettle, Esq., Bristol	10	0	0
Mr. and Miss A. C. Hall	5	0	0
W. Cash, Esq.	10	0	0
Mr. N. M. Mason, Esq.	10	0	0
Mr. Moore, do.	10	0	0
Miss G. Moore, do.	1	0	0
Robert Clendenen, Esq.	5	0	0
Mr C. Barclay Smith, Barr.	1	0	0
A. B.	20	0	0
W. Hinchliffe, Esq.	10	0	0
J. Meredith, Esq.	1	0	0
Anonymous	2	0	0
John Fox	1	0	0
John Hill, Esq.	10	0	0
W. Cabot, Esq.	2	0	0
James Charleston, Esq.	5	0	0
A. E. Montello, M.D.	5	0	0
W. W. Ward, Esq.	5	0	0
Joseph Bick	5	0	0
Richard Tassett, Esq.	5	0	0
W. Needham, Esq., J.P., Cardiff	5	0	0
Messrs. Mead, and Co.	5	0	0
A. Heywood	5	0	0
Richard Peters, Esq.	5	0	0
John Edgar, Esq.	5	0	0
Two Bazaar	5	0	0
W. B. Keast, Esq.	5	0	0
M. Bennett, junior	5	0	0
C. Griffin	5	0	0
Riv. J. Lee Wanger	5	0	0
G. W. Atwood, Esq.	5	0	0

Subscriptions will be received at the Office, 28, Moorgate street, City; by the Treasurer, GEOFFREY W. ALEXANDER, Esq., 46, Lombard street; by any Member of the Committee; or by the following Bankers—Messrs. Ugh. Hather, Mills, and Co., Lombard street;
Messrs. Kinnear and Co., Pall Mall East; the London Joint Stock Bank, 1, Finsbury square; and the Bank of England.

BY COMMAND.
UNDER THE SPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS
THE PRINCE OF WALES.
THE SPORTING REVIEW FOR NOVEMBER 1844.
A beautifully embellished with TWO SPLENDID STEREO ENGRAVINGS, viz.:
"POUR A BALLAD."
Written by the Dancer M. Leger.
Engraved by H. Harker, from an Original Painting by J. F. Herring, sen.
"HEAD AS A DOOR-NAIL."
Engraved by J. W. May, from a Painting by Smith.
C. COVENTRY.
Lackingtons the "Lag" By the Editor.
Sale of the Sporting Book of the Year Thomas Webb, Esq., of Sturley Hall, Nottinghamshire, By Andrew.
The Chase, By R. & A.
Better Times over Dartmoor, By R. Harker.
Tales of a Traveller, By Lord William Leveson.
Reports of the Committee on Gaming, By Carter.
Rustling Song.
Pleasant and Pleasant Shooting, By Charles Willoughby.
The Latest of Mrs. Tabitha Gristle.
How Amusing.
Fragments from the Diary of a Traveller.
London: Sporting Review Office, 21, New York Street, Strand. May be had of all Booksellers.

THE NEW
MONTHLY BELLE ASSEMBLEE, for NOVEMBER, a
Fashionable and Literary Magazine, under the immediate patronage of her Royal Highness
THE DUCHESS OF KENT.
Is beautifully illustrated with highly-finished
POETRY OF THE MONTH.
AND CONTAINS
AN EXQUISITE ENGRAVING OF LORD BYRON'S LEILA.
TWO COLOURED PLATES OF THE FASHIONS,
Finished in the First Style, as they appear from Paris.
CONTRACTS:
Florence; or, Woman's Friendship, By Miss Agnew.
Glorious, By Mrs. Abby.
I'll be waiting for Thee, By Mrs. F. B. Scott.
Love and Beauty, By J. J. Reynolds.
Expression and Song, By Charles Smith.
Esq., Author of "The Maid," &c.
Broom's Wandering Image, By Nathaniel Hawthorne, Author of "Twice-told Tales," &c.
Bazaar, By David Lester Richardson.
A Digue, By Miss Power.
Rosa Lynton, the Foreigner, By P. P. G.
Sonnet on the Visit of King Louis Philippe to England, By Camille Toulmin.
My Picture Gallery, No. 11, By Major Calder Campbell.
A Legend of the Sea, By Elinor Thwait.
Author of the "Blind Man and his Guide," &c.
Sonnet to the Rev. W. Palling, By Mrs. F. B. Scott.
A Spirit of Bygone Years, By J. Girdle.
"This Magazine should find its way into every drawing-room in the Kingdom."—The News.
"Is every respect worthy the distinguished patronage conferred on the work."—The Standard.
"This elegant and amusing periodical deserves well the patronage of the female sex."—The Newcastle Courier.
May be had, by order, of all Booksellers.—Office, 21, New York Street, Strand, London.

THE FARMERS' MAGAZINE, for NOVEMBER, 1844, is published with
PLATE I. FARMER'S "STABLE."
A Short-handled Bull, bred by, and the property of, Mr. John Cooper, Barkwood Farm, near Northwell, Notts, which obtained a prize of £25 at the meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society of England, held at D. 1843, July, 1843.
PLATE II. THE PRINCESS.
Winner of the Oaks, 1844.
PLATE III. AN ENGRAVING OF THE VASE presented to Col. POWELL, at Hag, Sept. 10, 1844.
CONTRACTS:
On the Farming of North Wales, By Capt. W. Johnston, Esq., F.R.S.
Remarks on the Agriculture of Ireland, By Andrew.
Professor Johnson's Lecture on the Science of Agriculture.
On Tree Planting: Article III, By J. Towers.
Stiff Barning, By Essex.
Do, By a North Wiltshire Farmer.
Joint Stock Banks, By Daniel Robinson.
Fences and Hedge-rows of Devon.
The Farming of Cheshire, By Wm. Fells.
Sewagey Agricultural Society.
Great Torrington Farmers' Club.
Remarks on the Farming of Cattle and the Formation of Milk, By M. M. Dumas.
Sociological and Pige.
General Principles applicable to the Management of Fruit Trees.
Lord Worsley's Commemorative Bells.
Darlington Farmers' Club.
The Union of a Good Cow.
Wentworth Farmers' Club.
North Devonshire Agricultural Society.
Abington Agricultural Association.
Sale of Rip and Marshland Agricultural Association.
Herts Agricultural Society.
On Farming Old Grass Land.
Vale of Evesham Agricultural Society.
The FARMER'S MAGAZINE, Vol. IX., containing 12 beautifully executed Steel Engravings, price 12s. 6d., is now ready.
Office, 21, New York Street, Strand; and may be had of all Booksellers.

WHITTAKER AND CO.'S MONTHLY LIST OF ALL
THE NEW PUBLICATIONS is issued with the Magazine. And together with a detailed list of WHITTAKER'S POPULAR LIBRARY of MODERN and STANDARD AUTHORS, Copyright editions, and various other LISTS of SCHOOL and CLASSICAL BOOKS can be had GRATIS, by application of every bookseller to the united post age. It is requested that application be made through the retail booksellers to avoid post age.

On Saturday night, November 30, will be published, containing 16 pages, double columns, Imperial 8vo, in a wrapper, price Threepence, the First Number of a new Weekly Publication, entitled
THE NOVEL TIMES; consisting of original works of fiction, by the first writers of the day, and translations, by approved English authors, of foreign popular tales and romances. Contributors—G. F. R. James, Esq., Capt. Mary et al., The Hon. Mrs. Norton, the Author of "Caleb Sturley," the Author of "The Robinsons," and other distinguished writers whose names or titles will be announced as the works appear.
No. 1 will contain the commencement of an original Novel, by the author of "The Robinsons," and of an entirely new work, by the German Baron Hahn, entitled "Letters from the Orient," translated from the German expressly for this work, by the Author of "Caleb Sturley."
Office, 12, Wellington Street North, Strand, where Orders, Advertisements, and communications are requested to be addressed; and by all booksellers and newsmen throughout the Kingdom, of whom prospectuses may be had gratis.

New ready, large 8vo, price 3s. 6d., sewed.
MICHELET'S HISTORY OF FRANCE. TRANSLATED by G. H. SMITH, F.R.S., with Notes, &c. PART I. Comprising the RACES and the PROVINCES OF FRANCE.
"Michelet's History has only to be translated to become one of the most popular books ever published. The author is a man of the highest genius; his erudition is wonderful, and he is at once philosopher and dramatist, uniting the severest judgment to the most facile and delicate imagination. His history is that not only a succession of faithful pictures but a series of the profoundest deductions. The modern French School of History, recognizing as it does, amongst many distinctive marks, those of Thiers, Guizot, and Thierry, is decidedly attracted to the first in Europe, and at the head of it we behold certainly place Monsieur Michelet."—Monthly Magazine.
This work is printed in uniform with and forms a portion of WHITTAKER'S POPULAR LIBRARY of Modern and Standard Authors, comprising numerous valuable copyright works, Historical, Biographical, &c. Large 8vo, uniform with Thiers' and Guizot's works.—People's edition. Handsomely printed at unprecedented low prices, varying from one shilling upwards.
"An explanatory and critical prospectus of the whole series can be had gratis, by application to any bookseller."
Whittaker and Co., Ave Maria Lane, London.

BOOKS FOR YOUTH, adapted for PRESENTS. Beautifully
Illustrated.—Pope's Poems, 1844, 1s.; Gilgamesh of the Wonderful, 1s.; Juvenal's Satires, 1s.; Keats's Poems, 1s.; No. 100, 1s.; No. 101, 1s.; No. 102, 1s.; No. 103, 1s.; No. 104, 1s.; No. 105, 1s.; No. 106, 1s.; No. 107, 1s.; No. 108, 1s.; No. 109, 1s.; No. 110, 1s.; No. 111, 1s.; No. 112, 1s.; No. 113, 1s.; No. 114, 1s.; No. 115, 1s.; No. 116, 1s.; No. 117, 1s.; No. 118, 1s.; No. 119, 1s.; No. 120, 1s.; No. 121, 1s.; No. 122, 1s.; No. 123, 1s.; No. 124, 1s.; No. 125, 1s.; No. 126, 1s.; No. 127, 1s.; No. 128, 1s.; No. 129, 1s.; No. 130, 1s.; No. 131, 1s.; No. 132, 1s.; No. 133, 1s.; No. 134, 1s.; No. 135, 1s.; No. 136, 1s.; No. 137, 1s.; No. 138, 1s.; No. 139, 1s.; No. 140, 1s.; No. 141, 1s.; No. 142, 1s.; No. 143, 1s.; No. 144, 1s.; No. 145, 1s.; No. 146, 1s.; No. 147, 1s.; No. 148, 1s.; No. 149, 1s.; No. 150, 1s.; No. 151, 1s.; No. 152, 1s.; No. 153, 1s.; No. 154, 1s.; No. 155, 1s.; No. 156, 1s.; No. 157, 1s.; No. 158, 1s.; No. 159, 1s.; No. 160, 1s.; No. 161, 1s.; No. 162, 1s.; No. 163, 1s.; No. 164, 1s.; No. 165, 1s.; No. 166, 1s.; No. 167, 1s.; No. 168, 1s.; No. 169, 1s.; No. 170, 1s.; No. 171, 1s.; No. 172, 1s.; No. 173, 1s.; No. 174, 1s.; No. 175, 1s.; No. 176, 1s.; No. 177, 1s.; No. 178, 1s.; No. 179, 1s.; No. 180, 1s.; No. 181, 1s.; No. 182, 1s.; No. 183, 1s.; No. 184, 1s.; No. 185, 1s.; No. 186, 1s.; No. 187, 1s.; No. 188, 1s.; No. 189, 1s.; No. 190, 1s.; No. 191, 1s.; No. 192, 1s.; No. 193, 1s.; No. 194, 1s.; No. 195, 1s.; No. 196, 1s.; No. 197, 1s.; No. 198, 1s.; No. 199, 1s.; No. 200, 1s.; No. 201, 1s.; No. 202, 1s.; No. 203, 1s.; No. 204, 1s.; No. 205, 1s.; No. 206, 1s.; No. 207, 1s.; No. 208, 1s.; No. 209, 1s.; No. 210, 1s.; No. 211, 1s.; No. 212, 1s.; No. 213, 1s.; No. 214, 1s.; No. 215, 1s.; No. 216, 1s.; No. 217, 1s.; No. 218, 1s.; No. 219, 1s.; No. 220, 1s.; No. 221, 1s.; No. 222, 1s.; No. 223, 1s.; No. 224, 1s.; No. 225, 1s.; No. 226, 1s.; No. 227, 1s.; No. 228, 1s.; No. 229, 1s.; No. 230, 1s.; No. 231, 1s.; No. 232, 1s.; No. 233, 1s.; No. 234, 1s.; No. 235, 1s.; No. 236, 1s.; No. 237, 1s.; No. 238, 1s.; No. 239, 1s.; No. 240, 1s.; No. 241, 1s.; No. 242, 1s.; No. 243, 1s.; No. 244, 1s.; No. 245, 1s.; No. 246, 1s.; No. 247, 1s.; No. 248, 1s.; No. 249, 1s.; No. 250, 1s.; No. 251, 1s.; No. 252, 1s.; No. 253, 1s.; No. 254, 1s.; No. 255, 1s.; No. 256, 1s.; No. 257, 1s.; No. 258, 1s.; No. 259, 1s.; No. 260, 1s.; No. 261, 1s.; No. 262, 1s.; No. 263, 1s.; No. 264, 1s.; No. 265, 1s.; No. 266, 1s.; No. 267, 1s.; No. 268, 1s.; No. 269, 1s.; No. 270, 1s.; No. 271, 1s.; No. 272, 1s.; No. 273, 1s.; No. 274, 1s.; No. 275, 1s.; No. 276, 1s.; No. 277, 1s.; No. 278, 1s.; No. 279, 1s.; No. 280, 1s.; No. 281, 1s.; No. 282, 1s.; No. 283, 1s.; No. 284, 1s.; No. 285, 1s.; No. 286, 1s.; No. 287, 1s.; No. 288, 1s.; No. 289, 1s.; No. 290, 1s.; No. 291, 1s.; No. 292, 1s.; No. 293, 1s.; No. 294, 1s.; No. 295, 1s.; No. 296, 1s.; No. 297, 1s.; No. 298, 1s.; No. 299, 1s.; No. 300, 1s.; No. 301, 1s.; No. 302, 1s.; No. 303, 1s.; No. 304, 1s.; No. 305, 1s.; No. 306, 1s.; No. 307, 1s.; No. 308, 1s.; No. 309, 1s.; No. 310, 1s.; No. 311, 1s.; No. 312, 1s.; No. 313, 1s.; No. 314, 1s.; No. 315, 1s.; No. 316, 1s.; No. 317, 1s.; No. 318, 1s.; No. 319, 1s.; No. 320, 1s.; No. 321, 1s.; No. 322, 1s.; No. 323, 1s.; No. 324, 1s.; No. 325, 1s.; No. 326, 1s.; No. 327, 1s.; No. 328, 1s.; No. 329, 1s.; No. 330, 1s.; No. 331, 1s.; No. 332, 1s.; No. 333, 1s.; No. 334, 1s.; No. 335, 1s.; No. 336, 1s.; No. 337, 1s.; No. 338, 1s.; No. 339, 1s.; No. 340, 1s.; No. 341, 1s.; No. 342, 1s.; No. 343, 1s.; No. 344, 1s.; No. 345, 1s.; No. 346, 1s.; No. 347, 1s.; No. 348, 1s.; No. 349, 1s.; No. 350, 1s.; No. 351, 1s.; No. 352, 1s.; No. 353, 1s.; No. 354, 1s.; No. 355, 1s.; No. 356, 1s.; No. 357, 1s.; No. 358, 1s.; No. 359, 1s.; No. 360, 1s.; No. 361, 1s.; No. 362, 1s.; No. 363, 1s.; No. 364, 1s.; No. 365, 1s.; No. 366, 1s.; No. 367, 1s.; No. 368, 1s.; No. 369, 1s.; No. 370, 1s.; No. 371, 1s.; No. 372, 1s.; No. 373, 1s.; No. 374, 1s.; No. 375, 1s.; No. 376, 1s.; No. 377, 1s.; No. 378, 1s.; No. 379, 1s.; No. 380, 1s.; No. 381, 1s.; No. 382, 1s.; No. 383, 1s.; No. 384, 1s.; No. 385, 1s.; No. 386, 1s.; No. 387, 1s.; No. 388, 1s.; No. 389, 1s.; No. 390, 1s.; No. 391, 1s.; No. 392, 1s.; No. 393, 1s.; No. 394, 1s.; No. 395, 1s.; No. 396, 1s.; No. 397, 1s.; No. 398, 1s.; No. 399, 1s.; No. 400, 1s.; No. 401, 1s.; No. 402, 1s.; No. 403, 1s.; No. 404, 1s.; No. 405, 1s.; No. 406, 1s.; No. 407, 1s.; No. 408, 1s.; No. 409, 1s.; No. 410, 1s.; No. 411, 1s.; No. 412, 1s.; No. 413, 1s.; No. 414, 1s.; No. 415, 1s.; No. 416, 1s.; No. 417, 1s.; No. 418, 1s.; No. 419, 1s.; No. 420, 1s.; No. 421, 1s.; No. 422, 1s.; No. 423, 1s.; No. 424, 1s.; No. 425, 1s.; No. 426, 1s.; No. 427, 1s.; No. 428, 1s.; No. 429, 1s.; No. 430, 1s.; No. 431, 1s.; No. 432, 1s.; No. 433, 1s.; No. 434, 1s.; No. 435, 1s.; No. 436, 1s.; No. 437, 1s.; No. 438, 1s.; No. 439, 1s.; No. 440, 1s.; No. 441, 1s.; No. 442, 1s.; No. 443, 1s.; No. 444, 1s.; No. 445, 1s.; No. 446, 1s.; No. 447, 1s.; No. 448, 1s.; No. 449, 1s.; No. 450, 1s.; No. 451, 1s.; No. 452, 1s.; No. 453, 1s.; No. 454, 1s.; No. 455, 1s.; No. 456, 1s.; No. 457, 1s.; No. 458, 1s.; No. 459, 1s.; No. 460, 1s.; No. 461, 1s.; No. 462, 1s.; No. 463, 1s.; No. 464, 1s.; No. 465, 1s.; No. 466, 1s.; No. 467, 1s.; No. 468, 1s.; No. 469, 1s.; No. 470, 1s.; No. 471, 1s.; No. 472, 1s.; No. 473, 1s.; No. 474, 1s.; No. 475, 1s.; No. 476, 1s.; No. 477, 1s.; No. 478, 1s.; No. 479, 1s.; No. 480, 1s.; No. 481, 1s.; No. 482, 1s.; No. 483, 1s.; No. 484, 1s.; No. 485, 1s.; No. 486, 1s.; No. 487, 1s.; No. 488, 1s.; No. 489, 1s.; No. 490, 1s.; No. 491, 1s.; No. 492, 1s.; No. 493, 1s.; No. 494, 1s.; No. 495, 1s.; No. 496, 1s.; No. 497, 1s.; No. 498, 1s.; No. 499, 1s.; No. 500, 1s.; No. 501, 1s.; No. 502, 1s.; No. 503, 1s.; No. 504, 1s.; No. 505, 1s.; No. 506, 1s.; No. 507, 1s.; No. 508, 1s.; No. 509, 1s.; No. 510, 1s.; No. 511, 1s.; No. 512, 1s.; No. 513, 1s.; No. 514, 1s.; No. 515, 1s.; No. 516, 1s.; No. 517, 1s.; No. 518, 1s.; No. 519, 1s.; No. 520, 1s.; No. 521, 1s.; No. 522, 1s.; No. 523, 1s.; No. 524, 1s.; No. 525, 1s.; No. 526, 1s.; No. 527, 1s.; No. 528, 1s.; No. 529, 1s.; No. 530, 1s.; No. 531, 1s.; No. 532, 1s.; No. 533, 1s.; No. 534, 1s.; No. 535, 1s.; No. 536, 1s.; No. 537, 1s.; No. 538, 1s.; No. 539, 1s.; No. 540, 1s.; No. 541, 1s.; No. 542, 1s.; No. 543, 1s.; No. 544, 1s.; No. 545, 1s.; No. 546, 1s.; No. 547, 1s.; No. 548, 1s.; No. 549, 1s.; No. 550, 1s.; No. 551, 1s.; No. 552, 1s.; No. 553, 1s.; No. 554, 1s.; No. 555, 1s.; No. 556, 1s.; No. 557, 1s.; No. 558, 1s.; No. 559, 1s.; No. 560, 1s.; No. 561, 1s.; No. 562, 1s.; No. 563, 1s.; No. 564, 1s.; No. 565, 1s.; No. 566, 1s.; No. 567, 1s.; No. 568, 1s.; No. 569, 1s.; No. 570, 1s.; No. 571, 1s.; No. 572, 1s.; No. 573, 1s.; No. 574, 1s.; No. 575, 1s.; No. 576, 1s.; No. 577, 1s.; No. 578, 1s.; No. 579, 1s.; No. 580, 1s.; No. 581, 1s.; No. 582, 1s.; No. 583, 1s.; No. 584, 1s.; No. 585, 1s.; No. 586, 1s.; No. 587, 1s.; No. 588, 1s.; No. 589, 1s.; No. 590, 1s.; No. 591, 1s.; No. 592, 1s.; No. 593, 1s.; No. 594, 1s.; No. 595, 1s.; No. 596, 1s.; No. 597, 1s.; No. 598, 1s.; No. 599, 1s.; No. 600, 1s.; No. 601, 1s.; No. 602, 1s.; No. 603, 1s.; No. 604, 1s.; No. 605, 1s.; No. 606, 1s.; No. 607, 1s.; No. 608, 1s.; No. 609, 1s.; No. 610, 1s.; No. 611, 1s.; No. 612, 1s.; No. 613, 1s.; No. 614, 1s.; No. 615, 1s.; No. 616, 1s.; No. 617, 1s.; No. 618, 1s.; No. 619, 1s.; No. 620, 1s.; No. 621, 1s.; No. 622, 1s.; No. 623, 1s.; No. 624, 1s.; No. 625, 1s.; No. 626, 1s.; No. 627, 1s.; No. 628, 1s.; No. 629, 1s.; No. 630, 1s.; No. 631, 1s.; No. 632, 1s.; No. 633, 1s.; No. 634, 1s.; No. 635, 1s.; No. 636, 1s.; No. 637, 1s.; No. 638, 1s.; No. 639, 1s.; No. 640, 1s.; No. 641, 1s.; No. 642, 1s.; No. 643, 1s.; No. 644, 1s.; No. 645, 1s.; No. 646, 1s.; No. 647, 1s.; No. 648, 1s.; No. 649, 1s.; No. 650, 1s.; No. 651, 1s.; No. 652, 1s.; No. 653, 1s.; No. 654, 1s.; No. 655, 1s.; No. 656, 1s.; No. 657, 1s.; No. 658, 1s.; No. 659, 1s.; No. 660, 1s.; No. 661, 1s.; No. 662, 1s.; No. 663, 1s.; No. 664, 1s.; No. 665, 1s.; No. 666, 1s.; No. 667, 1s.; No. 668, 1s.; No. 669, 1s.; No. 670, 1s.; No. 671, 1s.; No. 672, 1s.; No. 673, 1s.; No. 674, 1s.; No. 675, 1s.; No. 676, 1s.; No. 677, 1s.; No. 678, 1s.; No. 679, 1s.; No. 680, 1s.; No. 681, 1s.; No. 682, 1s.; No. 683, 1s.; No. 684, 1s.; No. 685, 1s.; No. 686, 1s.; No. 687, 1s.; No. 688, 1s.; No. 689, 1s.; No. 690, 1s.; No. 691, 1s.; No. 692, 1s.; No. 693, 1s.; No. 694, 1s.; No. 695, 1s.; No. 696, 1s.; No. 697, 1s.; No. 698, 1s.; No. 699, 1s.; No. 700, 1s.; No. 701, 1s.; No. 702, 1s.; No. 703, 1s.; No. 704, 1s.; No. 705, 1s.; No. 706, 1s.; No. 707, 1s.; No. 708, 1s.; No. 709, 1s.; No. 710, 1s.; No. 711, 1s.; No. 712, 1s.; No. 713, 1s.; No. 714, 1s.; No. 715, 1s.; No. 716, 1s.; No. 717, 1s.; No. 718, 1s.; No. 719, 1s.; No. 720, 1s.; No. 721, 1s.; No. 722, 1s.; No. 723, 1s.; No. 724, 1s.; No. 725, 1s.; No. 726, 1s.; No. 727, 1s.; No. 728, 1s.; No. 729, 1s.; No. 730, 1s.; No. 731, 1s.; No. 732, 1s.; No. 733, 1s.; No. 734, 1s.; No. 735, 1s.; No. 736, 1s.; No. 737, 1s.; No. 738, 1s.; No. 739, 1s.; No. 740, 1s.; No. 741, 1s.; No. 742, 1s.; No. 743, 1s.; No. 744, 1s.; No. 745, 1s.; No. 746, 1s.; No. 747, 1s.; No. 748, 1s.; No. 749, 1s.; No. 750, 1s.; No. 751, 1s.; No. 752, 1s.; No. 753, 1s.; No. 754, 1s.; No. 755, 1s.; No. 756, 1s.; No. 757, 1s.; No. 758, 1s.; No. 759, 1s.; No. 760, 1s.; No. 761, 1s.; No. 762, 1s.; No. 763, 1s.; No. 764, 1s.; No. 765, 1s.; No. 766, 1s.; No. 767, 1s.; No. 768, 1s.; No. 769, 1s.; No. 770, 1s.; No. 771, 1s.; No. 772, 1s.; No. 773, 1s.; No. 774, 1s.; No. 775, 1s.; No. 776, 1s.; No. 777, 1s.; No. 778, 1s.; No. 779, 1s.; No. 780, 1s.; No. 781, 1s.; No. 782, 1s.; No. 783, 1s.; No. 784, 1s.; No. 785, 1s.; No. 786, 1s.; No. 787, 1s.; No. 788, 1s.; No. 789, 1s.; No. 790, 1s.; No. 791, 1s.; No. 792, 1s.; No. 793, 1s.; No. 794, 1s.; No. 795, 1s.; No. 796, 1s.; No. 797, 1s.; No. 798, 1s.; No. 799, 1s.; No. 800, 1s.; No. 801, 1s.; No. 802, 1s.; No. 803, 1s.; No. 804, 1s.; No. 805, 1s.; No. 806, 1s.; No. 807, 1s.; No. 808, 1s.; No. 809, 1s.; No. 810, 1s.; No. 811, 1s.; No. 812, 1s.; No. 813, 1s.; No. 814, 1s.; No. 815, 1s.; No. 816, 1s.; No. 817, 1s.; No. 818, 1s.; No. 819, 1s.; No. 820, 1s.; No. 821, 1s.; No. 822, 1s.; No. 823, 1s.; No. 824, 1s.; No. 825, 1s.; No. 826, 1s.; No. 827, 1s.; No. 828, 1s.; No. 829, 1s.; No. 830, 1s.; No. 831, 1s.; No. 832, 1s.; No. 833, 1s.; No. 834, 1s.; No. 835, 1s.; No. 836, 1s.; No. 837, 1s.; No. 838, 1s.; No. 839, 1s.; No. 840, 1s.; No. 841, 1s.; No. 842, 1s.; No. 843, 1s.; No. 844, 1s.; No. 845, 1s.; No. 846, 1s.; No. 847, 1s.; No. 848, 1s.; No. 849, 1s.; No. 850, 1s.; No. 851, 1s.; No. 852, 1s.; No. 853, 1s.; No. 854, 1s.; No. 855, 1s.; No. 856, 1s.; No. 857, 1s.; No. 858, 1s.; No. 859, 1s.; No. 860, 1s.; No. 861, 1s.; No. 862, 1s.; No. 863, 1s.; No. 864, 1s.; No. 865, 1s.; No. 866, 1s.; No. 867, 1s.; No. 868, 1s.; No. 869, 1s.; No. 870, 1s.; No. 871, 1s.; No. 872, 1s.; No. 873, 1s.; No. 874, 1s.; No. 875, 1s.; No. 876, 1s.; No. 877, 1s.; No. 878, 1s.; No. 879, 1s.; No. 880, 1s.; No. 881, 1s.; No. 882, 1s.; No. 883, 1s.; No. 884, 1s.; No. 885, 1s.; No. 886, 1s.; No. 887, 1s.; No. 888, 1s.; No. 889, 1s.; No. 890, 1s.; No. 891, 1s.; No. 892, 1s.; No. 893, 1s.; No. 894, 1s.; No. 895, 1s.; No. 896, 1s.; No. 897, 1s.; No. 898, 1s.; No. 899, 1s.; No. 900, 1s.; No. 901, 1s.; No. 902, 1s.; No. 903, 1s.; No. 904, 1s.; No. 905, 1s.; No. 906, 1s.; No. 907, 1s.; No. 908, 1s.; No. 909, 1s.; No. 910, 1s.; No. 911, 1s.; No. 912, 1s.; No. 913, 1s.; No. 914, 1s.; No. 915, 1s.; No. 916, 1s.; No. 917, 1s.; No. 918, 1s.; No. 919, 1s.; No. 920, 1s.; No. 921, 1s.; No. 922, 1s.; No. 923, 1s.; No. 924, 1s.; No. 925, 1s.; No. 926, 1s.; No. 927, 1s.; No. 928, 1s.; No. 929, 1s.; No. 930, 1s.; No. 931, 1s.; No. 932, 1s.; No. 933, 1s.; No. 934, 1s.; No. 935, 1s.; No. 936, 1s.; No. 937, 1s.; No. 938, 1s.; No. 939, 1s.; No. 940, 1s.; No. 941, 1s.; No. 942, 1s.; No. 943, 1s.; No. 944, 1s.; No. 945, 1s.; No. 946, 1s.; No. 947, 1s.; No. 948, 1s.; No. 949, 1s.; No. 950, 1s.; No. 951, 1s.; No. 952, 1s.; No. 953, 1s.; No. 954, 1s.; No. 955, 1s.; No. 956, 1s.; No. 957, 1s.; No. 958, 1s.; No. 959, 1s.; No. 960, 1s.; No. 961, 1s.; No. 962, 1s.; No. 963, 1s.; No. 964, 1s.; No. 965, 1s.; No. 966, 1s.; No. 967, 1s.; No. 968, 1s.; No. 969, 1s.; No. 970, 1s.; No. 971, 1s.; No. 972, 1s.; No. 973, 1s.; No. 974, 1s.; No. 975, 1s.; No. 976, 1s.; No. 977, 1s.; No. 978, 1s.; No. 979, 1s.; No. 980, 1s.; No. 981, 1s.; No. 982, 1s.; No. 983, 1s.; No. 984, 1s.; No. 985, 1s.; No. 986, 1s.; No. 987, 1s.; No. 988, 1s.; No. 989, 1s.; No. 990, 1s.; No. 991, 1s.; No. 992, 1s.; No. 993, 1s.; No. 994, 1s.; No. 995, 1s.; No

ECLIPSE OF THE MOON ON SUNDAY, NOV. 24, 1844.

TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE MOON.

On Sunday next, the 24th of November, a great, total, and, we hope, visible Eclipse of the Moon will take place; and it will occur, too, at an hour when most families may watch its progress without inconvenience. Instead, however, of waiting until this phenomenon shall have passed, it will be more interesting to give, prospectively, an illustration of its most striking appearances.

The second engraving shows a section across the shadow of the Earth, with the penumbra, at the orbit of the Moon, drawn in true proportions, as it will be at the time the Moon will pass through it, and, consequently, be eclipsed.

The horizontal line A. B. represents the Ecliptic, or level of the orbit of the Earth, supposed to be extended infinitely as a datum plane; and along which the centre, or axis of the Earth's shadow, moves from right to left.

The line C. D. represents the orbit of the Moon, which is inclined to that of the Earth; the motion of the Moon being from right to left. The dark circle is a section across the shadow of the Earth, and the outer circle shows the limit of the penumbra at the Moon's orbit.

Now an Eclipse of the Moon can only occur when she is near that part of her orbit which intersects the Ecliptic, and when that part happens to be near the shadow; such was the case in May last, and will be again on Sunday next. In May, the Moon, during the Eclipse, was south, or below the Ecliptic; but, at the time of the next Eclipse, she will be north, at about the same distance, or latitude, above the Ecliptic.

The small circle on the right shows the place of the Moon at the moment of the first contact with the shadow, at 9h. 49m. 36s.; hence, the shadow will first be seen on the left side of the Moon, rather towards the lower part.

The third circle on the left shows the advanced position of the Moon at 13h. 39m. 24s., the moment at which she will be clear from the shadow; hence the shadow will appear to go off the Moon on the right hand, towards the lower part.

The small circle in the middle shows the exact place of the Moon at the middle of the Eclipse; hence the upper part of the Moon will most likely, even at this stage, be visible; but, possibly, the lower part may not, as it will be in the central darkness of the cone of shadow.

But it may be asked why the Moon on the left in the diagram is not shown in contact with the shadow, as it is intended to show its true place at that moment? It must, however, be recollected that while the Moon advances in her orbit, the Earth, with her shadow, also advances in hers; and that, though they go the same way, they move at different rates. The reader will thus imagine that while the Moon will go from the first to the last position, as shown, the Earth's shadow will travel just so far as to be in contact with the Moon, that being the moment when they separate.

ECLIPSE.

The first engraving represents successive periods in the advance and retreat of the shadow.

The Eclipse, commencing at Greenwich at 10 minutes before 10 o'clock at night, Fig 1 shows its appearance at 4 minutes past 10; Fig 2, at 17 minutes past 10; Fig 3, at 30 minutes past 10; Fig 4, at 44 minutes past 10. Fig 5 exhibits the aspect of the Moon, during the time of the total Eclipse, when the Moon will appear of a dull red colour, which will be from 58 minutes past 10 until 31 minutes past 12. Fig 6, the appearance of the Moon at 15 minutes before 1 o'clock on Monday morning; Fig 7, at 2 minutes before 1; Fig 8, at 11 minutes past 1; Fig 9 at 25 minutes past 1.—S.B.H. with additions by S.S.

CHESS.

Solution to our last Problem.

- WHITE. BLACK.
1. Kt checks at adv. K Kt 4th Rook takes Kt
2. K Rook checks at adv. K B 3rd King takes Rook
3. Q Rook mates at adv. Q 3rd

PROBLEM.

White moving first, engages to mate with a pawn in six moves.

BLACK.

WHITE.

The Solution in our next.

A NOVEMBER FOG IN LONDON.

TIME, THURSDAY AFTERNOON LAST. SCENE, TEMPLE BAR.

Didst note the day? 'Twas Thursday by the week,
And of November's dreary month near end,
(Though bootless seem'd all calendar account, Heav'n's look'd so out of keeping with all seasons)
How darkness spread above—around—o'er all
Our visible horizon. One might deem Innumerable chimnies' sooty vapours
And countless myriad-breathings of humanity,
And smoke of many battles upward roll'd,
And hundreds of steam navies' varied belchings,
And every dank, tarqueous exhalation
This planet could give birth to—were together,
In the vast universal loom of space,
To make a sombre shroud for this fair world.

And flick'ring flames of weak, unwonted gas,
Mixing night's semblance with the moonlight's business,
Gleam'd gloomily athwart the crowded ways,
Lighting the busy sons of Toil and Care,
As on they plodded, all in search of wealth
Or competence, or that small hard-won pittance
Too often sought in vain by o'er-worked want
Or want necessity. Still were easy'd
All this life's avocations as they might:
Unheeded still prevail'd the darkness visible.
As glibly glided grandeur's gilded wheels,
Guided by flashing globes' prismatic gleams.
Commerce her sails shook out, and plied her oars
With lanterns lash'd to yard-arm, mast, and bow;
And bustling Traffic in her noisy marts,
By torchlight traded, self-engross'd as ever,
Within her always dimly-lighted halls,
Now doubly, trebly darkened, Justice sat,
And by the taper's beams dispensed her receipts.
But ever and anon the ochreous atmosphere
Would for a moment briefly lighten up
With a faint sickly hue, as if the throes
Of an expiring sun were working through it
In intermittent gleams—whose vital struggles,
By the dense circumambient opaque
Together quenching light and life, were smother'd;
And thus again deeper cimmerian darkness
Envelop'd all things with a power renewed.

The dismal day crept on; noon followed noon,
Evening succeeded noon, and twilight came,
And melted into night;—yet no one mark'd
The intervening shades that show their progress;
'Twas Morn—Noon—Evening—Twilight—Night—all blent
Into an unknown quantity's proportion
Of Nature's Subdivision of Old Time;
An undistinguishable Unit Day
Merged in Eternity's all countless Sum.

Methought at that dull moment in the Town,
It was a Life, eye, more than passing sweet,
For those whose happy lot was cast amid
The pure clear air, and sunny azure skies
Of Rural Scenes; whose wistful wand'rings were Through pleasant fields begot by lucid streams;
Inhaling all the thousand ed'rous breaths
Of fragrant shrubs and flowers wildly growing;
Where only shadow was a fleeting cloud,
Or the unobscured foliage of the groves;
And who could watch the variegated woods
Their Autumn clothing gradually doff,
Ere the departing year prepared to shroud
The Winter's hoary bosom thick upon them?
Such simple, natural, unsophisticated
Innocent joys as these, are not, alas!
For men who dwell in busy, smoky, London.

N. C.

DENSE FOG IN THE METROPOLIS.

November had almost passed away, and people began to think that in these times of innovation, there had been a change in this respect. On Thursday afternoon, however, this unwelcome visitant presented the compliments of the season in "form so palpable," that we believe the often quoted person, the "Oldest Inhabitant," never saw anything so dense. To say that darkness was visible would be to give but a faint idea of the aspect of things about seven o'clock. It was literally pitch dark, and therefore numbers of persons in all directions very appropriately lighted torches. In Fleet-street and the Strand, and the public thoroughfares, there was "confusion worse confounded." The omnibuses and other vehicles were obliged to proceed at a creeping pace, and foot-passengers, particularly timid ones, were detained some time at the crossings. Even in well-lighted streets, persons lost their way, for it was utterly impossible to see a yard in advance, and the gas lights were totally eclipsed. In fact locomotion was almost impossible. Most of the omnibuses and cabs had torches, and the old-fashioned cry of "light, your honour" resounded at almost every step, men and boys having sallied forth in a strong force to try and earn an honest penny by endeavouring to counteract the effects of the fog. Happily no accident occurred, so far as we could learn, but it is long since there has been such a dangerous evening for travelling.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 195, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Dapce, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 195, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1844.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 135.—Vol. V.]

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1844.

[SIXPENCE.]

RAILWAY MISMANAGEMENT.

NOTHER frightfully fatal proof that a great power mismanaged becomes a great mischief, has just occurred; it is one more added to the many lessons that have been given by the saddest kind of experience, of the necessity of perpetual watchfulness and scrupulous care in those who have the control of that agent so obedient to command, but so terrible when that control is withdrawn or suspended—steam.

In proportion to the vast number of passengers daily conveyed along the lines that now cover the surface of the country as it were with a network of iron, and the distance they are carried, the accidents that do occur from a collision of trains are exceedingly few. The loss of life from accidents arising from the working of railroads is far less than that formerly caused by the casualties to which the coaching system was continually liable. But, on the other hand, when a railway accident does occur, it is generally so awful in its nature, and so shocking in its details, that it creates a ten times greater impression on the public mind, and leaves a conviction behind that, with all its unquestionable advantages, steam is a perilous power to travel by. No people are more alive to the ill effects of this feeling on the part of the public than railway directors, and even if they were insensible to it from a want of perception, they would soon be taught it by their account of receipts. They are, therefore, generally careful in their management "choose trusty officers, keep careful watch;" punctuality, swiftness of transit, and safety are confidently expected, and with few exceptions realised. But when the exception comes it is a striking one, and, we fear, can generally be traced to a lax observance or neglect of the rules that tend to secure the better result. Some such want of precaution is perceptible in the catastrophe on the Midland Counties line.

The circumstances are briefly these. According to what seems to be "customary" at the Nottingham station, a coal train, which had arrived there about two o'clock in the day, had been moved from the down line to that on which the up trains travel. In doing this, the tender slipped off the rail, and was damaged, when about forty yards above the Wilford Gate. The coal waggons, in consequence of their great weight, could not be moved; in order, therefore, to intercept the Derby train due at Nottingham at three o'clock, one of the officers of the railway went to the Beeston station, understanding that no train would be started on the road up till he had returned to Nottingham again. Therefore—

He joined the stoker upon the engine, and proceeded on for Nottingham, at the rate of about four miles an hour. This caution was highly necessary, as a thick fog prevented the stoker seeing more than a few yards before him, and it was probable that some obstruction might be met with on the line. Having proceeded at this easy pace about three quarters of a mile, they heard the rumbling of wheels, and the next moment they were thrown from their elevation by a most violent concussion.

In spite of the supposed understanding, the up train to London was started.

At about 20 minutes to three. The stoker, not having had sufficient instruction, or being reckless as to the consequences, caused the train to proceed at the rate of about thirty miles an hour, notwithstanding that he knew he was on the wrong line. When the two trains met, it thus appears that the down train was travelling at a slow pace, whilst the other was proceeding with great velocity.

The one great fault here was placing the up-train on the down line, and then running it at a rapid rate, "without sufficient instruction, or being reckless of consequences." The first supposition we believe to be the true one; it was ignorance; there had not been enough precaution taken in the first place, and this, in conjunction with the unfortunate accident of there being a dense fog at the time, the two trains advancing towards each other, did not perceive their mutual danger till it was too late to avoid it. One instant all was apparent safety—the next saw wood and iron "crushed like eggshells," and all around a scene of shrieking, confusion, and dismay; with loss of life and limb, the full consequences of which cannot yet be known.

Granting that the railway system has, in the comparatively short time since it was called into existence, made a great approach to perfection, still while absolute safety is possible to be attained, we ought not to rest satisfied with what has been effected: "much has been done, but more remains to do." The main cause of this calamity was the want of a clear understanding of what was being done at two different points at the same moment. Science has discovered modes of communicating words, with the rapidity of thought, through darkness and distance; there can be no good reason why the Electric Telegraph should not be generally adopted on every line, and the officers at each station may converse with each other without being subject to the uncertainty of messages to and fro. Expense may be an obstacle, but one such accident as this causes a loss of many hundred pounds, and any plan by which such an expenditure of capital could be saved, would be economical. By daylight there is not much danger of a collision. In the present case, for instance, could the conductors have seen the approaching train, a stoppage could have been effected. But darkness and fog are as natural as day and sunshine, and must be provided for. The present system of signals might perhaps be improved; they contain the germ of what is required, consisting of lights for the eye, and sounds for the ear when lights are not used. But it is evident, that as the whistle of the engine is, it cannot at a distance, and in the dark, do more than apprise another that it is advancing; it does not give any information as to which line the train is running on. An improvement is wanted in this respect, and in some others. But, above and beyond all the aid that can be derived from physical science, are the moral qualities of scrupulous attention and caution. If, after every possible means have been taken to ensure safety, an accident does happen, there is at least a satisfaction in knowing that, as far as human power could avert it, that power was exercised. In the present instance, we fear that consolation does not exist. It has been stated that the officers of the company had two codes of regulations, the same on most points, but differing in some others. Some had the new, some the old ones; the driver of the train that was going at the most rapid rate, on the wrong line, through a dense fog, had not seen the new regulations at all; he was supplied with them the day after the accident! All this must be avoided for the future. We have overcome one of the things that appeared to place the greatest obstacle in the way of using steam for the purpose of travelling by land; we scarcely ever hear of an accident from its explosive power on any of the lines of road; having conquered that difficulty, shall we fail in the minor point of regulating it? It is one of the most remarkable qualities of this mighty agent, that it is so perfectly under control; an engine of the highest power is more completely under the command of the engineer, than a team of horses is to the best of coachmen. But, on the other hand, any error or neglect in its management is almost fatal.

THE ALTAR OF THE NEW CHURCH OF ST. GILES, CAMDENWELL.—CEREMONY OF CONSECRATION.—See next page.

There is a class of railroad accidents that cannot be prevented; all that arise from the want of individual caution, such as getting out of a train before it stops, or jumping in after it is in motion—these cause frequent casualties, but they arise from no fault of the system, to which all must adapt themselves, or run the risk of the consequences. But, as far as the management is concerned, we are persuaded that nearly absolute safety might be attained. The whole system is a grand triumph over difficulties apparently insurmountable; it must not present defects caused by ourselves, by a want of that vigilance and energy which has enabled us to create it.

CONSECRATION OF ST. GILES'S CHURCH, CAMBERWELL.

This magnificent structure (the exterior of which will be found engraved in No. 98 of our Journal), was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Winchester, on Thursday, the 21st inst. Before eleven o'clock, the church was crowded in every part by a congregation of nearly 2000 persons, who were admitted by cards. Amongst them were the Venerable Archdeacon Wilberforce, the Hon. and Rev. Mr. Eden, the Rev. Dr. Vaughan, of Brixton; the Rev. Tenison Cuffe, the Rev. Mr. Anderson, and several other clergymen; Sir John and Lady Pitt, Mr. H. Kemble, M.P., and most of the gentry of the neighbourhood. The Lord Bishop arrived shortly before eleven o'clock, and was received at the door of the church by the Chancellor, Registrar, Vicar, Churchwardens, and was by them conducted to the vestry-room. Having preceded in his robes to the front of the Communion-table (upon which the vessels for the Holy Communion were placed), the Vicar presented to his Lordship the petition, praying him to consecrate the church. The ceremony, according to the form prescribed, was then proceeded with.

The service was read by the Rev. Mr. Storie, the vicar, and the sermon (a very excellent discourse) from the 19th chapter of Deuteronomy, v. 5, was preached by his Lordship the Bishop. Mr. Wesley presided at the organ, and those parts of the service which are sanctified or sung were performed by the parochial chorists. At the conclusion of the service (about a quarter before two o'clock) the bell-ringers gave a peal of ten, east at the foundry of Messrs. Meares, of Whitechapel—Legan to peal, and the Bishop and clergy, and many other gentlemen and their ladies, preceded by the parish authorities with their wands of office, walked to the house of the vicar, in the garden of which, under a temporary apartment, erected as a seat, by Mr. H. Edington, of the Borough, was laid out a sumptuous repast for 150 persons. Here the company remained for some time, and it was dark before they retired.

This church, which is built on the site of the old one, burnt down in 1841, is a very handsome building—perhaps the most appropriate and elegant building of the kind which has been raised in the neighbourhood of London for some years. It is built of Whitchurch stone and stone from Caen, in Normandy, in the style of the time of Edward II., when the decorative manner began to be ingrafted on the plain English Gothic of the earlier ages. The architects are Messrs. Scott and Moffatt, of whom it would be unjust not to say that they have received modern church building from the reproach of want of taste and architectural authority, which some recent edifices had brought upon it.

The building consists of a nave, transept, and chancel; a choir, a square tower, ascending from the transept, surmounted with an octagonal spire. The length of the nave is 78 feet; on the tower across the transept of the chancel, 42 feet 6 inches. The breadth of the nave, without aisles, is 25 feet 6 inches; with aisles, 32 feet 6 inches. Length of the transept 86 feet; breadth of the chancel 23 feet. The interior height of the nave is 63 feet, and under the tower the height is 50 feet. The external height of the tower and spire is 210 feet.

Of the interior we shall shortly present our readers with an engraving; so that we reserve the details of the architecture, the fine painted glass, &c., save the immediate scene of the consecration, engraved in the preceding page.

The chancel is filled up with open stalls, with elaborately carved poppy heads, &c., of oak down each side. The floor is of encaustic tiles, of beautiful variegated character, and containing, near the chancel arch, the Royal Arms, and those of the patronage of the church, which are in the most beautiful colours, in porcelain. These tiles, manufactured by Messrs. Copeland and Garrett, of Staffordshire, have been by them presented gratuitously to the parish.

Two stone steps lead to the altar-rails, which are of carved oak. The floor within the rails is also laid down with encaustic tiles, but of a different pattern from the rest of the chancel. Another floor, similarly paved, is raised one step above the rest, upon which stands the altar-table; and on the upright edge of this floor is a border of painted porcelain, composed of a beautiful Gothic foliage, combined with the most delicate colours of the Evangelists.

The altar-table itself is a square stone slab, supported by six octagonal pillars, with elegant foliated capitals. The altar-screen, of stone, corresponds with the style of the chancel. It is composed of five pedimented arches, supported on clustered columns, foliated, with capitals of the characteristic foliage of the time, and the spaces with the "Tooth ornament." The outer arches are again divided into two trefoil arches, with pendants; the centre one has a canopied canopy, the featherings of which, as the finials, the crockets, and the trefoil foliage of spandrels, are of the most classic design and exquisite workmanship. Within the centre arch is an ornamental cross, enclosed in a border, painted on the wall, on either side of which, in the other arches, are the Commandments, the Lord's Prayer, the Creed, &c., beautifully illuminated.

This screen has been executed by Mr. Cox, who was employed by the architect to carve the greater part of the Martyr's Memorial at Oxford. At the back of the screen is the east window, of magnificent stained glass.

The carvings are of unusual beauty, and have been produced by the machine of Mr. S. Pratt, of Bond-street. The designs are cut after some of the most exquisite Gothic remains in various ecclesiastical buildings in England.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARISIANS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Wednesday.

All Paris has caught cold, the cause, the eclipse, which has behaved with combined incivility and cruelty. After drawing our Parisian godmothers by thousands out on the quays, the balconies, and roofs of houses, to witness its performance, the phenomenon was totally indelible, the sky being covered with clouds until the eclipse was over, when they suddenly dispersed. Eager as we Parisians are after any description of novelty or amusement, you may imagine the disappointment of the crowd of expectant astronomers.

Who has not heard of the heart, found six months ago, in a box of lead, at the Sainte Chapelle, in Paris? "It is the heart of St. Louis," cried the wonder-mongers. Professors of History, Antiquaries, Chemists, Anatomists, Poets, Priests, Archbishops, and Cardinals, immediately entered into a literary battle—speeches, feuilletons, pamphlets, and sermons, were the missiles of the combatants: when all at once came M. Lacroix, and with the shafts of satire brought down the glorious superstructure, raised by Gothic learning, religious zeal, and romantic imaginations. The heart proves to have been in the noble breast of a hairdresser of hy-gone days, nicknamed L'Amour, by his contemporaries; and the re-interment is ordered to take place by the Priest. But one shaft more is thrown amongst the Zealots before the funeral—a poem by the renowned German critic Schlegel, of which the following is a sample:—

In the "holy chapel" was yesterday found
The heart of the barber L'Amour,
His sweetheart, poor girl, who had known its size,
Determined to place it secure.
Like a right royal heart, on consecrated ground,
So that if looked for, it there might be found.
Is he of the Ways unknown to fame?
No—Belleau has loudly sung his name.
How the pulpit and barbers were closely allied
With full-bottomed curls, and pig-tail tied.
His heart may be known by its odorous smell,
Of huckle-anut, and pomade both it tell.
Alas! it beat, but for silver and gold,
It now rests in lead in its cement cold.

Our godmothers are all eager to behold the Marshal Duke d'Alby on his return from Algeria—do, and behold, he brings with him the eldest son of an Emir of that country. First in the list is the young and handsome son of El-Arrech, who sent the French Governor, in one day alone, 500 pair of ears lately won in the field by the armies of France. Then follow the ruling Agas of Constantine, Philippeville, the former secretary of Abd-el-Kader, all of them of the rank of Sheikh, and wearing the legion of honour; and last, and not least, is a Tulek, that is to say, a learned man of Arabia. He comes to Paris to study Arabian manuscripts; but no doubt he will favour the ladies by casting nativities even of puppy dogs, and tell them by the stars and the moon why their shoes pinch them in hot weather. The banquet to the Marshal d'Alby, at Marseilles, was prepared quite à l'Anglais, with toasts and speeches. The town voted 20,000, for the occasion, and from the pockets of the subscribers came as much more. Well may Marseilles cry "to triumph" for the conquest of Algeria, whose whole resources pass through the hands of its merchants.

The following is said to be the forthcoming list of the new peers—General Marbot, Victor Hugo, the Duke de Praslin, Berin de Vaux, General Achard, and Baron D'Alaud. The two latter are not yet definitely settled.

The contemplated adoption of a new system of paving has turned half Paris top-sy-turvy—created an immense outcry.

The discovery of a Latin poem, by "William Tell," has set our philological antiquaries by the ears. Many have been the presumed contemporary fictions of the land of Schweiz. But it is thought to be the mere forgery, à la Chatterton, by some clever imitator. However, as a set off against the above, a genuine MS. of the 16th century has been brought to light. It contains unedited works of Clement Marot, Theodores de Bèze, and also an Epistle of Catherine de Medicis, in the days when young, beautiful, and innocent of the massacre of St. Bartholomew.

Another fossilized human skeleton has been brought forward; but it has been proved the human body does not at any period possess sufficient alkaline matter to produce fossilization. This skeleton, supposed to be the remains of a man, and over which the discoverer chuckled with so much triumph, will neither discompo the settled opinions of geologists nor theologians.

The new hotel taken by the family of the rich American millionaire, Mr. Thoren, records with the noise of the workmen employed in erecting a theatre, in which the dilettante Parisian amateurs are invited to perform. An Italian opera by Capella, "Nina Pazzo per Amore," has been selected for the inauguration of this new lyrical temple. The principal part will be taken by the eldest daughter of Mr. Thoren, who was one of the leading stars at the aristocratic concerts of Prince de la Moskowa.

Music, however, is not the only art now taken up and practised with marvellous success by the higher classes of society. Painting shares the same honour. Since the invasion of the polka new life has been given to the dance de société, which languished under the monotony of the quadrille. Our fops and dandies, however, devote even the polka to an untimely death, in their new-born enthusiasm for the maxima. The difficulty of this dance will, however, prove an obstacle to its adoption in general society. Cellarius has just invented a new waltz, which is to be danced in very slow measure, and to which he has given his name.

One of our countrymen has caused some sensation in our salons. After contracting debts to the amount of 130,000 francs, he has managed to escape from prison by means of a bottle of poison taken to the gaoler.

We have received by letters from Rome tidings of the death of one well-known in our circles—of the Princess Desportes Casanova, a descendant of the princely houses of Lichtenstein and Dietrichstein, and allied to all the great Gallician families. This pious princess had reached an advanced age, and had retired some time since to a convent of the Ursulines.

In the same letters we see that Cardinal Grimaldi is dangerously ill. By-the-by, in a few days will take place the sale of a magnificent collection of snuff-boxes, the property of the celebrated Cardinal Gonsalvi, whom first minister of the Pope, and who left instructions in his will that the sale should be delayed for twenty years after his death. The term is now expired, and numbers of amateurs are expected to attend. This curious collection numbers some snuff-boxes formerly the property of Napoleon. It is far, however, from equalling that of Labarre. You know that this is the favourite hobby of that giant in mind as well as in body.

By the same courier we hear of further additions to the destruction by inundations in Italy. All the roads are impeded, or utterly stopped. The waters in Florence have swept away edifices, with all their living tenants; and one of the suspension bridges has been carried away. The water is three fathoms deep at the portals of the well-known Santa Croce. The Grand Duke of Tuscany has spared neither his treasures nor his exertions to relieve the universal wretchedness. For 300 years Florence has not witnessed so great a disaster.

M. Thiers's new and voluminous historical work has not yet been published, and already three translations are publishing in the Peninsula alone. Don Sebastian de Mirano, M. Jouquin-Barria, and M. Alcalá-Galiano, are the three rival translators. M. Cousin's admirable "Biography of Jodeline" has increased the enthusiasm for "Pascals," her brother. A new edition of Cousin's "Pensées de Pascal" is forthcoming; a triumph for good literature, and another blow against the Jesuits.

Melancholy indeed is the fate of the illustrious house of Wess! You have heard of the domestic troubles of the present head of the house, and his recent separation from his wife—deprived of a home as well as a throne. He has now just sold his barony of Richemont, in Moravia, to the Baron de Sina, the Viennese banker, for 1,800,000 francs.

A striking, and certainly not a pleasing, feature of the times is now presented to the eye of the visitor at Tours. The beautiful and ancient abbey church of St. Julian, in that town, is put up for sale or hire, and at this moment serves as a stable! Your astonishment at this degradation may be somewhat mitigated, however, when you remember that, in 1838, "Maison d'Isaac" (a house to let) was inscribed on the outside of the Palace of the Tuilleries itself.

The hosts of the deputies who came over to pay homage to the Duke of Bordeaux, have been seized at all the shops, by order of the police. The anniversary of the wedding of his Majesty Louis Philippe will be celebrated by the inauguration of the new salon de Théâtre at the Palace of St. Cloud. M. de la "Racine de Grégu" is the opera fixed upon for this occasion, and will be performed by the pupils of the Conservatoire.

A curious incident has occurred in the country. Some giffles arrived at Mene, the other day, for exhibition at the fair, when it was found that the town-gate, not being high enough, it was impossible for them to enter, unless, as in the case of the famous horse of Troy, the town walls were demolished to admit them. This desperate alternative was, however, avoided, by the happy idea of making them pass by the railway terminus.

The great object of interest to our senses, at this moment, is two Egyptian sarcophagi, now in the possession of the Duke of Calabria. They are of the greatest antiquity; one is in black basalt, the other in whitish stone; and they are covered with most curious and admirably-preserved hieroglyphics. Their history is remarkable. They are mentioned in the works of Herodotus, and the famous traveller Travest; and La Fontaine celebrated them in his epistles. On their arrival from Egypt they became the property of the famous apocryphist, Pasquati; afterwards they passed into the possession of Lenotre, the well-known garden-architect; then into that of the Chevalier Bernin, who erected St. Peter's Monument at Rome; from him to that of their present possessor.

FRANCE.

The French papers this week furnish little matter of value either in the way of news or commentary. The state of Spain naturally engrosses much of their attention, but so far as facts are concerned, they are very barren.

A grand banquet has been given at Marseilles to Marshal Bugeaud, on his return from Algeria. The Marshal made a speech, in which he drew a very encouraging picture of the state of that colony. He said peace reigned everywhere, from the fortresses of Tunis to Morocco. He also dwelt on the immense progress made by the colony, and its importance to France. The Marshal also stated, that Abd-el-Kader had removed into the interior of Morocco.

The Moniteur publishes a Royal ordinance, authorizing the Minister of the Interior to open an extraordinary credit of 240,000 francs, to defray the expense of the experiment of an electric telegraph on a railroad line of at least 24 leagues (60 miles) in length.

M. Chais d'Est Ange, the Ministerial candidate, has been returned deputy for Rarion by 415 votes. His opponent, M. Leon Foucher, obtained 344.

According to the Constitutionnel, a new candidate has been proposed for the honour of possessing the hand of the Queen of Spain. A certain number of influential Spaniards and Portuguese have proposed to unite Isabella to the Prince Royal of Portugal, Pietro d'Alcantara, the eldest son of the Queen Donna Maria da Gloria. This Royal Prince is a child of seven years of age. Isabella is fourteen. The young couple would be severely afflicted, and they would then wait the majority of the young husband. The patrons of this alliance anticipate immense advantages from the arrangement, should as it is to draw political conclusions from a proposal for the marriage of two mere children.

The Sentinel of Toulon states that, in order to reduce the number of sailors, the Minister of Marine has desired the Maritime Prefect to discharge all those who have been six years in actual service of the Government, and those who can reckon thirty months of such service since the last levy.

The Debate again returns to the subject of the comparative merits of a railway or canal across the Isthmus of Suez, and, after laboursing three columns of argument, adheres to its previous opinion, that the preference is to be given to a canal.

Some of the Paris opposition papers state that Admiral Dupetit Thouars has received orders from the Government not to return to France for two years, or at all events till the end of the next session of the Chambers. The Presse confirms this report, but states that the Admiral had the choice of either coming home at once, or remaining on his travels for two years, and that he chose the latter.

The publication of the intended marriage of the Count de Jarnac, Secretary of the French Embassy at London, with the daughter of the late Lord Foley, said to be the rich heiress, has been posted up at the Mayors of the first arrondissement of Paris.

Marshal Bugeaud, Duke of Izy, has arrived at Paris, and is said to have immediately waited on the King.

SPAIN.

The accounts upon the subject of the recent insurrectionary movement of General Zurbano are so contradictory, that it is difficult to glean any thing positive respecting him or the progress made by his followers. The Debate and the Spanish Ministerial papers affect to consider it impossible that Zurbano can effect any thing or even escape the Government forces, but on the other hand it would seem that he is acting with great vigour. A letter from Bayona of the 26th represents him as making rapid progress. On his arrival at Sarla on the 18th he found that the political chief had issued a bando, declaring him a rebel, and directing him to be shot, as soon as his identity should be established. Zurbano, however, turned the tables upon him, and caused him to be shot as an example to persons in authority not to publish such sanguinary instructions. A battalion of the regiment of Saragossa had pronounced for Zurbano. A rising had taken place in Guipuzcoa in favour of the constitutional cause, and Ibaride had placed himself at the head of the movement.

Accounts from the other northern parts of Spain allude to the excitement prevalent there. Saragossa was declared in a state of siege. The valley of Tena, in Upper Aragon, has taken part in the Zurbano movement.

By a Royal decree, issued at Madrid, signed by General Narvaez, Zurbano and his followers were declared outlaws, and, as such, were to be shot "without any other delay than that necessary to enable them to die like Christians." Zurbano also had issued a proclamation, from Bayona, in the name of liberty, stating that the Royal authority in Spain was usurped; and ordering all the authorities of the "provinces" Government to relinquish their functions under pain of death. The inhabitants of some of the villages are placed in rather an unpleasant predicament between the contradictory commands of Narvaez and Zurbano.

Our letters from Madrid of the 20th are filled with accounts of rejoicings on the Queen's saint-day, and descriptions of a magnificent ball given by Narvaez to the two Queens, the whole of the corps diplomatique, and 1,500 of the fashionable of Madrid. The affair is the more remarkable as being the first time that a Queen of Spain has honoured a subject with her presence at an entertainment, with the exception of Queen Christina, when Regent, to Count Toros. The two Queens were accompanied by the Infant Luisa, and by Don Francisco de Paula and his family. The ball was opened by General Narvaez, in a quadrille with the Queen, who, it is said, appeared in excellent health, was in great spirits, and danced with perfect grace. In the second quadrille her Majesty honoured Count Bresson, the French Ambassador, with her hand, while Mr. Bulwer, the English Minister, performed the part of vis-a-vis with the Infanta Luisa. In the third quadrille Mr. Bulwer had the honour of being her Majesty's partner, and in the fourth she chose General Concha. It was only in the 6th quadrille that the Queen favoured the first Grandee of Spain, the descendant of royalty, the Duke of Medina Celi, with an invitation, a circumstance which appears to have given some offence in aristocratic circles in Madrid. Mr. Washington Irving and Mr. Peel, the son of Sir Robert Peel, were also present at the ball.

PORTUGAL.

We have accounts from Lisbon of the 29th instant. There have been some animated discussions upon the recent despatch acts of the Government, but the Bill of Indemnity being granted, these debates have lost much of their interest.

The Chamber of Peers has been chiefly occupied in discussing the subject of the new taxes which the Government proposed some time back, and they have been voted. By means of these taxes, and of the extensive retrenchments in contemplation in the public expenditure, the amount of the deficit will be very considerably reduced.

The Deputies are at present engaged in discussing an application made by the Government to be allowed to levy an additional five per cent. upon the existing taxes.

THE LATE FORGED TRANSFER AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND.—Burgess, who it will be recollected obtained £20,000 from the bank by means of a forged transfer of stock, had been captured on Light-house Island, in Boston harbour, and been safely lodged in Dorset-street goal, ready for delivery to the British authorities. Neville, an Irishman living on the island, and at whose house Burgess stopped, received 200 dollars reward on the spot.

NEWS FROM TAHITI.

The last New York papers contain news from Tahiti to the 15th of July. It appears, by a report given by the captain of the whale-ship Martha, which had arrived at Rhode Island, that, on the 20th of June, a body of natives having assembled at Point Venus, and their proximity being considered too near the safety, Governor Brist had marched against them at the head of 400 French. The natives, having received intelligence of their approach, placed themselves in ambush, and allowed the main body to pass; but, as the rear-guard were passing in front of the English mission-house, they opened their fire upon them in a direct line with the house, and Mr. McKean, one of the missionaries, who was walking on his verandah, was struck by a ball, and instantly killed. His death is universally regretted. He was one of those who had lately arrived from England, well educated, and one of the most respected men upon the group of islands. The action was upon the north side of the Bay of Papeete. The natives lost a unknown. The French loss amounted to three killed and five wounded.

At the same time, on the south side, another action took place, in which the natives were routed. In this action five French were killed and seven wounded. The native loss on this occasion is also unknown; but the day following the natives again advanced upon the town, and succeeded in burning the French mission-house, chapel, &c.

In all these actions it has been impossible to determine, with any degree of certainty, the native loss. They have always been accustomed to remove their dead during the night, and only those are found upon the field who die at the point of the bayonet.

The natives had seized three Frenchmen, whom they put to death with great torments.

The French ship Bourbonnaise was lost at Tahiti by striking upon the Middle Ground; she was got off by the assistance of the Government war steamer, but in so doing tore out the keel, and sunk in 15 fathoms water; vessel and cargo a total loss, and nothing was saved by the crew except what they had on.

A Rio paper, the Jornal do Commercio, of the 1st of October, contains the following important news from Tahiti:—"Valparaiso, August 17.—We received yesterday, by the corvette Albatross, arrived from Tahiti, the Grecine Française of the 14th July. The affairs of the Archipelago, though not presenting a menacing appearance, were far from tranquil. The French troops had gone out to encounter the detachments of the natives in the districts subject to the authorities of Papeete. The depredations and robberies to which the friendly natives were exposed, the general appearance of insubordination, and the neglect of the orders of the Governor, induced him at length to attack them on the 26th of June, at a place called Hapepe. In this encounter, as was to have been expected, the natives were routed with loss, and the French attained, by this stroke, the opportunity of hindering a body of the enemy, who had come from the south of the island, from joining the insurgents. The camp of the enemy was removed, in consequence of this, farther from Papeete. The Grecine Française gives well-deserved praise to the frank and honourable conduct observed by Captain Hammond, commander of the English steamer Salamander, in undeviating the natives of the idea that the British forces were about to protect them. On the 17th of July the English frigate Caryfort arrived at Papeete from Valparaiso. It saluted the French frigate Uranis, which returned the salute. The Governor, Captain Brist, received the visit of Lord William Paniel; and although he had not received any official intelligence of the French Government having refused the dominion of the Society Islands, nor any other notice of it, he was translated to Queen Pomare in the presence of the French Chief, and of the Commanders of the Caryfort and Basilisk, and she replied that she would go to Barakoa, there to wait the settlement of these affairs. The Caryfort prepared immediately to conduct her there, where resides the Chief Tabara, the first husband of Pomare.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

THE CELEBRATION OF DIVINE SERVICE.—The Dean and Chapter of Exeter have presented an address to the Archbishop of Canterbury, in which they entreat his Grace to consult with the Bishops on the best mode of putting an end to certain diversities in the celebration of Divine Service; and, for that purpose, to procure their concurrence in some uniform interpretation of those Rubrics in the book of Common Prayer which may seem obscure or conflicting, and in some uniform rule for the direction of the clergy with respect to certain forms and practices which have, more or less, fallen into disuse.

The Archbishop of Surrey, the venerable S. Wilberforce, held his Visitation on Monday last at St. Saviour's Church, Southwark.

The Lord Bishop of Lichfield has licensed the Rev. Frederick Rogers Blackley, late of All Saints, Birmingham, to the curacy of North Harborne, Staffordshire, on the nomination of the Rev. Thomas Green Simons, M.A., vicar.

NEW CHURCH AT COVE, NEAR FARNBOROUGH.—Thursday last, the Bishop of Winchester consecrated a new church, which has lately been erected at Cove, near the Farnborough station. The church is a small but very neat one; and the windows are filled with stained glass. The steeple composing the building, is similar to that of Windsor Castle. The architects, Messrs. Stevens and Alexander, were highly congratulated at the conclusion of the ceremony by the Lord Bishop, who observed that the edifice was the only one of the kind that he noticed nothing objectionable in.

COUNTRY NEWS

THE INFANTICIDE AT WOLVERHAMPTON.—The prisoners, Miss Bailton, Mr. Sheriff, and Mr. and Mrs. Hildreth, have been again brought before the coroner's inquest, but no further evidence of any importance was adduced, and a general verdict was returned. The prisoners were also placed at the bar of the public office before Mr. Hill, Mr. Barker, Dr. Deane, and Dr. Briscoe, magistrates of the county. The prisoners declining to say anything in their defence, were each committed to Stafford, Miss Bailton for concealing the birth of her child, and the other prisoners as accessories. The magistrates intimated that they would take bail; themselves in £50, and two sureties for each prisoner in £40. Mr. Sheriff, the surgeon, who attended Miss Bailton, was also committed to take his trial for felony at the ensuing assizes.

THE MURDER AT YARMOUTH.—A man named Frederick Boatright has been taken into custody on suspicion of being either a principal or an accomplice in the above horrible transaction. It appears there was a very strong suspicion prevailing in Yarmouth, in consequence of Boatright's dissipated habits and peevish character, that he was in some way connected with this horrible tragedy. When told that he was suspected of being concerned in the murder of Mrs. Candler, at Yarmouth, he appeared much agitated, and changed colour. He was conveyed to the station house, and afterwards underwent an examination before the magistrates of the borough. The prisoner, who has returned from sea within the last eighteen months, is a man of between 25 and 24 years of age, and was considered a very bad character.

MATRIMONIAL HOAX AT URBIDGE.—On Tuesday seventeen young men were charged at Uxbridge, with a disgraceful assault upon a Mr. Stone. The affair arose out of a mischievous hoax, practised upon Mr. Stone. It appeared that Stone had inserted an advertisement in the Westminster Gazette for a wife, and that advertisement had been answered by a shopkeeper's apprentice, of Uxbridge, in the name of "Francesa Gower," and entitled Stone to Uxbridge, where the defendants and others pushed him into a pond and pelted him with mud. The magistrates fined the ringleaders twenty shillings, and let the others off. Mr. Stone, who has been an attorney's clerk, resides at No. 4, Albany-road, Camberwell. He is described as a man of gentlemanly appearance, of rather above the middle stature, remarkably stout countenance, dark-brown hair, considerably bald on the top, dark-brown bushy whiskers, dark hazel eyes, and apparently nearly fifty years of age. He described himself as "now living independent." In his cross-examination he admitted that once before he had advertised for a wife in the Standard.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR HENDERSON.—Thomas Henderson, Esq., Professor of Practical Astronomy in the University of Edinburgh, died on Saturday morning last. The immediate cause of his death was disease of the heart. Mr. Henderson had held the Professorship of Astronomy since 1834—an office for which he was eminently qualified.

A GAMER'S SHOT.—Saturday night last, Mr. Green, gamekeeper to J. S. Lecher, Esq., of South Weald, Essex, was wounded by a gun-shot, in an attempt to apprehend a poacher, who escaped. Mr. Green lies in a dangerous state.

BOAT ACCIDENT.—SIX LIVES LOST.—Six men, inhabitants of Port Glasgow, are supposed to have been drowned in the Clyde, between Gourock Bay and that place, last Sunday. The boat in which they sailed was found on Monday morning. The probability, therefore, seems to be, as there was no ballast in the boat, and as there was a sail set upon it, that the whole of the persons on board were thrown out by some sudden lurch, that the boat then righted itself, but that owing to the darkness of the night none of them were able to regain it. The master of the boat was about twenty-three years of age. The other sufferers were a man named Arnot, a blacker, at Gourock ropework, his son, an apprentice plumber, and another young man, Arnot's nephew, a young man from the Highlands, named Dugald McIntyre, and another young man named John Gray, from Galloway.

MURDER AT STOCKPORT.—A coroner's inquiry was held on Tuesday night, before Mr. C. Hudson, on the body of Elias Jones, whose death had been caused on the previous afternoon by the violence of her husband. It appeared, the husband in question, whose name is Henry Jones, was a bricklayer, in the receipt of good wages, but unfortunately of very intemperate habits. On Monday, so total, he was intoxicated, so much so that his master desired him to quit the ground, and return when sober. On leaving his work he met his wife, who kept dodging him to give her some money, two children being then at home in want; but he became excited, and refused to comply or go home. After going from public-house to public-house, he consorted, late in the afternoon, to go home, and they were on their way through the town, when a violent quarrel arose between them. The wife was equally excited, when, in a moment of frenzy and madness, he threw her from him, and kicked her savagely. She fell instantly, and died in the street before any assistance could be obtained, supposing from some injury sustained by a kick in the stomach. Her husband was immediately taken into custody. The prisoner appears extremely dejected, and is painfully alive to the awful position in which he is placed.

EXPECTED STRIKE OF THE COAL MINERS OF LANCASHIRE.—The Manchester Guardian states that circumstances have come to its knowledge which induce it to believe that there is an intention on the part of the Lancashire Coal-liers' Union to cause a general strike ere long. The remarkable feature of this agitation is the proposal by the coal miners to their employers to force a rise in the price of coals, by contracting and diminishing the supply to the public, and then to allow the coal miners to share with them the profits which would result from this artificial scarcity and consequent dearness of an article which, at this season of the year, may be termed a prime necessity of life.

EXTRAORDINARY SUNDAY DEATHS IN NORWICH.—Last week the papers in Norwich mentioned the death of Mr. David Irwin. This gentleman had for upwards of forty years filled a confidential situation in the office of the Conservative newspaper, the Norfolk Chronicle. His death was peculiarly sudden. On Sunday last, only five days after his death, great was the astonishment and deep was the regret, at the announcement of the equally sudden death of Jonathan Matchett, Esq., the senior partner and editor of the same paper, which capacity that gentleman had filled upwards of half a century. On Wednesday morning still greater was the astonishment and regret at another awful visitation, in the nearly as sudden death of R. M. Bacon, Esq., the senior partner and editor of the Liberal paper, the Norwich Mercury, who had been unwell for the last few weeks.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

ROBBERY OF UPWARDS OF FORTY THOUSAND POUNDS FROM A BANKING HOUSE.

Considerable stir was created in the City on Monday morning, by the discovery that a robbery of a most extensive character was committed on Sunday at the banking-house of Messrs. Rogers, Gilling, and Co., bankers, of Clement's-lane. Bank-notes to the amount of £35,000 to £40,000, or £41,000 were stolen out of the iron safe, which is deposited in the wall of the inner office; and securities to a very large amount were also taken by the thieves. It is a remarkable circumstance connected with this robbery, that when it was first discovered, there was no external appearance from which suspicion could be entertained upon entering the office that any robbery had been perpetrated, or attempt at robbery had been made. Everything was in its accustomed order; the iron safe in which the cash and securities were regularly deposited was locked, and the iron chest in which it was usual to deposit the master-key of the safe, to which there were two locks, was also secure. According to one account the money was deposited in the iron safe; and, as usual, a clerk was appointed to watch over it a few days during Sunday, and another clerk to perform the like duty during the night. One of the partners remaining at home on Sunday, the day-clerk asked permission to go out for a few hours, which was granted. At the accustomed hour in the evening the other clerk came, and remained during the night; but when business was resumed on Monday morning, and the iron safe opened with the ordinary key, it was found entirely empty; and yet no force whatever had been used in the employment of the means adopted to rid the chest of its valuable contents. Of course, all is conjecture upon the subject. It is the practice of the partners of the firm, to relieve each other in the heavy cash business of the house at stated periods, and each of them keeps keys of the safe and iron chest, and it is supposed that one of the gentlemen left behind him his keys, upon some occasion of hurry or forgetfulness, and that with these keys the places of former security were violated. Some force had been used on a tin box in which several valuable securities were kept, but it appeared that the thieves had made some mistake with regard to the exact position of these documents, for they worked on the wrong side, and were so far disappointed. They laid hands upon enough, however, to console them for their blunder, as appears from the enormous list of bank-notes annexed to a large handbill. In that handbill are the particulars of the stolen Bank of England notes, which amount altogether to £63,710. Of these bank notes there are 108 for £5, 45 for £10, 37 for £20, 10 for £30, 12 for £40, 9 for £50, 10 for £100, 5 for £200, 1 for £250, and 25 for £500. The handbill states that further particulars of the bills of exchange will be published, and that whoever will give such information as will lead to the apprehension of the guilty party or parties, or either of them, and recovery of the property, or any part thereof, shall receive £1,000 reward, or a part thereof, proportionate to the sum which shall be recovered. Mr. Hobley has been employed by the banking-house to investigate the case, and has secured the assistance of Daniel F. Forrester, the officer. The house of Rogers and Co. is in rather a quiet thoroughfare, and, on Sundays especially, comparatively deserted, the houses being chiefly let out as offices, and occupied in other than business hours, merely by the male or female keepers. This would so far afford facilities for the unobserved approach of the thieves, a court running also within two doors of the bank. The house of Rogers and Co. has always been considered one of decided property, and the head of the firm, now advanced in age, is well known as the author of the "Pleasures of Memory." Business has since proceeded in the establishment in the usual quiet way. The transaction—the possession of the keys, the opening of the strong-room, and the principal party being fairly on "the road"—occupied less than three-quarters of an hour.

ADDITIONAL PARTICULARS.

Mr. Hobley, who has been employed by the firm, started immediately the robbery was discovered from the Continent, from which place he has returned, and it is believed from the information he there obtained that the guilty parties had not started for France. The supposition now entertained is, that the products of the robbery is secreted, and that the notes will not be put in circulation for the present. One of the superior officers of the City police received a letter in the course of Tuesday, informing him that the whole of the property which was stolen from Messrs. Rogers' banking-house was deposited in a house in the neighbourhood of Walworth; and off two of the force were sent in a cab to set upon the premises. The letter was anonymous, written in a wretched manner, and turned out to be a hoax. The cabman was the only one who gained by the report, for the poor man who owned the house, upon being shown the warrant, expressed the greatest surprise and indignation at the calumny, and invited the most scrupulous investigation. The mode in which the robbery was effected is pretty well ascertained, and as the locks of bankers' safes are generally on the patent principle, the probability is that the keys had on some occasion been mislaid, and that advantage was taken of that circumstance to prepare for the robbery. In this case, however, the probability is that the plan could not have been long matured. There are one or two points that may be stated with certainty, from what has transpired. First, that a successful ruse was planned to get possession of the keys of the strong chest; secondly, that the party delinquent has on a former occasion not stood A. I.; and thirdly, that there is a clue to the retreat of the delinquents. In most instances the bills of exchange due on Monday were abstracted from their depositaries, to enhance the value of the property, so that a more ready means may exist for a compromise. This, however, the firm, it is asserted, will unqualifiedly reject.

ANOTHER DOUBLE SUICIDE.

There seems to be a sort of fatality about great crimes or offences. At all events, there is something mysterious in such examples. Only a short time ago there was a double suicide at Kilmarnock, and now we have to record an event very common in France, but happy of rare occurrence here—the suicide of two lovers. This event took place at an early hour on Monday at the east end of the metropolis. About a quarter past one o'clock, a.m., police-constable M. Kemble, 371, K, was called to the house of Mr. William Duckett, No. 9, Raven-row, Mile-end, where he met Mr. Davis, the surgeon, of Conestable-row, Mile-end, who had also been hastily summoned, entering at the same time. They were ushered into a back parlour, fitted up as a sleeping apartment, where, lying across the bed, they saw the bodies of a young man and a young woman; the former, that of Charles William Duckett, son of the proprietor of the house, who was absent at the time; and the latter, that of a pretty young woman, named Elizabeth Williams, about 25 years of age, to whom the unfortunate young man had for some time past paid his addresses. Lying beside the bodies were found two leucophaea, which had recently contained some sort of liquid, leading to the conclusion that both must have drunk off the fatal draughts at one and the same moment. On looking about the apartment, the constable perceived two phials, which he handed to Mr. Davis, who, from the odour which they emitted, at once perceived that they had contained hydrocyanic acid; and, having examined the bodies, he pronounced it as his opinion that the deceased parties had been dead several hours, no doubt from the effects of the poison. On the table was found a letter, bearing the following superscription:—

To Miss Margaret Chapman, Lucas-street, Commercial-road.—It is our last and sacred wish that this letter be delivered into the hands of the above lady. Such is our last request, and whosoever may find this we pray they may give the same to her.—R.W., C.W.D. The handwriting is that of the young man, and displays much firmness. The letter was sealed with black wax, with the following motto:—

Always true, but never silent.

Duckett and Miss Williams had been long attached, but adverse circumstances having intervened to prevent their union, it would seem as if despair of their ever coming together prompted them to this rash and tragical conclusion. The father is an accountant; he was twenty-one years of age, and Miss Williams twenty-eight. For upwards of nine years the unfortunate young persons were attached to each other, and were never known to have quarrelled. On Sunday afternoon they had tea at Mr. Duckett's house, and took their departure about half-past five, at the same time stating that they were going to church, at which period they seemed in excellent good spirits. The evening wore on, and eleven o'clock having arrived, the usual time they returned, the family became somewhat alarmed. Soon afterwards two brothers of the ill-fated girl visited Mr. Duckett, and inquired if his son or their sister had been seen, she not having made her appearance, and the lateness of the hour induced them to think that they had met with some accident. Unpleasant feelings of alarm were then felt by all. Messengers were despatched all round the vicinity in search of them; but of no avail. At last, between one and two o'clock, whilst Mr. Duckett was searching about the house, in the hope of finding some letter which would mention where they had gone, he discovered that his son's bedroom was fastened on the inside, the key being in the door. It being surmised that he had returned unknown to the family, and had retired to bed, the door was broken open, and there the bodies of the young couple were stretched on the bed, life having been extinct apparently for some time, with their arms round each other's neck. The young man had not been in regular employment for some weeks past. This is reported to have been one circumstance that must have affected his mind, although he never wanted for anything. As regards his unfortunate partner, the poor girl, her mind of late has been affected; she was the daughter of a surgeon (deceased), and her mother resides in Cannon-street-road, in a respectable sphere of life. On a post-mortem examination, half an ounce of prussic acid (of Scheele's strength), was detected. According to the request of the deceased, inscribed on the letter found in the apartment and directed to Miss Chapman, in Lucas-street, it was delivered in the course of Monday afternoon at her residence, and opened in the presence of Mr. Porter, the constable of Stepney. On the envelope being broken open, it was found to contain two epistles, both of which were addressed to that young lady, and written in the handwriting of Duckett. One was a piece of poetry in twenty-four verses, and is a beautiful piece of penmanship. The title is "The Last Lay of Two Broken Hearts," written and composed by C. A. D., executed in the illustrated style in old English, with a variety of ink. It bears the date of Nov. 8, but it has evidently been written so far back as September, which date was erased, but which is still partially discernible. The theme shows a wild paroxysm of love on his part, manifesting the most fervent attachment to the ill-fated girl. He bids adieu to his parents and all other relations, and prays forgiveness. Poverty had blasted his prospects, and Since Fate had snatched their earthly bliss, they would seek an early grave.

The same wild strain is displayed throughout the whole piece—

His Lily begging that his grave might be her grave also.

The second is written in the same superior style, and bears the date of the day, last Sunday, on which he effected his fatal purpose. It states "that ere she (Miss Chapman) had resolved that epistle they would be in the sweet sleep of death." Fate had married his bliss in this world—he was prepared to leave it, and she, for whom he had lived, had told him "If you die without me, you will be my murderer!" and, to use the words of Lady Jane Grey, "Death had no terrors." Both productions had deep black borders round them.

The inquest on the two lovers was held on Wednesday, at the Fox Tavern, Mile-end. The evidence confirmed the above account, and nothing else material was elicited. The letters and inscriptions alluded to were read. At the conclusion of some verses, there was the following document:—

"This is the holy vow, freely given from both our hearts. We have lived for each other. We solemnly and without reluctance mutually consent to die together; teaching to the truth thereof we have subscribed our names, thus proving our perfect will to share the grave in the arms of one another."
"Elizabeth Williams and
"Charles William Duckett."

Signed at No. 9, Raven-row, Mile-end Gate, London, Nov. 8, 1844.
Mr. Duckett, the young man's father, said:—My son resided with me. I was aware of his attachment to Elizabeth Williams, and approved of it. I never heard my son speak of getting married, but it is my opinion that he feared his circumstances would never enable him to do so, and it preyed on his mind. He was a candidate for a lucrative situation about twelve months since, and being unsuccessful, he had ever since been desponding. He was twenty-one years of age, and had known Elizabeth Williams nine years. The books he read were chiefly books and cheap publications. The witness here produced a large packet of letters he had found in his son's box addressed to him by Elizabeth Williams. They represented his affection, and one of them, of recent date, describes the writer as very unhappy, and stated that she cared not how soon the time came to die with him. The jury returned a verdict "That the deceased persons, Charles William Duckett and Elizabeth Williams, died from inhaling a certain quantity of prussic acid, but by whom or how administered there was not sufficient evidence before the jury."

SUICIDE OF THE SON OF SIR STEPHEN MAY.—On Tuesday night Mr. Nigge held an inquest at the Unicorn, Duke-street, St. James's, to inquire into the circumstances of the death of Mr. Edward May, son of Sir Stephen May, Bart. The deceased recently arrived from Madras, in one of the Company's vessels, the Mary Ann, and took lodgings in Duke-street. The deceased was very singular in his manner, and appeared extremely dejected, as if troubled in his mind. On Monday morning his cousin came to pay a visit, but was unable to get into his room, on account of his door being fastened; but, on gaining access into the room, through another door, the deceased was discovered on the bed quite dead. The bed-clothes were saturated with blood, a knife was by his side, and a wound was observed in his throat. The captain of the vessel in which the deceased returned to England, said that he had known him when in Madras. He had been in the army, but was dismissed by a General Court-

Martial, on account of a quarrel with a brother officer, which affected his mind. The cousin of the deceased gave similar testimony, and said he dined with the family on Sunday, in Holles street, Cavendish-square. The deceased appeared dejected, absent, and melancholy. His father applied him very liberally with money. He never spoke to his family on the subject of his dismissal from the army. The jury returned a verdict of "Temporary insanity."

FRIGHTFUL DEATH IN A BRICK-KILN.—On Tuesday evening Mr. Baker held an inquest at the London Hospital on the body of Jeremiah Gray, aged thirty-five years. Mr. William Webb, of No. 10, Albion-road, Dalston, tailor, deposed that about nine o'clock on Thursday night, whilst at supper with his family, he was alarmed by hearing cries of distress proceeding from a field at the rear of his house. He immediately went out, and discovered the deceased standing with his arms outstretched, having the whole of his clothes in a complete blaze from head to foot, and calling for "God's sake to help him." Witness, with the assistance of a policeman and a young man, dragged the burning remnants of his body till he was completely naked. Witness then took off his own coat and wrapped it over the deceased, and with assistance he was carried to the above hospital. The deceased was at first quite sensible, and said that, having had a prize given him, he bought some potatoes, and had proceeded to the brick-kiln, near which he was found, for the purpose of roasting them, when he was overpowered by the vapour, and, falling asleep, his clothes became ignited. He further stated that he had no home or friends, being quite destitute. The house surgeon said the deceased, when admitted, was burnt in a most dreadful manner. He lingered until the next morning. Verdict, "Accidental death."

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Monday morning, whilst Mr. G. Littlewood, lamp-contractor, Upper King-street, Bloomsbury, was driving a horse in a chaise-cart along Aylesbury-street, Clerkenwell, towards the Green, the horse, a vicious animal, suddenly took fright and dashed forward. On descending the hill on the west side of the Sessions-house the horse fell and rolled over. The sudden jerk threw the driver out of the cart, and his head came with great force against the curb-stone. Mr. Littlewood's skull was entirely knocked in. He was conveyed in a state of insensibility to a surgeon's near the spot, who directed his removal to St. Bartholomew's, whither he was conveyed, and, after receiving every attention from the house-surgeon, expired at half-past eleven. Mr. Littlewood has left a wife and family. He was about forty.

SINGULAR CASE.—On Monday afternoon Mr. Wakley held an adjourned inquest, at the Pembroke Arms Tavern, Pembroke-square, Kensington, on the body of Mary Gardfield. It appeared that the deceased had been living for twelve months as cook in the service of Mr. Collett, a gentleman holding an official situation at the House of Commons, and residing at No. 28, Pembroke-square. During the whole time of her living there she was never known to go to bed, but she would sleep sitting in a chair in the kitchen, and her manners were in all respects most accurate, the other servants scarcely speaking to her, on account of her crossness and snappish manner of answering them. On the night of Wednesday week, about half-past eleven o'clock, Rose Jackson, the housemaid, after having supper with deceased, who during the evening appeared in her usual good state of health and spirits, took the candle of the table to go up to bed, when the deceased called her back, and asked her to leave the candle. She did so, and on coming down again into the kitchen the next morning, about seven o'clock, she found the deceased in the kitchen, dressed as she had left her on the previous night, lying on the floor, and quite insensible. A surgeon was sent for, who applied hot water to the deceased's stomach and feet; but she died in about an hour. In accordance with the medical testimony, the jury returned a verdict of "Natural death."

RAILWAY ACCIDENT NEAR LEICESTER.—On Saturday an inquest was held at Leicester, on the body of Edward Jowett, an unfortunate man killed on the railway near that place on the previous Thursday. From the evidence of the two principal witnesses, the driver and stoker of a coal train which left Leicester for Rugby, about seven o'clock on Thursday night, it appeared that deceased acted as brakeman to the same train, and accompanied them on that occasion. After passing through the Knighton-hill Tunnel, which is little more than a mile from Leicester, one of the coupling chains connecting the coal trucks broke, and the train was stopped to remedy the accident. The having been done, the engine was again set in motion, but owing to the humid state of the atmosphere, and consequent slipperiness of the rails, the wheels did not "bite," and the deceased got down off the truck on which he was riding, and crossed the line for the purpose of obtaining a little sand to throw upon the rails. While in the act of doing this, the second goods train from London came along the down line at a rapid pace, but from the fog, which prevailed at the time, it was not observed by the driver of the coal train until within a few yards' distance. When the train had swept past, the driver called out to deceased, and, obtaining no answer, commenced a search for him. In a very few moments he was discovered in a senseless state by the road side, with a frightful wound over the right temple, from which the brains protruded, and other contusions about the face. He was immediately conveyed back to Leicester, where he lingered until ten o'clock, and then expired. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

ANOTHER FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE MIDLAND COUNTRY RAILWAY.—Another fatal accident on this line of railway occurred on Wednesday morning. The deceased, named Joseph Woodford, a married man, without family, was a guard in the employ of the Company, and left Rugby, in charge of the seven o'clock train. On arriving at the Syston station, some luggage was handed up to him on the top of the carriage upon which he was seated. He gave the signal to the driver to start the train while he was so engaged, and Mr. Withers, the superintendent, handed him a note, and the train moved off. The deceased being still in an erect position on the top of the carriage, was observed for some distance down the line, and was only missed on the arrival of the train at St. Ives, by the superintendent of that station, and, on a search being made, he was discovered on the top of one of the carriages, with his brains dashed out and quite dead. There is but one bridge between Syston and St. Ives. It is situated about midway, and there can be no doubt that the accident occurred by the deceased's head, while he was still engaged on the roof of the carriage, coming in contact with the bridge. At the inquest the jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death." Mr. C. Shaw, one of the directors of the railway, said that the bridge should be immediately altered.

ANOTHER RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—On Saturday last, a little boy named George Crowther, son of Mr. Crowther, of Hendon Terrace, near Sunderland, was killed on the Durham and Sunderland Railway, by being run over by two waggons as they were passing on the line near Bladon. The little fellow was attempting to get on to one of the waggons, when he fell down, and both waggons passed over him, breaking his legs, and injuring him severely in other parts of his body. He died shortly after from exhaustion, his remains presenting a shocking spectacle. It is rather remarkable, that about a year and a half ago he escaped miraculously from being killed on the same spot by a train of waggons, at which time he was knocked down and his head laid open, and the greater part of his face mutilated. On a previous occasion he narrowly escaped drowning.

ELECTION OF THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT.

In our journal of last week, we gave a narrative of the excitement of this important election, with portraits of the candidates, Messrs. Polk and Clay; and a scene from one of the great Whig demonstrations; from our correspondent in New York. We now present to our readers two additional illustrations of this tremendous election struggle, with details since received by the Great Western, which has reached Liverpool, with accounts from New York to the 9th inst.

They contain the important announcement of the success of the Democratic party, and the consequent election of Mr. Polk as President, and Mr. Dallas as Vice-President. The election had not actually taken place, but returns had been received from Pennsylvania, which state returns twenty-six, all of them in favour of Mr. Polk, and the adjoining state of New York, which returns the largest number in the Union—thirty-six—also declared in his favour. These great states, being the most densely populated, and returning the greatest number of presidential electors, were held to be decisive of the contest. Some of the remote states had not been heard from, and returns were daily pouring in, but the friends of Mr. Clay held the return of his rival as certain; indeed, the admissions of that gentleman's agents in the City of New York place the issue of the contest beyond a doubt. The result of this contest shows the hold which two questions of great importance have taken of the American mind—one of those pertaining more immediately to their own domestic policy—the annexation of Texas to the Union; and the other of considerable importance to Great Britain—a law, in contradistinction to the present high tariff. Whether Mr. Polk will possess sufficient strength in Congress, as now constituted, to carry out these two questions, remains to be seen, but that they have been the instruments by which he has achieved a much slier and otherwise more popular man is unquestionable; as regards the subject of free trade, the elections in New York show an extraordinary result. The city, which is the commercial metropolis of the country, voted in favour of the protectionist, Mr. Clay, but this was neutralized by the general vote of the state, which supported Polk by a majority exceeding 4000. Upon this subject, the New York Weekly Herald says, "the returns—not official, but sufficiently accurate for all practical purposes—from 84 counties, give Mr. Polk a majority of 9221, the remaining three counties having only given 7733 for Harrison in 1840. The most startling defection to Clay has taken place in the abolition counties of the west. There have probably voted largely for Bury, although we have none of their returns as yet; but that alone can account for the diminution of Clay's votes from Harrison's." Mr. Clay came to Cayuga Bridge with only about 7000 majority, a very serious diminution from the vast popularity of Harrison in 1840. In other respects, the papers by this arrival possess no striking features. The stock market had experienced the shock of Polk's return, many species of security having become depressed. The cotton market, too, was most inanimate, the result of the unaccountable intelligence respecting that staple which the Great Western carried out; but the rate of exchange was high—varying from 10½ to 10¾ per cent.

The second of our present illustrations represents the interior of a Polling Booth, with the mode of taking the elector's vote by Ballot. The votes are taken in each township of every county separately, and the mode of doing this cannot be better described than in the words of Mr. Stuart, who was present at an election for President.

"The ballot-boxes were placed on a long table, at which half a dozen of the inspectors or canvassers of voters were seated. The voters approached the table by single files. Not a word was spoken. Each voter delivered his list when he got next to the table to the officers, who called out his name. Any person might object, but the objection was instantly decided on, the officers having no difficulty, from their knowledge of the township, of the persons residing in it, and to whose testimony reference was instantly made, in determining on the spot, whether the qualification of the voter was or was not sufficient. The county canvassers for the different townships of the county afterwards met, and made up their returns for the county; and thus, in a state far exceeding Scotland in extent, and almost equalling it in population, the votes for the chief magistrate of the United States and his substitute, for the governor and lieutenant-governor of the state, for a senator and representative to Congress, for three representatives to the state of New York, for four coroners, a sheriff, and a clerk to the county, were taken, and the business of the election finished with ease, and with the most perfect order in three days."

TORCH LIGHT PROCESSION IN NEW YORK.

BALLOTING FOR PRESIDENT.

The first scene is from the last grand demonstration of the Democrats, on the night of Nov. 1—a torch-light procession of immense extent. Our artist saw it at the time when it was preparing to move from Tammany Hall, the democratic headquarters; and when torches, banners, &c. were accumulated together with a picturesque brilliancy, which was lost when they were spread over miles of streets.

The torch-light processions, of which the Democrats are very fond, are, artistically speaking, decided failures; an enormous waste of material, without arrangement or the slightest idea of effect: a splendid banner, for instance, beautifully painted on white satin, with gold, at an expense of, perhaps, a hundred dollars or more, will be carried in the dark; or, perhaps, some boys with a few torches behind it; while far in the distance, the eye will be attracted to a mass of light, which, on approaching, will be found to be a multitude of boys of all ages, from 14 downwards, with a host of brilliant torches, lighting each other; and a stupid little transparency of a rascal hanging from a gallows, or any other equally flattering type of Henry Clay's political fate.

The large building to the left of the view is Tammany Hall, brilliantly illuminated; the balconies filled with company hurraing with ecstasy; and the steps crowded with spectators. Across the street is suspended, from the attic of the hall to a lofty young hickory-tree, a large banner, inscribed with the candidate's name. In the procession are a large eagle, backed by a wreath; a huge ship, inscribed "Free Trade," and "Sailors' Rights," on the sails; and a large transparent star, inscribed "Texas," whilst the brilliancy of the whole is heightened by a powerful Drummond light.

Our correspondent adds:—Though very far from resembling them, the Whigs and Democrats regard each other in much the same way as the High Tories and extreme Radicals of England do, or did. The Whigs accuse their opponents of being Jacobins, Levellers, Agrarians, vagabond rowdies, banditti, effeminate, &c.; and that, had they power, they would disorganize society. On the other hand, the Democrats style the Whigs the "Kid Glove Aristocracy," Blue-light Federalists—in allusion to their having warned the British ships of danger during the last war—asserting that if they had power, they would limit the suffrage to high property qualifications, trampling on the poor hard-working mechanic, and filling the land with all the evils of class legislation; and, as a final brand of infamy, they call them "British Whigs," the opprobrious term "British," having been faintly foreshadowed more than two thousand years ago in the old Roman sense of "Punic."

The mode in which this election has been carried on is beyond all praise. The quiet, order, decency, and forbearance observed at all the polling-places in the city were admirable.

M. DE LAMARTINE.

M. De Lamartine is a poet, a traveller, a legislator, and a politician. He plays many parts on the stage of life, and is good in them all, though his greatest and widest fame rests upon his poetry, and his prose, which is almost as beautiful. But it is as a politician he has at this juncture come into notice; he is a prominent member of the French Chamber, but has the misfortune to differ from M. Thiers, and the calamity of not agreeing with M. Guizot. He has recently put forth what is called a manifesto, with which the Paris papers are at present busy:—"It was easy to foresee," observes Le Siècle, "the effect which it would produce. Legitimists, Ministerials, Radicals, democratic innovators, all applauded. The manifesto was common ground on which all these different parties could meet. It offered to them, each and all, the glorification of their own respective opinions, and a text for bitter invective against other parties." A production that combines such qualities, was sure of a brilliant reception. But in all things M. De Lamartine has always been a fortunate man; a slight sketch of his career will prove it, although more is known of his writings than of his life, for, to a certain extent, "his soul is like a star, and dwells apart;" his life is rather one of sentiment than action.

LAMARTINE.

Alphonse de Lamartine was born at Mâcon, in the beginning of 1793, when France was in the midst of the storm of the Revolution. His first recollections are of the prison, to which he used to be taken to see his father, who had been arrested, suspected of the crime of being an aristocrat, because he had filled some post in the Orleans branch of the Bourbon family. He survived the reign of terror by living in the greatest privacy, at an obscure place called Milly, afterwards so piously illustrated by his son. There the poet passed a long and innocent childhood, and only left it when he entered the College of the Pères de la Foi, at Belley. After leaving college, and for which, of all things, his genius is the most unsuitable. In 1813, his health being affected, he revisited Italy. The fall of the empire and the restoration had a considerable change in the destiny of the poet. Nurtured in sentiments and opinions wholly opposed to the revolution, he had never acknowledged the sway of Napoleon. It was to him but the rule of brute force, of numbers, and of the sword. He entered as an officer in the garde du corps in 1814, but did not resume his post after the Hundred Days, and his life presents no event of note till 1820, when his "Méditations Poétiques" were first given to the world. The advent of a great poet was at once acknowledged. The work became universally popular, and, thanks to Lamartine, France believed once more in Poetry, the eternity of Love, and the beauty of Nature—things that the verse-makers of the century had wholly forgotten. He profited by the popularity his name had acquired, and entered on the career of diplomacy; he was attached to the French Legation of Florence. He has been an exception to the common lot of poets; every kind of good fortune came to him, and nearly at the same time, fame, wealth, and a marriage of affection with a lady who is, we believe, a native of England. In 1830 he was admitted a Member of the Academy, and since that time he has travelled in the East, of which voyage he has given a most eloquent description to the world. He there lost his favourite daughter, Julia, and returned to France, where he engaged in politics, and soon gained a high position in the Chamber, above the tumult and storm of parties. His work, "De la Poétique Rationnelle," and his "Voyage en Orient," appeared in 1834; his "Jocelyn" in 1835; and in 1838 or 1839, "La Chute d'un Ange."

Lamartine lives in that street of splendid houses, the rue de l'Université, where he occupies a spacious hotel and keeps the establishment of a noble, indulging his refined taste for luxury and elegance, and his love of horses, which is so perceptible in his eastern voyage. He will walk to the Chamber in spurs, and after prostrating Arago in an eloquent speech, will gallop off to the Bois, leaving politics on the Tribune. The poet is not always in mysterious conversation with the tearful and pensive muse; he often speaks in his verses of his "humble roof," but it is that of a magnificent chateau, that of St. Point, near Mâcon, and the "modest shades" he celebrates are those of the majestic forest that surround this aristocratic dwelling.

GREAT AMERICAN ALOE IN BLOOM.

A very fine specimen of the Agave Americana, or Great American Aloe, in a state of blossoming, is now to be seen in the garden of the Rev. E. Duke, at Lake House, near Amesbury, Wiltshire. Such an event always attracts a good deal of attention, as it is of rare occurrence, the plant being somewhat uncommon, and requiring many years in this climate—from 75 to 100—to enable it to flower, after which it dies. The present specimen is exactly a century old. The flower stem first made its appearance on July 1st, and shot upward with astonishing rapidity, sometimes amounting to a growth of six inches in twenty-four hours. Thirty-six lateral branches, of a graceful curved form, spring from the central stem, much after the fashion of a candelabrum. These branches are 18-in at their extremities with a profusion of flower buds, averaging, as we believe, 150 in a bunch. The flower stem has now, for some weeks, ceased to grow, having attained its extreme height of twenty-five feet. We understand from the gardener (who tells us that up to October 18, 1890 visitors had availed themselves of the permission to inspect it), the plant presents a spectacle as magnificent as it is rare among the many wonders of the herbaceous creation. Our engraving shows the plant, with a temporary staircase, by which visitors may ascend, the more closely to inspect the flowers.

Lake House, the mansion of the Rev. E. Duke, is situated in a valley on the banks of the Upper Avon, about six miles north of Salisbury, and two miles south-east of Stonehenge. It deserves attention as an excellent specimen of the residence of an English country gentleman, erected (most probably) in the time of good Queen Bess. Britton, in his "Beauties of Wiltshire," Vol. III., thus speaks of it:—"The house is a truly picturesque edifice, with bay windows, gables, and other characteristics of the mode of building which prevailed in the 16th century. The gardens, with their terraces, yew hedges, &c., were laid out at the same time, and are characteristic of the same period."

GREAT AMERICAN ALOE IN BLOOM.

MONUMENT TO ADMIRAL SIR THOMAS MASTERMAN HARDY, ON BLAGDON HILL, DORSETSHIRE

The late anniversary of the Battle of Trafalgar (Monday, October 21st), was selected by the inhabitants of the County of Dorset, as the commencement of a work, which does equal honour to the heads and hearts of all concerned. On a day so auspicious in England's history, and so freight with remembrances of noble hearts and gallant deeds, did a grateful band of generous Britons assemble to pay a just tribute to the memory of one who stood foremost in the hot melee, among the defenders of his country, their labour rendered doubly dear by the spot of his monumental pile being the place of his birth, and the associations of his early years being connected with every object which meets the eye from its elevated and commanding position.

At the foot of Blagdon Hill, near Dorchester, Admiral Sir Thomas Masterman Hardy was born, on the 5th of April, 1760, in the small village of Martin's

MONUMENT TO ADMIRAL SIR THOMAS HARDY, ON BLAGDON HILL, Digitized by Google

STATUE OF GOETHE, AT FRANKFORT.

STATUE OF GOETHE.

This fine colossal statue of Goethe, which was cast in bronze at the Royal Foundry of Munich, according to the model of Schwanthaler, was inaugurated with great ceremony, on the 23rd of last month, at Frankfort-on-the-Main, the illustrious poet's native place. Goethe is represented clad in a mantle, but having his hands free. He wears the simple costume of the present period. His right arm is resting on the trunk of an old tree, and in his left he holds a laurel crown. His eyes are turned towards heaven. The subjects of the bas-reliefs on the pedestal are borrowed from the works of Goethe. In the front, three female figures represent the natural sciences, and dramatic and lyric poetry. On the opposite side is seen, at the right, Goetz of Helichingen, Egmont, Tasso, and a fawn. On the left, the Bride of Corinth, Prometheus, and the King of the Aulnes. One of the lateral surfaces represents Iphigenia, Orestes, Faust, and Mephistopheles, and the other Mignon, Wilhelm Meister, the Harpist, Hermann, and Dorothea.

CHATEWORTH.—The Duke of Devonshire's princely seat at Chateworth is at the present moment undergoing extensive alterations and embellishments. The two new fountains which have been set in action are truly magnificent—the one called the "Emperor," from a single jet throws a column of water nearly three hundred feet high. The other from several jets sends forth copious streams which rise and fall alternately. Huge masses of rock are collecting and forming into a rock work, and, when completed, will present the appearance of a wild mountain torrent of above three hundred feet long. Some rare plants have been sent to his Grace from one of the most arid parts of Western Africa for the noble duke's conservatory.

THE GREAT AMERICAN ALOE.—A fine specimen of this magnificent plant is now in flower, at Weald Hall, Essex. It is upwards of thirty feet high, and has 25 branches of flowers: it is constantly exuding a sweet juice, which contains 80 per cent. of saccharine matter.

IMPROVED RAZORS.—Messrs. Gilbert, of Sheffield, have succeeded in materially improving the form of the handle of this very serviceable implement, by certain bends and curvatures, which considerably aid its convenience in use; they have likewise made some judicious adaptations of the well-tempered blade, whilst the embellishment of the handle has not been neglected; so as, altogether, to produce a razor which, for elegance and utility, has not been equalled in specimens within our cognisance.

THE DESTITUTE POOR OF LONDON.—The Refuge for the Houseless Poor, which has been open for several years in the City, will be ready for the reception of objects as soon as the severe weather shall have set in. It is the practice of the committee to throw open the doors of three asylums for the houseless poor in the city of London at the latter end of November. We are sorry to state that the demands upon the funds of the committee for the last year's expenses incurred by the influx of paupers into the city of London have reduced their means of affording assistance very considerably.

Town. On the 20th of November, 1781, he entered the navy, on board the Helena, as an officer's servant; was made midshipman on board the Rehe, 24th February, 1780; Lieutenant, on board the Meleager, on the 25th November, 1793; Commander on board the Mutine, 18th June, 1797; Captain on board the Vanguard, August 4th, 1798; and retired from the command of the Superb, August 11th, 1810, as a Commodore. Was made a Rear Admiral, 27th May, 1825; and a Vice-Admiral of the White, 10th January, 1837; which he continued till his death, on the 20th September, 1839. Sir Thomas Hardy was Captain of Nelson's ship, the Victory, at Trafalgar, and received the naval hero in his arms as he fell. During the latter years of his life he was appointed Governor of Greenwich Hospital, at which excellent institution he died, sincerely and deservedly regretted by all who knew his kind and generous disposition.

In order to pay a just tribute to the memory of one so much respected both in the service and in private circles, as well as to assist to the county of his birth its equitable share in the honour of his fame, a project was set on foot some months since by the inhabitants of Dorchester, Dorsetshire, &c., to erect some testimonial to secure both objects. A meeting was called of the inhabitants of the county, which was held at Dorchester, and most fully attended—the result being a subscription towards building a monumental pillar on the summit of the hill of Bagden—a spot most appropriate for the purpose, as commanding magnificent views of the sea, and surrounding country. Designs were solicited from the most eminent architects, and numbers were sent in for the decision of the committee. The choice fell on the plan of Arthur Henry Dyke Acland, Esq., of Kilmington, Dorsetshire. This gentleman is a magistrate of the county of Devon, son of Sir Thomas Dyke Acland, Bart., M.P. for the county (North Division), and brother of Thomas Dyke Acland, Esq., M.P. for West Dorsetshire. Although an independent gentleman, and no architect by profession, he is most ardently attached to architectural pursuits; and although he was on the Jury committee himself, yet on having sat in the design anonymously, and it being selected by the committee without the least knowledge of the designer, he left the committee, hoping they would put the superintendence of the structure into the hands of one of those who had sent in other good designs for competition. This, however, met with difficulty, and that of Mr. Acland, with the aid of an experienced builder—Mr. Goudard, of Bridport—has been proceeded with, most favourably and expeditiously.

The anniversary of the battle of Trafalgar saw the arrangements completed to the laying of the foundation stone, and that task was allotted to the lady of the High Sheriff of the county of Dorset, Mrs. Floyer, for whose hands so fit as those of the fair to weave the first wreath in memory's garland, over the ashes of the brave. The day was delightfully fine, and a company, numerous and highly respectable, assembled with anxious hearts to witness the proceedings.

On the summit of the hill, a spacious and handsome marquee was erected for the accommodation of the principal visitors, within which a sumptuous and elegant dinner was laid out by direction of the committee. The preliminary arrangements being concluded, Mrs. Floyer, accompanied by the High Sheriff (John Floyer, Esq.), the Mayor of Dorchester (Charles Criswick, Esq.), A. H. Dyke Acland, Esq. (the architect), E. Thorne, Esq., R. N., and other members of the committee, proceeded to the spot, where the ceremony of laying the foundation stone having been performed by Mrs. Floyer, a salute of fifteen guns was fired from the North battery at Weymouth; the revenue cutters in that harbour and bay, and also the vessels of R. S. Wardell, Esq., and T. Halston, Esq., having hoisted full colours. The spectators were then addressed by the Mayor of Dorchester, who thanked Mrs. Floyer for her kindness in laying the stone, and proposed three cheers for that excellent lady, which was responded to with right good will as well as these cheers for the High Sheriff.

The High Sheriff called for three cheers for their worthy architect, Mr. Acland, for the good service he had done on the occasion, which were he ruly given.

Mr. Acland returned thanks, and three cheers were then given for the lady which were acknowledged by E. Thorne, Esq., R. N., who served with the late gallant Admiral Hardy.

Three cheers were then given for the Committee, which were acknowledged by Mr. Hodgins; and three cheers for the Queen, and the spectators then separated.

The marquee was soon crowded with ladies, nearly a hundred being entertained; the High Sheriff presiding, and as well as the gentlemen of the committee, assisting in everything that could conduce to their comfort. A large number of gentlemen subsequently sat down; nor were the humbler classes assembled on the hill forgotten, as they were regaled with substantial fare and Dorset ale. The whole proceedings passed off in the most gratifying manner.

The pillar is intended to be in height 72 feet; the diameter of the base 28 feet at the ground level; the diameter of the shaft, 13 feet 6 inches to 11 feet 6 inches. Mr. Goudard, builder, of Bournemouth, takes the contract for building it at £450; the amount of subscriptions to the present time being something beyond £400. The design itself is solid, and without pretensions; at the same time, it is most peculiarly fitted to withstand the rude shocks of time and weather, which its elevated and exposed situation is liable to. It is a simple column, with massive buttresses, gradually leading the eye upwards, from the form of the ground on which it is intended to stand. It is to contain a spiral staircase, which will afford, from the top of the monument, a fine view to be taken in the kingdom. Situated on a wild, uncultivated hill, some feet above the level of the sea, and not far from the nearest part of the open coast, its position is at once commanding and romantic. The boundaries are, stretching far out in every direction, the dangerous Neales—the Stait—the town of Weymouth—Wyke Church and Chisel Bank—Portland, with its light-house, and, in far-off majesty, the lofty ocean, and White Sea hills—all are revealed to the eye at one glance.

The monument is to be adjacent to that of a Redoubt, erected by the Admiral himself, when in charge of the Regiments of the Squadron. His native village, and his family property repose peacefully below, and it is from thence the materials for the erection of the column are obtained free of expense, owing to the kind permission of William Mansfield, Esq., his successor, and the owner of the site in question. The pillar is also upon the immediate site of one of the angles of the Fortification survey of Great Britain. There will probably be a massive iron anchor at the foot of the column, but the inscription has not yet been decided on. The name, however, of the four great armaments in which he was engaged, will probably be placed on it.

A more appropriate emblem to a Naval Warrior, could not be selected. His life passed in storm and tempest, is fully represented by the unending steepness of the rocky pile—the manner as he steers his bark over the rippling sea, will hail it as a monument honourable to those who raised it and memorable in its unflinching strength of the stout hearts which man the best defenders of Old England's power.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Dec. 1.—First Sunday in Advent.
MONDAY, 2.—Nelson's birthday, 1794.
TUESDAY, 3.—Martin's day, 1836.
WEDNESDAY, 4.—Richard's day, 1842.
THURSDAY, 5.—Martin's day, 1792.
FRIDAY, 6.—Alfred's day, 1063.
SATURDAY, 7.—Martin's day, 1815.

Rise and Fall of the Tides at London Bridge, for the Week ending December 7.

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
High 10.10	High 10.08	High 10.05	High 10.02	High 9.59	High 9.56
Low 4.10	Low 4.08	Low 4.05	Low 4.02	Low 3.59	Low 3.56

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

- "One who wishes your Success." Inventory.—The suggestion would be better suited to a scientific journal than to our columns.
- "J. H. G." The late Sir Matthew Wood was created a baronet soon after the Revolution's accession.
- "A Correspondent." The generally received explanation of the Nine of Diamonds being called the "Nine of Scotland," is because the Duke of Devonshire wrote upon the back of the stone card the order to give no quarter at the battle of Lullstun.
- "C. R." Bristol.—The assumption of the name in question will not be more legal than that of any other that the person might choose to take.
- "J. D." Bromley.—The cost of the contract will be regulated by its length. The valuation must be made by a licensed appraiser.
- "H. L. S." Bristol.—Apprentices cannot legally claim any holiday.
- "A Subscriber." Mrs. Rogers has written the following novels:—The Neighbour, the H. Family, Safe and Sound, the Present a Daughter, the Diary, and Minor Tales.
- "G. F. L." Morgate.—The body of a drowned person, not cast ashore, rises as soon as putrefaction commences; but the time varies in different cases; consequently, the "nine days" is a popular error.
- "J. C." Gloucester.—Should write to any dealer in hard wood.
- "A Constant Reader." and Well-wisher.—We have not room.
- "J. S." Coventry.—Consideration.
- "E. W. R." The anecdote is too late.
- "Cromwell." Vol. 1. of St. Pt., and the Large Print, will be published on Jan. 4, 1845.
- "P. H." should write to an army agent.
- "A Constant Reader." Granholm.—The charge is according to Act of Parliament.
- "R. P. R." "Don Cesar" is the joint production of two French dramatists within the present year.
- "E. L. E." Kingland.—The Transactions of the British Association are published annually by Murray, Albemarle-street.
- "J. S. B." Bristol.—Will be liable to surcharge for wearing a coat on a ring without payment of duty.
- "A Constant Reader." Romford.—Has, we think, no legal redress.
- "W. F. E." Both.—Thanks; but we have not room at present.
- "A Constant Reader." "Lewis's English Grammar" is well adapted for beginners.
- "An Attractive Reader." New-trees were planted in churchyards, at least, 600 years since.
- "W. W. L." Islington.—The lowest road repair.
- "R. B." Long Sutton.—We have not room for engravings of old buildings, unless there be some fresh interest attached to them.

- "E. S." Marketsquare.—Should write to the Publishing Office, Wellington-street, North London.
- "W. D. A." will be entitled to the deduction of the wages of persons employed by him.
- "A Lover of News &c." Bishopscleeve.—We will see.
- "A Constant Reader." Bradford.—Kennedy, and Mrs. Houston's works on Texas.
- "P. C." France.—Should order the Print of his London agent.
- "H. R. S." The "Melodist" shall certainly be commenced next week.
- "Zesty" Feeders.—All documents bear the date at which they were stamped.
- "E. M. S." Inevitable.
- "J. B." Northampton.—Four horses.
- "An Old Subscriber." Franny Stratford.—Any bookbinder will bind our volumes, for which purpose he may obtain covers from our office.
- "J. O." Cambridge.—Fay Ashurst is an American.
- "A Constant Reader." Sligo.—Possibly, a scientific journal would furnish the information.
- "Terpsichore." The Polka is still very popular in London.
- "An Old Subscriber" (cheat) suggestion has been attended to.
- "Inchiquin." To the Evening Star, by A. W.
- "A Chelsea Pensioner." Bristol.—Should appeal to the Income Tax Commissioners.
- "R. W. S." Manchester.—The suggestion reached us too late.
- "R. W." Ashford.—The price of the binding covers for our volumes is 3s. The prices of Parts are 2s. 6d. and 3s.
- "W. C." Windsor.—We do not reply to questions concerning wages.
- "An Old Subscriber." The servant is entitled to the half-quarter.
- "A Subscriber." Southampton.—The person has, we fear, no claim.
- "London and Brighton Railway." The series of engravings of this railway, which have been deferred for some time, shall appear in our next.
- "General communications are referred to our Correspondent.
- THE LARGE PRINT.—The following subscribers will be entitled to the Large Print, to be published on Jan. 4, 1845: Homer; J. S. B., Bristol; H. R., Mifflend-road; W. B. D., Danchurch; T. A., Wandsworth; Cumbles; G. T. R., Wolverhampton; J. S., Ferny.

THE BEST ALMANACK FOR 1845.

New publishing, 64 pages, handsome quarto, gilt edges (see Advertisement), with EIGHTY ENGRAVINGS.
Price One Shilling.

ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK

AND PICTURED CALENDAR FOR 1845.

It contains a greater variety of information and seasonable entertainment than is to be found in any other Almanack. The wrapper is beautifully printed in colours; and the artistic execution of the entire Almanack entitles it to a place upon every drawing-room table in the empire.

The Press is unanimous in praise of this beautiful Almanack.

"It is certainly one of the cheapest almanacks worth that we have seen, even in this age of cheap publications. It contains some of the best illustrations, for any common almanack, of astronomical phenomena that have appeared for some years. From past recollections, we are satisfied that a few years ago a similar publication to this would not have been considered its producers, even if sold at twice its price."—Morning Chronicle.

"One of its features is an accurate representation of the principal astronomical phenomena of each month, accompanied with an intelligible description. The pages of the almanack are illustrated with highly fanciful designs of the signs of the zodiac, by Mr. Henry Meadows; these are also some of the spots of each month, birds, and other illustrations. The literary matter is given as good as the pictorial, and the quarto pages on which the Almanack is printed afford more room for explanation than can be obtained in the ordinary form. The almanack for each month of information and amusement is wonderfully cheap."—Morning Post, Nov. 20.

"This is a new annual, the purpose of which is to blend illustrations with the customary information contained in an almanack. Its letter-press contents are as copious and varied as any of its contemporaries, and the illustrations, which are from the rich files of Mr. Henry Meadows's pencil, comprise allegorical compositions applicable to each month, scenes of the sports of the sea, &c. It is, upon the whole, not only a useful, but a most pleasing work."—Morning Advertiser, Nov. 25.

"A cheap yet a most accurate representation of the principal astronomical phenomena and towns, mountains, chronology, and localities. Of the numerous engravings those representing the telescopic appearances of the planets as they will be visible in the ensuing year are the most interesting, and are peculiar to this almanack."—Examiner.

"It is exceedingly well done, and full of information and good words, and adorned with illustrations. The literary matter, as well as the pictorial illustrations, are sufficient to secure for it a very general demand."—Literary Gazette, Nov. 17.

"It contains with calculated interest, the astronomical observations, and recreations incident to each month, embracing as well, upon natural history, and a mass of information as useful as it is entertaining. We repeat that this 'Illustrated Almanack' is a happy idea, heartily executed, and deserving its claims to purchase even by a modern 'Bible' in economy."—The Nov. 24.

"This is one of the many attempts to substitute something national for the foolish almanacks of times that are passing away, and we may add, one of the most successful. It is filled with illustrations, some of which, representing the signs of the zodiac, are executed with considerable artistic taste. As it is chiefly devoted to the natural history of the month, it is just what the readers of the 'Gleaner' Chronicle' are most likely to find useful. It is a handy, as may be anything cheaper."—Gleaner's Chronicle.

"This is, indeed, all that the most extraordinary production of the British press. The illustrations are very beautiful. Henry Meadows's pencil is the evidence of his rich force, and London has done him ample justice in the engraving."—London's Weekly Newspaper.

"For a detailed List of Contents of the Almanack, see the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, November 16.

Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 105, Strand.

Country Booksellers supplied through a London Agent only.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1844.

We last week referred briefly to the general question of the Election of the American President; it has since been decided, for though the formal election does not take place till December, the result of the contest is virtually determined by the majority of the electors returned for the purpose by the States. Mr. Polk has the majority of votes; his return is a triumph for the extreme democratic party—it is a victory of the Slaveholders over the Abolitionists—of the Southern States over the North—of the Repudiators over those who consider debt a moral and legal obligation. There never was such an instance as has been afforded by this election of a man springing at once from the utmost obscurity to the first station of the Government of his country. There seems in his case to have been no intermediate degrees of celebrity; yesterday his name had never been heard of, and today he is President of the Republic of America. Such are the world's slippery turns. Milton gives an example of one who was "by his demerits raised" to the "eminence" of the place he filled; we have no wish to apply the comparison invidiously, but of what may have been, or what are the merits of Mr. Polk, we at least are wholly ignorant. The name of Mr. Clay is known throughout Europe, as that of a man who has gained the reputation of an orator and a statesman, and it was scarcely imagined that one entirely unknown would have beaten him in the contest. We fear that a readiness to support the worst feature of the social and political system of America—slavery—has been no slight recommendation of Mr. Polk, who is also known to be favourable to the annexation of Texas to the United States, by which the South would probably gain an accession of strength. The Pro-Slavery party are, doubtless, at the present moment flushed with their victory; but in the eyes of all right-thinking men they are glorying in their shame. The slave-holding system is fast degrading them; even the papers that brought the intelligence of the contest contained evidence of the demoralization that the system produces. Under the head of "Legal Sales," there appears in the Columbian Times an advertisement of certain property, in which the following may be seen classed together:—

One negro girl, by the name of Jane, eighteen years old, levied on as the property of Adam McCoy, to satisfy one £. 5s. from Talbot Superior Court; Thomas Shannon, vs. Adam McCoy.

Also one Yoke of Oxen, as the property of Asa Daniel, to satisfy one £. 5s. from Harris Superior Court; Chas. A. Ouel, vs. Asa Daniel.

The following is also from the same announcement of property, to be sold "at the same time and place:—

One negro boy, by the name of George, about fourteen years old, and one free Jackson, levied on as the property of Samuel Hury, to satisfy sundry £. 5s. issued from the Justice's Court of the 78th Dist., G. M.; Thomas Culbreath, vs. Samuel Hury.

These are the things, with the much more and much worse that is hidden behind this open violation of the laws of nature, religion, and humanity, that will make the civilized nations of Europe lament the issue of the contest for the Presidency of America. Mr. Clay, in looking back upon his past life, his labours, his fame, and the result of the contest, in which they have been to him as if they had never existed, will probably be painfully reminded of Jago's opinion of the value of reputation—"Tush, man; 'tis but a slight thing—oft got without merit, and lost without deserving." Without merit, as far as we can perceive, Mr. Polk has gained the election; and, without deserving such neglect at the hands of his countrymen, Mr. Clay has lost it.

The Habeas Corpus question between the English Court of Judicature and the Island of Jersey, is assuming greater importance; there is evidently a principle at stake in the matter that must be decided, and the general feeling, as well as the weight of authority, are against the rights assumed by the Royal Court of the Island. It would be vain to quote here the opinions of Hale and Blackstone, and the old commentators on the Laws of England; they may be more fitly urged in the Courts, but reason and common sense alike point out the course that must be pursued, as a contemporary well observes:—

Accept the law as laid down by the above court in Jersey, and any British subject may be kidnapped and carried to Jersey, there to remain a life prisoner, without bail or mainprize, or without relief from his Sovereign, though at Hong Kong or New Zealand such relief would promptly reach him. This is a state of things not to be borne; and which must be corrected even if the correction can be obtained by no other means than by sweeping away all the charters and privileges of the island.

The City has been startled by a robbery on a large scale, a kind of "monster" depredation, planned and executed with an amount of skill truly alarming. It is the last of a series of felonies by which during the space of a year the monied world has been perplexed. The will forgeries of Barber and Fletcher had hardly ceased to be a topic of conversation before the Bank of England were again plundered by a fraud, which was wholly successful here, the amount of the loss only being recovered by the Bank in consequence of the total ignorance under which the delinquents seemed to labour, of there being such an article in the Ashburton treaty between this country and America as that which stipulates for the mutual delivering up of fugitive criminals; and at the very time when the survivor of the two delinquents in the last case is on his way to this country to be tried, a third case occurs, greater in the amount of loss than the two others put together. The age of highwaymen has departed; Captain Macbeath himself could not "stop" a first class train; the attempts of daring villany, then, are not now so much directed against the moving, personal property of society, as against the masses of it that are banked, and they are made either by fraud or force, or, as seems probable in the present instance, with a combination of both. But the skill of those who commit such crimes, now bears no proportion to the facilities which society possesses for their detection; the form into which so much wealth is thrown, that of paper, renders the plunder gained by such a robbery as that at Messrs. Rogers' bank, almost unavailable; but a few hours elapse and every particular is known all over the country; and a few days, at farthest, carries every particular to the capitals of Europe; in either case, the attempts of the thieves to make use of their booty are paralysed; nor does either the Continent or America afford an asylum, as of old, to the fugitive criminal. Detection seems almost certain; we scarcely remember one great forgery, fraud, or robbery, within the last few years, that has not been followed by the prompt punishment of the guilty persons. Beaumont, of Exchequer Bill notoriety, was transported; Barber and Fletcher, though they brought legal skill and dexterity to their aid in planning and carrying out their system of deception and forgery, were convicted and transported also; Burgess and his associate, who obtained eight thousand pounds from the Bank of England, and fled with it, were taken on the other side of the Atlantic: one of them has destroyed himself, and the other is on his road to England, to undergo the trial, and, in all probability, the sentence of a felon. What is the lesson to be derived from all these skillful and daring acts of dishonesty? That not one of them baffled the pursuit of justice, and that those who "made haste to be rich," by plunging into crime, are now poor, miserable, justly despised; and from good, even exalted, positions, have fallen to a state of the most ignominious slavery. And yet, undeterred by these examples, men still engage in the perilous game against society and the laws, in which so many have failed before them!

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

WEDNESDAY, Sunday.—The Queen, Prince Albert, the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, the Duke Ernest of Wurttemberg, all the Court and the domestic household, attended divine service this morning in the private chapel of the Castle. The Hon. and Rev. Charles Leslie Courtney officiated. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent attended the afternoon service in the private chapel.

MONDAY.—Her Majesty, Prince Albert, the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and the Duke Ernest of Wurttemberg, took an early morning promenade in the pleasure grounds. Her Majesty and Prince Albert walked out in the afternoon.

WEDNESDAY.—The Queen, Prince Albert, and the Duke Ernest of Wurttemberg, took an early walk this morning. On the return of the Royal party the Prince went out shooting in the Royal preserves, accompanied by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and Wurttemberg, the Earl of Liverpool, and the Right Hon. Sir Robert Peel, and attended by Baron de Alvensleben and Colonel Wyld. Her Majesty and Prince Albert took an afternoon walk.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge left for Kew in the morning.—Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent visited the Queen and Prince Albert in the afternoon.—The Duke of Wellington accompanied the Marchioness of Down in an early walk in the pleasure grounds of the Castle.

THURSDAY EVENING.—(From our own Correspondent.)—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the reigning Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, promenade this morning in the private grounds; visiting the Queen's kennel in the Home-park, and the Royal apople, before returning to the Castle. Their Royal Highnesses the Princess Royal and the Princess Alice rode out in the plantations in the Home-park on their shireland ponies.—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was also taken out for an airing. The Prince Consort, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and the Duke Ernest of Wurttemberg, attended by several gentlemen of their respective suites, hunted this morning, with the Prince's harriers, in the neighbourhood of Salt-hill and Farnham, returning to the Castle in luncheon. Her Majesty held a Privy Council this afternoon, at three o'clock, which was attended by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, nearly the whole of the Cabinet Ministers, and the Great Officers of State. Mr. Grey was the Clerk of the Council in attendance. At the Council Parliament was ordered to be prorogued from the 12th proximo to Tuesday, the 4th of February; then to meet for the dispatch of business. A grand banquet was given by Her Majesty this evening; covers were laid for nearly forty Royal and distinguished guests. The band of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue) performed during the banquet, and the Queen's private band was in attendance during the remainder of the evening. It is rumoured that Her Majesty and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg, and the Duke Ernest of Württemberg, will leave the Castle at the close of the evening month, for a short sojourn at the Pavilion, at Brighton. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent has presented the sum of £250 towards the purchase of a new organ for the parish church of New Windsor.

Lady Charlotte Gifford died last week at Windsorhampton at the age of 81. On Saturday last the Queen, accompanied by her Royal Highness the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, took a carriage drive, attended by the Marchioness of Dorn, Madame la Comtesse de Wagram, and the Hon. Mrs. Hamilton, Colonel Ashurst, Esq., in waiting, attended on horseback.

Their Royal Highnesses the Princess Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha and the Duke Ernest of Württemberg, according to present expectations at Windsor Castle, are likely to prolong their visit to her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert until the 10th of next month.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, attended by Baron Kneisebeck, arrived at his residence at New on Monday evening, from a visit to Colonel Wyndham, at Petworth House, Sussex.

MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.—The marriage of the Rev. Algernon Wodehouse, son of the Hon. and Rev. Wm. Wodehouse and nephew of Lord Wodehouse, and Lady Eleanor Isabel Ashburnham, was solemnized on Tuesday last at St. Peter's Church, Finsbury, the Bishop of Carlisle officiating at the nuptial ceremony.—The contemplated alliance between a noble and a reverend holding a valuable benefice in Berkshire, and the youthful and lovely bride daughter of a Scottish marquis, will, it is expected, be solemnized early next month.

PRINCE ALBERT.—The birth of his Royal Highness Prince Albert was registered at Windsor Castle on Monday. The Castle and its precincts being exceptionally, it was necessary to register the birth of the infant Prince in the books of the parish contiguous to where the auspicious event took place; but, in consequence of upwards of six weeks having elapsed since that period, a fee of 7s. 6d. was necessarily incurred. The Prince was registered in the name of Alfred Ernest Albert. His Royal Highness Prince Albert was present.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.—On Sunday, her Majesty and her Son-in-Law, Prince Ernest of Hesse Palatinate attended Divine service at White Church. We are glad to announce the convalescence of Lady Emma Campbell, who has been indisposed for some weeks past. The Duchess of Argyll, who has also been suffering from a quincy in the throat, is fast recovering her usual state of health. The Marquis and Marchioness of Lorn are expected at Inverary early in the ensuing month, to pass the Christmas with their noble parents.

The Earl of Limerick, we regret to state, is seriously indisposed, at South-Hill Park.

Lord Wharmby (Lord President) entertained the Duke of Rutland, the Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Chetwynd Talbot, and a family circle, at dinner, on Tuesday evening, at Wharmby House, Carnarvon-street.

The Earl of Cardigan has arrived in Portman-square, from Dundalk, where his lordship's regiment is stationed. The noble earl is about to leave for Deane Park, Northamptonshire.

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE HEREDITARY GRAND DUCHESS OF MECKLENBURG-STRELTZE.—We are happy to state that her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz is in that interesting situation which promises an early period to add to the domestic happiness of her illustrious family.

Lord Nugent was thrown from his horse at Twickenham a few days ago, and fractured three of his ribs, but we are happy to hear that the noble lord is rapidly recovering, and it is expected that he will suffer no ultimate inconvenience from the effects of his accident.

DEATH OF MRS. BLOWFIELD, THE MOTHER OF THE BISHOP OF LONDON.—We regret to state that Mrs. Blowfield, the mother of the Bishop of London, died suddenly, at Bath St. Edmunds, on Tuesday. Mrs. Blowfield had been in her accustomed health during the day—indeed had been walking in the town. In the afternoon she complained of unusual symptoms; these, increasing, ended fatally at about eight p.m. The Right Rev. Bishop of London was expected in his native town to officiate at the re-opening of St. Mary's Church. Strange and melancholy to say, his arrival took place at the moment of dissolution. Mrs. Blowfield was, we believe, in her 60th year.

PRESENT TO HER MAJESTY.—Some ladies at Fonthill, Wilts., are engaged in the manufacture of two beautiful pieces of cushion lace, which they intend forwarding as a present to her Majesty. The first piece is 24 yards in length, and 4 inches wide. It is ornamented throughout with emblems of royalty. The bottom edge represents shell work interwoven with vine leaves and grapes. The work is without join or laying on, and is composed of thread of fine gold twist of delicate texture. In the centre are introduced the profile of the Queen and the crests of the different branches of the Royal Family. At intervals the crown of England, the rose, thistle, and shamrock, the Bible and sceptre, are ingeniously portrayed. The second piece of lace is of similar construction; it is a yard square, and is ornamented with devices in thread and gold. The ladies have been engaged nearly two years in the work.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

WESTMINSTER AND PEBLICO.—A new street, 80 feet wide, is about being formed, connecting Westminster Abbey with Pablics.

CABINET COUNCIL.—A Cabinet Council was held on Monday afternoon, at the Foreign Office. It was attended by all the Ministers, and sat three hours.

OPENING OF THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.—It is now stated, in opposition to the former report, that so great has lately been the progress of the works at the Royal Exchange, that it will be thrown open to the merchants for business purposes in the course of a week or ten days.

DEATH OF SIR A. W. CALLENDER, R.A.—This accomplished artist died at his residence at Kensington Gravel-pits, on Monday, in his 65th year. He married, in 1824, the daughter of Rear-Admiral G. Daines, and sister of Captain Thomas Graham, R.N.

LONDON AND BIRMINGHAM RAILWAY.—On Wednesday a special general meeting of the proprietors of this company was held at the Eastern-square terminus, when resolutions were agreed to for forming a railway from Maxxwell, Bucks., to Worcester, with lines to Rugby and Oxford, and also from Worcester to Dudley and Wolverhampton, at a rent which should be equivalent to four per cent. upon the cost of construction, with an equal division of surplus profits between the company and the shareholders in the new line.

MEETING OF PARLIAMENT.—At a Privy Council held at Windsor on Thursday, a proclamation was agreed upon for proroguing Parliament from Thursday, the 12th of December, to Tuesday, the 4th of February, then to meet for the dispatch of business.

SWITZERLAND CLUB CATERING SHOW.—Wednesday was the last day on which entries were made for the forthcoming show at Baker-street, and three, particularly for impurities, were more numerous than on any previous occasion. Amongst the names of entries for stock, was that of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, who last year exhibited some pigs which were commended by the judges, but who this year has entered into competition in the canine class.

THE NEW POLICE COURTS.—The business of Union Hall Police Court will commence at Nine o'clock on Monday, the 23rd of December next. The new court at Kensington for Lambeth, Clapham, and the south-western districts, will not be completed before Lady-day; but the Commissioners of the Police have taken possession of the premises in the Kensington-road, and the lower apartments are now being temporarily fitted up for public business on the above day, when the magistrates from Lambeth-street will be removed to that Court.

NATIONAL BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.—On Thursday the annual meeting of this institution, was held in the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street. James Emerson Tennent, Esq., M.P., occupied the chair, supported by Henry Foxwell, Esq., Peter Leveson, Esq., John Myles, Esq., D. Henry Wilson, Esq., Robert Ingram, Esq., Richard Grellier, Esq., the Rev. Dr. Knapp, John Fisk Powell, Esq., &c. The Report, which was read by Mr. T. J. Davis, the secretary, stated that the number of applicants at present receiving relief was 213, namely, 17 males and 206 females, the average age being upwards of 72. The total amount disbursed in pensions since the foundation of the society was £59,663 14s. 3d. Resolutions were passed, adopting the report, and conveying thanks to the Queen and Royal Family for their support of the institution—to the committee, and the honourable chairman. The ballot then commenced for 25 Annuitants.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

A letter from Munich, of the 15th, says: "A dreadful crime was committed here yesterday. While Captain N— was attending his duties at the Ministry of War, his wife, only twenty years of age, and the female servant of the house in which she resided, were murdered. A razor, with which the crime was perpetrated, was found near them, and all the closets and drawers had been plundered of their most valued contents. The man servant of Capt. N—, who is suspected of being the murderer, has fled."

The celebrated Heracles has just been seized with a violent congestion of blood, but the apprehensions felt for the result have diminished, and there is a promise that his health will be restored.

A letter from Berlin says that Tschack who attempted to assassinate the King of Prussia, has been condemned to the second instance to be executed.

The railway between Berchtesgaden and Donauworth (Bavaria) was opened to the trade on the 26th of November. It has a length of more than ten leagues.

It is said that the Emperor of Russia has issued an order by which all natives of Poland are prohibited from marrying till they have completed their thirtieth year.

The Agincourt, with Barber and Fletcher on board, was at Simon's Bay, Cape of Good Hope, on the 18th of September. There had been no deaths on board except a fever and child.

Mrs. Herald's states that Sir James Graham has been in communication with the authorities of the Isle of Man, and has declared, "in the most unqualified and unreserved terms," that if the people desire popular representation in the House of Representatives, he will be prepared to concede the boon to the fullest extent.

Two individuals have been sentenced to death at the Brahmist assembly for murder. It is reported that they belonged to an association of young men, formed in the village of Bael, near Agra, for the singular purpose of fomenting quarrels with the young men of the neighbouring hamlets. The association had organized a body of pariahs, whose sole business it was to act as witnesses whenever any of the members got into trouble, and who, of course, swore there the same upon their opponents. The execution is appointed to take place in the village of Bael.

The Italian Opera of Lisbon has been suddenly brought to a close by the bankruptcy and flight of the "Impressario," the unfortunate performer being left minus their salaries.

The Queen of Spain has presented Liset with a splendid gray at pin, surrounded by brilliant, and conferred on him the title of Knight of the Order of Charles the Third.

The Constantinople letters of the 6th instant, announce the birth of a Prince, who has received the name of Mehmed Reith. This is the sixth child of the Sultan; two died, and he has still three sons and four daughters. The letters also allude to a change in the Turkish Ministry. It is said that Rida Pacha (the Minister of Foreign Affairs) has been replaced by Cakib Kanli.

Francis Quenisset, the bravo, who, as our readers will recollect, attempted to assassinate King Louis Philippe, was arrested on the 22nd ult., in New Orleans, for a similar attempt on a citizen of that city.

The Prussian papers state, that it is in contemplation by the Government to oblige the editors of newspapers to give up the names of their correspondents. [This would be a worse species of despotism than that of the censorship.]

The engineer in chief of the department of the Jura has received orders to prepare the necessary plans for making a tunnel through the mountain of the Faucille, in order to place Paris and Geneva in a more direct line of communication.

The opening of the Warwick and Leamington branch of the London and Birmingham Railway is postponed to the 9th of December.

A letter from Lyons states that the Saône has overflowed its banks along its whole course. The Meuse also had overflowed its banks, and caused great injury to the surrounding country.

The Journal des Chemins de Fer states that all the preparatory arrangements have been made for the prompt execution of the line from Amiens to Boulogne.

Letters from Trebizonde describe a very curious occurrence which took place there last month. A Muselman Cadi having been murdered while on a journey, the assassins were seized by the Pasha, and, instead of being punished according to the usual forms of justice, were delivered to the kindred of the murdered man, by one of whom their throats were deliberately cut in the market place.

Dr. Wolff is still at Meshed, from which place he was unwilling to proceed till he had received an escort from Colonel Shiel at Teheran. It is singular that, after crossing the desert of Meru and escaping from the Turcoman borders, he should shrink from encountering dangers and difficulties comparatively trifling.

The Governor and Deputy-Governor of the Irish Society entertained Sir Henry Pottinger, on Tuesday evening, at the Albion. About 50 gentlemen sat down at table. Mr. Alderman Humphrey (the Governor) presided.

The Queen of Spain has just conferred the Order of the Golden Fleece upon the Duke of Calabria, Prince Royal of Naples.

We see by the Berlin journals that associations are forming in that capital, and in other parts of Prussia, for the protection and encouragement of the operative classes. This is done with the approbation and patronage of the Government.

An attack was made in the early part of this month in the desert between Suez and Cairo on a young man in the service of the Transit Company. He was proceeding quietly along, when he was suddenly stopped by a number of Bedouins, who pulled him off his horse, stripped him of every particle of clothing, and after tying his hands behind him, left him to find his way to one of the station-houses, which he fortunately did, as he knew the road well.

Richard Dadd, who it will be recollected murdered his father in Kent, and escaped to France, but was brought back to this country, is to be confined in a lunatic asylum for life, by order of the Secretary of State.

According to accounts from Batavia to the 26th of July, a fire broke out at Soer, on the 6th of that month, which destroyed the dwelling and out-buildings of M. Von Vast, junr., contractor with the Government for the preparation of coffee. The mills, the warehouses, and the contents happily escaped. There was also a fire in the Capital of Sorocaima in the night of the 16th of July, which reduced to ashes a hundred native bamboo buildings, and, extending to the Chinese camp, destroyed thirty-two stone houses. The damage is estimated at 70,000 dollars.

FATAL AND MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT ON THE MIDLAND COUNTIES RAILWAY.

The subjoined account of the melancholy accident on the Midland Counties Railway, appeared in our late impression last week. We now add a report of the inquest on the sufferers—

We regret to announce that a very serious accident took place on Thursday on the Midland Counties Railway, at Repton, near Nottingham. In consequence of the fog, the down-train from Nottingham came into contact with a train coming to that town.

In consequence of the down-train being driven at so much more rapid a pace than the train from Nottingham, and being a much heavier train, and having a powerful and very heavy engine, the up-train from Nottingham sustained the principal part of the damage. So great was the force with which the down train met the up-train, that the engine of the latter was actually driven from its position downwards, and the boiler was elevated to the height of many feet above it, the tender of the engine was driven through the parcels-carriage, and the two passenger second-class carriages were as completely smashed to pieces as a nutshell when trodden under foot. The unfortunate passengers in these two carriages were dreadfully crushed and mutilated.

We subjoin as complete a list of the passengers and the nature and extent of the injuries they sustained, as we have been able to procure.

LIST OF KILLED AND WOUNDED.
Mr. Dean, Houddle Gate, dead.
Mr. John Nerp, of middle age, of Retford, lies at the General Hospital, but hopes are entertained of his recovery. The extent of injury cannot at present be ascertained, and, besides being badly bruised, it is feared some of his ribs are broken.

George Hurley, about 35 years of age, stoker, seriously scalded and burnt—the fire and boiling water having fallen upon him from the engine, when forced upwards by the collision. We understand he was on the engine coming from Derby.

Mr. J. Bowlesbridge, landlord of the Three Horse Shoes, Derby Road, and Miss Ann Gorton, of Stoke Cliff, Staffordshire, were conveyed to the Three Horse Shoes, Derby Road. They were much bruised.

Mr. Gremton, Barton-on-Trent, severely crushed.
Mr. Bradley, Southwell, farmer, leg broken.

Mr. Varnalla, formerly butler at Colwick Hall (dead). The distressing news of his death was instantly despatched to Mrs. V., who is housekeeper at Mr. Stratt's, Derby.

Mr. Arnold, medical instrument-maker, seriously hurt.
Mr. Garrett, surgeon, of London, extremely injured.

Robert Thornhill, lace-manufacturer, slightly crushed.
David Fox, employed at Mr. Gull's silk-mill, arm broken.

Misses Ann and Maria Lewis, of Bunting (seriously hurt), owing to the violence of the concussion, were thrown out of the carriage, and, their dresses becoming entangled, they were nearly stripped. One of them had actually the sole of her shoe torn off.

Mr. Robinson, traveller (very much bruised).
Mr. Thistlewood, of Lincoln (ditto).
Mr. Nixon, Houddle Gate (ditto, and tooth broken out).

Mr. George Baker, Woolpack-lane (slightly bruised).
Mr. John Willey, Pelham-street (bruised).
Mr. Tutin, senior, butcher, Nottingham (bruised).

Miss Surplice, of Repton, escaped injury by leaving out of the carriage. A subsequent letter from Nottingham says, that a gentleman of Lenton had expired since the accident, though injuries sustained, and the stoker is not likely to recover. Another person is also said to have died.

THE INQUEST ON MR. VARNALL.
On Friday morning, Mr. Dean, the coroner, held an inquest upon the body of Mr. W. Varnalla, formerly a gentleman's butler, at the Wheat Sheaf Inn, in Lenton.

After viewing the body, which was found to be in a very livid and bloody state, blood having been flowing from the nostrils profusely, and the right leg smashed, the Jury took their seat, and the coroner proceeded to examine the witnesses.

Thomas Cooper, lace-maker, said—"I was at Repton station, intending to return to Nottingham by train. The train was delayed from some cause, and when it came it was on the wrong line—the down line. Mr. Lightfoot was upon the tender; the engine whistled much. As the train was going past the station, some one shouted out to a boy, Tom, to turn the train on to the other line, by moving the points; he did so, and Mr. Lightfoot got off; he (Mr. Lightfoot) came back to the Repton station. After a short delay, Lightfoot commanded the tender. He told the engine-driver to go at slow speed; the train started. I did not remove after the train started, until I heard the crash; it was a loud crash and took place in about two minutes after the starting of the train. When I got to the place, I saw two trains crashed into one another, both on the same line; I saw Mr. Dean, and assisted to remove him into a cart. Some of the passengers were lying on the ground, apparently hurt. All were got out of the carriages." By the Foreman—"No one said anything to witness about the propriety of starting the down train."

Some other witnesses were examined, and the inquiry was adjourned.

The inquest proceeded for several days. The evidence was so precisely of the same character as that at the other inquest, given before, that it is unnecessary to repeat it. The inquiry was continued to a late hour on Tuesday, and was adjourned to Wednesday morning, when the coroner and jury re-assembled.

Among the witnesses examined on that day were Kearsley and Markland, the engine-drivers; Joseph Mowett, of Derby, an engineer; and John Boulton, of Long Eaton, proprietor of the contractor of the permanent way, &c. There was nothing new in the evidence. Mr. Cairns, of Nottingham, surgeon, who had made a post mortem examination of the body of Varnalla, stated the nature of the injuries received by the deceased. The principal seat of injury was in the right leg; the intertarsals of which were lacerated from just below the knee to the ankle; the thigh bone was likewise fractured. Death resulted from the shock which his nervous system had received. Witness did not think that the circumstance of his having been refused admission into Mr. Godfrey's house made any difference, as he had lost too much blood ere he reached Lenton to leave any chance of recovery.

The inquest was resumed on Wednesday afternoon, and several witnesses were examined. Mr. Lightfoot was one of them, but his evidence was similar to that already given. Some rather serious personal alterations took place in the course of the inquiry, which was ultimately adjourned to Monday next.

INQUEST UPON THE BODY OF MR. DEAN.
On Friday evening Mr. J. Bowlesbridge, coroner for the town, held an inquest at the General Hospital upon the other sufferer, Mr. J. Dean, of Houddle Gate, Nottingham. The evidence given was very similar to that adduced in the case of Mr. Varnalla. An adjournment took place till Monday. On that day it was resumed, and was again adjourned.

The following evidence, given by Robert Lightfoot, the station-master of Nottingham, comprises the most essential portions of the proceedings on Tuesday. Mr. Lightfoot stated that he had suffered greatly in mind since the accident, not having had more than a single hour's sleep at one time from the period of the unfortunate occurrence to the present, and he should, therefore, read to the jury a statement of all the circumstances with which he was acquainted in connection with it. He then read as follows:—"I am manager and station-master at the Nottingham railway station. I went into the yard at about a quarter to two o'clock on Thursday last, when I met a man, who said to me that an engine was off the line. I immediately went up, and saw John Kearsley, the engine driver, and several men, trying to disengage the engine from the tender, the tender being off the line. Kearsley informed me then that he had sent Howitt up to Repton station, to stop any train that might be coming down the line, until the quarter past two train had passed, as he intended to send the quarter past two London train up the down line. My reply was, there was great danger, from the fog. His answer then was, there was plenty of time before any train was due, meaning the down train; and that he would give instructions to Jerry to blow his whistle, and go with caution until he got up the line, meaning charging to the other side, at Repton. At this time Mr. Youle, the Nottingham director, was passing through Willard-gate, on horseback. I went to him, to explain the situation of the engine and tender, stating that Kearsley intended sending up the down line the two hours fifteen minutes London train. I asked Mr. Youle if I should go on the engine to see if the driver was careful in going, and blowing his whistle all the way to Repton, as there might be men working on the down line, or persons crossing at the time. He said, "By all means do so," or words to that effect. I then went to the men who were working at the engine. Up to this time the engine attached to the tender was the great obstacle which caused delay. After the engine was disengaged, I said to the men, "All will be right now very soon, and the engine clear." One of the men said, "Yes, in a short time." I then got on the engine of the London train, that had started from the station, fully convinced in my own mind that the line would be quite clear before the ten minutes before three train would start, and never for a moment supposing the least possibility of a second train being sent off on the wrong line, without some previous intimation, or I should never have put myself in such a dangerous situation. We proceeded with the up-train with great caution, whistling every thirty or forty yards, until we came in sight of Repton station, passing Howitt about two hundred yards on this side of the station. Jerry, the driver, stopped the train on the departure line. I got on, and the train went forward. I crossed the line to the station house, to explain to Mr. Raven, the station-master, the cause of my coming up on the wrong line, and I said that the two hours and fifty minutes, or next train, would come up the right line. Immediately after, Howitt came up, preparing very much and quite exhausted. He asked me for food, to eat and get some spirits; I think he said, "I referred him to Raven, and he (Howitt) borrowed something from him and went to the Victoria Inn. Howitt arrived back at the station before the arrival of the train from Derby. Immediately on the arrival of that train I went to the engine-driver to inform him what had occurred at the Nottingham station, stating the cause. I had used in coming up, and the same caution he was to observe in going down. We proceeded slowly on, whistling as we went. I was watching the line to see that no person or anything was on the line, when I called out, "Good God! there is a train coming, and on our line." The engine man did something to his engine and jumped off. I followed, but, catching my foot, I tumbled over, making a complete somersault, and lay for a short time senseless. As soon as I recovered I sent the guard to the Repton station to stop the London down-train.

In answer to questions from the jury, Mr. Lightfoot said he was convinced at the time, from his experience, that the tender would be off the line in time for the second train. Witness would not, of course, have proceeded back to Nottingham with the down train which came in collision, if he supposed that there was any possibility of a second train coming up on the wrong line, for he is the master of the train, and he could refuse to go. The engineers must obey the orders of the guard, so that if the engineers went on the wrong line the responsibility of doing so would be on the guard.

In the course of the proceedings, a Juror asked, is there any understanding as to which train, the up or down train, must be kept back in case of accident interfering with the rail? Witness—I am not aware of any such understanding.

Coroner—We have it in evidence that there are two sets of rails which do not correspond with each other; that one set (the old set) was in operation with some of the men till the day after the accident, and that the other (the new) was not in operation with the others on the 9th of November. I wish you to explain this.

Mr. Youle—It is the duty of Mr. Knitley to see that the engineers have proper copies of the rails.

Coroner—Do you know how it is that the whole of the drivers have not been provided with regulations of the same description? Mr. Youle—I do not.

Coroner—The regulations affecting changing the rails differ materially in the two sets of regulations, and yet some of the servants had one set of regulations, and others another set.

Mr. Youle—Mr. Knitley, the principal engineer, I understand, arranges that.

The Coroner—I should wish very much to have it explained.

A Railway Director—It shall be explained.

A Juror—Naikland (the driver of the engine which was on the wrong line) did not get the new regulations till Friday morning after the accident, so that you went to the insurance office after the fire.

The inquest on the body of Mr. Dean was continued to a late hour on Tuesday night, and then adjourned to Friday morning.

The witnesses examined were:—Mr. John Chastellaine, of Pinxton, Derbyshire, miller, one of the passengers; Joseph England, of Alfreton, saddler, another passenger; John Fisher, the engine-driver, who directed the train from Derby which came in contact with the one from Nottingham; John Kearsley, another engine-driver, who spoke to the circumstances attending the getting off of the train at the Nottingham station; Mark Markland, the engine-driver of the train from Nottingham which ran into that from Derby. This person did not guide the train on Thursday afternoon, though he was with it.

All these persons spoke to circumstances which had been previously elucidated, the tendency of their evidence being to attach neglect on the part of the company's servants.

Mr. Hutchinson, one of the managing directors, was also examined. Nothing very material was elicited from his evidence. A great portion of the day was taken up in discussing objections raised by Mr. Campbell, solicitor for Mr. Lightfoot, and this gave rise to a good deal of recrimination on both sides.

POSTSCRIPT.

A Cabinet Council was held at two o'clock yesterday afternoon at the Foreign Office. Sir Robert Peel came to town from Windsor Castle to attend the meeting; most of the other ministers were also present.

DEATH OF LADY EMILY BRYCE.—We have to announce the demise of the above lady, widow of the gallant Admiral Bryce, who expired on Monday last at her residence at Cheltenham.

We hear that the quarter's revenue, as far as it has gone, presents an improved aspect; this is the case, we learn, both in the Customs department and the Post-office. The Tariff is also said to be working well with France and the Netherlands. According to report, if the revenue comes up, as is expected, to the end of the quarter, Sir Robert Peel will reduce the Income-tax to 3½d. in the pound.

Fourteen persons were, yesterday, examined at Marlborough-street, charged with having been found in a common gambling house. The defendants had been apprehended that morning, at No. 54, St. James's-street. There were billiard tables in the room, but no complaints of gambling, and Mr. Handwicks being of opinion that the evidence was insufficient to convict the defendants of the offence charged, dismissed them.

A true bill has been found by the Middlesex Grand Jury against Mrs. Jane Twylyth, for the late robbery at the Soko Bazaar. The trial has been postponed on the application of the accused.

At the Central Criminal Court yesterday, Alfred Edwards was tried for the murder of Jane Gregory, an unfortunate girl, by administering poison to her. The occurrence took place at Bethnal-green, in September last, and we gave the particulars at the time. On the evidence of the medical witnesses, the Judge stopped the case, and the jury acquitted the prisoner.

THE LATE BANK ROBBERY.—We are requested by Messrs. Rogers, Olding, and Co., to inform the public that all the boxes and property of their friends remained undisturbed, and that the robbery affected their own property only.

A man named Brown, a seaman on board the Sir Charles Napier, of 8th Stephen's, has been examined at Liverpool on a charge of stabbing Captain Reed, the commander of that vessel, on the 26th instant, in long 25, west. The captain is in a very dangerous condition. The prisoner committed the act in consequence of being rebuked by the captain for being tardy in his movements.

GRIBNA.—A letter from Athens, dated Nov. 10, gives the unexpected intelligence of the dismissal of Mr. Richard Church, without the slightest notice, from his situation of Inspector-General of the Greek Army, and the appointment of Grivas in his place.

UNITED STATES.—ARRIVAL OF THE HIERONIA.—The Hieronia has arrived at Liverpool, with New York papers, a week later than those brought by the Great Western. The intelligence in these papers confirms the success of Mr. Polk, and the triumph of the Democratic party. This subject, of course, entirely engrosses the attention of the American editors. Mr. Polk is treated by all parties as if duly elected to the Presidency. The Canadian papers record the success of the Conservative party at the elections. The papers contain later news from Peru, in letters from Lima, which bring accounts of the total defeat of General Viceroy by General Castilla, near Arequipa. The former had arrived at Lima with the greater part of his officers, as fugitives, and has been elected to the Government, which has declared in favour of the constitution of 1824, and the legal authorities instituted by the same. The American commercial intelligence is of no moment. Nearly all the state stocks had fallen in price. The cotton market was also very dull.

FINE ARTS.

THE "MIGNON" OF SCHEFFER.

Our limited space hardly allows us to give any particular account of the subject of Scheffer's two exquisite pictures. Such of our readers as are at all acquainted with German literature, cannot but have admired that most delicate and beautifully mysterious creation of the greatest of German poets, and, perhaps, the greatest artist among authors—Goethe. For those to whom the German is altogether unknown, we would say that Mignon is one of the chief characters in Goethe's novel of "Wilhelm Meister." Wilhelm first sees her in company with certain rope-dancers and jugglers, a dark-haired, strange-looking child, the slave of those people and a part of their show. He rescues her from the brutality of one of the posture-men, and takes charge of her. The child had been stolen from her friends in Italy, the place of her birth. In the depth of her loneliness and despair during her wandering life, she had sworn to herself never to say who or what she was. She attaches herself to Wilhelm, and as she grows to womanhood, becomes—scarcely knowing it, and he utterly ignorant of it—ardently in love with him. She wanders some while with him, for he protects her as a father, but is ultimately separated from him, and dies broken-hearted. It would require a long article to give anything like an analysis of the subtly-drawn and mysterious character of Mignon, to present our readers with even a faint idea of the intense feeling and passion, the melancholy, the indefinite longing and aspiration, which consume her half-developed, her fragile, and delicate organization.

Scheffer has taken this exquisite creation of the poet as the subject of two paintings, that are perfect gems of art; they are remarkable for the degree to which they unite the qualities of simplicity and feeling. He has not chosen, as a less thoughtful artist would have done, those passages of the novel in which Mignon is presented surrounded by accessories that seem to invite the painter or illustrator; he has not placed her amid the thoughtless and admiring crowd, in the gay costume of the dancing girl: "A short silk waistcoat, with slashed Spanish sleeves, tight trousers, with puffs, looked very pretty on the child: its long black hair was curled, and wound in locks and plaits about its head." Wilhelm looked at the figure with astonishment, and could not determine whether to take it for a girl or boy. However, he decided for the latter. "He reckoned her about twelve or thirteen years of age; her body was well formed, only her limbs gave promise of a stronger growth, or announced a stunted one. Her countenance was not regular, but striking; her brow full of mystery; her nose extremely beautiful. Her mouth had an air of frankness that was very lovely." This is not the Mignon that Scheffer has painted; he has taken her at a more advanced period of the tale, when she has become the passionate girl, nourishing a secret and a hopeless love, and haunted with dim memories of her mysterious birth, and of her distant home; at times, as in a day dream, she recalls the scenes among which she must have passed her infancy, and sighs for the "distant land" she so beautifully describes in her song; this is the Mignon that "Scheffer" has given us; we subjoin the song itself, for it is a fitting accompaniment to the picture:—

MIGNON REGRETTING HER COUNTRY.

Know'st thou the land where citrons bloom, and where
The golden orange breathes its fragrant air?
Where winds are ever soft, and blue the skies,
Where myrtles spring, and groves of laurel rise?
Know'st thou that land, my love? Away, away,
Oh! might I with thee mid its beauty stray!

Know'st thou that mansion's roof—its lofty walls,
Its stately chambers and its sculptured halls,
Whose still cold statues seem to ask of me,
What, child of sorrow, have men done to thee?
Know'st thou that mansion, dearest? Come! O come!
With thee, my guardian, I would o'er it roam!

Know'st thou the mountain rising to the cloud,
That hides the mole-track in its misty shroud?
Where caverns hold the dragon's scaly brood,
Where rocks roll down beneath the torrent's flood?
Know'st thou that well? That region dost thou know?
My father, come! Oh! thither let us go!

The companion picture, "Mignon aspiring to Heaven," represents her as she is described towards the close of the tale; every hope is gone, and she is longing for the hour that shall bring with it the peace of the grave. Her thoughts are here, too, thrown into the form of poetry, and she is introduced singing, as before, a song, which has been re-printed in the collected poems of Goethe, under the title of "Mädchensehnsucht nach dem Tode"—the "Maiden's desire for death"—though it is better described by the title of the painting, "Mignon aspiring to Heaven." To explain it will be necessary to say that she has been robed in white to represent an angel, on a birth-day fête of two children, when she was to distribute to the party the basket of little presents that are given on such occasions, and she is unwilling to quit the character she has assumed. Through the greater part of the story, too, she wears the dress of a boy, in which Wilhelm finds her; she will take no other.

* Translated by Lewis Filmore.

MIGNON REGRETTING HER COUNTRY.

THE THEATRES.

With the exception of Balfe's new opera, at Drury Lane, there has been little novelty during the past week at the theatres.

The HAYMARKET still remains as per last; and appears from the good houses to be drawing money, a light farce or two being sufficient to back it up.

At the PRINCESS', Douglas Jerrold's drama of the "Rent Day" has been revived, with Messrs. Wallack and Walter Lacy in their original characters. It has lost none of its attractions, but was greeted, on Wednesday evening, with the same attention and applause which distinguished its former representation, and forms an excellent piece for the off-nights, when the "Castle of Aymon" is not played.

The ADOLPHI has also fallen back upon revivals, and the "Wreck Ashore" has formed one of them, in which Mrs. Yates played Alice with the same deep pathos and power as of old—Mr. O. Smith and Mrs. Fitzwilliam resuming their original parts of Grampus and Bella. "Cupid" was the other reproduction, and may, with great advantage, go back again to the dusty shelf from which it was routed out. Notions of fun have gone into different lines since John Reeve played in this burlesque; and nothing could well be more flat than its reception on Monday. Not the least pleasing theatrical remark of the week is, that the different "Caesar de Bazans" are gradually being heard of no more. The Princess' was certainly the best—to our thinking the only, version; and we question if any of the others were of much benefit to the managements under which they were produced.

The LYCEUM has brought out a new drama, by Mr. Fitzball, but too late for us to notice it this week: and Mr. ABeckett's drolleries in the "Knight and the Sprite," are nightly rewarded with laughing audiences at the STRAND.

The OLYMPIC, so pompously opened as the "home for the legitimate drama," appears to have proved rather an uncomfortable abode: as the legitimate has already begun to alternate with the "terrible"—"The Six Degrees of Crime" being played three nights a week, as a first piece. It is very nicely put upon the stage, and respectfully acted; and will, possibly, prove of greater service to the treasury, than the charitable intentions towards the drama would ever have done.

And lastly, but far from being the least, SADLER'S WELLS is yet flourishing: "The Lady of Lyons" having been admirably performed every night during the week to excellent genuine houses.

DRURY-LANE.

Of a verity, Mr. Balfe is a most industrious man; he writes operas at railway speed; for Italy, Germany, France, or England, no matter where—it is all the same to him; he will undertake to compose half a dozen partitions in the year, and all of them, as Fame and Time have hitherto proved, possessing merit of the highest order. Now, people who are non-musicians cannot form an adequate notion of the enormous quantity of penmanship, not to say anything of the creative genius, or fluent fancy, which all this requires. Balfe's scores are generally very full—he writes on folio music-paper, specially ruled for him, of which he consumes sometimes upwards of a thousand pages in the notation of one opera. This must certainly keep his pen and ink in almost perpetual requisition. He composes on the Italian plan, that is, he never stops to make comparisons of thoughts—he puts down every suggestion as it comes, and hence it is not to be wondered at that sometimes he is mediocre, or deficient in originality.

On Wednesday last he produced a new opera at this house, entitled "The Daughter of St. Mark." The libretto (by Mr. Bunn) is founded upon a passage in the annals of Venice, but embroidered, or rather distorted sufficiently to render it fit for the stage. The cast was as follows:—Luigiamano, Burchiori; Andrea, Borroni; Moncenigo, Weiss; Adolphe, Harrison; Caterina, Miss Rainforth. In the first act Caterina is about to be married to Adolphe de Courcy, when the nuptials are interrupted by one of the "Ten", who tells her uncle that, instead of the French Knight, she must wed the King of Cyprus. The nuptials are accordingly broken off, and a noisy finale proclaims the discontent of all parties. We cannot complain of too much incident so far. The second act presents an attempt on the part of Adolphe to induce Caterina to elope, who considerably declines the temptation, by informing him that were she to attempt it, his life would be the forfeit, as she knew, from the best authority, that there were bravi concealed "behind the arras," who would rush forth, and assassinate him. Adolphe seems to say he could brave a hundred arms for her sake, but the lady is inexorable, and the French Count departs, taxing her inconstancy in no very measured terms. In the next scene we find Caterina in Cyprus, received as Queen at the port of Parnagosta, and the act concludes. In the third act we find that Adolphe has followed Caterina to Cyprus, where she, being discovered in a secret meeting with him, is condemned to death, and is about to be executed, when a discovery is made that she is the daughter of Moncenigo, on which the King of Cyprus yields her up to Adolphe, and the matter, we mean the curtain, drops. So much for the libretto—now let us see what the composer has done—what flesh he has put upon this skeleton, and much of the success of the piece depended upon him. We do not like the Overture, or, indeed, any of Balfe's overtures—they are too rambling and noisy. The finale to the first act is the only thing in it which is truly beautiful—it is composed in the highest range of dramatic music. We suspect that Mr. B. musical, more than Mr. B. managerial, had the construction of the first scene in the second act: the music of which is scientifically ingenious, and dramatically effective, as is also that of the finale. Caterina's reception at Cyprus affords the composer an opportunity to display the richest resources of a rich invention. The third act possesses no great claims on our approbation, with the exception perhaps of rather a pretty ballad "Oh, Smile as thou wert wont to Smile."

The finale consists of a graceful rondo, nicely sung by Miss Rain-forth. On the whole, it would seem to us that Mr. Balfe preferred in this opera to write solid, well-concerted music, than light and capricious melodies. It certainly adds to his fame as a composer; his accompaniments exhibit more of the organ of constructiveness and originality than those of any of his previous productions, and if there be now and then a little of the "Light of other days" about the whole, we must say it is most primitively wrought into new colours. It is hardly necessary to say that the opera was entirely successful. All the principal singers, with Mr. Balfe and—Mr. Bunn, were called for at the fall of the curtain. The house was crammed, and owing to the ingenious (?) construction of a side box we could get but an imperfect view of the scenery, which, the last work of poor Grievé's hand, is very beautiful, particularly in the 2nd act.

IMPROVEMENTS IN THE TOWER.—This ancient fortress is undergoing such extensive alterations and improvements as will not only render it of more importance as regards its garrison, but equally add to the beauty of the many interesting historical buildings therein known to the public. A new grand entrance will form the most important improvement. It is to be immediately facing Upper Thames-street, and will be approached by a drawbridge. To effect this alteration, the well-known Spur-gate is to be demolished, that part of the old ditch between the Warders'-hall and Spur-gate filled up, so as to build upon, and a new one in a line with the ditch that runs along the water-side is to be made, so as to run outside the grand entrance, in accomplishing which a large space of ground will be added to the fortress, without encroachment on the public right of way on Tower-hill. The Spur-gate barracks, the well-known menagerie buildings, the new ticket office, the Spur-guard-room, and the ramparts adjacent, are all to be razed to the ground, and on their site to be built substantial erections for public offices. Perhaps the greatest importance of having the new entrance is, that there will be a direct line of communication through the Tower, from Tower-hill to East Smithfield. The two archways almost at the extreme eastern end of the fortress, leading to what is termed the Irish barracks, at the south-east angle, are to be removed, and the Irish barracks, now used for the accommodation of the troops, are to be converted into store-rooms. The alterations intended immediately adjacent to the grand parade are equally extensive. The houses on the right, after passing under the Bloody Tower to the parade, now the residence of some of the warders, will be destroyed, as also the guard-room, and all the buildings, in fact, contiguous to the White Tower, are to be swept away, so as to throw that interesting and stately structure to the full view of the spectator, many of its beauties being hidden by the unsightly buildings that are attached to it. The buildings to the west of the parade are to be pulled down, to make room for more substantial erections. The Beauchamp Tower, which stands on the west side of the parade, will be thrown open to public view; and when the records are removed to the New Houses of Parliament, the White Tower will be open for public inspection, it certainly being the greatest novelty, and possessing more interesting features, than anything else in the fortress.

THE WEATHER.—In the early part of Wednesday the metropolis was again visited by a very dense fog, which in respect of locality varied in a singular manner. It commenced at daybreak in some portions of London, while others were perfectly clear; and later in the day the City was completely enveloped, while parts of the town before visited were left perfectly clear, with bright sunshine. On Thursday also it was rather foggy. The Liverpool papers state that a ship had set in there, which, it was hoped, would put an end to the typhus fever which had prevailed for some time in the town.

MIGNON ASPIRING TO HEAVEN.

MIGNON ASPIRING TO HEAVEN.

Such let me seem till such I be,
Take not my snow-white robe away!
Soon from the dreary Earth I flee
Up to the glittering realms of day.

There first a little space I'll rest,
Then open my eyes with joyful mind.
In robes of lawn no longer dress'd,
Girdle and garland left behind.

And those calm shining sons of Morn
They ask not touching Maid or boy,
No robes, no garments, there are worn,
The frame is purged from sin's alloy.

Through life, 'tis true, I have not toil'd,
Yet anguish long my heart has wrung,
Untimely was my cheek has spoiled,
Make me again for ever young.

The artist to whom the world owes these two exquisite paintings, Ary Scheffer, was born in Holland, in 1796. His father was a painter also, and died at an early age, when the widow, with her three sons, removed to Paris. Ary, the eldest, was then fourteen, and had already shown a decided aptitude for his father's profession. At eleven years of age he painted a Hannibal, the size of life, receiving the head of his brother Adriaan! This picture attracted much notice at Amsterdam. At Paris he studied under Guerin, and while yet very young became favourably known to the public by his picture of St. Louis dying of the plague, and St. Thomas steering a vessel driven by a storm; he also painted the subject of the Citizens of Calais submitting to Edward III. He has been an active labourer, for, in addition to several paintings that have gained an European fame, he has executed an immense number of commissions for the churches of Paris, and the Museum of Versailles; but it has been alleged that some of these indicate haste and want of finish. In 1827, he produced his picture of the Sultane women throwing themselves over a precipice to escape falling into the hands of the Turkish soldiers: it is much admired for its grouping, and the variety of expression in the heads.

From the subjects he has worked upon for some years past, he may be classed as an illustrator of poetry, and of that emotion that gives life and beauty to the true lyrics of all languages. In this style are his "Francesca de Rimini and her Lover," from Dante; "Count Eberhard weeping his Son," from Schiller's ballad; "Margaret at her Spinning Wheel," and with the "Evil Spirit," from Faust; and two paintings from Lord Byron's "Giacoso." In 1836, appeared his "Christ," as the consoler of the repentant and the afflicted: in this group he has introduced a dying Polish soldier, a Negro slave, and a portrait of Tasso, to represent a poet stricken with madness. In 1838, he exhibited four pictures, all of them subjects from the works of Goethe, two again from Faust, and two from "Wilhelm Meister," the "Mignons," of which we have here presented our readers with engravings. These last have been universally admired, and have added to a reputation already well established. Since they appeared he has been engaged in painting by himself, a whole saloon in the Palace of Versailles; yet, such is his industry, that even this task did not fully occupy him, for he has worked also on a sacred subject, "The Human Race in the Valley of Jehoshaphat." He was the instructor of the late Princess Marie of Wurtemberg, the daughter of Louis Philippe; she was the only pupil he ever formed. He lives in the most complete independence, and belongs to no academy or coterie; he has created his own school, has never paused in his career in which he is still progressing, and he is beyond a doubt one of the very highest rank among the painters of the present age.

The following are the remarks of an eloquent writer and critic on the character of Mignon:—

"This mysterious child, at first neglected by the reader, gradually forced on his attention, at length overpowers him with an emotion more deep and thrilling than any poet since the days of Shakespeare has succeeded in producing. The daughter of enthusiasm, rapture, passion, and despair, she is of the earth, but not earthly. When she glides before us through the light mazes of her fairy dance, or twangs her cithern to the notes of her home-sick verses, or whirled her tambourine, and hurries round us like an antique Maenad, we could almost fancy her a spirit; so pure is she, so full of fervour, so disengaged from the clay of this world. And when all the fearful particulars of her story are at length laid together, and we behold in connected order the image of her hapless existence, there is, in those dim recollections, those feelings so simple, so impassioned and unspeakable, consuming the closely-shrouded, woe struck, yet ethereal spirit of the poor creature, something which searches into the inmost recesses of the soul. It is not tears which her fate calls forth; but a feeling far too deep for tears. The very fire of heaven seems miserably quenched among the obstructions of this earth. Her little heart, so noble and so helpless, perishes before the smallest of its many beauties is unfolded; and all its loves, and thoughts, and longings, do but add another pang to death, and sink to silence utter and eternal. It is as if the gloomy porch of Dis, and his pale kingdoms, were realised and set before us, and we heard the ineffable wail of infants reverberating from within their prison walls for ever.

"The history of Mignon runs like a thread of gold through the tissue of the narrative, connecting with the heart much that were else addressed only to the head. Philosophy and eloquence might have done the rest; but this is poetry in the highest meaning of the word. It must be for the power of producing such creations and emotions that Goethe is, by many of his countrymen, ranked at the side of Homer and Shakespeare, as one of the only three men of genius that have ever lived."

THE ECLIPSE OF THE MOON.

The great lunar eclipse, of which we gave so accurate a prediction on Saturday last, was only visible in a few favoured localities. At Carmarthen, a correspondent informs us, the "evening was brilliant in all the magnificence of heaven's boots;" and that the people of the town and neighbourhood enjoyed a fine sight of the entire phenomenon. At Liverpool, it was, also, exceedingly well seen. But the situation in which it seems to have been best seen, appears to have been the southern coast, where, from the greater warmth of the temperature, the breeze of the Channel, and the dry, compact nature of the stratification of the adjacent country, a more lucid atmosphere, and one less oppressed with clouds, ordinarily prevails. In this expectation, the writer of the present notice went to Felstone, and was gratified, at the "time appointed," with a very perfect view of the eclipse. The night, at its commencement, was dull and murky; horrid clouds, ragged, slovenly vapours, driven by an upper current from the ungenial north, hovered across the vault of heaven, and left but small hope that a glimpse of the moon's face would be obtained. However, at about nine o'clock, the star-bespangled sky became visible in patches, and in the course of half an hour the whole south-eastern heavens presented an aspect of perfect clearness. The light of the moon was then so strong, that writing could be read with ease, and the coast of France was distinctly visible. The larger stars were, of course, proportionally deprived of their full lustre, shining as mere points in the milky darkness, and destitute of scintillation; while those of smaller magnitude were wholly obscured. Under these auspicious circumstances the eclipse commenced. As it progressed, and the light of the moon became extinguished, the various objects in its landscape were slowly withdrawn from sight; the stars, one by one, came forth from the depths of heaven, with a brightness, which, in its increase, gave the effect of an actual advance: the silvered sea gave up its stream of radiant reflections, and at length so thick a darkness fell upon all things, that the light of Jupiter, shining above Dungrness point, became distinctly reflected on the beautiful bay of Sandgate. The eclipse was now total; and the moon, "shorn of its beams," presented the appearance of a ruddy and partially-transparent globe lighted from the side. The departure of the shadow was, of course, attended by a reversal of the phenomena we have described. During the progress of the eclipse, an opportunity was offered of relating by direct observation, the popular error, so industriously inculcated in almost all astronomical publications, of the possibility of seeing the actual ebullition of numerous volcanoes on the moon's surface. The idea has always appeared to the writer to be an absurd one, and wholly unsupported by any appearances. The case is this—on the face of the moon a number of very bright spots are visible, and these are supposed to be so many active volcanoes: the brightness being conjectured to arise from the intensely luminous character of their eruptions. Now, if this were the case, it would follow, that lights of such magnitude would not suffer an eclipse by the passage of the earth's shadow, but would rather shine with additional brightness; but observation shows us that they do suffer a total eclipse, and in this view the writer was fully confirmed on Sunday night, for, on that occasion, when the parts of the moon, obscured by the earth's shadow, were still distinctly visible, they themselves remained wholly indistinguishable from the general mass.

Some curious effects of refraction occurred during the latter stages of the eclipse, but as these would involve the necessity of some purely scientific and lengthy descriptions, we may only mention that during one of them the bright part of the moon appeared to bulge beyond the shadow, and eventually to separate partially from it—a phenomenon of superstitious import to the timid and the ignorant.

PARIS FASHIONS.

(From "Townsend's Selections of Parisian Costumes for December.")

Paris has lately been enlivened by numerous elegant equipages which have appeared in the Champs-Élysées, and we observed, with pleasure, they were graced with the élite of the fashionable world, in toilettes, in which novelty both in the materials and forms were conspicuous. In many equipages were seen mantelpieces of Tiberine, accompanied by ermine, or sable muffs, without either scarves or drawings. We also particularly observed some velvet Russian Cloaks, with pelerines and borders of grèbe.

Dresses for morning wear are now rather shorter, and not so full in the skirts round the waist.

The corsets of DRESSERS are all tight; they have, however, to give them a fullness, facings, or lappets, composed of bias, placed in form of a fan.

BALL DRESSERS have several skirts, and are usually ornamented with flowers.

Many Crispins and Pardons are made of quilted silk. The Pardons are in another name for the old open pelisse with sleeves.

BLACK SATIN PELISSES are much worn; they are embroidered either with silk braid, or with cord, intermixed with application of velvet; some are simply trimmed with ribbon velvet round the sleeves and collar.

VELVET is, and will be, the most distinguished article of dress this winter; it is employed for everything; for morning pelisses with tight sleeves and high-buttoned corsets; for visiting dresses with lappel corsets; and half-lapel sleeves for evening dresses, with low tight corsets and lace berthes; in fact, velvet is adopted in every description of toilette—for mantles, scarfs, pelerines, &c., &c.

HATS continue to be rather small and the brims low at the ears; the crowns are rather wide, and slightly rounded.

SATIN HATS are frequently entirely covered with black lace, which is sometimes placed on the top of the crown, and falls in folds on the brim.

Many CAPS are made with lappets of blond, twisted, and mixed with flowers. These caps usually recede from the face; but as this does not suit every physiognomy, some have, in addition, a flower, a bow of ribbon, or of lace, placed on each side.

TURBANS are smaller and lighter than they were last year; they are placed very backward on the head, merely covering the coil of hair.

HAIR CORFUSERS are very low and simple; some bandeaux ondes (waved bands) are seen, but this fashion is not on the increase, as smooth bands will keep a whole evening without being disarranged, for which reason they have the preference. The singlelets à l'Anglaise are not worn so long as they were last year, but fall more in clusters.

GLOVES for evening wear are always very short, and are fastened with three or four buttons; they have now no trimming, as heretofore.

It is the fashion to wear several bracelets; antique and modern are often worn together.

PROPOSED DINNER TO SIR HENRY POTTINGER, AT LIVERPOOL.—Sir H. Pottinger has accepted an invitation to dine with the merchants and bankers of Liverpool, the 12th of December was named, but the day will probably be the 17th, as on the former day the Judge of Assize (Mr. Baron Osney) will probably dine with the Mayor.

A GOOD WINDFALL.—A well-known millwright at Sleaford, Lincolnshire, by a recent decision in the High Court of Chancery, immediately comes into the possession of a large estate near London, of the annual value of £13,000, as well as arrears of rent for the same for the last 20 years, amounting to the sum of £200,000.

NUMBER OF IRISH RESIDENT IN GREAT BRITAIN AND IN THE PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

The following table will be interesting to many of our readers:—

In Birmingham .....	4,683	In Liverpool .....	49,639
Bristol .....	4,039	London and Suburbs .....	73,131
Chatham .....	2,476	Manchester and Salford .....	34,300
Dundee .....	5,672	Newcastle .....	2,857
Edinburgh .....	5,594	Paisley .....	5,231
Glasgow .....	44,345	Sheffield .....	1,827
Greenock .....	4,307	Stockport .....	2,252
Leeds .....	5,027	Woolwich .....	2,316

The total number of Irish in England at the date of the last Census was .....

Wales .....	248,128
In Scotland .....	5,276
In British Isles .....	126,231
Total .....	3,531

Total .....

* For the full details of the Census of Ireland, see our Supplement of October last.

FREEMANRY.—On Tuesday a Provincial Grand Lodge of Freemasons was held at Coventry, for the purpose of installing Earl Howe as Provincial Grand Master of Warwickshire. The ceremony of installation was performed by T. H. Hall, Esq., Grand Registrar of the Order, assisted by a numerous assemblage of the fraternity from the metropolis, and from all parts of the county of Warwick and the adjoining counties. The company afterwards partook of a sumptuous dinner, at the Castle Inn, at which his lordship presided.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT GIBRALTAR.—A very distressing accident happened in the forenoon of Wednesday, Nov. 13, at Gibraltar, by the sinking of a boat in the bay; the unfortunate sufferers were almost all our own countrymen, belonging to a detachment of Artillery, on their way to Corfu, by the troop-ship Apollo. This troop-ship, which arrived at Gibraltar on Monday, the 11th, brought out detachments of men for all the regiments in the garrison, and, besides others four Malts, had one on board of Artillery, destined for the companies of Captains Siew and Gosling, at Corfu. As the boats of the Apollo were not exclusively used to effect the disembarkation of the troops, many from the quay were also employed for this purpose, when, early in the forenoon, one of the latter, conveying on shore ten men, the greater part of whom belonged to the Artillery, for the purpose of procuring a few necessaries for the voyage, and with a female servant, the boatman and a boy, making in all a company of thirteen in the boat, it was unfortunately run down by a Danish galley which had just arrived from Malaga, and was proceeding to its anchorage-ground; six only out of the number were rescued from a watery grave. The owner of the boat, although an expert swimmer, has perished, and left a large family to deplore their loss; whilst the boy, who could not swim, was providentially saved by the timely assistance of one of the boats of her Majesty's ship Scout. The Apollo only left Cork on the 2nd of this month. We subjoin a list of those who were drowned:—Sergeant Gritton; gunners Lever, Rowley, and Lister, of the Royal Artillery; sergeant Kenevan, of the 97th regiment; Mary Ann Coyle, servant to Captain McQuarrie, of the 42nd; and the boatman, John Ferro.

The vest, smallclothes, and stockings are white, the two former of white satin.

INSTALLATION OF A KNIGHT OF THE BATH.

The shoes are of white leather, the spurs of gold, and the hat, which is somewhat high crowned, is adorned with a plume of white feathers.

Our illustration represents the Ceremony of the Sovereign investing a Knight with the Order, in the Throne-room, at St. James's Palace.

An investiture took place on Tuesday, at Windsor Castle, by the Queen's command. At half-past two o'clock the Knights assembled in the Guard Chamber, and were there robed in the splendid mantles and collars of the Order, in which they afterwards proceeded to St. George's Hall. The Chapter was held in the Reception-room. Her Majesty and Prince Albert having entered the apartment, preceded by the Lord Chamberlain and the Lord Steward, the ceremony commenced. The Knights Grand Crosses present were—his Royal Highness Prince Albert, first and principal Grand Cross, and Acting Great Master of the Order; his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, Viscount Strangford, Sir Edward Paget, Sir George Murray, Sir George Cockburn, Sir Edward Codrington, and the Earl of Clarendon. The Queen, who wore the mantle, collar, and star of the Bath, was seated at the head of the table, having Prince Albert on her right, and the Duke of Cambridge on her left; the Knights Grand Crosses being seated on each side of the table. Sir Arthur Aston was then conducted from St. George's Hall between the two junior knights present, the Earl of Clarendon and Sir George Cockburn, preceded by the Gentleman Usher of the Order, and Bath King of Arms bearing the insignia of the order on a crimson velvet cushion. Sir Arthur was ushered to the right hand of the Sovereign, and, kneeling, the sword of state was delivered by the Lord Chamberlain to the senior Knight Grand Cross, who presented it to her Majesty. The Queen then conferred with it the honour of knighthood on the new Knight Grand Cross, who on rising had the honour to kiss the Sovereign's hand. The riband and badge presented by Bath King of Arms were received by Prince Albert, and handed to the Sovereign, who placed the same over the right shoulder of Sir Arthur, and also presented to him the star of a Civil Knight Grand Cross of the Order. The new Knight then withdrew. The Earl of Ellenborough was introduced between the Earl of Clarendon and Sir George Cockburn preceded by the officers of the order, and had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him with the sword of state by his Sovereign. The noble earl was then invested by the Queen with the riband and badge of the Order of the Bath, and also received from her Majesty the star of a Civil Knight Grand Cross. His lordship then had the honour to kiss her Majesty's hand, and retired from the Royal presence. The Knights Grand Crosses were called over, and with the officers of the Order retired from the presence of the Sovereign with the usual reverence.

The Queen gave a grand dinner in the evening, to which all the Knights Grand Crosses of the Order of the Bath present at the ceremony were invited. The banquet was served in the Waterloo Chamber. The state service of gold plate was used on this occasion. Down the whole length of the middle of the table were a succession of beautiful specimens of ornamental gold plate. Opposite to her Majesty, in the centre of the table, was placed the St. George's candelabrum, flanked at a little distance by two large scent jars of the time of Queen Anne, in gold, and of most curious workmanship; further still were the beautiful candelabra designed by Flaxman, the subject "The Garden of the Hesperides," and at each extremity of the table were the "Venus Isopais," designed by Baily. The interstices in this line of magnificent objects were filled with sprigues of most elegant design filled with artificial flowers. Down each side of these, which formed the centre of the table, was placed a row of gold candelabra bearing a profusion of wax lights, and beyond these, towards the edge of the table, were placed the gold dishes of various descriptions, in which the viands of the banquet were served. Around the room was a succession of side tables, on which were displayed shields, salvers, and other articles of massive character, in gold plate. The apartment was also illuminated by the five brilliant crystal chandeliers.

STRIKE OF THE BARKING FISHERMEN.

Our illustration shows a group of fishing-smacks, belonging to Barking, in Essex; of which vessels, on Tuesday last, no fewer than sixty were lying in the river, a little below Woolwich, their crews having brought them home from sea, and struck work. The following details are abridged from the Morning Chronicle:—The total number of these smacks, nominally sailing from the port of London, is about one hundred and sixty, and they are one of the principal sources of supply to the Billingsgate market. They are wet-bottomed vessels, generally of from fifty to sixty tons, and carrying each three men besides the captain, and about the same number of apprentices. Their principal fishing grounds are off the coast of Holland, and during the cod season in the North Sea and about the Orkney Islands. In the summer and autumn, it is not unusual for many of them to work out of Harwich, Lowestoft, or Yarmouth, on the eastern coast. The kind of fish they are employed in catching varies with the season and locality; it is mostly cod, sole, haddock, or plaice. A smack's cargo commonly contains more than one of these varieties.

Where several smacks are the property of a single owner, or of two or three in the same family, they are generally worked in fleets of from fifteen to thirty sail, each smack in its turn bringing to market the fish caught by the whole fleet. In this way, a large fleet is enabled to keep up a regular and constant supply; thus a fair average of the market is secured, and the time of absence from home rendered less variable and uncertain. Frequently, however, the smacks only come up the river as far as Gravesend, and having discharged their cargo of fish into the hatch-boats that ply between that place and the London market, they take in fresh provision and return to sea. This is called making a "Gravesend voyage." It tends to keep the men longer from their homes and families, but effects a great saving of time to the owners. Formerly these Gravesend voyages were not so common as they are at present; and the men generally found means to get home on the average once a month. But to meet the increased competition that the supply of fish by railway has introduced, the owners have made them more frequent, till the usual time of absence has increased to six or eight weeks, and often more. One extensive proprietor, the owner of about 50 vessels, has also for the last year employed a very fast sailing cutter to carry provisions to his smacks, and those of the numerous small owners who are his dependents, and to bring their fish back to meet the boats at Gravesend. By this means, the crews of more than half the smacks belonging to the place have been kept out at sea for periods of from three to six months. This lengthened absence from home and its comforts, the working fishermen have long felt to be a great privation. The middle class of owners thinking probably that a partial return to the old system would place them on a more equal footing with the extensive proprietor above referred to, lent a favourable ear to their complaints, and with their concurrence the crews of seventy vessels have struck and returned home. The other owners have, it is said, promised to take an additional hand in each vessel, to prevent any being thrown out of berth, should the men's demands not be acceded to. The apprentices, of whom more than two hundred are already on shore, will, of course, be thrown upon their masters' hands.

The demands of the men are for increased wages and shorter voyages. Their present rate of wages is: men fourteen shillings a week, and mates sixteen. They want this to be advanced two shillings in each case, and the time of absence to be limited to one month. The majority of the owners seem inclined to grant them this, but others are averse to all concession. If the strike continues long, the loss to large owners will be very great. Those who continue at sea will obtain high prices for each fish as they can bring to market, though it is doubtful whether this advantage will be more than overbalanced by their participation in the general loss.

FASHIONS FOR DECEMBER.

DESCRIPTION OF THE FIGURES.

RIGHT-HAND FIGURE.—A velvet hat, trimmed round the front with a plait of satin, and ornamented with an ostrich feather.

A satin pelisse, trimmed with velvet and bows of satin, with black lace round the top of the corsage and at the elbows.

LEFT-HAND FIGURE.—A corsage of velvet, covered with a gold lace tinsel and gold fringe.

A velvet dress, trimmed with lace.

RIGHT-HAND HALF-LENGTH FIGURE.—A tulle cap, trimmed with satin ribbon.

A silk dress, trimmed with lace.

LEFT-HAND HALF-LENGTH FIGURE.—A lace cap, ornamented with flowers. A silk dress, trimmed with strings of ribbon.

BARKING FISHING BOATS.

GLOUCESTER COLLEGE SCHOOL.

THE COLLEGE SCHOOL, GLOUCESTER.

The College School at Gloucester, of which the annexed view is an accurate representation, is one among the many foundations erected or revived at the Reformation in various places throughout the kingdom, for the encouragement of that species of learning, which, taking its origin from Constantinople, and enriched in its progress through Italy by the accession of native literature, had already begun, not only to excite the curiosity of the learned, but materially to affect the habits of thought of the masses in Europe, at the commencement of the 16th century.

The study of the Greek language in particular, as it had been one of the chief causes of the downfall of the Roman Ecclesiastical power, by opening the New Testament in the original, and affording an aid to scriptural interpretation hitherto unknown; so by the general spirit of liberty, created by the pursuit of the profane authors, which constitute its literature, it had caused so complete a revolution in the views of the educated classes as to render them very ill disposed to submit again to that mental tyranny from which it had been one means of releasing them. Without question it was this policy which induced the advisers of Henry, in the educational foundations reconstructed by him, to make the reading of Greek an essential part in the system pursued, and to the example thus early set, may be ascribed the fact, that while in most foreign schools, the study of Greek forms a subordinate feature in scholastic and collegiate pursuits, and its acquisition is not generally considered necessary, in England the great test of scholarship is based upon an accurate acquaintance with that noble language. That this taste for Greek in particular, has been fostered by the old Grammar Schools none can doubt, and to no one of them are the public more indebted than to the Cathedral School at Gloucester, for perhaps it may be but partially known that this school was the first to break down the barbarous custom of teaching Greek, through the Latin language, and first dared (for at that time it was a daring act) to assert in practice, that as the English was nearer the Greek in idiom, so it was the best medium for initiation into that language. One of the great reformers in this respect, whose name is well known to our literary readers, was the Rev. Thomas Stock, late Head Master of the College School at Gloucester, who by means of our wide circulation will be known at the same time, as not only the reformer of an absurd custom in the higher departments of education, but also the originator of Sabbath Schools, for although Robert Raikes has generally had the credit of the establishment of these foundations, he, in fact, was only the trumpet of Stock—the one founded, the other filled the schools. In the Gloucester College School, men of the greatest eminence in after life received their education. Dr. White, the famous orientalist and Hampton Lecturer, was taught there. Originally he was only a poor woolcomber, but afterwards he became Canon of Christchurch, and Professor of Hebrew in the University at Oxford. Among the school exercises is found, often repeated, the name of Mansel, late Bishop of Bristol, and Master of Trinity College, Cambridge. Of living men, one of its brightest ornaments is the Rev. Joseph Parsons, Vicar of Newnham, in Gloucestershire, joint editor of the Great "Oxford Septuagint," a work of enormous labour, for which he is rewarded by the church with poverty and neglect, while his predecessor, Holmes, retired on a good Deanery. Though "last not least," Dr. Philpotts, the present Bishop of Exeter, was educated in this establishment, of whom it is sufficient here to say, that he has justly been exalted to the highest honours of his sacred calling.

Now in the department of ancient literature alone does this old Grammar School still retain its creditable position. Dr. Evans, its present Head Master, has the good sense to perceive that something besides a knowledge of Latin and Greek is required in the present day. Mathematics, Drawing, German, and French, are studied by the pupils; and, as our reporter was able to ascertain, by an inspection of the Establishment without a previous appointment, the domestic comforts of the scholars are most carefully provided for. Recently, a most commodious suite of rooms has been built by Dr. Evans, from designs by Messrs. Deuker and Hamilton of Gloucester, consisting of a dining-hall, a lavatory, and dormitories, most chastely fitted up and admirably arranged, all of which are well suited for the purposes for which they are intended.

The accompanying sketch of the building was drawn by Mr. J. H. Brown, one of the assistant-masters of the College School. On the right appears the spire of St. John's Church, to which is attached the first Sunday-school established in this kingdom.

THE CLOCK OF THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.

The clock of our Exchange is now going, and what is of equal importance, it is going accurately. The citizens are proverbially fond of true time: no man spends so much in procuring a good chronometer; and no pride is greater, or less harmless, than that which they exhibit in showing its performance to others. And they are right. Correct time is an important thing in the metropolis of England; and a large share of its commercial prosperity may be traced to the habits of punctuality which its regular observance has induced. The old "Change men, the minute watchers, the four o'clock men "to a tick," have accordingly been in raptures during the past month, in finding that they have at last got a public time-keeper, which rivals the Greenwich time-ball, in exact and constant accuracy. The clock of the Royal Exchange has not varied one half second during the last four weeks! They have reason, then, to rejoice, for the achievement is every way creditable to the gentlemen by whom it has been accomplished. We propose, therefore, to give some account of the various contrivances by which this marvellous time-keeping has been effected; and we hope to make our description perfectly intelligible by the accompanying very accurate engravings, drawn from the clock itself. Before, however, we proceed to the details, a few particulars may be mentioned, descriptive of the circumstances under which the clock originated. It appears that the Graham Committee, for rebuilding the Royal Exchange, being desirous of procuring a clock which would give the instant of mean time at Greenwich, solicited the assistance of the Astronomer Royal in the adaptation and arrangement of the clockmaker's machinery, and generally in the regulation and approval of the entire work. This very responsible duty was undertaken by that gentleman with a zeal which bespeaks his love of science, and his readiness to serve the public to the extent of his great mathematical acquirements. The committee, in making this appointment, acted with great prudence, and with a just appreciation of Mr. Airy's talents; for we may mention that, in addition to his unrivalled knowledge of the exact sciences, he also possesses a most intimate acquaintance with practical mechanics, and a rare skill in combining its powers for the accomplishment of new purposes. One of his earliest papers, in the Cambridge Philosophical Transactions, written when a very young man, is a memoir on "The Mechanism of a Clock Escapement;" and one of his later ones, in the same publication, is a most important communication on "The Cause of Wheel Teeth." The committee, acting under Mr. Airy's advice, proceeded to advertise for a clock for the tower of the Royal Exchange, which, in addition to the ordinary excellences, should be

FIG. 1. APPARATUS FOR MOVING THE MINUTE HAND

FIG. 2. APPARATUS FOR LETTING OFF THE CHIMES.

I. So true in its continuous action, that the first blow of each hour should be accurate to a second of time; and
II. That as a protection against varying temperatures, the pendulum should be a compensation one.

Several turret clock-makers were consulted on the subject, and many plans, "from all sorts of people," underwent discussion; but it was finally determined to commission Mr. Dent, the chronometer maker, with the charge of constructing the "perfect clock"—a task which it was considered his great experience in the arrangement of delicate and complicated mechanism eminently fitted him. Thus appointed, it became the aim of that gentleman's ambition, regardless of expense or labour, to do his bidding—as far as rust and friction, wear and tear, and all the infinites to which this warring earth is liable, perfectly, and—shall we say so?—everlastingly. And nobly he has performed the work. In accomplishing the primary condition of the committee, the first arrangement that suggested itself to his busy mind was, that it would be necessary that the "train of wheels" up to a certain point in the mechanism should move forwards suddenly at certain small intervals (20 seconds), thus allowing the small, or "let off," as seen at a, Fig. 1, to move instantly forward, so as to let fall the lever b, an operation which could not possibly be accomplished by the slow motion of the ordinary clock; for as a portion of the machinery (which is visible externally by the motion of the minute hand) passes suddenly forward three times in every minute, it will be evident that as the pendulum receives an impulse once in every two seconds, that an auxiliary train must be in motion while the larger wheels remain stationary, an arrangement which is technically termed by the French "a remontaire," and is generally used by the clock makers in France in the construction of their best public clocks. The clock in the House at Paris is of this construction. Before referring to it in the subjoined drawing PERSPECTIVE VIEW OF THE GREAT CLOCK OF THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.

(Fig. 4), we may briefly explain its construction, and what is its use. At the place of introduction in the wheel work of this auxiliary train, we must suppose the machinery to be divided into two separate trains—the first part, including all the larger machinery, with that for driving the hands; and the second part, engaged in raising a ball at certain intervals (20 seconds), which ball, falling through a small arc of about 90 deg., by its gravity causes an impulse to be given to the pendulum; and it follows that, so long as this ball is raised by the larger mechanism, the impulse to the pendulum may be fairly termed equal at all times, and not subjected to the variation of force to which public clocks are usually subjected from the varying friction, change in the fluidity of the oil by temperature, or the effect of the wind on the hands of the four faces, which are nine feet in diameter. We will now endeavour to explain this auxiliary force. The internal toothed wheel, Fig. 1 d, and the long teeth, e, and the shorter teeth, f, are all firmly fixed on the same axle. g is a small wheel acting upon the inner teeth of d, and it is by means of this wheel, that the ball e is raised every 20 seconds.

FIG. 3. THE COMPENSATION PENDULUM.

h, seen better in Fig. 5, is a hollow cylinder, having three openings, cut about half way through, each at an angle of 120 degrees, in separate planes, and it is firmly secured on the escape wheel, or box, i. To explain this action, it is necessary to keep in mind, that the escape wheel revolves once in every minute, and as it carries on its axis the cylinder, h, it will present an opening every 20 seconds to allow the long teeth, e, to pass through. The teeth of e are always kept pressed against this cylinder, except during the instant of passing from one tooth to the succeeding one; and the pressure of e is communicated from the clock weight through the wheels, and at this junction the clock force terminates, and the auxiliary force (or ball) is wound up at the instant when the succeeding teeth of e, are passing forward to a resting place on the cylinder, h. The internal teeth of d, raises the gravity ball, e, to its maximum height, by means of the small wheel, g, which is seen to act in the inner teeth of d. We have endeavored to exhibit in a popular manner the circumstance that the impulse is given to the pendulum by the falling of this ball, or, in other words, by gravity, and not by the clock weight, as is the case in the ordinary construction. The pins in the edge of the inner toothed wheel, are impact pins, and the short spring fixed to the pillar, on which it has a circular motion, is the impact spring; the force or impact of the long teeth against the cylinder is regulated; and from the shortness of the impact spring, its elastic force increases in a similar ratio to the momentum of the wheel.

FIG. 4. THE ESCAPEMENT.

Mr. Dent obtained Mr. Airy's approbation of this arrangement; and he at the same time suggested that, in order to strike the first blow of the hour, it would be necessary the hammer should be raised nearly to its greatest height; but as it would have to overcome some obstruction in making the start, Mr. Airy proposed that the end of the hammer tail should be made to rest on a circular part of the lift, concentric with the wheel, or, if possible, that it should have a trifling inclination, so that the weight of the hammer should tend to move forward the wheel-work rather than offer it any obstruction. Mr. Airy's very important improvement is seen at a, in Fig. 2; and Fig. 1 shows the position of the hammer before it is raised for the instantaneous fall. By this arrangement the blow struck on the bell is as momentary as the mind is capable of determining. We have alluded to Mr. Airy's seal in the prosecution of mechanical sciences, and we have now to notice an invention by him introduced for the first time into a clock. It is a contrivance by which the clock is kept going, whilst it is being wound up. Harrison was the inventor of the going-force in a chronometer, but from it being contained in a wheel, it was of a very limited power. Mr. Airy, when erecting the Northumberland telescope at Cambridge, required a weight of several hundred pounds to keep the telescope in motion during the time occupied in winding it up, and the means which he then adopted for overcoming the difficulty, he has applied, with perfect success, in meeting a similar requirement in the clock. The barrel on which the line pulls is placed in a separate frame from the clock frame, as seen in the large cut; to the end of this frame is fixed the end of the line, which has usually a permanent fastening; and when the re-winding commences, by means of the pinion, which is fixed in the clock frame, the instant wind-up commences, the end of the line, which is fastened to the end of the frame, instantly pulls round the wheel-work with the same force as when moved by the clock weight; and, as the arrangement is on the principle of the lever, it affords the nicest adjustment in making both powers equal.

The compensation pendulum presented the next difficulty, but, like all others, it was perfectly overcome. Its use is, as the public are aware to correct the varying temperature to which the clock must of necessity, in its exposed situation, be subjected. The compensation is effected by the equivalent contraction and expansion of a system of combined rods of zinc and steel: the centre rod is of steel, the whole length of the pendulum; and at the bottom of the pendulum, as shown in Fig. 3, is placed the zinc column. It is evident, that if the rod lengthens downwards by an increase of heat, the column of zinc standing on the rod, perfectly free of the steel rod, will expand upwards. On the top of the column of zinc is fixed a metal cap, d, into which is firmly fixed two steel rods, and at the bottom of them the pendulum-bob, from which it follows that the bob hangs by means of these two rods from the top of the zinc column, and quite independent of the centre rod. The zinc column expanding upwards by an increase of temperature, raises the pendulum-bob, while at the same time the rod lengthens by the increase of heat. It will be seen that the zinc column is shorter than the steel rod, which arises from zinc expanding and contracting more than steel, for equal increments and decrements of heat.

The clock being required to be set to within a fraction of a second, it was found that if the pendulum was stopped by hand, it would be next to impossible to put so large and heavy a mass as nearly four cwt., in motion, to such a small portion of time. Again, the difficulty of setting it, to vibrate in the same plane, as well as to give the usual extent of arc of vibration, rendered it impossible to accomplish the regulation, or, more properly, the "setting it," to the required accuracy. Mr. Airy at once suggested an ingenious and simple mode of overcoming the difficulty. He directed the clock to be started at a very small lowering rate, and then that a spring, shown at a, Fig. 3, should be brought against the pendulum, by means of a line, in the clock-room, so that it might be made to touch the pendulum slightly, and cause a corresponding gain in the clock, which it does to the minutest fraction of a second. In fact, it affords the means of putting the beats of a great turret clock and a comparing chronometer in coincidence.

The regulation of the pendulum, to bring it nearly to mean time, is effected by a screw at the bottom, taking care that the rate of going is always a losing one. The screw is not afterwards to be moved, but for the regulation of any small portions of time; there are weights prepared to place on each side of the top pendulum-bob. By this plan, there is no occasion, at any time, to stop the pendulum; and the smaller weights will correct with certainty periods of less than a tenth of a second daily. Should the clock gain, the weights are, of course, removed.

We have only to add that Mr. Dent, in making this extraordinary clock, was obliged, like Lord Ross in the construction of his telescope, to commence his labours by organising an extensive workshop for the manufacture of the tools necessary for the due performance of the various curious and important works required.

S. S.

THE QUEEN'S STAG HOUNDS.—The Royal Stag Hounds had a bye day on Wednesday, the most taking place at Salt Hill, at which the Earl of Rosalie, Lord A. St. Mure, and a field of between fifty and sixty, were present. The celebrated hind Eclipse, upon being uncoupled in a field of Mr. Mason's near the Farnham-road, took away towards Burnham, doubling to the right to West Burnham and Farnham Common, crossing to the Beches, leaving Hall Barn Park to the right, and then on to Hotspurgate. Thence it made away for Penco, doubling round to Loudwater, and was taken at Wycombe Marsh, after an exceedingly fast run, especially to the Beches, of an hour and a half. In consequence of the sharp frost of the preceding night, the stag was not turned out until one o'clock.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Advertisements cannot be received after eight o'clock on Thursday Evening.

TRIUMPHANT SUCCESS of the New National Spectacle of THE ROYAL FOX HUNT at ANTELOPE'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—MONDAY, December 1, and during the Week, at Seven o'clock, the splendid Spectacle of the FOX HUNT; OR, THE RACE HORSE OF LIFE COURSE OF MAN AND WIND, which exceeds in point of interest, splendour, and novelty, any former production. Fox Chase on the Stage, and in the Circle, by Living Fox and complete Pack of Hounds. Equestrian Races, and Tribute to England's Queen. New Scenes of the Circus, and Native Change of the Fairs of Horsefairs. Concluding with the WRATH OF LYONS; OR, THE THREE CONSPIRATORS. Acting and Stage Manager, Mr. W. D. Broadfoot. Box Office open from 11 till 1.—Schooper, Mr. C. Henson.

GENERAL TOM THUMB.—The celebrated American Man of Minstrel, will after failing his engagements in Scotland and Ireland, RETURN TO LONDON in time for the CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS. During the past week, the General's performances in Edinburgh have been more successfully attended than they ever were before; no fewer than 16,817 persons paid him a visit, exclusive of free admissions. The General returns to Edinburgh on the 15th December, for three days' exhibition, previous to visiting Belfast and Dublin.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The PROTECTOR, a new apparatus for exhibiting OPAQUE OBJECTS in Nature and Art, showing celestial phenomena. The PHOSCOPE, HYDRO ELECTRIC MACHINE, DIVING-BELL and DIVER, DISSOLVING VIEWS, &c. Dr. RYAN'S LECTURE daily, and in the evenings of Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Professor Bachofner's various lectures abound in interesting experiments.—Admission, 1s. School, half-price.—A new edition of the CATALOGUE, containing 300 additional Works of Art, &c. since the last review is just published. price 1s.

MAGNIFICENT ADDITION.—George the First, in the Rules of the Theatre; George the Second, in the Robes of the Barber; George the Third, in the Robes of St. Patrick; the Duke of Kent in those of the Bath; being the National Orders of the House of Brunswick. The Group in honour of the Duke of Wellington; the Robes of George the Fourth restored to their original beauty; the Robes of Napoleon, &c. &c. &c. This Exhibition is one of the very best sights in the Metropolis, and abounds with such a variety of objects that it is a matter of surprise how so many objects could have been collected together.—The Times.—Admission, One Shilling. Second Room, Sixpence. 11 and 12, St. James's Street. Music every Evening, at MADAME TESSAUD and SON'S BAZAAR, Baker street.

SIX POUNDS OF TEA, whether Black or Green, for 17s.; and small bright Gunpowder, in 12th. boxes, at 6s. 6d. per lb.; Glass of Coffee for 6s.—HART INDIA TEA COMPANY'S OFFICES, 9, Great St. Helen's Churchyard, Bishopsgate-street.

LESSONS IN MILLINERY AND DRESSMAKING.—Mrs. HOWELL, of 304, Regent-street, sole inventress of Teaching the art of Dressmaking in a series of Lessons, and for the purpose of the most perfect capacity a correct knowledge of Cutting, Fitting, and executing in the most finished style, in Mr. Lawson, for One Guinea. The correctness of this mode can be fully substantiated by reference to pupils.—Apprentices and Improvers Wanted.

THE HAIR.—Of the numerous compounds constantly announced, for promoting the growth or reproduction of the Hair, few deserve even to be named, beyond a very limited period, whilst ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, with a reputation unparalleled, is still so the increase in public estimation. The singular virtues of this successful invention for Restoring, Preserving, and Beautifying the Human Hair, are too well known and appreciated to need comment. The very facts of the high and distinguished patronage it enjoys, its general use in all countries, together with numerous testimonials constantly received in its favour, are authorities which stamp its superior excellence and title over all attempts of a similar nature. Being universally preferred, its consequent great demand renders the supply of the compounders, who vend the most spurious trash as the "macassar" Macassar Oil; whereas, the genuine article is wholly the invention and property of A. Rowland and Son, and the authentication of its costly exotic materials (solely imported by them) renders obsolete any attempt to discover its component parts; thus proving the imposition of all other articles bearing the title of "Macassar Oil." The genuine article has the words ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL engraved in two lines on the Wrapper; and on the back of the wrapper nearly 1500 times, containing 20,000 letters.—Price 3s. 6d.; 7s.; Family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s. per bottle.—"A. All others are FRAUDULENT COUNTERFEITS."—For Published, Parts I. and II. Price Sixpence each, stamped for post.

READ the following TESTIMONIAL in favour of PARKER'S LIFE PILLS, which is sufficient to convince the most prejudiced person that they are all that is required to conquer disease, and consequently, preserve life.

To T. ROBERTS and Co.
Sir,—I beg to send you the following testimonial, which I have just received from Mr. Williams, Union-street, Nottingham. Yours, obediently,
G. BATTERS, Chapel-lane, Nottingham.
Sir,—Printing is a great blessing to mankind, for now I am enabled to make known, through you, a perfect Cure, by taking PARKER'S LIFE PILLS, of extremely bad Indigestion, a Bilious disorder, and Sick Headache, which I have been subjected to for years; and money enough has been paid to physicians and surgeons, which ever would have been a little fortune to me. I wish every fellow-creature to be made aware that I was wonderfully relieved by taking one box of PARKER'S LIFE PILLS. Accident threw a testimonial in my way of a miraculous cure of a bilious attack and sick headache. The second box enabled me to go about my business with spirit and alacrity; and by taking two or three more boxes, I am happy to add my humble testimony of a perfect cure of that dreadful disorder—biliousness and sick headache, which rendered me, before I took PARKER'S LIFE PILLS, unfit for business. Considering the loss of time and pain, persons would find that one box of PARKER'S LIFE PILLS is worth instead of 1s. 15s., as many gossams. May all persons who are afflicted with PARKER'S LIFE PILLS, be the donors of such a testimonial.
Yours, thankfully,
M. WILLIAMS, Union-street, Nottingham.
To Mr. G. Batters.
PARKER'S LIFE PILLS are sold by all respectable Medicine Vendors. See the words "PARKER'S LIFE PILLS," in White Letters on a Red Ground, on the Government Stamp.

BY AUTHORITY OF THE ACT 3 AND 4 VICTORIA.
THE CENSUS OF ENGLAND AND WALES, SCOTLAND AND IRELAND; containing an Alphabetical List of Parishes, Towns, &c., in Great Britain and Ireland, with their respective Population and numerous Statistical Particulars. Also a Detail of the Occupations of the People, showing the Number of each Sex employed in every Trade or Profession in Great Britain and Ireland.
Part I. contains ENGLAND and WALES, and Part II. SCOTLAND and IRELAND, which may be had separately, price Sixpence each.
Sold by all Newsellers; or may be had direct from the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, by enclosing the amount in a letter, post paid, to Mr. LITTLE, 155, Strand.

MR. DICKENS'S NEW CHRISTMAS BOOK.
In December, in binding as usual.
THE CHIMES: A GOBLIN STORY of Some Bells that Ring an Old Year Out and a New Year In. By CHARLES DICKENS. The Illustrations by Daniel Maclise, R.A.; Clarkson Standish, R.A.; John Leech; and Richard Doyle.
London: CHAPMAN and HALL, 155, Strand.

NEW ILLUSTRATED WORK FOR CHRISTMAS.
With the Magazines, on November 30th, 1844, price One Guinea, handsomely bound.
CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE.—By LORD BYRON. A New Edition, with Many Valuable Engravings.
*A Specimen may be seen at every Library.
JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

IN MONTHLY NUMBERS, PRICE ONE SHILLING.
On the First of December will be published, with Illustrations as usual, by PEARCE, FANNY, THE LITTLE MILLINER; OR, THE RICH AND THE POOR. By CHARLES HOWGROVE, Esq. Author of "Tales of the Gleaner, or the Adventures of an Emigrant," "The Man without a Profession," &c.
London: JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

THE ORIGINAL MELODIES FOR ALL INSTRUMENTS.
The Melody of Jullien's "Mazurka," now playing at Covent Garden Theatre, and three other Mazurkas. Also the whole set of The Welsh Quadrilles, and 12 other Melodies, for 24. Sent, post-free, for 5 stamps, addressed to the Editor, 25, Paternoster-row. Nos. 1 to 24 of THE HER may be had in 4 neat vols., 2s. 6d. each. Also, "THE PIANO EDITION" (a light music for Piano), in 15 Nos., price 4s. each. Also, "MY DUETT BOOK," in 15 Nos., price 4s. each.—HACKWOOD; STRANDBURY, 15, Fenchurch.

THE PANDORA (No. 159).—The Number for this day, SATURDAY, 30th November, contains:—"The Spirit of Truth," by Madame de Chastelain—"Fanny, the Little Milliner," by PEARCE, Esq., of 155, Strand, by the Editor—Parsons' Sketches, "The Hackney Coach Window," by H. Observer—"First Arts," "Painting considered in a religious point of view," by "John Martin," by the Chevalier de Chastelain—Theatre: "The Castle of Ayrone," by Balfe—"Old Heads and Young Hearts," by "Bourgeois," "The Toilet," "Pandora's Box," &c., &c.—Price 3d.; Stamped Edition, 4d.—J. CURRIE, Publisher, 12, Old Broad-street.

NEW BOOKS SENT for PERUSAL (by Railroad and Steam Vessels) to all parts of the Coast and Kingdom, from BELL'S English and Foreign Public Library, Holles-street, London. Terms, gratis and post-free, on application. An unlimited supply of New Books is furnished to the Library, which, as soon as the demand has ascended, may be purchased by the Subscribers, if desired, at Half Price.—The DUPLICATE CATALOGUE of such works at present on sale, is now ready, and may be had gratis and post-free on application.

TO PIANOFORTE PLAYERS.—FOURTEEN NEW POLKAS, as danced at Brough and Mansion House, with New Song, "Invitation to Dance the Polka," are given in THE PIANIST for DECEMBER, No. 48, price 2s. 6d., sent post-free, by enclosing thirty stamps, to the Editor of "Pianist," 25, Paternoster-row. Also, Twelfth Edition of No. 45 "Pianist," containing the Six Royal Polkas, with instructions for dancing them; price 1s.; post free, sixteen stamps. No. 45 contains Two Sets of Polka Quadrilles, for 14. Supplements to 45 and 46, each 2s., contain Two Extraneous Polkas of Mr. Wilson complete (thirty-one Scotch Songs). Complete sets of "Pianist" always ready.—HACKWOOD; STRANDBURY, 15, Fenchurch.

GUIDE TO ENGLISH ETIQUETTE, with the Rules of the Polite Society for Ladies and Gentlemen in all the Relations of Life.—This work applies to every situation in life, and solves every difficulty of Etiquette, as to what after reading it, no person need be at any loss whatever company they may be in. It is equally adapted to Ladies as to Gentlemen, and is on the whole the most perfect compilation of Maxims that has yet appeared.—Ladies' Fashionable Magazine.—Price 2s., elegantly bound. To be had of all Booksellers, or of the publisher, C. HENNING, Red Lion-square, Fleet-street, who sends the work post free on the receipt of 2s. or 24 stamps.

WELSH QUADRILLES.—The very popular set, now playing, will be found in the "PIANIST," December, price 1s., or 1s. 4d., post-free. Also Teller's favourite Fanny Waltzes, the set of six; the celebrated Welshman Polka, and the New Polka, by C. Hunter, now played at Vauxhall. Three beautiful Irish Polkas—the Irish Polka, the Waterford Polka, and the Killybeg Polka; and Mr. Allen's very No. 1 & 2 Polka—"In the Grove near the River," as sung by him with great applause. Price 1s. 6d. Made for 1s., cheapest work published, 12 pages in every number. Published by DROGDA, 10, Middle-row, Holborn.

New Ready, Mitchell's Arithmetic Edition price only One Shilling
ECONOMY for the SINGLE and MARRIED; or, Young Wife and Bachelor's Guide to Expenditure, from £30 to £100 per Annum.—To the single, the Married, the resident in Town and Country, the Author can confidently assure that this work is equally important, and he doubts not, that after reading it, they will all mutually join in recommending it to friends, neighbours, and acquaintances, as next to a town review, one of the very best things they can possess.—London: J. A. NEWBERRY, Red Lion-square, Fleet-street. May be had of any Bookseller, or by post, upon enclosing 1s., or 12 stamps to the Publisher.

FARMERS' JOURNAL.—DISTRESS OF THE AGRICULTURAL LABOURERS.—DECEMBER, will contain No. 2 of a Series of Articles on the present DISTRESSED STATE of the AGRICULTURAL LABOURERS of ENGLAND, and the desirableness of an Inquiry into the Cause of that Distress by the Central and Provincial Agricultural Protection Societies. The FARMERS' JOURNAL is now acknowledged to be the leading agricultural journal of the Empire, and its scientific and practical correspondence is unrivalled. No farmer should be without it. May be had of all Newsellers, and at the Office, 7, North Wellington-street, Strand, London. Price 6d.

Nearly Ready, in Foolscap two, price 6s. 6d., the SECOND and Concluding SERIES of
THE SABBATH COMPANION: being Essays on First Principles of Christian Faith and Practice. Designed especially for the use of Young Persons. By the Rev. THOMAS DALE, M.A., Canon of St. Paul's and Vicar of St. Bride's, London.
By the same Author.

THE SABBATH COMPANION (FIRST SERIES): being Essays on First Principles of Christian Faith and Practice.—"They are full of truth and beauty, and so may God speed them."—Church of England Quarterly Review.
BOWMAN and KNOX, 155, Oxford-street, and all Booksellers.

AMUSEMENT BLENDED WITH INSTRUCTION.
BUTTER'S TANGIBLE ARITHMETIC AND GEOMETRY FOR CHILDREN; an easy and effectual method of teaching Addition, Subtraction, &c., and Fractions; also the formation of Squares, Cubes, Pyramids, &c., and an endless variety of Buildings, with numerous Illustrative Cuts, admirably adapted for Preparatory Schools and Families. Second Edition, revised and improved. Price 1s.; or, with a box of 96 Colours, 2s.; with 144 Colours, 3s.; or with 144 large mahogany Colours, 10s.—A very ingenious and amusing manual, worthy the attention of all who are engaged in domestic or infantile education.—Wentworth Methodist Magazine. Sold by all Booksellers, Stationers, Teachers, &c. Agents: J. TROSBEL, 11, Fenchurch-street, Lincoln's-inn; Taylor and Walton, 25, Upper Gower-street; Payne and Son, 10 and 12, High Holborn; T. ELLIS, 37, New Broad-street, London.

12, Great Marlborough-street, Nov. 20.
MR. COLBURN'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

MY ADVENTURES. By COL. MONTGOMERY MAXWELL, K. H., commanding the 33rd Regt. Two Vols., small 8vo., with Portraits, price 2s. 6d.

THE PALAIS ROYAL; an Historical Romance. By the Author of "Monsi Quatre; or, the Days of the League." Three Vols.

THE CRESCENT AND THE CROSS; or, Romance and Realities of Eastern Travel. By ELIOT WARBURTON, Esq. Two Vols., small 8vo., with Twenty-one Illustrations. 25s., bound.

HILLINGDON HALL; a Tale of Country Life. By the Author of "Handley Cross." 3 vols.—The Author of Handley Cross is a writer of no common promise. He has a world of knowledge of life and manners, beyond what most of those now in vogue can pretend to.—Quarterly Review.

STRATHERN; a Novel. By the COUNTESS of BLESSINGTON. (In a few days.)
HARVEY CURRIE, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

MUSICAL COMPOSITION.—Ladies and Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a speedy knowledge of Harmony and Thorough Bass, should consult the unrivalled THEORETICAL WORKS, by ALBRECHTS-BERGER, the Master of Beethoven, Heller, Zelter, Fux, Geminiani, J. N. Hummel, Marco Kreutz, Loidorfer, Moschies, Preider, Krieger, Van Wyrtzen, Schneider, (F.), Umlauf, Waig, Currey, &c., translated by J. Mottet, Esq., in 2 vols., 8vo., of nearly 1000 pages, price 45s.; 2 vols., 8vo., of nearly 1000 pages, price 45s.; and a Complete Course of Contrapuntum and Fugue, translated by J. A. Hamilton, Esq., 2 vols., 8vo., 6s.; and Currey's Royal Academy School, Op. 600, dedicated to her Majesty, by Self-Tuition, 3 large folio volumes, each 31s. 6d.

CHURCH MUSIC, Edited by JOHN BISHOP, of Cheltenham.—TALLIS'S ORDER of the DAINTY SERVICE, with Rubrics and other Directions, printed in red and black, in one elegant vol. 8vo., gilt edges, price only 1s.; also, Tallis's Services for Twble, Alto, Tenor, and Bass, each 2s.; Organ Part, 2s.; also, by J. Bishop, a splendid edition of the Mass, from Mozart's Score, and the Creation, 2 large vols., 10s.; also, the Services, arranged by Clementi, only 21s. (formerly 42s.); Beethoven's Mass of Olives, arranged by Warren, 12s.; and Rossini's Mass of Olives, by ditto, 12s. Catalogues of Vocal Music, Guitars and Postage Free. In the press, Bayre's Cathedral Music, by Warren.

MUSIC MADE EASY.—HAMILTON'S MINIATURE COURSE of HARMONY and COMPOSITION.—No. 1. Catalogue of Thorough Bass, 2s. No. 2. Melody, Counterpoint, and Composition. No. 3. Double Fugue, 2s. No. 4. Art of Writing for an Orchestra, and on playing from Score, 2s. No. 5. The Invention, Exposition, Development, and Conclusion of Musical Ideas, 2s.; and his Dictionary of 2500 Musical Terms, 1s.

ORGAN MUSIC.
RINCK'S FIRST THREE MONTHS at the ORGAN, 8s.; and his Great Practical School, a new edition, by J. Rinck, 25s. Warren's Very Easy Tutor, 4s. Dittie Twenty-four Faciles and Rhythms, with Instructions, 6s. Bryan's 1st Improv. Tutor, 7s. Warren's Novelties for the Organ, in one vol., 2s. Viner's Organist's Library, 12s. J. S. Bach's Forty-eight Preludes, and Forty-eight Fugues, engraved by Currey, 51s. 6d. And his Art of Fugue, by do., 21s.—London: Published only by Messrs. CURRIE, 25, Fenchurch-street. Harrower-square, Music-sellers to her Majesty.

THE MINNESINGER'S SERENADE.

Written and Composed

BY J. AUGUSTINE WADE.

Andante affettuoso.

The dew-drop hangs up - on the wil - low, The

rall. a tempo

bird of night be - gins to wail, The sun is deep be - neath the bill - low, The moon is up in lus - tre pale; The flowers of day are gone to rest, Their life of light is in the west:— Then, O my Light of Love, ap - pear! A look will gild each an - xious tear That from my long-lag eyes doth stream, Here

colla voce a tempo

in the jeal - ous star - light's beam:— The dew-drop hangs up - on the wil - low, The bird of night be - gins to wail, The sun is deep be - neath the bill - low, The moon is up in lus - tre pale; Oh, come, sweet Mis - tress of the Night! Oh,

rall. a tempo

come and bless thy Min - stre! Lov - er's sight!

rall.

THE MINNESINGER'S SERENADE.

(Continued.)

And when upon thy beauty gazing,
I'll think there's nought on earth beside,
That's worth thy Minnesinger's praising,
Thou'lt be his only joy and pride;
My spirit shall not else rejoice
Than in thy smile and in thy voice:—
Then, O my Light of Love, appear!
A look will gild each anxious tear

That from my longing eyes doth stream,
Here in the jealous star-light's beam:—
The dew-drop hangs upon the willow,
The bird of night begins to wail,
The sun is deep beneath the billow,
The moon is up in lustre pale;
Oh, come, sweet Mistress of the Night!
Oh, come and bless thy Minstrel Lover's sight!

* The Minnesingers, which literally signifies love-singers, flourished in Ger. many contemporaneously with the eminent Troubadours of Provence, Castile, Catalonia, and Italy.

NEW MUSIC.

THAT'S MY MARQUESA, a Seguidilla, written and sung by Mr. C. MATHEWS; the music partly composed and adapted by T. GERMAY REED. Reed and Sons, High-street, Islington.

A very pleasant melody, well harmonised. The different accents, however, on the words "Marquessa" and "Rose," mar the rhythm, and make more nonsense of the words than they would have otherwise proved to be. We never heard of doves having blue eyes before Mr. Mathews informs us of the fact (?) in the second verse of this Seguidilla; and, moreover, we do not think that they are to be often found in Spain.

'Mongst the Moor-tinted maidens of that clime.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—Many thanks to J. Kling, Esq., for his problems. "A Lover of Chess" and "Rook."—The Chess Studies by George Walker is published at 10s. 6d.
"M. L. C. C.'s" information is correct. The problem is by "Greco," and was not quoted as an original problem.
"A. B. C."—The King cannot castle when in check.

The following game played at Vienna between Napoleon and the Automaton Chess Player must be considered more as a curiosity than as an example of a well contested game. Judging from the specimen before us, the great general does not appear to have been very au fait at this mimic game of war. Contrary to the rule laid down by the proprietor of the Automaton, Napoleon, who played with the black pieces, insisted on having the first move.

BLACK.	WHITE.
1. K P 2 sq	K P 2 sq
2. Q to K B 3rd	Q Kt to Q B 3rd
3. K B to Q B 4th	K Kt to B 3rd
4. K Kt to King's 2nd	K B to Q B 4th
5. Q Rook's P 1 sq	Q P 1 sq
6. Castles	Q B to adv. K Kt 4th
7. Q to her 3rd	K Kt to K R 4th
8. K R P 1 square	Q Bp takes Kt
9. Q takes Bp	K Kt to adv. K B 4th
10. Q to King's sq	Q Kt to adv. Q 4th
11. K Bp to his Q Kt 3d	K Kt takes adv. K R P (checks)
12. K to Rook's 2nd	Q to adv. K R 4th
13. K Kts P 1 sq	Q Kt checks K and Q
14. K to his Kt 2d	Kt takes Q checking
15. Rook takes Kt	Q to adv. K Kt's 4th
16. Q P 1	Bp takes K B P
17. Rook to his sq	Queen takes Kt's P and checks
18. King to his B sq	Bp to adv. Q 4th
19. King to his 2d	Mate in four moves

Solution to our last.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to adv. K's sq checking	K to R 2nd
2. Q Rook to adv. Q Kt 2nd and Queen covers checks
3. K Rook checks at adv. K Kt 2d	Queen takes K Rook
4. Queen checks at adv. K Kt 3d	King to Rook's sq *
5. K B P takes Q and checks.	King to Kt's sq
6. K R P 1 sq and mates.

* If King moves to Kt's square, white moves K R P 1 sq and mates with K B's Pawn.

PROBLEM.

(From "La Palamede." Number just received)

White to mate in four moves.

BLACK.

WHITE.

The Solution in our next.

N.B. a Problem by J. Kling, Esq., will appear in the next number.

REDUCTION OF POSTAGE BETWEEN ENGLAND AND BELGIUM.—The Gazette of Tuesday contains a Treasury warrant for the reduction of postage between England and Belgium, in pursuance of the treaty recently entered into with that country. After the 1st of December there is to be one uniform postage of 4d. on all letters sent from this country to Belgium, not exceeding half an ounce in weight. Letters may be pre-paid or not, at the option of the sender, but such sender is not to have the option of paying the British postage thereof only, and leaving the foreign postage to be paid in Belgium. The same postage is to be charged on letters transmitted between any part of the United Kingdom and the Colonies through Belgium. The charge is to be proportionate to letters exceeding half an ounce. British newspapers may be sent from the United Kingdom to Belgium free. On newspapers published in Belgium, and sent thence direct to any part of the United Kingdom, the charge is to be 10s. each. There also is to be the following charges:—Printed price-currents, commercial lists, and courses of exchange published in the United Kingdom, and sent thence direct to Belgium, 1d. each; printed price-currents, commercial lists, and courses of exchange published in Belgium, and sent thence direct to any part of the United Kingdom, 1d. each; British newspapers sent from the United Kingdom to her Majesty's colonies, or foreign countries, through Belgium, 2d. each.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 19, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1844.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 136.—Vol. V.]

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1844.

[SIXPENCE.]

DIVISIONS IN THE CHURCH.

IN PROPORTION as the attacks on the Church from without have diminished in number and virulence, its divisions have multiplied within. A few years ago it had to encounter the agitation against tithes; that somewhat settled, or at least abated in virulence, by the Tithe Commutation Act, it had to meet the excitement of the church-rate question, which was at one time made one of the watchwords of party, and had, like all other questions, its champions and martyrs. That storm, too, has blown over; there was never, probably, for the last half century, a period at which the Church of England had so little to battle with in the shape of active enmity. But in another direction the prospect is less satisfactory. Within the Church, there is dissension, uncertainty, confusion; opinions are in the full career of conflict; practices co-exist that are widely different; and, unless some authority is brought to bear on the questions that agitate the hierarchy of the English Establishment, there is no slight danger, at no distant time, of a complete division.

The section of the Church—for we dislike the word party in connection with such a subject—that has received the designation of Puseyite, sprang from the endeavour of a few conscientious clergymen to awake within the Establishment a more lively attention to the duties that devolve upon it, and to oppose a bolder front to the advances of dissent. It was, in fact, a revival. Much piety, much learning, undoubted zeal, were brought to the task, and had these been wisely directed, the result would have been one of more unmingled good than that which has actually been effected. But the piety and learning that could not be denied them had been excited and nourished among the works of men of other ages, and had grown more familiar with the practices of the past than they were with the requirements of the present. They attached over-much importance to outward forms and practices, seeing in them that significance and force which unquestionably did once exist, but which had long departed; and, noting this, they fell into the error of believing, that to revive those forms and observances would revive the spirit also from which they sprang. They failed in what they intended, and succeeded to an extent they probably did not dream of, in what they perhaps never meant. The people were startled by the revival of things so long forgotten as to be quite obsolete, and alienated from the reformed Church by practices that had so strong a likeness to those of Rome. On the other hand, those who had let their minds dwell on these forms, as ministers of them, became captivated by their symbolism, and became equally estranged from the Reformed Establishment, but in another direction. They were attracted towards the Church of Rome, and many, as it is known, openly became members of that body. So difficult is it to say to the mind when launched on any course of inquiry, thus far shalt thou go and no farther. This is the danger of reviving usages more or less kindred to another faith, and from it has arisen all the difficulties that now beset the Establishment. And that revival has been accompanied by other manifestations which, to large numbers of reflecting persons, were more alarming. The publications of the Oxford school were an evident bridging over of the gulf, between the Anglican Church and that of Rome—a gulf which, as long as either Church remains what it really is, can never be closed, the difference being one of essence and principle, not of forms or observances. These, in whatever shape they have appeared, have had one tendency, visible in many of the "Tracts for the Times," in more than one sermon, and in all the "Lives of the ST. MARY'S NEW CHURCH, HEME HILL.

INTERIOR OF ST. MARY'S NEW CHURCH HEME HILL.

disturbed districts, and endeavour to bring about the surrender of the forts and restore the general tranquillity. The British forces were to be divided into two brigades, one from Bombay, and the other from Madras, until a larger subsidiary force should be formed. Much blame had been attached to Mr. Berr, the late political agent, to whom neither the other side is alluded to have been in a general measure owing, and who had been superseded by Colonel Threlkeld.

The storming of the fort of Samanghur, and the defeat of the body of insurgents that came to its relief, had in part lowered their courage, yet their demands were still as formidable as ever. They had lost about 500 men at Samanghur and near it; yet their resolution to defend their properties and their rights seems to be unshaken. The Madras and Bombay Governments were exerting their utmost influence to put an end to those commotions.

The latest news from Kolapore was, that all hopes of a pacification by negotiation are at an end.

Her Majesty's 93d Regiment marched from Sattara for the disturbed districts, where there will be some 15,000 men assembled.

Scinde, it appears, is now perfectly tranquil. Sir Charles Napier had adopted the plan of marching the troops away from the rivers' banks during the time when the exhalations from the mud while drying rendered their residence there exceedingly dangerous. Sickness prevailed to any remarkable extent in only four regiments, one of which, her Majesty's 10th, was at Karachi, having marched from Sukkur, and two were at Shikarpore, viz., the 3d Light Cavalry and the 5th Bengal Infantry; and the fourth, the 64th Regiment of Bengal Infantry, was at Sukkur. The amount of sickness in those four corps was above 1100, being about half of all the cases in the whole of the Scinde army. The other two corps, and especially the Bombay regiments, were very healthy.

There is no news of the slightest political importance from either Calcutta or Madras. Sir Henry Hardinge continues with his council at Calcutta, studying the duties of his office. He had already directed his attention to some local improvements, and to the establishment of a better system of education among the natives.

CHINA.

There is nothing important from China. The French Ambassador arrived at Macao on the 15th August. The American Ambassador had negotiated a treaty similar to the one entered into by the British authorities, but with additional explanatory clauses. The latter was about to return to the United States.

A British expedition had been sent from Singapore, to root out the piratical tribes on the north-west coast of Borneo. It was composed of her Majesty's ship Dido, Captain Keppell, and the East India Company's steamer Phlegathon. The expedition proceeded in the first instance up the river Sukarran. The boats were at first repulsed, but having been reinforced, the steamer and marines landed, destroyed the fortifications, and took sixty guns. Mr. Wade, first lieutenant of the Dido, Mr. Steward, and several men, were killed in the affair. The capital of the King of Kolo, by whom the Honourable F. Murray was murdered, had been destroyed. The ship Ceylon, D. Leguen master, from London to Bombay, was lost, on the 1st of October, on the northernmost reef of the Laccadives, marked in all the charts eighteen miles too forward. The ship Brilliant, from Calcutta to Bombay, was lost, on the 16th October, on the point of the Singer Nanda. The crews of both vessels were saved.

COMMERCIAL NEWS.

INDIA.—The Calcutta Money Market, on the 17th ult., was easy. Capital for all purposes was abundant, and transactions of safe character were met by advances and accommodation on the same favourable terms hitherto obtainable in the market: the amount of unemployed capital consequent on the still unfavourable disposition of the remittance exchange was considerable, which induced investment in the public funds and other securities, the valuations of which were forced up almost beyond precedent.

From Bombay, Nov. 1, it is stated that "the harvest, we believe, will be equal to the average of former years, but so long as the crops continue on the ground our market will continue dull." The trade in cotton and piece goods was dull. In twist and yarn some improvement had been manifested.

CHINA.—Our intelligence comes down to the 30th of August. At Canton, several heavy purchases of silk had been made. The tea which had been brought to market were all bought up at prices varying from 35 to 45 taels. The following are the prices at which purchases have been made:—Congo old, 19 dollars to 16 dollars; new ditto, 23 dollars to 42 dollars; Cape new, 19 dollars to 37 dollars; sooking old, 16 dollars to 30 dollars; sooking new, 30 to 18 dollars; orange pekoe new, 37 to 34 dollars; orange, fine scented, 30 to 20 dollars; twankay, 14 to 34 dollars; young hyson, 50 to 16 dollars; hyson skin, 15 to 32 dollars; gunpowder, 43 to 24 dollars; imperial, 40 to 67. The market was dull for all descriptions of cotton. All the Hong Kong merchants were summoned into the city of Canton on August the 13th, when the authorities demanded a further payment of 3,000,000 of dollars as their portion of the Canton ransom money. The Hong Kongers to pay, and the general impression is that they will be imprisoned. Meanwhile Hongqua, Sanqua, and some of the more wealthy of the Hong, have left their Hong.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

DEEDS OF GIFTS AND WILLS.—In the Court of Queen's Bench on Monday, a case was tried—Alexander Berrford Hope v. Harner and others. Executors of Henry Philip Hope—which involved an important question as to the execution of a will by a deed of gift. It was an action of trover brought by the third son of Lady Berrford against the executors of his uncle, to recover a cabinet of diamonds and other precious stones, estimated to be worth £16,000, and which the plaintiff claimed under a deed of gift executed by the deceased in favour of the plaintiff, in April, 1838. It appeared that the deceased, Mr. Henry Philip Hope, who was the brother of the late Mr. Thomas Hope, of Duchesse-street, was, like all the other members of the family, a person of large wealth, of which he expended a considerable portion in gratifying his inclination for articles of taste and service. He had a most valuable and peculiar collection of Dutch pictures, another of bronzes, one of China, and a collection of diamonds and other jewels, worth about £50,000, which were the subject of the present action. He had three nephews, sons of Mr. Thomas Hope and of the present Lady Berrford, with all of whom he lived upon affectionate terms, and who were all the objects of his bounty, and to whom he made considerable bequests by his will. To the eldest, Mr. Henry Thomas Hope, he gave his collection of pictures; to the second, Mr. Adrian Hope, he gave the bronzes and china; and to the third, who was the present plaintiff, he gave the collection of precious stones which were the subject of the present action. The manner in which he conveyed the jewels to the plaintiff was, however, different from that in which he transferred the other legacies to the other brothers. In 1838, he executed a deed of gift, in consideration of natural love and affection, to Mr. Alexander Berrford Hope, whereby he conveyed to him absolutely and irrevocably the jewels in question, which he described in the deed as being contained in a casket of certain dimensions. The description of the casket being, however, inaccurate in this respect, was amended by the donor, who wrote the true dimensions over the original words and authenticated the alterations in the margin. The object of conveying the diamonds by deed was to evade the payment of the legacy duty, which would attach upon a bequest by will, but neither the diamonds nor the deed were delivered to the donee, who, according to the evidence, appeared not to be aware of his uncle's intention until he received the deed of gift in a sealed envelope from Lady Berrford upon the death of Mr. Henry Philip Hope, in 1839. By his will, of which the defendants were executors, he left the residue of his property to his three nephews, and the question at present for consideration was, whether the deed of 1838 operated under the circumstances in such a manner as to vest the whole of the collection of diamonds in Mr. Alexander Hope as a gift, or whether, supposing such deed to be ineffectual for that purpose, the diamonds became part of the residue, and so were divisible equally between the three nephews of the deceased. It was stated that one of the diamonds cost the deceased £14,500. Among the witnesses called for the plaintiff was Mr. Berr, of whom Mr. Philip Hope had purchased a great portion of the gems contained in the cabinet. He deposed to the state of the cabinet in 1832, 1834, and subsequently. He had seen Mr. H. P. Hope deposit the velvet writing in the drawer of the cabinet, and had been frequently informed by Mr. H. P. Hope that he had given the cabinet to Mr. Alexander Berrford Hope. On his cross-examination by Sir Thomas Wilde it was elicited that, between 1832 and 1834, a great many jewels, which had formed part of the collection, had been sold or exchanged. He also admitted that a sapphire had been purchased for the collection. Viscountess Berrford stated that the plaintiff was her son; that her eldest son, Mr. H. T. Hope, had inherited the bulk of the property of her late husband, Mr. Thomas Hope; that the property of her late husband's brother, Mr. Adrian Hope, who died in Holland, had been divided into two parts, one part of which had been inherited by Mr. H. P. Hope (who had a great aversion to the legacy duty), and the other part had been divided equally between her sons, Henry Thomas, Adrian, and Alexander Berrford; that Mr. H. P. Hope had left his pictures to Mr. H. T. Hope, and his china and bronzes to Mr. Adrian Hope, and that Mr. H. P. Hope had asked her, in 1838, if she thought that Mr. Alexander Berrford Hope would preserve his collection of gems intact if he left them to him, to which she replied in the affirmative; that in April, 1838, Mr. H. P. Hope gave her ladyship a sealed parcel, to be delivered to Mr. A. B. Hope, after his (Mr. H. P. Hope's) death. That parcel, by the evidence of Gibbs, the footman, and of Banks, the butler in the Berrford family, was traced into the possession of Mr. Alexander Berrford Hope, and by the evidence of Viscountess Berrford, was proved to have contained a deed of gift, dated April, 1838, of the gems in question, to Mr. Alexander Berrford Hope. The deed was then put in and read, as was the probate of the will of Mr. H. P. Hope. The case for the plaintiff having closed, Sir T. Wilde, for the executors, contended that it was evident the deed was not intended to operate immediately, for Mr. H. P. Hope was very fond of the jewels, and therefore was not likely to have given his nephew the power of disposing of his possession during his lifetime. No one knew of the deed; not even Lady Berrford or Mr. Alexander Hope, as long as Mr. H. P. Hope lived. Mr. H. P. Hope was averse to the payment of the legacy duty, and there could be no doubt but that he intended this deed to operate as a will. In fact, it was a will and not a deed, for he had never parted with his power over the deed, or over the property, until his death. The deed, therefore, was not a perfect deed, and the party could take nothing under it. He asked the jury, did Mr. Henry Philip Hope intend that his nephew should have the power of depriving him of possession of the jewels the day after he had executed it, for if he did not, the deed was void? He submitted that the so-called deed was not a deed at all; that there was nothing to show that it was intended to operate as a deed. There was, besides, an alteration made in the body of the deed in describing the cabinet, which was sufficient to vitiate it. The cabinet described in the deed was a former old cabinet; that description had been erased, and a description of the dimensions of the present cabinet inserted in pencil. That measure being unaccounted for, vitiated the deed entirely. The property, therefore, remained undisposed of, and passed by his will.—Lord Denham, in summing up, told the jury that the question was, whether the delivery of the deed of gift had been so complete as to vest the property in the plaintiff. If it were not, then the plaintiff could not claim the property. If the deed were properly executed, so that the person witnessing the deed, or any other person known of its contents, although the donor might not, that would be a good delivery. They would therefore consider whether he intended, at the time of executing the deed, to part with the property to Mr. A. B. Hope; if he did, the execution was a good one. There was, however, a difficulty upon the face of the deed itself. The description of the cabinet was most important. If the original description, that of the old cabinet, had stood, great doubts might arise as to whether anything was given at all, but that description had been altered; the question was, had or had not those alterations taken place before the execution of the deed. If they had been made before execution the deed was valid; if not the deed was invalid. The question for their decision was, did Mr. H. P. Hope intend to part with the property to Mr. Alexander Berrford Hope, when he executed the deed. With regard to the clause referring to Mr. H. P. Hope an almost unlimited power over the property during his life, it was a question of law for consideration afterwards what might be the effect of that clause, rather than a question for the consideration of the jury.—The jury, after a short consultation, returned a verdict for the plaintiff—damages, £40,000.

THE HAMPDEN BANK OF JOHNSON, JOHNSON, AND MANN.—Mr. Mansfield appeared at the Bankruptcy Court on Monday, for the purpose of passing his final examination, and was examined at considerable length as to the amount of the capital (stated in the balance-sheet to be £17,000), which he actually had in the business of the firm, when it appeared that the property at Aldgate would realise £10,000, and leave a surplus of about £7,000 in aid of the respective estates. Mr. Commissioner Goulburn considered the bankrupt's balance-sheet to be perfectly satisfactory, as well as his explanations, and passed his final examination. His Honour also directed the applications for the certificates to stand for the 4th Jan. next. The declaration of a dividend was advertised for the same day, but some took place, as considerable difficulty has arisen in ascertaining to which estate the surplus really belongs, and under such circumstances the payment of the dividend has been deferred to afford time for further inquiry.

EXTRAORDINARY BILL TRANSACTIONS.—THE CASE OF JAMES GIBBS.—This extraordinary case was again heard in the above court on Wednesday, before Mr. Commissioner Holroyd. The present proceedings arose out of an order by the Chief Judge of the Court of Review, that the matter should be referred back to the Court of Bankruptcy for re-examination by the Hon. Commissioner. Mr. Edwin James, for the assignees, having briefly recapitulated the leading facts which led to the adjournment of the bankrupt's examination, with filing a day for his passing, and having read the order from the Court of Review, added that it would that day be the duty of the assignees to examine fully into the correctness of the bankrupt's accounts. He had, indeed, filed a sheet which was particularly intricate, and, as he (Mr. James) was instructed, anything but satisfactory. The transactions therein stated extended over a period ranging from 1823 to 1843, the date of the fiat. The debts amounted to some £121,000, the liabilities to £20,000 more, making in all about £200,000. But there were some of the transactions so singularly striking, so very extraordinary, that, on first sight, they might be deemed altogether improbable. The bankrupt had been what is termed a scribbler; he raised money for parties upon annuities or otherwise; his transactions had been of a most extended character, and yet all the books produced by him to that court were only two in number—a cash book and a ledger. The ledger, however, was itself no voucher, but a mere echo of the cash book. Was the bare fact not a startling one, that a man supposed to carry on cash operations to an amount above a million of money, could do so with only one cash-book? He asked if it were possible to do so? That cash-book was also grossly inaccurate in its details, and dated only from 1833, for some book which had existed before that period, had been destroyed. They were not told why, but he (Mr. James) could, perhaps, assign a reason. At that time a bill had been filed against the bankrupt by Lord Glenamoy, and when called upon to produce the book, it was discovered that it had been destroyed. That was certainly a remarkable coincidence, if nothing more. The bankrupt's profits appeared to have been about £2000 a year, and yet when he came to that court there was one sum of £200,000 charged for discounts and commission. They had not had one voucher for even £5 of that amount. Not one voucher from the man who had £2000 a year, and who yet charged £200,000 in his sheet for discount and commission. It was preposterous. But that sum of £200,000, large as it was, had to be increased by £18,000, which he had charged against another, when he himself, and he only, was personally liable for it. The learned counsel then entered into a detail of the bankrupt's transactions with Lord Kensington—transactions, running over a term of years, and involving accounts upon bills and annuities—the considerable sums realised, with scarcely an exception, having been appropriated by the bankrupt to his own purposes. The discounts, then, upon the amount so appropriated by the bankrupt, being £18,000, would, if added to the £200,000 unaccounted for, make £218,000. There were other transactions of a similar kind with Major-General Wyndham. The bankrupt, on the 11th November, 1843, a time when he was notoriously embarrassed, had written a letter to that gentleman, stating that he had an excellent opportunity of investing money to considerable advantage, and he persuaded General Wyndham to entrust him with bills to the amount of £10,000. These he discounted for his own use at 40 or 50 per cent., and he had now got, of course, to account for the money. He also got General Wyndham to advance him £10,000, in two notes of £5000 each, under pretence of lending them to a man named Youds, at a large rate of interest; but that amount also he retained in his own hand. Such was but a specimen of the manner in which his business was transacted. His transactions in bills were very large indeed, but though he had a book of bills payable, he had exhibited none of bills receivable. That there had been such a book was perfectly clear, for it would have been impossible to carry on such a business without it. The profits accruing from bills of costs amounted in one year to £23,000, yet the drafts of those bills had been also destroyed.—Mr. W. C. Wright, accountant for the assignees, was called, and verified the statements advanced by the learned counsel.—The bankrupt was then placed in the witness-box, and examined by Mr. James: He had no vouchers for any part of the £200,000. He never had a book of bills receivable. The date of bills due could be ascertained by the cash-book. The dates in that book were not always correct, but he could not explain why they should not be so. In some cases "lumping sums" were set down to certain accounts, which might balance them exactly. He did not put them down, nor did he intend that they should be so balanced. His intention was to pay General Wyndham's bills when they became due. He had not done so. They were all dishonoured.—After some further examination the matter was adjourned for six weeks, in order that the bankrupt might furnish vouchers, where that could be done, or give the names of the parties to whom the amounts had been given, and the dates at which those payments were made.

IN RE THE REV. DR. KENNY.—The insolvent is the rector of St. Olave's, Southwark, and this day came up upon application for his interim order. His schedule states debts and liabilities (the latter chiefly upon accommodation bills) at from £7900 to £10,000. The reverend doctor's living was set down at about £650 a year, of which he proposed to set aside £450 a year for the benefit of his creditors. The insolvent regretted much his present position, and was willing to give every information in his power. After some further discussion, the further hearing was adjourned to the 24th, the insolvent in the interim to furnish the required information.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

MANSLAUGHTER BY THE CAPTAIN OF ONE OF THE WATERMAN STEAMERS.—A young man, named Samuel Simms, was indicted for having, while in command of the Waterman's steamer No. 6, improperly run down a small boat, rowed by Edward Everett, a licensed waterman, and containing four passengers, by which the said Edward Everett and another person were drowned. The circumstances were mentioned in our paper at the time. The jury found the prisoner guilty, but recommended him to mercy. The Common-Sergeant sentenced him to four months' imprisonment.

Mr. Henry Berrford, an apothecary, at Lambeth, who, it will be recollected, was committed for the alleged manslaughter of his wife, has been tried and acquitted.

A DARING SWINDLER.—Thomas Field, alias John Englefield, alias William West, aged 60, described as an "agent," was indicted for unlawfully obtaining, by false pretences, 3s. 6d. of Edward Hammond, a similar sum from William Wall, and 2s. 6d. from William Harding. The three characters were included in one indictment, containing three counts. Mr. O'Brien appeared for the prosecution. It appeared that the prisoner, under the name of West, was convicted at the June session, 1843, of the count, of defrauding several poor persons, by pretending that there were fortunes lying in the Court of Chancery belonging to them unclaimed, which he undertook to recover on being furnished with means to take the necessary steps. He was sentenced to only one year's imprisonment. The moment he was at large he commenced his old trade, and between June and October, in the present year, he had deceived above fifty poor creatures, whose disappointed hopes, after having been excited by his schemes, produced a far greater amount of suffering than the loss of the few shillings, as were as it was to them, imposed. His mode of proceeding was in all cases precisely the same. He introduced himself as the agent of Mr. William West, 55, New-cut, Lambeth (one of his own names de guerre), an attorney, whose business was to discover heirs-at-law and next of kin, and to do every thing else kind and charitable to the needy and afflicted. There was a large sum of money, a freehold property, and securities in the funds, varying in amount according to his humour from £400 to £500, left by a distant and forgotten relation of his duke, and from ten to sixty years in Chancery. A petition should be filed, which would cost only 3s. 6d.; and if, as in many instances was the case, the duke had not the means of raising even a crown, the prisoner took half a crown or 2s., or whatever else he could squeeze out of their sanguine hope and desire to be relieved from piteous poverty. Accordingly, as they appeared to be utterly destitute or still squarer, he dropped the case or tried it on again, giving up only when no more could be possibly be had.—The jury returned a verdict of guilty upon each count of the indictment.—The prisoner, who was said to have been formerly an attorney, displayed the most surprising impudence. Although perfectly aware of his being thoroughly known, he kept up his air of plausibility, and cross-examined the witnesses with an affectation of good faith and candour that would have been quite amusing, had not his proceedings brought so much misery to his victims.—The Common-Sergeant, in passing sentence, asked him how he happened to have grown eleven years older during his one year in prison? He was only 54 at his former trial in 1843, and he now called himself 65.—The prisoner made no reply.—The Common-Sergeant sentenced him to transportation for seven years. The court has adjourned till next sessions.

POLICE.

THE LATE FORGED TRANSFER AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND.—Wednesday was fixed for the re-examination of William Burgess, charged with forging two forged transfers for £5000, which stood in the books of the Bank of England in the name of Mr. William Ouseford. Burgess was examined by the Lord Mayor, his seat, and joined with afterwards the examination was resumed by Mr. Ouseford. William Burgess was shortly afterwards placed at the bar, in the custody of John Forester. He was dressed in a suit of black, over which he wore a dark brown tailcoat. He was in excellent spirits, and, being very lame, he was accommodated with a chair as on the last occasion. He is a tall young man, about 25 years of age, with light sandy hair and no whiskers.—The Lord Mayor (to Burgess): Have you any professional adviser?—Yes, Mr. Lord.—Mr. J. C. Salmon, solicitor, said he appeared for the prisoner.—Mr. Wain, from the office of Messrs. Freshfield and Co., the Bank solicitors, attended to prosecute.—Mr. Salmon (having consulted with the prisoner) said he was instructed to ask for a remand.—The Lord Mayor: On what ground?—Mr. Salmon said for the purpose of obtaining evidence in his behalf, and on that ground he thought there would be no objection to a remand on the part of the solicitors for the Bank.—Mr. Wain said he had a number of witnesses present. Unfortunately, one witness, whose evidence was very important, was attending a trial at Westminster, on Wednesday, and it was possible that he might not be able to give his evidence to-day. As there were so many witnesses present, perhaps it would be the best plan to take the evidence, as it would save them from much inconvenience. Mr. Salmon was quite in favour of this course. Mr. Ouseford was then called. He said he was an official agent in the Long-acre, Custom-house. Prior to the 10th of September last he was possessed of the sum of £5000 in the Three per Cent. Consolidated Annuities. (The book containing the entry of the fraudulent withdrawal of £5000 was then shown to him). Examination continued: The transaction recorded in the book is not in my handwriting; neither are the two signatures, "William Ouseford." I never gave any authority to William Burgess, or to any other person, to withdraw the sum of £5000 out of the £5000, which stood in my name in the Bank books.—Mr. Thomas Ingham, a clerk in the Bank of England, was next examined.—On Tuesday, the 10th of September last, the prisoner came to the counter and said to me, "Please to witness this transaction." The person who was with him purported to be the owner of the stock; his real name, I believe, was Joseph Elder. The prisoner wrote his name, and the person who was with him signed the name of "William Ouseford."—Mr. Salmon: Is it usual for Bank clerks to identify persons transferring stock?—Witness: It has been the practice for a considerable time.—Mr. Salmon: It is a very improper practice.—The witness said the system had been discontinued since the fraudulent transfer.—Mr. Tupper, a stockbroker, examined: I have known the prisoner about twelve months, from his being a clerk in the office in the Bank in which I was in the habit of transacting business. In the latter part of August he came to me and stated that a friend of his, who had £5000 in the Three per Cent. Consolidated Annuities, was desirous of raising £5000. On the morning of Sept. 10th he brought me the necessary papers filled up for the transfer of £5000. To the best of my knowledge he was not accompanied by any person. I sold the stock to a gentleman named Clement Smith. It was divided into two portions. Mr. Wain said the other witness to whom he had alluded could prove the payment of the cheque. John Forester was next examined.—In consequence of a warrant granted by Sir William Maynard (the late Lord Mayor), on the 2nd of November last, for the prisoner's apprehension, he proceeded to America, and arrived here soon after his arrival on Brewster's Island, near the lighthouse, and about eleven miles from Boston, and brought him to England.—Mr. Salmon then applied to have the prisoner remanded until Wednesday next.—The Lord Mayor: Burgess, have you any objection to be remanded to that day?—Burgess: I have no objection, my lord.—He was remanded accordingly.—The prisoner throughout paid great attention to the evidence, and frequently conferred with his solicitor.

THE TEMPER SOCIETY OF THE POOR LAW.—At Wandsworth Police-office, on Tuesday, William Wallace, John White, and William Brown, farm labourers, out of employment, were charged with refusing to work in the Kingston Union.—Robert Odbert, the porter, said the prisoners were admitted on Sunday night; they had their supper given to them and went to bed. Next morning they were each required to crush ten pounds of bones before they had their breakfast. They refused to do this, and were given into custody. Wallace was usually relieved on Friday last, and then he did the work.—Mr. Paynter asked how much time would be occupied in crushing ten pounds of bones?—The porter replied not more than two hours.—The prisoner Wallace said it was a good four hours' work, and then, after it was done, they had only half a pound of dry bread given them, and this was called a breakfast.—Mr. Paynter: Is this so; as no cheese given with the bread?—Porter: No, sir. They have the bread only, and it is according to the diet table issued by the Poor-law Commissioners.—Mr. Paynter observed that at the Wandsworth Union they were given with the bread, and he thought they might do so at other Unions.—The prisoners said they had only straw to lie on, and they thought four hours' hard work too much labour for a bit of dry bread.—Mr. Paynter observed that if the prisoners went to the Union as casual paupers, they must expect to pay in labour for the food given them. He should commit Wallace for ten days, as he had acted as a ringleader, and the two other prisoners for seven days each, with hard labour.—(And it is come to this in "merry England"? It is a lamentable reflection that men who, perhaps, form part of that body which used to be the "country's pride," must work four hours for half a pound of dry bread. Labour has become, indeed, a worthless commodity, when it can produce only such Lenten fare as this. This previous "diet-table" of the Poor-law Commissioners should be reformed as speedily as possible. Until there be some change, all that can be understood by the provisions of the New Poor-law Bill is starvation.)

ANOTHER LADY THIEF.—At Bow street, on Tuesday, a middle-aged woman, respectfully dressed in deep mourning, and appearing to walk lame, was charged with the offence of shoplifting. She had given the name of Leah Mary Roper, and stated that she resided in Fleet-street.—The evidence went to show that on Monday evening the prisoner entered the shop of Messrs. Hardwick and Co., drapers, 324, High Holborn, and, after looking at a variety of articles, made a few small purchases, at the same time expressing her admiration of some rolls of satinette which were lying upon the counter. She gave the assistant half-a-crown, and requested him to give her a bill of the goods she had bought, for which, with the change, she said she would presently call again. Her agitated appearance on leaving the shop, excited the suspicion of the young man, who then examined the pieces of satinette, one of which, forty-eight yards in length, and worth about 26s. he found missing. Shortly afterwards, the prisoner having returned, she was taken aside, and questioned upon the subject. A policeman was called in, to whom, after once denying the charge, she acknowledged her guilt, and promised to take him to the pawnbroker's opposite, where she had pledged the satinette for 2s. The officer accompanied her there, and saw her throw four sovereigns upon the counter, requesting the shopman to return the property which she had just put in pawn. This was done, and the satinette was immediately identified by the prosecutor's assistant.—A young man in the service of a drapery firm in Leicester-square gave the magistrate some information respecting a number of similar transactions on the part of the lady, who, it appeared, had been carrying on this mode of pilfering for several years past with great dexterity, having always evaded the vigilance of the police to discover her retreat. It was stated that until recently she had resided in Agar street, Strand, where about thirty or forty duplicates were at one time found under the carpet by a servant in the house.—Under these circumstances, Mr. Jardine thought it desirable to detain the prisoner till next Tuesday, when she would be committed for trial.—The prisoner, who said nothing to the charge, and appeared rather indifferent about it, was accordingly remanded.

THE TRICKS OF SINGERS.—At Worship-street on Tuesday, three men, named Edward Hayes, Charles Williams, and Michael Lyons, the two first named without legs, and the other (Lyons) with only one leg, who have of late formed a conspicuous group in the streets of the metropolis, singing and begging as broken-down mariners, were charged with being beggars in possession. Many and two other officers found them on Saturday in Vinebury-square with three large placards displayed on the pavement before them, composed of pictorial representations of the perils of the sea, and doggerel verses describing the manner in which they had become mariners, as they now appeared. One of them was represented to have lost his limbs in the Greenland fishery, another by frost in the same inhospitable clime, and the third by accident in the timber trade in North America. Reany said that all the prisoners had often been in custody, and several times convicted, and that Lyons had never been at sea at all and had on the former occasion stated that he lost his leg by accident in a coal-pit where he was employed. The officer added that they made an exceedingly profitable trade of begging, and had wives and families, whom they kept in the neighbourhood of Whitechapel, in as much comfort as many respectable tradespeople's. The placards, painted and inscribed as above-mentioned, were produced before the magistrate. The following verses from one of them will serve as a specimen of the whole:—

"The ocean I've crossed, my legs I have lost,
As plainly, good people, you may see;
Hard is my lot, for work I cannot,
Kind people take pity on me—
I lost my legs by the frost in North America."

The prisoner Lyons admitted that he had not been a mariner, but that he had lost his leg in a coal-pit as stated by the officer. The others said they had been sailors and mariners, as represented in their placards, and were incapable of earning the means of support. The officers proved that both Hayes and Williams had been many times convicted by the magistrates at the west-end of town, and Lyons twice convicted in the course of the present year. The magistrate (Mr. Bingham) committed the prisoners to the House of Correction—Hayes for three months, Williams two months, and Lyons one month.

SUDDEN DEATH AT LOWESTOFT.—Mr. H. G. portrait painter, of Lowestoft, was on Thursday found dead in his bed. The deceased having himself unwell, Mrs. Hog; went out for some medicine, but on her return she found him dead.

INCENDIARY FIRE ON THE FARM OF MR. ARTHUR SMITH, M.P., AT WATTON.—A fire broke out on Tuesday evening at Mr. Smith's farm, Watton, Herts, the occupation of Mr. Kimpton. The fire was first observed in a barley barn, in the centre of the extensive farm yard, at about half-past eight o'clock, and the engines were brought into play as soon as possible, but by the time the first engine arrived, five extensive and substantial barns filled with barley and wheat were on fire, and were destroyed. The loss to the occupier is estimated at £2000, who is insured to that amount in the Phoenix. The buildings are insured in the Sun. No doubt is entertained that the barns were wilfully fired, and a labourer has been arrested on suspicion. The chief part of the agricultural implements were preserved.

DEATH OF HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS SOPHIA MATILDA.

In part of our impression last week, it was our painful duty to record the death of the Princess Sophia Matilda.

An express arrived at Gloucester House yesterday (Friday) week, at two o'clock, confirming the melancholy intelligence, which took place at Blackheath, a little before one.

Her Royal Highness had taken her accustomed carriage riding the day before; on her return, however, a visible change was observed, and the medical attendants were summoned, but her Royal Highness continued to grow worse until she expired.

Her Royal Highness was sister to the late Duke of Gloucester, and in the 72nd year of her age.

This melancholy occurrence has occasioned an intense and painful sensation in the neighbourhood, where her Royal Highness's estimable character had endeared her to all ranks of society. This sudden termination of the Princess's indisposition was somewhat unexpected. For ten weeks her Royal Highness had not left her residence, until about a week since, when, contrary to all expectation, she appeared to rally considerably, and was enabled to take drives in her carriage. The Princess, we learn, was taken on the Thursday, and, on her return, she appeared more exhausted than usual, yet not so as to excite any peculiar anxiety. Next morning she felt worse, and required the attendance of her medical adviser, Mr. Wattford, who promptly waited on his royal patient, whom he found in a sinking condition, but not presenting any dangerous symptoms; and to whom he administered the proper remedies. He expressed a desire to remain with her Royal Highness, but, stating that she was disposed to sleep, she requested him to retire that he might attend on his other patients. Her maid remained in the room with her Royal mistress, but observed nothing particular until about half-past ten, when she observed a paleness overspread the features of the Princess, whom, on approaching the bed, she discovered to be dead; thus tranquilly had the severance of soul and body taken place in the most quiet and placid manner, unaccompanied by any struggle or convulsive agony. Miss Cotes was also with the Princess in her last moments. On the change being observed Mr. Wattford was again immediately summoned, but life was extinct. Throughout her indisposition, her Royal Highness has received the most unremitting and affectionate attention from the ladies of her household, lady Alicia Gordon and Miss Cotes; and she has been professionally attended with zeal and skill by Mr. Wattford, of Greenwich, who, for nearly a quarter of a century, has been her Royal Highness's sole medical attendant.

Her Royal Highness the Princess Sophia Matilda was the eldest child of his late Royal Highness Prince William Henry, third son of Frederick, Prince of Wales, and brother of King George III. He was born November 25, 1743, created Duke of Gloucester and Edinburgh in Great Britain, and Comte de Kent, 17th Nov., 1764, and died 25th Aug., 1805, having married, on the 6th Sept., 1766, Maria, daughter of Sir Edward Walpole, K.B., and widow of James, second Earl Waldegrave. She was born 2nd July, 1739, and died 22nd August, 1807. Their issue were 1st, Her Royal Highness, the Princess Sophia Matilda, whose decease we now record; 2nd, Her Royal Highness, the Princess Caroline Augusta Maria, born 24th June, 1744, died 14th March, 1775; and 3rd, his Royal Highness Prince William Frederick, the late Duke of Gloucester and Edinburgh, who was born 15th Jan. 1776, married, 22nd July, 1816, his cousin, the Princess Mary, the fourth daughter of George III., the present Duchess of Gloucester. His Royal Highness died without issue 30th Nov. 1834, when his honours became extinct.

The remains of her late Royal Highness the Princess Sophia Matilda will leave Blackheath about twelve o'clock, and will be interred in the family vault, in St. George's Chapel, at Windsor, on the evening of Tuesday next, the 10th instant; and, in compliance with the wishes of her late Royal Highness, the ceremony of lying-in-state will be dispensed with, and the funeral will be conducted with as much privacy as is consistent with the rank of her late Royal Highness. The funeral will be conducted by Messrs. Tapel and Holland, her Majesty's undertakers.

Tuesday's Gazette contained an order for a court mourning from Thursday last to December 15, also for a general mourning for a week from last Thursday.

ELECTION OF THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT.

Our Correspondent at New York has completed his illustration of this animated scene with the annexed sketch of the exterior of one of the polling-places, which, heretofore, had been held at taverns; but at this election, as much as possible, at private houses, engine houses, &c. The sketch represents one of the latter: scattered about, as you approach the entrance, are tables, or wooden sheds, at which sit persons, dispensing Whig or Democratic tickets folded up; while others more actively ply the passenger on behalf of one or other of the candidates, and, not infrequently, as they are folded, deceive you with a wrong one; so that it is very essential to open and examine the ticket before entering the room, which usually has an entrance and exit doors, at both of which are constables with crossed staves; who admit about a dozen at a time, or according to the size of the room. The voter quietly takes his place in the stream; and, in his turn, finds himself in front of a table or long desk, on which are two small mahogany oilgreen boxes of various shapes, long or square; generally about a foot square, with a little aperture on the top, to receive the folded tickets, and respectively marked S. and D.—S. State Governor, Members of Assembly, and E. Electors, who are respectively pledged to elect—the Democratic or Whig candidate—President of the United States. Behind the table are two inspectors—one of each party—well-known and reputable citizens, chosen by the mayor. To either of these gentlemen, the voter presents his two folded tickets; giving, at the same time, his name and residence. These the inspectors repeat in a loud voice to the crowded room—waits a second or two—and then deposits both tickets into their respective boxes; and the voter retires by an opposite door to that he entered by. This is the usual mode, and all that is necessary; the person and politics of the great mass of voters in each ward being sufficiently well-known to the challenges of both parties, and immediately written down in their betting-books by two or three persons stationed near the table—under the head of Whig, Democratic, or Doubtful—so that, dividing the doubtful in half, a pretty near guess can be arrived at. These books are, of course, preserved from year to year, so that from the past they can form some anticipation of the present. If either party object to a man, on hearing his name, one calls out, "I challenge that man!" when, after undergoing a cross fire of questions, he is sworn, if a Protestant, on the plain bible; if a Catholic, on a bible with a wooden cross on the cover; there the matter rests, and his vote must be deposited. Sometimes, however, he is sent back for his naturalization papers; and, if proved to be hard labour in the States' prison. In the evening, the boxes are unlocked, the tickets unfolded, and Whig and Democrat transfixed on opposite wires, and, of course, eagerly counted by the crowd; however eager, earnest, or enthusiastic, they may be, all is sober, peaceful, forbearing, and decorous. At the late election, the city was divided into districts, and these again sub-divided into wards, in each of which were one, two, or more polling-places, named by the mayor. The population was scattered, and near sixty thousand votes were taken in one day—between sunrise and sundown—as peacefully as if it had been Sabbath morning. It was, however, different formerly, when three days, instead of one, were spent in polling.

MONUMENT TO THE EARL OF LEICESTER IN LONGFORD CHURCH, DERBYSHIRE.

The memory of the late lamented Earl of Leicester—the father of the House of Commons, and the first agriculturist of his day—has been perpetuated by the erection of a most splendid monument in Longford Church, Derbyshire, it was completed at the beginning of last month; and the high esteem in which the noble earl was held, being fully proved by its expense being defrayed by individuals of all shades and classes of opinion, who, burying all other feelings than those of reverential regard, lent their assistance with the utmost cordiality.

The stone for the monument has been procured from the borders of Yorkshire, and is a fine magnesian-limestone, of a light colour. The plan is a rectangular niche, slightly recessed in the wall, and projecting therefrom about one foot. It is fixed upon a plain, solid base, three feet high. The opening of the niche in front, is about nine feet high, and about four feet three inches wide, and is flanked by shafted jambs, having floriated capitals with the ball-flower in the hollow, between the shafts; and the outer angles of the monument are strengthened by double buttresses, weathered in three stages. From the capital of the outer shafts, springs an equilateral moulded arch, with ball-flower enrichment; and from the inner shaft springs a trifoliate cinque-foiled depressed arch, the upper members of which form an ogive, connecting the under with the upper ribs. The spaces and spandrels between are filled with flowing tracery and carving.

From the level of the top of the capitals the buttresses rise two stages higher, the lower one being paneled and terminated with crocheted heads; and above these buttresses are lofty pinnacles, graduated in two stages, paneled on every face with hooded and crocheted terminations. The whole height of the buttresses and pinnacles is 14 feet 6 inches from the base. The outer arch is crowned by a high pitched pedimented hood, with carved patterns on the face, and also crocheted. The triangle formed by the above, over the crown of outer rib, is formed into a large trefoil, in which the armorial bearings of the late Earl, quartered with those of the families of Dutton and Keppel, is inserted. The arms, crest, and supporters are enamelled on a solid slab of china, executed at the Derby China manufactory. Between the jambs and upon the base of the monument, a plain slab is fixed, upon which the following inscription is carved in black letters, with illuminated capitals:—

From the centre springs an octagonal pedestal, flanked by paneling with foliated heads. A beautiful marble bust of the late Earl, from the studio of Mr. Francis, of London, is fixed upon the pedestal, and the whole of the back of the niche, above the slab and paneling, is diapered. The extreme width of the monument is 8 feet 9 inches, and its height from the floor about 20 feet.

It is fixed on the North side of the chancel of the church (which has been recently restored) and harmonises with the architectural character of that part of the building, which is a good specimen of the early decorated style, prevalent in the latter part of the 13th and commencement of the 14th century.

The work has been well executed by Mr. Hall, of Derby, from the design and under the superintendence of Mr. Henry J. Stevens, architect, of Derby.

STRIKE OF THE COAL-MINERS OF LANCASHIRE AND CHESHIRE.—The accounts from Manchester speak of the existence of great excitement among the colliers. There were preparations for a general cessation of labour. Meetings of the miners have been held at Wigan, Ashton-under-Lyne, and other places, at which inflammatory language was used and a most determined spirit evinced to obtain higher wages. On Saturday last the whole of the miners in Lancashire and in Cheshire gave their employers notice that they would require at the end of a fortnight an advance of "twopenny to the shilling," as they call it. These matters considered, there appears but little doubt that a general strike is in contemplation. At the Wigan meeting exhortations were made to the men to be firm, and they were told, that if they were, it would be impossible to resist them. At the Ashton-under-Lyne meeting, the following resolutions were carried:—"1. That it is the opinion of this meeting that, unless we organize ourselves, we can never better our condition. We, one and all, therefore, pledge ourselves to do so immediately, and will use every exertion in our power to obtain that which we, the miners, so richly deserve, viz., a fair day's wages for a fair day's work. 2. That this meeting agree to adhere to the question of restriction, knowing it to be the only safe way to gain our just demands."—It was announced to the meeting that upwards of thirty pits had given notice to their employers to strike work in fourteen days unless they received an advance.

EXTERIOR OF A POLLING BOOTH, NEW YORK.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

THE BLACKWELL YEW.

The yew tree is said to be a

"Cheerless, unsocial plant, which loves to dwell Midst skulls and coffins, epitaphs and worms."

But this is a character more poetical than true. The situation in which it chiefly "loves to dwell," is the open chalk down, on which, in the midland districts of the country, it grows to a large size. The churchyard is not its natural habitat, having been placed there in the early ages of a credulous priesthood, to absorb the noxious vapours of the graves—a property which it was superstitiously believed to possess, and to which it still, in a great measure, owes its sepulchral celebrity. In Derbyshire, they serve the additional purpose of screening the entrance of the small wooden churches from the wind. Time, which impairs everything, has obliterated the traces of these fancied and real uses, and the "sturdy yew" is only known at present as an emblem of the dead, or as a symbol of the immortal youth to which our highest hopes aspire. It happens, however, that even in these respects, the "sturdy yew" is unfortunate in its interpreters, for the church-yard tree is usually—since it has ceased to be generally planted—a ruined and mutilated object, and scarcely black or vigorous enough in its vegetation, to serve the requirements of any allegorical purpose. One such a wreck we have shown in our cuts: it stands in a nook near the secluded church of Blackwell, in Derbyshire—an ancient foundation dedicated to St. Werburgh. Many centuries have passed over its venerable "top," which is literally so thin, so starved, so shorn of its cedar-like branches, that

YEW TREES IN BLACKWELL CHURCHYARD.

"Scarcely two crows could lodge in the same tree; the stem is split asunder, and the base exhibits that ruddy bulbous surface that indicates approaching dissolution. It is regarded as one of the landmarks of the neighbourhood, and, as such, is cherished by the villagers of the neighbourhood with much of paternal affection."

The yew tree at Darley, a short distance from Blackwell, is reputed to be the largest in the world.

EDWARD THE BLACK PRINCE'S RING.

At the request of an intelligent correspondent, we have engraved the annexed accredited relic of the celebrated Black Prince, who, for so many years, ruled Gascony, in the reign of Edward the Third. This treasured antique is a very massive gold ring, and was long in the possession of the late General Ainslie, the author of a work on Anglo-French coinage, and himself a well-known coin-collector. The General was offered a considerable sum for this ring by a celebrated antiquary, but he would not part with it, and it is now possessed by the General's son, Captain Ainslie, at present serving with his regiment in England.

In 1837, General Ainslie published at Douai Nord, a dissertation in Latin, proving the authenticity of this interesting memorial of the flower of English chivalry. The original M.S. is in the Bibliothèque Royal, at Paris, and obtained for the General a gold medal; the following is a translation:—

"The ring, of which I am going to try and give a description and explanation, weighs 106 grains, poids de Marc de Paris, it is of gold of twenty-three carats, or 958-1000."

"The letters are of that kind which Dom Valines, in his 'Dictionnaire Raisonné de Diplomatique' (Paris, 1774), describes under the denomination of Manuscrits Capitales."

"In the middle of the floor of this ring appears a large V, between the words E D and D I, underneath the V is found a P of rather smaller dimensions than that of the E D and of the D I, having on the heraldic right a molette, with six rays, and on its left a demi-lune or crescent."

"Under the point of junction of the two limbs which compose the V, is a vine leaf, and a cordon de perles surrounds the whole in following the form of the floor or field, which is octagonal."

"The ring, as may well be supposed, is extremely massive; the work is not deprived of a certain intention to ornament; it is grooved."

"The cutting proves that, at this period, this art has made but little progress, but the work of the letters is very superior, probably, because the first was more frequently sought after, than those of heraldic emblem, which had been introduced at an age, at least, before the period at which this ring appears to have been made."

"The meaning of the words, abridged, appears to me to be translated by the following:—

EDWARD THE BLACK PRINCE'S RING.

P.
Parvum sigillum ou Pignus.
V.
Domi:
asomim,
L.

"The Duke of Aquitaine received at their investiture, which constituted their sovereignty, a wreath of roses in gold, a gold wand, and a ring."

"This interesting relic of the feudal times, was found at a depth of six feet under a public edifice, in the département des Landes, on the great road to Spain; the workmen who discovered it, disposed of it to a person who ceded it to me after having kept it for two years."

Mr. James, author of the "Life of Edward, the Black Prince," states that, "from the extraordinary pains he took to ascertain the accuracy of every statement before he made it, he was fully convinced at the time, and still is, that the ring is indubitably genuine;" and he adds, that "he has not even heard it questioned."

General Ainslie, in a letter dated "Douai, March 20th, 1837," says:—
"I think I said that the Royal Societies of Antiquaries of France and Normandy had spontaneously elected me a member of their academies, since which I have got the like honour from two more—the Académie de Science d'Agén, and the Société d'Emulation de Cambrai; the latter in consequence of a dissertation of mine, on 'My Ring,' which appeared in a periodical published in Paris, devoted to antiquarian researches, in which I have proved (hitherto uncontradicted) that the ring belonged to Edward the First, King of England, before his accession to the throne, and that it must have been given to him by Alfonso IX., King of Castile, when he married the sister of that Prince, in 1252."

DANIEL FORRESTER, AGED 45.

JOHN FORRESTER, AGED 50.

THE LATE ROBBERY AT THE BANK OF MESSRS. ROGERS AND CO.

The most contradictory reports have been circulated this week upon the subject of the above robbery. It was said that some of the stolen notes had been traced, and various other statements have been made, the whole of which, however, are mere inventions. We can state from the best authority, that hitherto no clue whatever has been ascertained.

We annex an engraving of the banking-house of Messrs. Rogers, Olding, and Co., No. 29, on the east side of Clement's-lane, a thoroughfare exclusive rather than extensive. The banking-house is entered by a small lobby, and there are three apartments opening into each other: the banking-room, the parlour, and the strong-room.

The portraits of the two very active officers, Messrs. John and Daniel Forrester, are from sketches taken three days since.

The public is familiar with the great exertions used by these officers for the detection of offenders. Upon the recent apprehension of Burgess in America, John exhibited his accustomed dexterity and vigilance. It appears that when Burgess escaped from the hotel at Nahant, a small peninsula joined to the main land by a neck of land about four miles in length, he rowed in the dark for a considerable time, and at length, after having been tossed about, he landed, and made the best of his way to a small cottage in which a poor Irishman and his wife and three children resided. From thence he sent to the waiter of the hotel at Nahant his keys, with directions to take possession of the money contained in his bags, and convey it to him. John Forrester, who managed the whole business, with the ready assistance of the officers granted by the authorities, with consummate skill, took care to cut off the means of retreat or escape.

The most complete measures had been, we have been told, adopted by the Bank to render this first experiment upon the convention between England and America successful. A gentleman of considerable experience belonging to the establishment was sent over to manage one portion of the business, while John Forrester contrived and carried into execution the other.

One of the communications from America speaks thus of John Forrester:—"The utmost credit is due to Forrester for his untiring perseverance, his devotedness, and his efficiency. Sleepless in his efforts, and straightforward in his demeanour, he secured friends wherever he went, who were ready and anxious to stand by him, and also at once enlisted their goodwill in his behalf. No one could have discharged the responsible duties committed to him with more integrity, zeal, or success."

INTERIOR OF ROGERS'S BANK, CLEMENTS-LANE.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We have great pleasure in announcing the completion of the SEASIDE PANORAMA

THE RIVER THAMES,

showing at one view "the Royal-embowered Thames," its "Forests of Masts," its crowded Docks and Port, its Fleet of Steamers; its

NOBLE BRIDGES, UNEQUALLED IN THE WORLD; its busy Wharfs and Quays; and the various objects of interest and beauty upon its banks, including

GREENWICH, AND ITS SUPERB PALACE HOSPITAL; and exhibiting the winding of the "Silver Thames" through the mighty mass of buildings that form the metropolis of the Commercial World.

Showing as distinctly as in a Map, yet with boundlessly picturesque effect, the several

STREETS OF THE METROPOLIS; with the many hundred Churches, Palaces, Columns, and Arches; Government Offices, and Public Institutions; Club Houses, Noble Mansions, and Palatial Homes; established Street Architecture, Terraces, and Villas; Theatres, Railways, Parks and Public Walks; Factories and Warehouses; and, in short, a perfect Picture of the vast extent, Architectural Character, and Moral Recent Improvement, of the RANKS OF THIS NOBLE RIVER.

To be Engraved in the

FIRST STYLE OF THE ART,

From a most Elaborate Drawing made expressly for the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS;

And which has occupied the Artists for several months, so that the strictest reliance may be placed on its accuracy.

The entire length of the PRINT will be

UPWARDS OF EIGHT FEET!

And it is impossible to exaggerate one-fourth of the object.

The PRINT will certainly be issued early in January next. It is printed on a beautiful tinted paper, manufactured expressly for the purpose.

Persons desirous of possessing this Great Work of Art, must immediately enter their names, as Subscribers, at their respective News-agents.

* * * NEW TYPE.—Our first Number for the New Year will be printed with a new and improved Type, cast expressly for this Journal, which, it is hoped, will be a further attraction in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

BRILLIANT HIT AND NIGHTLY OVERFLOWS to the New National Spectacle of the ROYAL FOX HUNT, at ASKLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. BATTY.—Monday, December 9, and during the Week, at Seven o'clock (12th hour), the Spectacular of THE FOX HUNT, or, THE RACE HORSE, and LIFE'S COURSE OF MAN AND STEED, introducing a grand Fox-chase on the Stage and in the Circle, by Lord Fox and complete Pack of Hounds. Equestrian Games and other sporting feats. New Scenes of the Circle, and entire Change in the Parts of the Horses, concluding with the successful Race of the WEAVER of LYONS, or, the THREE GIGGANTS—Acting and Stage Manager, Mr. W. D. BROADFOOT.—Box Office open from Eleven till Five.—On Tuesday next, on account of the Festival of her late Royal Highness the Princess Sophia Matilda, this Theatre will be closed.

CHINESE COLLECTION, Hyde Park Corner.—On Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday Evenings during this week will be produced, in a style of appropriate splendour, THE IMPERIAL DEACON FETE; another remarkable Chinese Festival, which, from its origin prior to the Christian Era, has been continued to the present time, and in its particular season, participated in by all classes of the Three Hundred Millions, inhabitants of the Celestial Empire. The gorgeous decorations, appropriate to the celebration of this brilliant Fete, far surpass all the varied splendours of European pageantry. A Full Military Band will be in attendance every Evening. The Chinese Collection is Open Daily from Ten till Dusk, and in the Evening, Sedulously Illustrated, from Seven till Ten.—Admission, 1s.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION—The PROTECTOR, a new apparatus for exhibiting OPAQUE OBJECTS in Nature and Art, showing, in a most striking manner, the PHENOMENA OF HYDRO-ELECTRIC MA CHINE, DIVING-BELL, and DIVER, RESOLVING VIEWS, &c. &c. Dr. RYAN'S LECTURE on the Earth and the Elements of Electricity, Wednesday, and Friday. Professor Baskerville's varied Lectures on the most interesting experiments.—Admission, 1s. Schools, half-price.—A new edition of the CATALOGUE, containing 200 additional Works of Art, &c. since the last revised, is just published, price 1s.

SMITHFIELD CLUB PRIZE CATTLE SHOW—1844.—The Annual Exhibition of PRIZE CATTLE, SEEDS, ROOTS, IMPLEMENTS, &c. will take place on the 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th of DECEMBER, at the HOUSE BAZAAR, King's Cross, Tottenham. The arrangements for this year comprise a great addition of space and several improvements, adding materially to the comfort and convenience of visitors. The space and accommodation is so ample, that ladies may now enjoy visit this Seasonable Exhibition. Open from Daylight till Nine in the Evening; Lighted up after Seven in the Afternoon. Admission, One Shilling.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Dec. 8.—Second Sunday in Advent.

MONDAY, 9.—Nelson born, 1803.

TUESDAY, 10.—Ground shooting ends.

WEDNESDAY, 11.—Charles XII. killed, 1718.

THURSDAY, 12.—Commonwealth Protector, 1653.

FRIDAY, 13.—Dr. Johnson died, 1791.

SATURDAY, 14.—Washington died, 1799.

Mean Weather at London bridge, for the Week ending Dec. 14.
Day.	Thurs.	Fri.	Sat.	Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Fri.	Sat.	Sun.
Bar.	30.1	30.2	30.3	30.4	30.5	30.6	30.7	30.8	30.9	31.0	31.1
Therm.	45	46	47	48	49	50	51	52	53	54	55
Wind.	N.E.	N.E.	N.E.	N.E.	N.E.	N.E.	N.E.	N.E.	N.E.	N.E.	N.E.
Clouds.	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2
Moisture.	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2	1/2

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

- "Y." of Liverpool, speaking of our account of the Time Ball at Greenwich, asks, "Is it by the hour of its descent is fixed at one o'clock, while noon is the all-important national hour?" We answer, that although noon may be deemed an important time in national affairs, yet it makes no real difference the hour being one. But without going into detail, it will be sufficient to state, that one o'clock is a more convenient time than twelve, of the observatory. The sun passes the meridian every day between about a quarter to twelve and about a quarter after twelve, noon time, and, weather permitting, he is always observed at those times with the transit instrument to obtain his right ascension, and with the mural circle to obtain his north polar distance, and from that his declination; the observations thus taken can be used for obtaining the time, and the consequence, as obtained, furnishes one of the reasons for dropping the ball at one o'clock.
- "Hera."—We have already engraved Burns's Tomb.
- "H. L." Norwich.—Thanks for the two prints.
- "J. W. S."—Mr. Phelps.
- "H. J. P." Plymouth.—Sir John Campbell was Attorney-General, and Sir Thomas Wilde was Solicitor-General in the last Whig Administration.
- "G. F." near Newcastle-on-Tyne.—The Surgeon's Head Line, Snow-Hill, still flourishes.
- "A. Schenker."—Counsellor.—The mails for the Ionian Islands, via Falmouth, are made up in London on the Saturday nearest to the 15th of each month, and the last day of each month. One o'clock, via Marseilles, are made up on the 4th of each month.
- "S."—Tottenham.—The first is still in existence.
- "Nix B." Brighton.—No amount can be stamped to go free by post.
- "M." Little Friday street.—The suggestion shall be attended to.
- "K. B." Soke, is thanked.
- "Miss N." Bath.—The original prints may be purchased of any foreign printer.
- "J. Y. R."—The wife can claim the letter if it be addressed to her.
- "Grandison."—The letter on the Belvoir Hunt has been referred to our Sporting Correspondent.
- "T. M." Birmingham.—We do not know the person named by our correspondent.
- "A. Subscribers." Wigan.—We have no recollection of the document referred to.
- "Anticipator."—We do not know.
- "Reluctantist" is thanked.
- "R. C."—Lancaster, should apply to a solicitor.
- "J. P."—The charge is legal.
- "R. D."—Bury.—The Duke of Wellington is in his 75th year.
- "A. Subscriber from the Continent."—The shooting will be legal.
- "J. B." Brighton.—A man cannot legally marry his deceased wife's sister.
- "J. O." Cambridge.—The Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha has a small military force.
- "F. A. Y."—The first Lord Remond's father was commander of a Falmouth packet. The family name is Pellet. Remond is the ancient name of the locality.
- "W. C. S. N."—Messrs. Dobson, St. Paul's Churchyard, or Messrs. Watkins and Hill, Charing-cross.
- "G. M."—No. 10.—We have not room.
- "John Jones."—Three rooms.
- "Lew." late B. A. L. Imbion.—We fear there is little chance at present. We believe the marriage to be legal.
- "J. H."—Ketter, should specify the title.
- "A. Constant Reader."—New Ross.—Our Journal may be had of any news-agent in Liverpool.
- "C. B. R."—To the second question: Yes.
- "F. P."—There is a School of Design in Somerset House; apply to the Secretary.
- "W. F. O."—Banbury, had better apply to Messrs. Smith, Lisle-street, Leicester-square.
- "K. G. R."—Yes. The Queen has a half-brother and a half-sister living.

THE LARGE PAINT.—Correspondents respecting the publication of the Panorama of the Thames are referred to the present No.

KNAYTON.—St. Michael's Church, Stamford, was built by Mr. Brown, of Norwich, and not "altered and modernized" by him, as stated in our No. 361.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1844.

ON Monday last the first meeting of the "Society for the Protection and Employment of the Distressed Needlewomen, and for Clothing the Poor," was held. Lord Ashley was in the chair, and made a statement of what the Association has done, and of what it intends to do. Though it may fall, in effect, far short of its intention, yet even then it will have done much good. It contemplates operating on that received opinion among the employing and purchasing part of the public, that the miserable pittance now given for doing needlework is a necessity of the age; the employer is a trader, whose object it is to make money; if he did not, he would soon cease to be a trader at all; he therefore gets his work done at the lowest possible figure. Others besides shirt manufacturers do the same thing, so the Society will have to remember that it is fighting against a general principle—one that is more rigidly acted on in England than in any other nation. It fights the battle, too, on behalf of those the least of all able to defend themselves against oppression—on behalf of those who are always weak, mostly ignorant, and universally poor. Heartily do we wish the hand of champions success; but let not the benevolence of their task blind them to its difficulty. They have many a warm wish in their favour, though the spirit of modern commerce and the maxims of political economy, each the reverse of warm, are almost wholly against them; for the question of work and wages is one on which there is much to be said.

That "the labourer is worthy of his hire," is a truth of the highest importance; toil is the destiny of mankind, and though it is part of the primal curse, man is not "all unhappy," as long as he can labour; it is only when he cannot work, or, working, cannot make his wages suffice for living, that the full bitterness of his lot falls upon him. In both respects it is the vice of modern society that the difficulty should be almost universally increased. The competition of numbers reduces both the quantity of work to be done by each, and the amount of wages for that work that is paid to all. The liberal spirit that gave to the labourers taken into the vineyard at the eleventh hour the same payment as that bestowed on those who had borne "the burden and the heat of the day," actuates men no more. We have gone to the other extreme; we are not Utopian enough to expect men to be more than generous, but we may well blame them for being less than just; and from this reproach scarcely any employers of human skill, in any branch of human industry, can be pronounced wholly free. The wages of any kind of skill are calculated as much from the number and the necessities of those ready to perform it, as from the value of the work itself when done. The political economists say that this is the only true measure of value; and that if a certain quantity of labour can be purchased for a certain amount of money, it is really worth no more. If one will not do it, there are plenty who will; and so the one who is inclined to shrink from the prospect of living on sixpence a day, or even less, is driven to accept that, or the alternative of total starvation. And hence spring the "woes unnumbered," which meet us on every side—woes, sung by no "Heavenly Goddess" but recorded by the daily journals in the plainest and most mournful of prose; hence the pangs and sufferings of all those numerous classes whose labour is of that kind that the skill it demands is within the reach of nearly all, and whose universal penury joined to their numbers make them underbid each other, each individual ready to do more and take less than another for the sake of getting something to do at all. The capitalist who takes advantage of his own command of money and the general want of it, adds to his fortune, wealth increases, large houses flourish, we make a great name in commerce, we are a rich and powerful nation—but what is there beneath the surface? It is becoming evident that an abstract principle may be pushed too far, and that the relations between the employer and the employed, when the latter are wholly defenceless, require some degree of control; the opinion that such an interference can be made with safety, if judiciously managed, is gaining ground. We were driven to interfere in the case of the women and children employed in the coal mines, and if we may judge from recent accounts, not only no harm has arisen from it (as plentifully predicted there would be), but much positive good. Other instances of what is called interference between the employers and the employed are not wanting; there have been numerous factory acts all compelling the capitalist to employ some portion of his money at all events in providing the means of increased safety to the health and lives of his labourers. The Legislature has not indeed ventured to fix the rate of wages, but it has done the next thing to it—limited to some extent the hours of labour. The principle then of some interference between two parties, one of whom may be said to stand almost at the mercy of the other, is established, and we are getting more and more convinced of the necessity of such interposition. The other principle, that of letting everything go its own way to any extreme, is obviously producing evils too great to be tolerated. The question next arises, what interposition is practicable? Sir R. Peel, in opposing Lord Ashley's Ten Hours' Bill, said, if the Government was to interfere with a limitation in the case of the Factory workmen, why should it not be called on to inquire into the evils attendant upon every trade and calling whatever? And as it was obviously impossible to do everything, the only alternative was to do nothing. The argument told exceedingly well in the House of Commons, but there is a fallacy lurking under it; carried out in another direction the same principle would put a stop to all charity and benevolent exertion, on the ground that as we cannot relieve all, it is useless to relieve any. Something it may be possible to do, even in a field where it is far beyond hope that all can ever be accomplished; and that something may, perhaps, be done, too, by other means than by calling for the interference of the Legislature.

An attempt of this kind is intended to be made by this society; looking at the vast amount of misery to be found in the labour market of this kind of industry in London alone, we confess we despair of its effecting a general change; it cannot make itself the channel through which all the work is to find all the workers, and competition will continue to keep down the rate of wages to the lowest point. But it may withdraw a few from the throng of applicants, and leave a little more room for the rest; it may accustom people to a scale of payment for this kind of toil calculated somewhat more liberally than that of the mere trader, and it may direct a large amount of private employment on some kind of system, where at present there is none at all. It may in fact be most useful as a charity, though it may not effect any great commercial reform in this direction; it will relieve a vast amount of distress, even if it should not go far to remove the causes of it.

The arrival of the Overland Mail has not broken the political quietude of the week; the intelligence it brings from our Eastern Empire is quite destitute of what is called interest—a state of things on which both England and India may be congratulated.

Scinde is tranquil, but the troops stationed there are still sickly. There have been some military operations in the native state of Kholapore, the Government of which has managed to drive the people to insurrection, and the East India Company, being bound by treaty to assist the ruling powers, have been obliged to interfere. The rising has not been against British interests or influence. The news from China is commercial only, and it speaks of the appearance of the markets there as somewhat overstocked with British goods.

THE Inquests held on the bodies of the two individuals killed by the collision on the Midland Counties Railway have terminated. In one case a verdict of manslaughter was returned against one of the officers of the Company; in the other, a dead-end of £1000 placed on the engine, throws both the blame and the penalty on the Company itself. The last is the true mode of working a beneficial change. The imprisonment of a servant would be borne by a Board of Directors, with the utmost calmness and indifference; a money penalty must come out of their pockets, and makes itself felt in the part most sensible to such teaching. Undoubtedly, the subordinates were highly blameable; but the discussion that has been carried on in the newspapers has elicited a fact or two that tend to throw the far greater share of the culpability on the Management.

It seems that some time ago the staff of persons employed on the line was very considerably reduced in number, and those who remained suffered a diminution of salary. The consequences, as far as the public were interested in the arrangement, were most mischievous. They are well described in the language of a correspondent of the Times:—

At the time of the change being first made, the result was an almost universal strike. The best engineers and the best servants—those whose experience qualified them for the higher rates established on other lines—all left the employ of the Company. But not only was this terrible mischief and danger the result. Ever since the two railways in question have been in the hands of a set of men who come there to learn their business. They are mere lines of apprenticeship, in which no man will remain longer than is necessary to obtain a knowledge of his business. It is unnecessary to point out the extreme peril to the public of such a state of things. Trains at the stations are frequently not "set" at the time appointed for their actual starting, and "half an hour after time" is the rule, not the exception.

Thus the public have been entrusted to the care of inexperienced and underpaid men, no one of whom, even if he were ever so skilful, could do the work of two. Haste, hurry, and uncertainty have been inevitable, and the result is a public catastrophe. May the dead-end have the effect of opening the eyes of the Company to the fact that there is such a thing as saving without economy.

If anything could make the civilised world wish to see Spain blotted from the list of nations it is the butchery and bloodshed that have disgraced it during the last twelve months. Every day brings over its tale of horror. When those in power cannot seize those whom they are pleased to call rebels, their relations are caught and shot; Zurbano's movements were accompanied by his son and his brother-in-law, but what share they had in them seems hardly known. Zurbano has for the present eluded pursuit, but the son and brother-in-law have been taken and shot, without even the form of a trial. We know of only one case more atrocious—that of the shooting of Cabrera's mother by General Nogueras. Even Oribe, the commandant of Logroño, a man not at all remarkable for scruples in such matters, hesitated and suspended the execution till the result of an application for mercy should be known. The moment Narvaez heard that the wife and mother of young Zurbano were on their way to Madrid, he ordered the immediate execution of his victims and dismissed Oribe from his post for having exhibited this small indication of humanity! A people that can permit such butchery to govern them deserve to be enslaved, and, from every present indication, will soon be reduced to that condition.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

ON Saturday last the Queen and the Royal Family did not leave the precincts of the Castle, owing to the reception of the melancholy news of the demise of her Royal Highness the Princess Sophia Matilda.

WINDSOR, Sunday.—This morning her Majesty and Prince Albert, the Royal visitors, and the domestic household, attended divine service in the private chapel of the Castle. The Hon. and Rev. Charles Leslie Courtney officiated. Lord Charles Wellesley (Clerk Marshal), has relieved Colonel Arbuthnot in the duty of Equerry in Waiting on the Queen, and Major-General Sir Edward Bowater has relieved Colonel Wilde in the duty of Equerry in Waiting on Prince Albert.

MONDAY.—The Chapter of the Order of the Garter, fixed for the 12th instant, at Windsor Castle, will be held on that day; but the intended banquet in St. George's Hall, on the evening, will not be given, in consequence of the decease of her late Royal Highness the Princess Sophia Matilda. The Queen and the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha walked for some time within the precincts of the Castle grounds this morning.

TUESDAY.—The Queen, Prince Albert, the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and Duke Ernest of Wurttemberg, walked on the Castle terrace and in the pleasure grounds for some time this morning. At noon their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and the Duke Ernest of Wurttemberg, attended by the Baron de Alvensleben and Baroness de Wangenheim, left the Castle to pay a visit of residence to their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, at Kew.

WEDNESDAY.—The Queen walked some time this morning on the terrace, and in the private grounds about the Castle. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent visited her Majesty and the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha this afternoon.

THURSDAY EVENING.—(From our own Correspondent.)—Her Majesty and her Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and the Duke of Wurttemberg, promenade this morning in the private grounds in the Home Park. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, and the Princess Alice took equestrian exercises on their Shetland ponies in the slopes. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent attended by Lady Fanny Howard, visited her Majesty this morning. The Queen and Prince Albert took equestrian exercise this afternoon in the new riding school, attended by Lord Charles Wellesley and Major-General Sir Edward Bowater. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent dined in private this evening with her Majesty and her royal and illustrious relations on a visit to the Queen.

DEPARTURE OF THE COURT FOR CLAREMONT.—WINDSOR, Thursday.—Her Majesty and her Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and the Duke Ernest of Wurttemberg, will take their departure from the Castle on Saturday for Claremont, where the Court will remain until after the funeral of her late Royal Highness the Princess Sophia of Gloucester, which will take place on Tuesday next. According to present arrangements, the Court will leave Claremont for Windsor on Wednesday.

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO THE DUKES OF WELLINGTON.—We have reason to believe that the Queen and her illustrious Consort intend shortly to honour the Duke of Wellington with a visit, at the noble and gallant duke's seat, Strathfieldsaye, Hanley. The precise day is not yet named. The Duke of Wellington, on Saturday morning, went to Strathfieldsaye, from town, expressly to give instructions for alterations requisite for the reception of his august visitors. The Duke returned to Apsey House in the evening. It is said that all the necessary preparations are to be completed by the close of next week.

The Earl of Hardwicke has arrived at the Castle, and has relieved Lord Rivers, from his duty as Lord in Waiting on the Queen. Colonel Berkeley Drummond has relieved Mr. R. O'Connell Gore, as the Groom in Waiting on her Majesty. The Queen will hold a Privy Council on Friday, the 13th instant, at Windsor Castle.

MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—Alexander Dundas Ross Wishart Bellie Cochran, Esq., M.P. for Berwick, was on Wednesday married at Fawley Church, Hants, to Annabella Mary Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Andrew R. and Lady Elizabeth Drummond, of Caddis Park, and granddaughter of his Grace the Duke of Rutland. The youthful bride is in her 21st year.—The marriage of his Excellency Baron de Neumann, the Austrian Minister, with Lady Augusta Somerset, daughter of his Grace the Duke of Beaufort, took place on Thursday morning, in St. George's Church, Hanover-square. The Duke and Duchess of Beaufort, the Ladies Somerset, Lord and Lady Fitzroy Somerset, and a numerous party of relations and friends of the noble family, including the Duke of Wellington, together with a number of the corps diplomatique, witnessed the solemnity. The Duke of Beaufort gave a grand entertainment in honour of the event, at his residence in Arlington-street.

KARL GRY.—We are glad to hear that this distinguished nobleman has so far recovered from the severe illness under which he laboured as to enjoy the society of his family as usual, and to take, weather permitting, an occasional drive round his domains.

VISCOUNT MELBOURNE is passing the winter at Brocket Hall, Herts, and is in improved health. Lord and Lady Russell are still on a visit to his lordship.

DEATHS OF TWO MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT.—We regret to have to announce the death of two members of Parliament—the Hon. Robert Otway Carr, M.P. for Tipperary; and Sir John Bland, Bart., the member for Dartmouth. Mr. Carr died, after a short illness, yesterday (Friday) week, at Bath, where the hon. gentleman had repaired, with Mrs. Otway Carr, for the benefit of his health. The deceased was eldest and only surviving son of the late Mr. Henry Otway, brother of Admiral Sir Robert Otway, Bart., K.C.H., and Sarah (now Harcourt Bland), only daughter of Sir Thomas Carr, Bart., whose grandmother was eventually heiress of the first Lord Bland. He was, consequently, heir apparent to the barony of Bland. The hon. deceased married, the 19th of October, 1833, Miss Sophia Bland, eldest daughter of the late Sir Francis Bland, Bart. Sir John Bland died at his residence in London. He was descended from a good family, which has been long settled in Devonshire, where it has considerable property and influence, and some church patronage. He was colonel of the South Devon Militia, and was created a baronet under Lord Melbourne's Administration in 1838. In 1844 he married the daughter of Sir Paul Jodrell, and has left behind him a numerous family. At the time of his decease he was in his 60th year, and succeeded in his title and estates by his eldest son, born in 1804. These deaths, of course, cause vacancies for two places.

Tuesday's Gazette announces, that the death of Sir John Henry Seale, Bart., M.P. for Dartmouth, having been duly certified to the Speaker in writing, he will issue his warrant to the Clerk of the Crown to make out a new writ for the election of a member for the said borough, at the end of fourteen days after the insertion of the notice.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

The Rev. Dr. Cramer, Principal of New Inn Hall, and Professor of Modern History in the University of Oxford, is appointed by her Majesty to be Dean of Carlisle.

THE DIVISIONS IN THE CHURCH.—The Archbishop of Canterbury has replied to the memorial addressed to him recently, urging upon his grace the expediency of convening a meeting of the bishops, to consult upon the proper steps to be taken in the present divided state of the church. The memorial was signed by the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and was noticed in our paper last week. The Archbishop's reply consists of a simple acknowledgment of the receipt of the memorial, and is couched in terms of great courtesy and kindness.

The Hon. and Rev. H. W. Baring, son of the Earl of Abingdon, and Fellow of All Souls College, Oxford, has been presented to the living of Great Eford, Essex.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

BATHS AND WASH-HOUSES FOR THE LABOURING CLASSES.—On Wednesday a meeting of the inhabitants of St. Pancras took place at the vestry-room in Gordon-square, for the purpose of considering measures to establish baths and wash-houses in that district for the accommodation of the labouring classes. Mr. Harris was in the chair. Mr. Douglas, who acted as honorary secretary, stated that the meeting had been convened in consequence of a communication received by the vestry from the parent institution, calling upon the parish to aid the society as much as possible in the establishment of a bath and wash-house for the labouring classes in that populous locality, and the vestry deeming the principle a good one, although they had no power to place the parochial funds to such a purpose, felt it their duty to form amongst themselves a committee, and call upon the parishioners generally to aid in so beneficial an object for the poor. Mr. T. H. Smith moved a resolution in support of the object in view, which, after some discussion, was unanimously agreed to. Mr. James Howarth, one of the churchwardens, was then unanimously elected treasurer, and a numerous committee were subsequently appointed to carry out the objects of the meeting. Subscriptions were then entered into, the chairman heading the list with £5, and a considerable sum was collected.

EVIL EFFECTS OF THE WOOD PAVEMENT.—The frosty weather of the last few days has exhibited the dangerous character of the wood paving in a striking point of view. On Thursday the road opposite St. Clement's church was in such a slippery state that horses were falling down continually, and it required very great care to prevent serious accidents. Surely the authorities ought to do something in such weather to prevent the ill consequences arising from wood pavement. Blackfriars-bridge is strewn with gravel in frosty weather, and as some such precaution is equally, if not more necessary on the wood pavement, it is to be hoped that the hint will not be lost upon those whom it may concern.

MORTALITY IN THE METROPOLIS.—Deaths, from all causes in the week ending Nov. 30—males 514, females 561; total 1075. Weekly average, 948.

THE WEATHER.—The weather during the week has been excessively cold, but dry and pleasant, and the usual prognostics are ripe of a severe winter. The thermometer was lower on Wednesday night than it has been this season, having fallen to 26.

WATERLOO BRIDGE.—Thursday the half-yearly general meeting of the proprietors of the above-mentioned bridge was held at the Crown and Anchor Tavern. The Rev. Mr. Bush presided. From the report it appeared that the receipts for the last half year amounted to £4838 2s. 3d., being £434 2s. 6d. more than in the corresponding period of last year. The committee was consequently enabled to pay the interest of £5 per cent. on the company's bonds, and also pay a dividend of 12s. 8d. on the annuities. There remained a balance of £1651 12s. 6d. The report further stated that the tolls were proportionately improving, and also alluded to the several projected railways on the south side of the river having their termini in the vicinity of the bridge. The report was unanimously agreed to.

COUNTRY NEWS.

DINNER TO SIR ROBERT SALE AT SOUTHAMPTON.—On Monday a dinner was given to Sir Robert Sale at the Audit House, Southampton, on the occasion of his embarkation from that port for India. The room was prettily decorated with union jacks, flags, and other devices, interspersed with laurel. Immediately over Sir Robert was a banner with the words "Welcome, Sir Robert." On the right of the chairman sat Sir Robert, his nephew, Captain Barraclo, Sir Henry Richardson, Peter Dickson, Esq., Captain Keble, &c. On the left, Colonel Hunt, Captain Doherty, S. Price Edwards, Esq. (collected), Major Farhill, Major James, &c. About eighty (the largest number the room could accommodate) sat down to the entertainment, the Mayor in the chair; who, after the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were disposed of, proposed the toast of the evening—"The health of General Sir Robert Sale," which was received with one tremendous burst of applause. Sir Robert, in rising to return thanks, observed that it had been twice his good fortune to receive a similar compliment at Liverpool to that he had now received at Southampton. It was his intention on approaching the shores of England, on his return from India, to have landed at that port, but fate had decreed otherwise. He only hoped that God would protect the town in the way in which it deserved. It had its railway, steam companies, and docks, and he trusted that on his return five years hence he should see the ensconced of the town crowned with success. The principal part of the company shortly afterwards left and proceeded to the theatre, which was filled to an overflow; and here again Sir Robert and his lady (who had previously arrived) were received with an enthusiasm that must have been highly gratifying to their feelings. They sat in the centre box of the dress tier, at the back of which was a neat transference, with the words "Honneur the Brave." The house was otherwise gayly decorated with flags, laurels, &c. Sir Robert and his heroic lady sailed for India on Wednesday.

HEALTH OF GENERAL NOTT.—Letters from Wales state that during the past week the general has continued to gain strength, and he is now much better than he has been since his arrival in England. So satisfactory, indeed, is the state of the gallant general's health, that he may be said to be fast approaching to convalescence. Lady Nott has taken carriage sittings, and it is gratifying to learn that her ladyship's health is improved.

ATTEMPT TO POISON A WHOLE FAMILY.—On Thursday week, John Wall, of Ousley, Lancashire, framework-knitter, aged 35, was examined before I. Hodgins, Esq., on a charge of attempting to kill his sister, mother, and brother, by mixing a quantity of arsenic in eggs, and administering some to them. The prisoner's brother and sister are partially recovered, but his mother still remains in a dangerous state. The only motive that can be assigned for the perpetration of so diabolical an offence is, that the prisoner wished to get possession of a sum of money to which he and his brother and sister were entitled on the death of their mother. He was remanded.

DEATH OF A RICH HARKER AT LIVERPOOL.—Mr. Richard Leyland expired at his seat, Walton-hall, on Sunday last. His health had been sinking rapidly for some time, and for several days before his death all hopes of his recovery had been gone. As a banker Mr. Leyland had been eminently successful, and his own accumulations, added to the large fortune which he inherited from the gentleman whose name he took, had rendered him one of the richest men, if not the richest man, in Liverpool. He died childless, and it is generally believed that the greater part of his immense property will pass into the hands of his nephews.

ANOTHER MINE ACCIDENT.—Another of those deplorable and lamentable occurrences which so frequently accompany mining operations, happened at Basford Iron works, Monmouthshire, in one of the mine quarries, or patches, on Tuesday afternoon, by which the lives of four persons were sacrificed. The unfortunate party were at that time engaged in pushing up the rubbish train, for the purpose of clearing the remains of a "fall," when a piece of ground from the strata, lying eight yards above, unexpectedly gave way, and fell directly on them, literally crushing nearly every bone in their bodies, and in a moment depriving them of life. It appears there is not the slightest blame attributable to the workmen, but that the occurrence has been the result of pure accident. The ground was apparently safe, and there was not the slightest indication of danger. The names of the deceased are Isaac James, aged eighteen; Cecilia James, eighteen (brother and sister); Charles Penrhyn, twenty-one; and Margaret Davies, eighteen.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT WINCHESTER.—A very melancholy accident occurred at Winchester on Wednesday. Mr. Kindersley, brother of Mr. Kindersley, of London, was out with the hounds in the morning, and in attempting to jump over something in his road, was thrown from his horse, and before medical assistance could arrive was a corpse.

THE HARKING FISHERMEN.—These mariners have almost all returned to their fishing smacks, and proceeded to sea, the employers having consented to their returning home every voyage, instead of stopping at Grassland to unload their fish, and then going out to sea again without seeing their wives and families for six or nine months together. As regards extra wages, no concession, we understand, has been made, the men finding that their most grievous complaint respecting the voyages was attended to, having foregone their demand and returned to their employment.

THE ALLEGED MANSLAUGHTER AT WORCESTER.—The County Assize Grand Jury have ignored the bill against Mr. Russell, of Stourbridge, charging him with manslaughter, in having accelerated the death of his wife.

A RICH VAGRANT.—Mary Jones, with her son, a lad of about 10 years of age, have been committed to the Carmarthen county goal for vagrancy, to one month's hard labour. The woman is a native of Pembrokeshire, and was sent to goal for begging. On her person were found the sum of £5 1s. 10d. in cash, and promissory notes from the Glamorgan and Monmouthshire Bank, and from several tradesmen in Newport, Monmouthshire, and elsewhere, to the amount of upwards of £200. Besides this large sum of money, she had in six or seven bags, 15 shirts, 10 caps, 3 cotton gowns, 15 handkerchiefs, 3 pairs of stockings, and 20 other articles of clothing. The promissory notes were sewed into the lining of her bonnet, but the cash was in her pocket.

IRELAND.

THE REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—At the meeting of the Repeal Association on Monday, Mr. O'Connell proposed a resolution to the effect, that the Repeal wardens be called upon in every district to exert themselves to procure the registry of those Liberals who were entitled to register. This was agreed to, and Mr. O'Connell next moved the adoption of the report of the committee, containing a series of rules and regulations for the establishment of Repeal reading-rooms throughout the country, as a powerful auxiliary for diffusing amongst the people early intelligence, especially on the subject of Repeal. This proposal having also been adopted, the honourable and learned gentleman favoured the meeting with a very long rambling speech, embracing a vast variety of topics. The most remarkable part of it was an exhibition of inconsistency in regard to Federalism. It will be recalled that Mr. O'Connell has hitherto spoken of Federalism as useful to the cause of Repeal. Upon this occasion he completely threw it overboard. He said, "He was the apostle of peaceful exertion, and the preacher of moral combination. As such he had invited the Federalists to join them; but instead of joining them they had deceived them. They were good-natured people enough, but they were not genuine Irishmen, for they thought that Irishmen ought not to govern themselves, and the love of fatherland did not burn brightly in their bosoms. He now declared that he expected no aid from them." Mr. O'Connell then commented at great length upon the ten propositions noticed in our Irish news last week. On referring to the tenth, that the Union enormously augmented the disastrous effects of absenteeism, he observed, that if they had a Parliament of their own, they would be able to tax absenteeism to the extent of 75 per cent., or even 80, in order to compel them to reside in Ireland, and that for the principle of taxing absenteeism they had a precedent in the income-tax of Sir Robert Peel, who hunted out the Irish absentee residing in England, and made them pay that tax. (Cheers and laughter.) The hon. and learned gentleman concluded the exposition of his oft-repeated opinions upon his ten resolutions, by moving that they be referred to a committee to prepare an address upon them to the people of England. The motion being agreed to, the rest for the week was announced by Mr. O'Connell to be £493 1s. 6d.

BRUTAL MURDER OF TWO BROTHERS.—A letter from Mullamore, dated Dec. 1, gives the following fearful account of the shocking murder of two human beings, brothers, named Thomas and William Sheppard, on the lands of Coddin, barony of Ballyboy, in that county, about two miles on the mountain side of Frankford. The particulars of the sad circumstance, as gathered from the evidence of a surviving brother, at the inquest held upon the scene of the catastrophe, are in substance as follow:—A family named Daly heretofore held a small farm, about twenty-four acres, on the lands of Coddin, but, getting into arrears, they were ejected for non-payment of rent, when Ambrose, Thomas, and William Sheppard (three brothers) got into treaty with the sub-agent, Mr. Pawcutt, near Mullamore, for the farm. The negotiation getting publicly a threatening notice was served at their residence, Derrycooly, near Rahon. The Sheppards, no way daunted, got into the occupation in the latter end of August last, when another notice was also served at said place, warning death and destruction to them should they still persevere. They still treated these notices with indifference, at the same time being, as they thought, all due caution, having the house on the lands on which they then lived at Coddin well fortified against danger, having plenty of fire-arms, with a supply of ammunition, and a fireproof room erected therein, in which they nightly lay. Things lately seeming to wear a friendly aspect, Ambrose weakened the garrison by quitting the place a few days ago for Derrycooly, to bring up his wife, family, and furniture; and on his return on Friday evening last, seeing their horse walking about the place with his tackling on him, and neither of his brothers appearing, he was much astonished, and going to the door he found it partly shut; he pushed in the door and called his brothers, from neither of whom he received an answer. He immediately ran into Frankford to alarm the police, who quickly repaired to the spot with him, and on searching the house inside they found Thomas dead, with his head broken into pieces, and the brain escaping. They then made a search about the place for William, but it proved a fruitless one owing to the darkness of the night. They stopped there till morning, and when the daylight appeared they found William lying in a field, near the house, with his head equally broken and the brain also escaping. No other evidence calculated to throw light on the dreadful occurrence was obtained. It is supposed that the unfortunate men were murdered while at their work on Friday morning, as, from the caution they observed at night, it could not have occurred then without loss of lives to the assailants; besides, the horse being tackled, is another proof of the deed having been done in the day; and it is supposed that Thomas, on the attack, ran towards the house for arms, and that William's retreat was cut off from it. No alarm was made until the brother's return, and the farm, too, is in an elevated position.

THE LATE FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE MIDLAND COUNTIES RAILWAY.

CONCLUSION OF THE INQUEST ON MR. DEAN.

In part of our impression last week, we gave the following conclusion of the inquest on Mr. Dean. To this we now also add the remainder of the proceedings at the inquest upon Mr. Varnalls.

The Coroner and jury remained in deliberation three hours; and at twenty minutes past twelve on Saturday morning, the court was again thrown open.

The Coroner said, that the jury, having given a full and patient attention to the evidence adduced before them, in reference to the circumstances attending the death of Mr. John Dean, felt compelled, however painful to their own feelings, to return a verdict of MANSLAUGHTER AGAINST ROBERT LIGHTFOOT. The Coroner proceeded to remark that the Jury had instructed him to say, that they could not separate without expressing their opinion, that, notwithstanding the arrangements generally prevailing on railways, much might yet be done and ought to be done to render railway travelling more secure, especially in regard to second class carriages, which, though they may not be made as comfortable, may be made as safe, as those of the first class. The jury considered that passengers ought on no occasion to be taken on the wrong line of rails, without their previous knowledge or consent. They also suggested to railway directors that much greater safety might be secured by the general introduction of electric telegraphs upon the various lines. The jury also expressed their conviction that greater care should be taken by the company to instruct their servants in the nature of their respective duties, and that they should be perfectly and intimately acquainted with the rules in practice.

The verdict was not an unanimous one; but a sufficient number of jurors having agreed, the Coroner recorded the same.

THE ADJOURNED INQUEST ON MR. VARNALLS.

This inquiry was resumed on Monday morning in the Grand Jury room of the County Hall at Nottingham.

Mr. Hatchison, Mr. Youle, and Mr. Ellice, directors, were present; also Mr. Clarke, general superintendent; and Mr. Kirtley, superintendent of the locomotive department.

Messrs. Wadsworth and Patheist, solicitors, attended on behalf of the railway company; and Mr. Curham, solicitor, appeared to watch the proceedings on behalf of Mr. Lightfoot.

John Longden, the guard of the up train, and who was so much injured by the collision, was the first witness examined.

Henry Youle, Esq., a director at Nottingham end, was next examined; George Mitchell, an assistant guard and ticket collector, and Joseph England, a passenger, also gave evidence; but most of these persons were examined on the other inquest, and there was nothing in their statements.

The evidence of John Chalchourn, of Pinxton, a passenger at the time of the collision, was next taken.

Thomas Curran, fireman; Mr. Joseph Pettifer, clerk at the Nottingham station; Mr. M. Kirtley, superintendent of the locomotive department, and residing at Derby; and Mr. Peter Clarke, general superintendent, were then examined.

At half-past eight o'clock, it was agreed to again adjourn till Tuesday morning. The first witness examined on that day was—

Alfred J. Richardson, parcel-clerk at the Nottingham railway station, but from whom nothing material was elicited which has not been before given in evidence.

W. Hanny, Esq., a magistrate of the town of Nottingham, and late a director of the railway for six years, spoke, as before the week inquest, in favour of Mr. Lightfoot, and expressed his conviction that Mr. Lightfoot having left no instructions at the station, the same should be sought out to have sent off the train.

that they were to blame for not carrying out the instructions in the ninth rule, and he ascribed the cause of the accident to such neglect.

Mr. Campbell made an ingenious defence for Mr. Lightfoot.

The Coroner summed up at great length, commenting upon the various discrepancies in the evidence, and left it to the jury to decide whether they considered it proved that Mr. Lightfoot had been guilty of gross negligence; if he had not, he was not guilty of manslaughter.

At twenty minutes after three o'clock the jury retired to consider their verdict. The jury did not return their verdict until a quarter to twelve o'clock at night, after being locked up for eight hours and a half. On their return, the names of the jury having been called over, Mr. Coroner Swann, addressing the foreman, said,—"Gentlemen of the jury, are you agreed upon your verdict?"

The Foreman.—We are.

The Coroner.—Have the goodness to deliver it.

The Foreman then gave in the following as the unanimous verdict of the jury:—"We find a verdict of 'Accidental death;' and we impose a demand of £2000 on the engines, tenders, and carriages, being the property of the Midland Railway Company. The jury are satisfied the collision took place in consequence of mismanagement, and the want of a clear understanding on the part of some of the company's servants of the directions which were given; but, owing to conflicting evidence, we are not able to decide who are the parties individually implicated. We are also of opinion that much improvement may be made in the general management of the Midland Railway, particularly at the Nottingham station, which would tend materially to secure the public safety. We think it important that the servants, especially the engine-men and guards, should be properly instructed in, and daily impressed with the importance of, the printed rules, which should as much as possible be observed to the letter. We are also of opinion that Jonathan Raven, the Heaton station-master, has given evidence before this inquest which the jury can place no reliance upon, and that he ought to forfeit the confidence of the Railway Company, and be no longer retained as a public servant."

This verdict is said to have given in Nottingham very general satisfaction, the prevalent impression being that a most reprehensible system of management has, since the amalgamation of the lines, prevailed on the Midland Counties Railway, which the safety of the public and the interests of the company itself demand should be improved in a prompt and liberal manner.

Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Lightfoot. An address to the directors, calling on them to continue their confidence in him, has been very extensively signed, and by many of the leading people of the town; but Mr. Campbell, the legal adviser of that gentleman, has urged its withdrawal until the result of the trial. Mr. Lightfoot on Tuesday afternoon surrendered himself to the authorities.

POSTSCRIPT.

THE LATE PRINCESS SOPHIA MATILDA.—THE LYING IN STATE.—A change has taken place in the intention respecting the lying in state of the remains of her late Royal Highness the Princess Sophia Matilda. We understand that the ceremony will now take place at the Ranger's house, at Blackheath, on Monday next, the 9th instant, from twelve to four o'clock.

NEW MINISTER AT CONSTANTINOPLE.—A report has been in circulation to-day (Friday), that Sir Henry Patterson, G.C.B., will very soon be called upon to replace our present Minister at Constantinople, the Right Hon. Sir Stratford Canning, G.C.B., on the retirement of the latter.

REPRESENTATION OF TIPPERARY.—Several gentlemen are spoken of already as likely to be called on to fill the vacancy in the representation of Tipperary, caused by the death of Mr. Otway Carr. Among others are Daniel O'Connell, jun., and the Hon. G. Rely Heston.

THE WEATHER.—Last night the frost again was very intense, the thermometer during the greatest cold having fallen to ten degrees below freezing, a very rare occurrence so early in December.

Mr. Henry Wallace, the actor and late lessee of Covent Garden Theatre, appeared at the Bankruptcy Court on Thursday, and obtained his interim order; his debts and liabilities, which were stated to have arisen from theatrical speculations, amounting to upwards of £3,000. The assets are little or nothing, and his present salary at the Princess Theatre so limited that it will not admit of his allowing any part of it for the benefit of his creditors. He, however, promises that should he receive an increase he will immediately make some appropriation to liquidate their claims.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Mr. Francis Scutler, who for many years carried on the business of a bill and exchange broker in Adam's-court, Old Broad-street, died on Sunday last. The unfortunate gentleman, who was seen by one or two of his friends in the City on the preceding day, apparently in excellent health and spirits, entered the shop of a druggist in or near Holborn on Sunday morning (no doubt feeling ill at the time), where he almost immediately fell down dead! The immediate cause of this shocking catastrophe is at present unknown, but it is presumed that a legal inquiry will be instituted into the circumstances, although Mr. Scutler's death was, in all probability, a perfectly natural one. The deceased gentleman, whose eccentric manner and habits rendered him well known throughout the City, and who was much respected in the various mercantile and monetary circles, was a native of Switzerland.

ACCIDENT AT BIRMINGHAM.—An inquest was held on Thursday, at the station of the Grand Junction Railway, at Birmingham, on the body of a young man named William Graystone, an engine driver, who was killed on the previous day in the station-yard, while attending to his usual occupation, in moving the engines from one point to another. He was cautioned that he had placed himself in a dangerous situation, but he said all was right; he, however, became confused, and fell in attempting to get out of the way, when he was caught by the ash pan, and instantly killed. His left eye was forced out, and his head smashed. Verdict of "Accidental death," with a demand of 1s. upon the engine.

FIRE AND LOSS OF LIFE.—On Thursday morning a fire broke out in West-place, Heliwell-lane, Shoreditch. A poor woman of the name of Herring, occupying apartments in the above place, had occasion to go out for some food, leaving her three children locked up in the room. An inhabitant shortly afterwards observing smoke coming from the windows, broke open the door, when he saw a fine little boy, about five years of age, burned to death; and in one corner of the room were two little children crouched together, crying bitterly. It is supposed that, it being a very cold day, the poor little fellow went too near the fire to warm himself, and set his clothes on fire.

FIRE AT THE NEWCASTLE GRAND STAND.—A fire broke out at the Newcastle Grand Stand on Tuesday evening. The roof and upper staircases were in flames, but from the timely arrival of an engine, and a supply of water being at hand, the fire was speedily subdued, with but trifling damage. It is supposed to have originated from the ignition of the timber in the floor. The stand is occupied by Mr. Penwick, and the plate and other valuables were removed to the house of Mr. Brindley.

ATTEMPT TO SET FIRE TO THE ETON UNION WORKHOUSE.—At the Eton Petty Sessions, yesterday, five men, named Parker, Taylor, Smith, Harrison, and Smith, who had been admitted into the Eton Union workhouse, as casual paupers for the night, were charged with having attempted to set fire to the Eton Union workhouse, on the evening of Friday last. It appeared, from the evidence of two other paupers who were in the vagrant ward with the prisoners, that after they had been locked up for the night, Parker ignited a lucifer match, and set fire to the straw placed for them to sleep upon, from the fumes of which the whole were nearly suffocated. Upon Hitchcock, the porter of the union, being aroused by their cries for help, he immediately proceeded to the ward, when he found a considerable quantity of the wood flooring consumed; and with some difficulty, water being fortunately at hand, the fire was put out. The whole of the prisoners were fully committed to Aylesbury goal to take their trial for felony.

THE LATE BANK ROBBERY.—We understand that in consequence of a letter addressed to the banking-house of Messrs. Rogers and Co. by their solicitor, Mr. Hotter, suggesting a mode of cancelling all the Bank of England notes which have been recently stolen from that firm, and thus rendering the property taken valueless to the robbers and their confederates, some of the partners of the banking-house have had an interview with the Secretary of State upon the plan, and the matter is now under consideration with Sir James Graham.

RESCUE IN THE WATERLOO ROAD.—At Union-hall police-office, yesterday (Friday), Alexander Wilson, a notorious thief, was charged with breaking into the house of Mr. Joseph, watchmaker and jeweller, Alfred-place, Waterloo-road, and stealing a gold watch. Sergeant Fenton, No. 16 L, stated that shortly after four in the morning, as he was passing Mr. Joseph's shop, he heard a rumbling noise inside. He then listened for a few minutes, when he heard some person inside endeavouring to unfasten the shop door, which a few minutes afterwards was partly opened. He immediately called to his assistant J. L., and rushed into the shop; the prisoner ran into the back parlour, and attempted to make his escape. Witness seized him, when they had a severe struggle until the constable came to his assistance, when he was secured. In the struggle with the prisoner J. L. perceived the prisoner take the watch from his pocket and throw it away. It was picked up by J. L. On searching him two chiefs used in forcing drawers, a box of matches, and part of a candle, were found in his pockets. The prisoner had been several times summarily convicted for being found concealed in shops for an unlawful purpose.—Mr. Joseph said that the watch was safe on the mantel-piece in the back kitchen at three o'clock in the morning. At four he was aroused by hearing the scuffle in the shop. He went down, and saw the prisoner in the back parlour struggling with the officer. The watch produced was his property. The entrance was effected by climbing the chapel wall at the rear of his house, and forcing open the back kitchen door.—The prisoner owned being found on the premises, but he denied stealing the watch. He had endeavoured to get an honest living, but was unable to do so, which drove him to desperation.—Mr. Trill committed him for trial.

FOREIGN.

SPAIN.—Accounts from Madrid of the 15th ult. state that the Government had received official intelligence of the execution at Logroño of the son and brother-in-law of Zurbano. The news had caused a great sensation at Madrid. The Heraldo endeavoured to justify the Ministry. A number of officers of high rank had been banished from Madrid. Among them are General Pavia, formerly Inspector-General of cavalry who has been banished to Talavera; General Tena to Cantabria; General Canha (formerly Minister of War) to Navarre; General Valden to Valencia; General Chacon (formerly Captain-General of Madrid) to Old Castile; General O'Donnell to Seville; General Valapiedra to New Castile; General Indur to Galicia, and General Lebron to Aragon. Several persons of rank had also been banished from Seville, and orders had been issued by the Political Chief that all persons having in their possession sewing-machines shall give them up within five days, under pain of confiscation, a fine of 100 ducats, and being placed under the surveillance of the

SPECULATIONS ON THE RAILWAY.

(ILLUSTRATED BY KENNY MEADOWS.)

LONDON AND BRIGHTON RAILWAY.—THE GREAT OUSE VIADUCT.

There are few of us who do not look back with pleasure to the time when we lost ourselves in the wonders of the "Arabian Nights' Entertainments." Even now, we think we could enter as intensely as formerly into their gorgeous imageries—their glowing scenes of lights, genii, and music—

After the fashion of the time,
And humour of the golden prime
Of good Haroun Alraschid, as Mr. Tennyson hath written in his book of sweet poetry. One story we especially remember—we forget the name, but it was towards when they can combine the polarization of light with electro-magnetism.

And then the transporting carpet—we always looked upon that as the most surprising possession—and it occupied our mind the deepest. There was a slip of stair carpet used as a nursery rug, which we always were convinced was the pattern, as firmly as a child's associations only allow; and we used to sit upon it and wish it would take us off—somewhere—anywhere—so long as we went. Alack! balloons and aerial ships have sadly reduced its importance, and railways, above all, leave us little cause to regret, that after all, there never might have been such a thing, except flying through the brain of the astonishing Scheherazade.

And wonderful is the railway transport of the present day! We are not of those who regret "the good old coaching times," and "the roadside inns;" the "four sparkling tits" and the other conventional things to be lamented. Nor had that much coveted position, "the box seat," any extraordinary charms for us. Beyond the end, and treated of the efforts made by certain princes to restore some dear one, who was on the point of death. One had an apple which bore life in its very odour; another possessed a telescope that carried the sight to any spot that might be desirable; and the other owned a carpet which transported through the air any persons seated on it wherever they chose; and these wondrous things were all put in action on the emergency in question. Perhaps this is the only part of the "Entertainments" at which we should not marvel so much now-a-days. Science is a sad destroyer of romance; and modern inventions have made the magic treasures just spoken of less wonderful. Mesmerism, if we are to believe what we read, leaves the powers of the apple far behind; and telescopes, already advertised by cunning "ticians" "to see about eight miles," we doubt not, will be so; and roved ere long as to see anywhere, especially what was connected with the horses they were driving, and the public-houses they passed, we generally found the coachmen mighty dull and heavy men. A few miles, outside, in sunny summer weather, were all very well; but the cheerless umbrella-covered drag of a whole day, and night too, had in it nothing to regret. Now the chances are, we are comfortably housed at Brighton, before, under the ancient regime, our vehicle would have clattered up to the Greyhound at Croydon. The Brighton Railway is our especial favourite. The transit is rapid, and the contrast striking: you are not obliged to wander to out-of-the-way parts of London to get to the terminus; and, above all, the scenery upon the line is unusually diversified and charming—if we may use the term.

SHOREHAM.

TRAIN PASSING.

Who for one instant would compare the trouble and extortion of the old coachyard to the comfort of the station? We are snugly under cover, and have leisure to look about us, and make out our own histories of the people around. Carriages are revolving on the turnabouts, to be added to the train; luggage-barrows are rumbling down the platform, and porters are burying themselves in the lockers, head first, like bees in bell-flowers; some passengers are arriving; others are waiting for those who have not yet done so. Right before us is a widow lady—she must be the grandmother—guarding a fine chubby little baby, seated on a hamper, and crowing at the train; kicking, too, as far as the marvellous swaddling of shawls in which he is enveloped will admit of. He cannot be going to Brighton for health—his cheeks are bursting with it. London is not such an unwholesome place after all, then; in spite of all the squalid pictures of the virtuous-indignation gentlemen, it is wonderful to see the plump little fellows who roll out of doors and into the gutters, even in the Rookery. In this case, the father and mother, we wager, are already at Brighton; but they cannot get on well without baby, and grand-mamma—she lives in the house—is entrusted with the charge. The pretty girl in the Polka mantle is conversing earnestly with the young gentleman whilst her valetudinarian papa is twaddling with one of the hangers-on. Be sure she has reminded him, for the hundredth time, to write to-morrow; and she is not without faint hopes of taking his arm on the Chain-Pier on Sunday.

FIRST CLASS PASSENGERS.

THIRD CLASS PASSENGER.

WAITING FOR THE TRAIN.

The bell rings, the door opens, the last newspaper is sold, and the train is off. The gentleman walks by the side of the carriage containing the Polka mantle, smiling and nodding alternately, to the end of the platform; the cars move out of sight, and ere long, another set of passengers are waiting as before.

Although comfortable enough, there is little sociability in a first-class carriage on a railway; everybody seems to have an idea that he is the only one who is really entitled, by payment and position, to a seat therein, and so is afraid of compromising his dignity by speaking. There is, consequently, no conversation; the heads of the four corner occupants are usually looking out of the windows, and the centre ones looking at each other. By the same rule, however, that you rarely see a pretty woman in an omnibus, so you scarcely meet with ordinary ones in a first-class carriage. Look at the group opposite to us. The old gentleman in the centre is deeply absorbed, looking neither to the right nor left; the young soldier finds, most unaccountably, that the view from the window on the other side, is far more attractive than on his own, and consequently keeps his gaze fixed in that direction; and the young lady must be putting mesmerism into action, and reading with her fingers, for her eyes are the engine. They watch the weathercocks, too, and make their selection of place according to the wind; and if it be warm weather, are chatty and communicative, especially as many of them are in the habit of meeting every day in the train. The chances are, that they will joke about the engine, calling it a horse, alluding to "a feed of coke," saying "poor creature!" when it whistles, and indulging in other facetious observations: except on Monday afternoon, when the talk is purely agricultural, and about the state of the fields on the side of the line, being carried on by the farmers returning from Mark-lane. But in cold weather the second-class travellers talk but little. They wrap up the minute they get into the train, preparing for the worst; and after a few exchanged courtesies—lending an umbrella to the outsider, or spreading a cloak over two or three pairs of knees—you hear their voices no more.

The rattling pig-pens upon wheels, misnamed third-class carriages (before the late alterations), were despicable affairs, with the wonderful property of always meeting the rain in whatever quarter the wind might be blowing. They were a species of horizontal shower-bath, from whose searching power there was no escape. A wet, steaming, dripping coach was a melancholy object enough, swaying through a village with its compact hood of umbrellas, looking for all the world like a large green tortoise lying over the top; but it was nothing in forlorn appearance to an open car. There was no escaping the rain. If you turned your back to it, it filled the nape of your neck; if you faced it, you had overflowing pockets, with an additional cataract from the front rim of your hat, which before long was as limp as wet brown paper. Some rash people covered their heads with their handkerchiefs, but it came all the same, it was only prolonging the misery, as you did not know next where to put the handkerchief when you removed it. Everything was ruined from your head downwards, and these were called "cheap excursions."

Ten to one, but in the second class carriages you will find "the old lady." We particularise her thus, for she is nearly always there. You first find her in great distress about her box—which is a box unlike any ever seen before—at the omnibus. Then it is a source of the deepest trouble when she arrives at the terminus, because it will not go into any locker or under any seat; and is finally put in a remote van, where the old lady would like to go too, if she were not nervous. Her ideas of steam-power are limited; she looks upon the engine as something between clockwork and gunpowder, which keeps her in perpetual dread; and gives herself up for lost from the instant she starts until her arrival, more especially when a train passes. The agony of the old lady, when she meets another train, is something terrible to see; and sometime elapses before she can be persuaded that a dreadful accident has not happened and everybody is crushed. But she becomes somewhat tranquillised by the time she reaches the next station; and at every stoppage inquires of the local policeman and attendant time-keeper if her box is safe—they knowing nothing in the world about it—or looks sharply after every passenger who gets out, for fear he or she should walk off with it. Besides her box the old lady has usually a supplementary parcel of miscellaneous purchases, half crammed into an odd basket half tied up in a pocket handkerchief.

SECOND CLASS PASSENGERS.

Not the least source of wonder to us, on the railroad, are the various signals along the line. The mast-like bear-poles, with the letter O's and broad arrows at the top; the huge fans, and coloured bulls-eyes, like broken up chemist's windows, wandering along the line; the flags, and switches, and telegraphs are intensely mysterious. We have never been able to form the most remote or wildest notion as to their use or meaning, for nothing ever seems altered from the usual mode of progression in whatever state they are, and when we see the policeman, with upheld flag and extended arm pointing in the direction we are going, we rather incline to the belief that it is a sign of politeness on his part to welcome us into the tunnel, rather than any Masonic understanding between the engineer, stoker, guards, and himself.

THE LONDON AND BRIGHTON RAILWAY.

Having glanced at the living characteristics of this very popular railway, let us introduce to our readers the details of the principal works upon the line. Immediately upon the announcement of a railway to connect Brighton with the metropolis, there sprang up a very active competition, which must be fresh in the memory of many readers, with its lavish expense, its numerous pamphlets, reports, and counter-reports: one party for avoiding tunnels at the expense of a favourable direction; another fearlessly adopting them for the sake of obtaining the shortest line and the easiest gradients. The Parliamentary contest lasted two sessions, and cost, for a considerable time, £1000 per diem!

The line selected by the Government engineer was that laid out by Sir

John Henniss, which was known also as the direct line. Shortly after the passing of the act, it was greatly improved, in consequence of a minute survey by Mr. Rastick, to whom the construction was intrusted, aided by other engineers. Owing to these preliminaries, the works were not actually commenced until July 12th, 1839; and, exactly three years after that date, the greater part of the line was opened, although many of the works are almost unrivalled for magnitude.

The entire railway is fifty miles and a half in length, thus bringing the Daphne of the metropolis (as Brighton has been classically termed) within the length of the shortest coach road. The line traverses a considerable portion of the counties of Surrey and Sussex, and affords the passenger some charming prospects of Kent; so that in attractions for pleasure-trips it is scarcely equalled by either of the other metropolitan railways.

We will start from the quadruple terminus lately erected in a recess leading out of Tooley-street, near London-bridge. The structure is strikingly handsome, and has been engraved in our journal. We call this a quadruple terminus, because it serves for four railways—the Greenwich, the Dover, the Croydon, and the Brighton; the entrance to the latter being at the furthest corner of the building.

The remarkable connection of the four lines must be first briefly explained. Thus, for a short distance, there is but one line; then, the Croydon diverges to the right, forming to Croydon, also, the Brighton and Dover lines; from Croydon the last two depart in undivided companionship, as far as Redhill, about 21 miles from London, where they separate, each to seek alone its respective destination.

Well—the train being fairly started, we bestow a parting glance at the Grammar School of St. Olave, a good specimen of Old English architecture, but most disadvantageously placed—and thus we leave the noble pile of offices reared on arches formed of upwards of 3,000,000 bricks. To the left, we look down upon one of the most singular districts in the vast capital of England—densely crowded with inhabitants, and buildings allotted to tanners and parchment-makers; there too are rope-makers' walks, and glue-makers' sheds; lofty chimneys, pointed gables, and flat smoky roofs; the whole scene diversified with plots of well-stocked garden-ground. Next we reach the timber viaduct leading to the Bricklayers' Arms terminus of the South Eastern Railway. To the left

(Continued on page 364.)

TUNNEL SIGNAL—"ALL RIGHT."

Corner and Newmarket against them. For this reason many of these attended to

THE WOODEN WALLS OF ENGLAND.—A newspaper paragraph informs us that "if an acre be left for some weeks suspended by a sitting over the surface of some water contained in a byernth-glass, it will throw down long reeds, whilst its stem will run upwards, and become decorated with leaves." This is cheering to know, as the British Navy need never be in want of timber as long as there is a byernth-glass and a lot of time left in the kingdom. The idea of growing oaks in a second-year-bark is so rich to us, that we intend to-morrow to plant four-and-twenty acorns on all our mantel-pieces, and have no doubt that in less than a year we shall have a perfect Windsor Forest in every room in the house. Let us hope that the Oaks will not be of such a nature as eventually to take us in.—Punch.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

FATAL COACH ACCIDENT.—On Saturday an accident, attended with fatal consequences, occurred near the entrance of the town of Beaconsfield, Buckinghamshire, to the Prince of Wales's Oxford coach. The coach left the Bull Inn, Holford, at eight o'clock on Saturday morning, driven by Mr. William Tait, one of the proprietors. At Uxbridge the horses were changed, and the coach proceeded on towards Beaconsfield, having at that time only two passengers—aside, an aged couple, who had a few days previously come up from Oxford. Just as the coach was ascending the hill at the entrance of Beaconsfield, the leader shied at a short white post at the side of a ditch, and at the same instant the reins broke, by which Mr. Tait lost all command over the horses; they drew the coach up a bank, and it was overturned. Mr. Tait and both passengers were thrown to the ground with great force, and, when picked up, the two passengers were found to be in a state of insensibility. Mr. Tait had three of his fingers broken, and his nose and face were most seriously cut and bruised. The male passenger had sustained serious injuries to the head, and his wife had her collar bone fractured, injury of the ribs, &c. The male passenger lay until between 12 and 1 o'clock on Sunday morning, when he died. Mr. Tait is recovering from his injuries.

THE SUICIDE OF THE TWO LOVERS.—It having been reported that the bodies of the unfortunate couple would be interred in one grave, on Sunday afternoon, in Beacom Cemetery, Stepney, a large concourse of persons of both sexes assembled to witness the sad, though novel, ceremony. They, however, were somewhat disappointed, as the relatives of the ill-fated young woman objected, notwithstanding her dying wish, to laying her remains with those of her deceased suitor. The parochial officers expressed a hope that the bodies should not be buried together, as such a proceeding might be calculated to give a kind of countenance to such tragedies. Accordingly the body of the female was, on Saturday afternoon, consigned to its final resting-place in Globe-fields burial-ground, Globe-road, Mile-end. The funeral was kept strictly private. On Sunday afternoon the body of the young man was privately interred in Beacom's Cemetery. It has not been noticed that a box belonging to the young man was broken open, and all the letters which the poor girl had sent to him were found secured in an envelope, with the following superscription:—"Anguish and sorrow. The enclosed letters were given to me by my dear Elizabeth. Let them be a living monument of my credulity, and as a memento of grief."—(Signed)—G. A. D.

TWO LIVES LOST ON THE SOUTH EASTERN RAILWAY.—A great sensation was caused at Dover on Wednesday night, by a report that two lives had been lost in one of the tunnels between Dover and Folkestone. Upon enquiry it was found to be too true: the sufferers were George Cressy and Edward Jackson; both have left wives, and, it is believed, families. The deceased were employed as labourers on the South Eastern Railway, near the Warren, and when the accident happened, were on their way home from work. They were in the Ashford Cliff Tunnel, and probably were walking on the rails. The up-train which leaves Dover 40 minutes past 5, passed them; and it is supposed that from the noise and smoke they neither saw nor heard the down-train, which should reach Dover at 26 minutes past 5, enter the tunnel; in consequence of which they were knocked down by the engine, and the train passed over the bodies and killed them. The scalp of Jackson's head was dreadfully torn, and was lying on his breast; indeed, both bodies were severely lacerated. The bodies have been brought into Dover, and notice given to the coroner.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE BLACKBURN AND PRESTON RAILWAY.—On Tuesday afternoon an accident occurred at King's Bank, Righton-bottoms, on the new line of railway now constructing between Blackburn and Preston, by which one man was killed, another so seriously injured that he is not expected to recover, and a third much hurt, though not to a dangerous extent. It appears that the line at King's Bank goes through a pretty deep cutting at the side of a hill, and the deceased, with the two others, were engaged in making the cutting, and were at the time of the accident at work between the hill side and a wagon. They were just about to leave work for the day, when a large portion of the upper part of the hill, it is calculated to the extent of nine or ten tons, gave way, falling upon and burying the men beneath. Assistance was immediately procured, and when the unfortunate men had been extricated from their position, it was found that one of them must have been crushed to death against the wagon instantly. The second was injured to a very dangerous extent, and his life is despaired of. The third, we are happy to state, was much less hurt, and it is hoped that he will speedily recover from the effects of the accident. Every possible assistance was rendered to the survivors. As a proof of the narrow escape the third man must have had, we may mention that a snuff box, which was in one of his pockets, was completely crushed. The deceased was about eighteen or nineteen years of age. This is the second accident which has happened at this place.

FIRE IN THE NEW ROAD.—Early on Wednesday morning a fire broke out upon the premises of Mr. Trebley, builder, Milton-street, New-road. In a short time there were in attendance six engines. The fire burned most brilliantly, the glare being distinctly seen from the bridges. Abundance of water being at hand, the engines were soon got to work, but not a vestige of stock or building, except the walls, could be saved. The occupier is insured in the Phoenix. The cause of the fire is not known, no one being in the house at the time of the outbreak.

SHOCKING DEATH.—Last week two women had occasion to go up Ilknot-look mountain (Berkshire), and one of them took her little girl with her, who, by some means or other, unfortunately got separated from her mother, and on account of the density of the fog, the child passed without any trace of her being discovered. On the following morning, however, she was found in a sitting posture, with her hands crossed over her bosom, quite dead.

ARMY MOVEMENTS.—The following removals of troops are ordered to take place:—The 16th Foot from Ireland to England, the depot of the 14th Foot from Ireland to England, and the 57th Foot from England to Ireland. The 72nd Foot embarked at Cork for Gibraltar, on the 27th ult.

A FEW QUESTIONS ON CRICKET.—Q. What is a "long stop"? A. Alderman Gibbs's accounts. Q. What do you call a "good run"? A. At the Victoria Theatre, a piece that goes twelve nights. Q. What is "flinging"? A. The author of Tom Jones. Q. How do you stop a ball? A. By putting out the lights. Q. When does a party change sides? A. When he is in bed, and gets the fligets. Q. What do you call a "long slip"? A. A hundred songs for a halfpenny. Q. How much is game? A. It depends whether it's in season. —Punch.

EXTENSIVE SALE OF ACRES.—Curiosity has been life in Godalming during the last few weeks to account for the very extensive demand which has taken place for acres. One individual, it is said, has been commissioned to buy up no less than 2000 hectares at 1s. per hectare, and so great is the competition for the acres, that pig-keepers are quite unable to keep pace with the rise in price. Some suppose that they are wanted as a substitute for bark in tanning leather, while others, no less wise, hint that they are to be used for adulterating coffee. Be this as it may, they are all sent off as quickly as purchased, to London, there to be made some use of.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

On Tuesday week was caught in a net in the Thames, between Pangbourne and Maidenhead, by Mr. Field's fishermen, a fine jack, in capital condition, and weighing nearly 30lb. The same fish has often afforded sport to the angler, many marks of the hook being apparent in his mouth, and one eye is destroyed.

The King of Sweden whilst waiting for the legislative modification of the criminal code, has issued an ordinance authorizing the application of corporal punishment as far as the army is concerned. His Majesty abolishes altogether the punishment of the stick, which was both cruel and brutalizing, and substitutes for it a few blows on the back with the flat part of the sword, rather by way of degradation than otherwise, or in certain cases a number of stripes with a rod, never to exceed 25.

The law officers of the Crown have given their opinion that the words of the Mutiny Act exempt, as they were intended to exempt, all military officers in uniform dress or undress, and their horses, from the payment of toll when passing through turnpike-gates or bridges erected by the authority of Parliament.

On Monday night, about eight o'clock, the northern lights, which are so bad upon the prognostics of a severe winter, were visible for a considerable time in the neighbourhood of Islington, King'sland, Hackney, &c. A deep red glare was first observed at the west, and then slowly moved toward the east.

The Senate and College of the Ancients of Hamburg have declared in favour of emancipating the Jews. What principally decided the two highest bodies in the state to consent to this act of justice was the consideration of the immense sacrifices which the Jews of Hamburg have made to succour the numerous victims of the fire of 1842, and the spirit of patriotism and charity with which that body has been animated for a long series of years. The emancipation of the Jews will be, it is said, complete, except that they cannot form part of the Senate.

According to the Morgen Journal it is almost certain that Austria, next year, will make some important changes in its tariff, and reduce considerably some of the duties, particularly on raw materials from foreign countries. The same journal adds that the duties on certain articles will be entirely removed.

The last American papers announce the loss on the 4th of October, of the American ship Elizabeth, Captain Paton, with, it is much apprehended, the sacrifice of twenty-two persons including the commander, the chief mate, several of the crew, and many passengers. She was on her passage from Liverpool to New Orleans, having on board for that port sixteen passengers, of whom there were a number of ladies.

It appears by letters from the South of France, that Lord Brougham and Mr. Leader, the member for Westminster, are at their beautiful seat at Cannes in the South of France, and that many English families are about to have residences built there, so that a sort of English colony will be founded. It is added that Lord Brougham is busily engaged in the correction of the proof sheets of his great work on the French Revolution. This work is very extensive apparently, and will be published on the return of the Noble Lord to London. He will have his country seat in Provence so as to be present at the opening of Parliament. Mr. Leader is engaged with his magnificent building, the foundations of which are laid.

According to a letter from the banks of the Danube, in the Augsb. Zeitung, the engineers appointed to survey that river, and report on the practicability of improving it, so as to facilitate navigation, have declared that there are no obstacles which cannot be overcome at a moderate cost.

A letter from Alexandria of the 20th ult., states that the Pacha of Egypt has announced his intention of making a railroad on his own account to Siwa. The writer of the letter states that the distance is 84 English miles, and that the estimated expense is only 400,000 sterling per mile. Mr. Chevreton has continued to turn a deaf ear to the suggestions made to him by the East India Company, for an amelioration of the means of transport of the Overland Mail.

Letters from Bern mention the death of the celebrated Fellenberg, at Herten, on the 21st ult. Konstant von Fellenberg was born in 1771 of a patrician family of Bern. He was educated at Tübingen for the bar, but later took to the profession of teaching. He was professor at Pöhl, near Colmar. He founded his agricultural school at Hofwil in 1801.

The King of Hanover returned on the 25th ult., to Hanover, from his Majesty's hunting party at Rother Kichen.

Accounts from Berlin say that the Emperor of Russia has refused to allow Prussian officers to take part in the war in the Caucasus. We likewise learn that Russia will not extend the advantages granted to Prussia to the Zollverein, which it does not recognize as a power.

The Gazette of Tuesday night contains a Treasury warrant, fixing generally at 4d. the rate on all East India and colonial letters of not more than half an ounce weight.

The Lighthouse on the Goodwin Sands progresses well, upwards of 25 feet of the iron shaft or column having been constructed in Mr. Rush's caisson, so that it is now above high water mark, and may be expected to be illuminated by the 1st January next. The light is to be a pale blue, to distinguish it from any other in the same locality.

A subsidy of 24,000 francs has been granted to the Liege Theatre by the civic authorities.

Last Monday week a dreadful murder was perpetrated at Helder (Holland) by a mechanic, who, on his unexpected return from Amsterdam, found within his house a former acquaintance with whom he has long been at enmity. Urred by feelings of jealousy, on finding that his wife had received this individual during his absence, he took up a knife and plunged it into her heart. The poor woman died in a few seconds. After an attempt at suicide, the assassin was arrested and conveyed to prison.

The Duke of Norfolk is about to present fifty acres of land to the people of Sheffield for public pleasure-grounds.

Lieutenant Selby, of the Indian navy, has recently ascended the River Kurus, in Southern Persia, in the steamer Assyria, to a more higher point than ever had been visited before by Europeans. He reached as far as Suzeher, a Persian town, containing a population of 8000 souls, and the Dairat, one of its tributary streams, to within 13 miles of the town of Dairat, and about the same distance of the ruins of Susa, one of the ancient capitals of Persia, and the Shushan of the Book of Daniel. This discovery throws open the richest provinces of Persia, which have hitherto been impenetrable, from want of roads, to English trade and commerce.

A dinner is to be given on Wednesday next, by the merchants of London, to Sir Henry Pottinger, at the Merchant Tailors' hall, and the merchants and manufacturers of Manchester have invited him to a banquet in that town on the 26th inst.

M. Duncker, director of the police of Berlin, has discovered the authors of the recent robbery on the Blucher family. They are four in number. The stolen articles have been recovered, but many of them are much injured. Amongst these articles were a valuable sword, presented to Blucher by the Prince Regent of England, and which had cost nearly £10,000 sterling; the golden box enclosing the letters of the city freedom, conferred on the field marshal by the city of Berlin, and which was worth 4000 thalers (about £550); sixteen golden snuff-boxes decorated with precious stones, valued at 11,000 thalers. The whole of the stolen articles are valued at about 300,000 thalers (£40,000).

In answer to a letter from the Secretary of the Short-time Committee of Lancashire, Lord Ashley has written to say that he will endeavour to bring on the subject of the Ten Hours Bill on the first night of the session, so that a day may be fixed for its discussion.

SCOTLAND.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION AT KILBO.—Yesterday week an atrocious attempt at assassination took place at K. The victim is James Cockburn, a farm-servant at Kilbo, in the parish of Abbey St. Bathen's, who was on that night to have been married to Jean Steele, or Rankin, widow, residing at Lintlaw, in the adjoining parish of Banrie. The bride and bridegroom were to have met at Dunee in the evening, in order to have had their nuptials celebrated. The bridegroom, with an acquaintance of the name of James Yost, was proceeding to the place of meeting in Dunee, and when at a place called Preston Clough, about half a mile to the north of Preston, at about half past five o'clock in the afternoon, was fired at with a gun or a pistol from the plantation adjoining the east side of the road. The shot took effect in the back. Yost also received some of the shots in his arm; and being stunned by the murderous attack, and seeing Cockburn fall, he fled to Preston for assistance and protection to himself and Cockburn, having procured which, and returning immediately to the spot, Cockburn was found as he fell, but there was no trace of the murderer. On the examination of Cockburn's wounds, he was found to have received about 160 slugs and round shot in the back, which was dreadfully lacerated. On recovering sensation, he was heard to say "That it was a poor revenge," and when asked if he suspected any one to have done the deed, he said that he thought it was John Johnston, who resides at present with Jean Rankin, as hired for her, the bride to whom he was to have been married. Johnston at that time was in the room, and was then apprehended, and, having undergone an examination, has been committed for trial. The poor woman was much distressed at hearing what had befallen her intended husband, who is in a very dangerous condition, and not expected to survive.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—A lamentable accident took place last week in the drist-way, or guide-mare, of the tunnel at present forming under the New Town, Edinburgh, in connection with the Edinburgh, Leith, and Granton Railway, which proved fatal to no fewer than four of the workmen. How the accident occurred is not known, as all who were in the tunnel at the moment have perished; but it is supposed that the water, which had accumulated in the upper mine, had suddenly broken in upon them, and swept them all away in the torrent.

THE MARKETS.

COAL.—(Friday).—We had a fair average quantity of English wheat on sale to-day. As was the case on Monday, the best parcels were in steady request, but all other kinds were more drug. The share of foreign wheat was not large, the inquiry for it was heavy, at previous figures. Our supplies of barley, both English and foreign, are large, which caused the barley trade to be extremely heavy, and prices to have a downward tendency. Malt was in slow request, but not cheap. Oats, beans and peas were steady, at full prices.

GRAIN.—(Friday).—Wheat, 1840; barley, 1840; oats, 1840; quarters. Irish: wheat, —; barley, —; oats, 15, 17, 18 quarters. Foreign: wheat, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

THE FLOUR MARKET.—Landed cargoes are in active request, at fully the late improvement in the quotations. In all other kinds of cereals, comparatively little is doing at late rates.

The following are the present rates:—Landed cargoes, English, 42s to 42½; ditto, foreign, 42½ to 43; ditto, 43 to 43½.

BEAN.—The prices of white bean, in the metropolitan, are from 7d to 7½d; of house, 7½d to 8d; of the best, 8d to 8½d.

PEAS.—The prices of white peas, in the metropolitan, are from 6d to 6½d; of house, 6½d to 7d; of the best, 7d to 7½d.

BARLEY.—The prices of white barley, in the metropolitan, are from 5d to 5½d; of house, 5½d to 6d; of the best, 6d to 6½d.

OATS.—The prices of white oats, in the metropolitan, are from 4d to 4½d; of house, 4½d to 5d; of the best, 5d to 5½d.

WHEAT.—The prices of white wheat, in the metropolitan, are from 3d to 3½d; of house, 3½d to 4d; of the best, 4d to 4½d.

RYE.—The prices of white rye, in the metropolitan, are from 2d to 2½d; of house, 2½d to 3d; of the best, 3d to 3½d.

MAIZE.—The prices of white maize, in the metropolitan, are from 1d to 1½d; of house, 1½d to 2d; of the best, 2d to 2½d.

WHEAT.—The prices of white wheat, in the metropolitan, are from 3d to 3½d; of house, 3½d to 4d; of the best, 4d to 4½d.

RYE.—The prices of white rye, in the metropolitan, are from 2d to 2½d; of house, 2½d to 3d; of the best, 3d to 3½d.

MAIZE.—The prices of white maize, in the metropolitan, are from 1d to 1½d; of house, 1½d to 2d; of the best, 2d to 2½d.

WHEAT.—The prices of white wheat, in the metropolitan, are from 3d to 3½d; of house, 3½d to 4d; of the best, 4d to 4½d.

RYE.—The prices of white rye, in the metropolitan, are from 2d to 2½d; of house, 2½d to 3d; of the best, 3d to 3½d.

MAIZE.—The prices of white maize, in the metropolitan, are from 1d to 1½d; of house, 1½d to 2d; of the best, 2d to 2½d.

WHEAT.—The prices of white wheat, in the metropolitan, are from 3d to 3½d; of house, 3½d to 4d; of the best, 4d to 4½d.

RYE.—The prices of white rye, in the metropolitan, are from 2d to 2½d; of house, 2½d to 3d; of the best, 3d to 3½d.

MAIZE.—The prices of white maize, in the metropolitan, are from 1d to 1½d; of house, 1½d to 2d; of the best, 2d to 2½d.

WHEAT.—The prices of white wheat, in the metropolitan, are from 3d to 3½d; of house,

LONDON AND BRIGHTON RAILWAY.—BRIGHTON TERMINUS.

(Continued from page 361.)

branches off the Greenwich line; and at its extremity, the eye dwells with interest on Blackheath, the domes of Greenwich Hospital, the Observatory on the hill, and the charming country stretching from these edifices. There is a steep gradient here of one foot in every 100, which continues rising from the New Cross Station (in part destroyed by fire a few weeks since) to the Dartmouth Arms, 5½ miles from town.

Speedily, the New Cross Locomotive Establishment is reached. "On the right, a delightful cluster of villages appears, inviting all to whom they are accessible, and they are easily so to multitudes, to many a delightful ramble. Camberwell, Peckham with its Rye Common, and its noble Forest Hill, Dalwich with its interesting gallery of pictures, Rydenham Common, and Norwood with its beautiful Spa, are all there. Nor is the left without great interest. There is Eitham with its old palace; Bromley, deriving its name most probably from the broom growing so plentifully around; the little church and the almshouses of the Licensed Victuallers, on Penge Common; the spire of Beckenham Church, backed by the beautiful woods of Gwyder House; and the Addiscombe Downs, knee deep in heath and heather."—Illustrated Guide to the London and Dover Railway.

The actual commencement of the railway is at about nine and a quarter miles from London Bridge, the trains running for that distance, over the rails of the Greenwich and Croydon Railway Companies.

A mile onward, we reach the first of the great localities along the road—the Croydon station, where are four distinct lines of rails, an arrangement which ensures the safety of passengers at the stations; the main line being left free for the passage of any special train, and the current train being turned off into what are technically termed the "sidings." Croydon is a place of considerable interest, with its spacious collegiate church; and the Archbishop's Palace, and Addiscombe House in the vicinity.

We pass eastward of the town, with the Sanderstead Hills and Banstead Downs on the left, as we emerge from a short cutting, and advance upon an embankment about two miles in length.

Next we reach the Godstone-road station (13½ miles), leaving the coach-road to the right, along which, perhaps, a small-paced waggon may be creeping, as if in contrast with the almost electrical speed on the iron road; and, perchance, reminding us that near this very spot, some one and forty years since, was laid down an iron tramroad—though, for horse-power instead of steam. Nevertheless, this was one of the earliest germs of the grand railway system.

About a mile and a half onward is the Station with the genuine rustic appellation of Stott's Nest. From the junction with the Croydon line, the railway rises with this slope for about eight miles, to the high ground at Merstham, where a cutting of great depth keeps the railway far below the natural level of the country, being 100 feet deep in its greatest perpendicular descent; by which we enter the Merstham Tunnel, the first on the line, about 1700 yards in length, and the construction of which occupied three and a half years.

Regaining day-light as abruptly as we left it, by a slight inclination of the head, we perceived the interesting Norman church of Merstham, with its shingled spire immediately to the right. Next, upon an elevated ridge, flanked by noble trees, is the mansion of Galton Park, formerly the seat of Sir Mark Wood, Bart., next of Lord Monson, and now the property of the Countess of Warwick. Adjoining the house is a small stone church in the pointed style, built a few years since by Lord Monson.

By an embankment, 30 feet high, we reach the Reigate Station (11½ miles), where the Dover line branches off to Tunbridge. Reigate lies about two miles to the left, and is noticeable for its fine church, in the early English style; and its sand-rock caves, in which the Barons are reported to have held their meetings antecedent to the signing of Magna Charta. Immediately above is the site of the castle of the powerful Earls of Warren and Surrey, the entrance to the fortified ground being denoted by a modern gateway.

We next cross the beautiful tract called, from its geological structure, Red Hill, where is another station, and a few poles to the right, the new coach-road to Brighton, and its red brick inn.

Crossing the embankment at Earlswood Common, we gain a fine view of Leigh Hill, the highest point in this part of England—nearly 1000 feet above the sea level. Thence the eye crosses a picturesque country to the wood-crowned range in which is the famed Box Hill, nearly over against Dorking.

At 25½ miles, we reach the Horley Station, at a short distance from the village, with its pretty church spire. Here the line begins to rise, and the view continues uninterrupted.

At 29½ miles, is the Three Bridges and Crawley Station, which is the nearest point to Crawley and Horsham. The line here passes over a long embankment, and now commences a descent of 1 in 254 feet. After passing through several cuttings, we enter the Balcombe Tunnel, 1122 yards long, the construction of which was, indeed, a triumph of engineering skill. We soon reach the Balcombe Station, 32½ miles; and in the valley beneath, may be traced the sinuous river Ouse.

This romantic valley is crossed by a beautiful viaduct, consisting of 37 brick arches, of 30 feet span; its total length is 1437 feet, or rather more than a quarter of a mile; and the height varies from 45 feet at the abutments, to 60 feet at the point where it crosses the river. This is the noblest work on the line; it is of Italian design, by Mr. J. U. Rastick, F.R.S., F.S.A.; resident engineer, Mr. E. J. Mande. The entire structure is shown in the large engraving at page 366. The prospect from the road line is an unbounded scene of beauty, stretching across the Weald of Sussex, Kent, and Surrey—a lovely succession of hill and dale, woodland and pasture, dotted with farmsteads, cottages, and churches—these matchless charms of an English landscape.

Passing through a somewhat monotonous cutting, we reach Hayward's Heath Station (thirty-eight miles), one mile from Cuckfield, the turnpike road to which we pass beneath, immediately on quitting the station, through a short tunnel of 700 feet. Alack for Cuckfield, Crawley, and Reigate, once the pride of the Brighton road—now occasionally re-echoing with the crack of a solitary whiff!

A cutting of nearly two miles leads us to an embankment across St. John's Common, covered with furze and flaunting gorse. A minor station—Burgess Hill—is next passed, and we reach Hassock's Gate Station, seven miles from Brighton, and forty-three miles and a half from London. Around this station lies Ditchling, celebrated in olden time for its itinerant singers (probably a relic of mumming), and Hurst-pier-point, near which is Denny, a fine massive brick mansion, of the year 1835; and in the adjacent parish is a moated farm-house, or Cam stone, with indications of a portulacium, and other feudal appurtenances. The most interesting objects to the right of this portion of the line are a few half-timbered farmsteads, with massive brick chimneys, apparently of considerable antiquity.

Returning to the railway, we soon reach the Gothic entrance to the Clayton Tunnel, which, like that at Merstham, is cut through chalk, and is about a mile and a quarter long; a shaft of this tunnel crowns the highest point of the hill, and may be seen for many miles round.

Immediately beyond Clayton Tunnel is an immense open cutting through chalk, and then we reach Patcham Tunnel, 1440 feet in length.

A succession of chalky precipices now indicates the approach seaward, and we soon reach the fiftieth milestone, and arrive at the Brighton terminus, engraved at page 364; an elegant structure in the Roman style, with a commodious portico, &c.

From this point is a branch line to Shoreham, a passage of ten minutes. After passing through a tunnel, we burst upon the sea-side, with the village of Hove and its little Saxon church; the walls of Aldington church; and the villages of Portslade, Southwick, and Kingston; till by a continuous embankment, we arrive at Shoreham, near to its fine large Anglo-Norman church. The scene shown in the engraving is the most picturesque view of the town, with the handsome suspension bridge across the Adur, built by Mr. Clark, at the expense of the Duke of Norfolk, in 1833.

We find the cost of the London and Brighton Railway, stated at £2,634,000; cost per mile, £57,202; passengers per week, 11,317; receipts per week, £3,673.

THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.—The arrangements have now all been completed for giving possession of the various parts of this great work. All the shops and offices are let, and the agreements have been signed by the tenants, many of whom are in possession, and are fitting them up with considerable taste and effect. In Lloyd's subscribers' room there will be mahogany seats and tables for the subscribers, 800 or 900 in number; and in the commercial or club-room, similar seats and tables are to be placed for the accommodation of 300 or 400 persons. Round the room and in appropriate stands will be laid the journals and newspapers from all parts of the world. In the merchants' area the tessellated pavement has been entirely removed, and the surface is now covered with an exceedingly hard and smooth coating of the asphalt of Seyssel of a uniform and pleasing colour. The merchants' area will, it is confidently reported, be given up to the merchants on the 1st of January, and complete access will be given to all public portions of the building a week or ten days previously.

ANCIENT HOUSE IN GRAVEL-LANE.

This fine old mansion, in Old Gravel-lane, Ratcliffe-highway, has just been taken down: it was originally handsome and spacious, and appeared to be of the age of Elizabeth. The mansion has enjoyed considerable celebrity for years past, from a tradition of its having been the residence of the Count Gondomar, Ambassador from the Court of Spain to this country, in the reign of James I. To the intrigues of this nobleman is attributed the execution of the long-

ANCIENT MANSION, GRAVEL-LANE.

pending sentence on Sir Walter Raleigh; it being the object of James I. to secure the favour of the Court of Spain, to bring about the marriage of the Infanta with his son Charles I. The above mansion is mentioned in Pennant's "London;" and, being a fragment of Old London, is worthy of record by illustration.

ST. GEORGE'S NEW SCHOOLS, SHEFFIELD.

Considerable interest has been attached to the laying of the first stone of the above schools, on the 14th ult., by the Right Hon. the Lord Wharnccliffe, Lord President of her Majesty's Council. His lordship on his arrival was received by the committee and clergy of Sheffield and its neighbourhood. Soon afterwards, the procession was formed (the children, about 800 in number, belonging to St. George's Schools passing the Grammar School, where his lordship and the clergy were assembled), and proceeded from Charlotte-street, up Portobello, and along St. George's terrace, to the site of the schools, at the top of Best-street. The ceremony was commenced by the singing of the 100th psalm, after which several portions of Scripture were read by the Rev. W. Mercer. Prayer was then offered up by Mr. Mercer, and a glass bottle, containing a number of documents and coins, afterwards deposited by Lord Wharnccliffe into the receptacle prepared for it under the foundation-stone. Some passages of Scripture were next read by Mr. Mercer, prior to the stone being lowered to its appointed place.

The stone was then laid by Lord Wharnccliffe in the usual form. The handsome silver trowel used by his lordship on this occasion was kindly presented by Mrs. Hatfield, the lady of Mr. Hatfield, of the firm of Waterhouse, Hatfield, and Tansan.

Two verses of a hymn were next sung, after which Lord Wharnccliffe, standing upon the stone, thus addressed the assembly:—"Now, my friends, we have this day begun a building for the benefit of the inhabitants of this neighbourhood. It is not necessary for me to say anything in these days of the advantages of education, nor is it necessary for me to impress upon you that no education is worth the having which is not founded upon religion. The inhabitants of this district will now possess the means of having their children educated in connection with the Established Church of this country, whose doctrines, I firmly believe, are the purest that exist; and if we follow those doctrines out, they must lead to our eternal salvation. I, therefore, earnestly hope that the work of this day will be blessed by God, and that you, the inhabitants of this district, will cause your children to benefit by the opportunity now afforded you, and that hereafter they will thank you and thank us for the work of this day. I have only to add that it gives me pleasure that, in my official situation, I have been able materially to assist in the completion of this project; but I should not do the inhabitants of this district justice if I did not say that it is their liberality which has enabled us to show ours also. We have proceeded upon this principle—we do not think it is prudent, neither does the Legislature desire us, to do all that is to be done in the way of education, but that it is necessary to assist those persons who really show an interest, by means of their subscriptions, in the work which they are anxious to promote. I am glad of this opportunity of addressing you on this occasion, and I trust that God will bless the work."

A psalm was then sung, and the Rev. Mr. Mercer having addressed the assembly, the proceedings terminated.

These buildings, of which the first stone has been so auspiciously laid, are to consist of three separate schools, with suitable classrooms. The Girls' School, fronting St. George's Church, 60 feet by 40 feet; the Infants' School, forming the centre division, and fronting Best-street and Siddle-street, 60 feet by 40 feet. These divisions do not, of course, include the classrooms. There will also be comfortable dwelling houses for the master and mistress; the basement of the building being occupied by library, soup kitchen, play-grounds, &c. The estimated cost, without fittings, is nearly £4000, which sum includes £1200 for the site alone. To meet this, about £1200 has been raised by subscription, £1300 granted by the Privy Council, and £400 by the National Society, and £100 from other available sources. The design of the building has been furnished, and the work will be carried out under the able superintendence of Messrs. North and Frith, architects.

After the conclusion of the ceremony of laying the stone, Lord Wharnccliffe, the Clergy, and Committee of the Schools, proceeded to the Cutlers' Hall, where luncheon was provided. About a hundred and thirty ladies and gentlemen sat down, between one and two o'clock, to the repast. The Rev. W. Mercer presided. Lord Wharnccliffe, in returning thanks for his health being drunk by the company, said, "I believe that mankind, in this country at least, are convinced that one founded upon religion—you cannot make them good men or good citizens. In all efforts for this object I beg of you all to bear in mind that the education which I firmly believe the Legislature and Government of this country will be willing to encourage, is an education founded upon religion, and connected, if possible, with the Established Church. But I say so without any disparagement of the efforts of other classes of religionists. They, undoubtedly, are the parties that have exerted themselves in this cause; and I am not quite sure, to speak fairly upon this subject, whether their efforts have not been the means of exciting yours in this work. Still we, I say, who belong to the Establishment, and who have adopted its creed, cannot but feel the advantage to the people of this country of an Established Church, and desirous to inculcate the doctrines of that church in the minds of their children."

We have abridged these details from the very interesting report in the Sheffield Mercury.

ST. GEORGE'S SCHOOLS, SHEFFIELD.

GREAT ANNUAL MIGRATION OF THE RUSSIAN TARTARS.

Recent letters from the Crimea are occupied with accounts of the descent of the nomadic tribes of that country from their summer residences in the flat hill tops to their winter dwelling places in the warmer temperature of the plains. The spectacle of a whole people in the act of migration—following, with hardly more intelligence than "the stork in the heavens, who knoweth its time," the impulses of the changing seasons—is one of serious and universal interest; and as these wandering Tartars themselves embrace at the present time a large share of European attention, we have felt the opportunity to be a favourable one for introducing a family of them to our readers. The cut represents a Tartar household passing their precarious way down the side of a torrent valley, on their march to Christmas quarters in the genial neighbourhood of Balaklava.

Few more picturesque sights could be imagined than those which the incidents of such a journey would furnish. The bivouac of a party of the travellers at night, is said to present a picture of barbarous interest. They are described as crouching in wild groups round wood fires, busily engaged in cooking their kukuruts, and, ever and anon, breaking the general silence by loud vociferations of joy, vengeance, or disaster. In the English edition of Professor Pallas's "Travels through the Southern Provinces of the Russian Empire," published in 1803, a very interesting plate is given of one of these Tartar encampments, in which the Professor, notwithstanding the rudeness of his company, passed a very pleasant evening. The wealthy elders of the tribe had each formed their own little settlement, and the line of demarcation was distinctly drawn between their families, who occupied little knots of tents, round which their own herds were straying.

In one of the earliest works we have upon Russian Tartary, published in Holland, in 1609, we find their habits of life described as essentially those of a shepherd, dwelling like Jacob, in tents, "the drought consuming him by day, and the cold by night." And strongly indeed is this picture corroborated by their mode of life to the present day. We still find the same ancient and pastoral style of existence corresponding with that of the patriarchal princes; their wealth entirely consisting in their flocks, with which they wander from pasture to pasture, as their will leads them, having no fixed habitation or positive house property, but bearing their tents here or there, whenever it may suit them to make a settlement.

Sober and frugal in their habits, they are content with the spontaneous produce of the earth, and rarely crave more than the natural wealth they possess, as the shepherd princes of the land; living almost wholly upon bread and milk, even animal flesh is a rarity to them, for they spare the herds they own in consideration of the wool and milk, until unforeseen accident or natural death puts their flesh at their disposal. They possess little movable property besides the utensils of cookery, tents, and horse furniture; being, in truth, as near savage independence as a man can well be who is not a savage. It has been conjectured, that to this severe mode of life, the absence of petty thefts amongst them is to be attributed.

Mr. Spencer, in his "Travels in Tartary and the Caucasus," says, "I have ever found them to be peaceable, inoffensive, hospitable people, and their employment being pastoral, it is very rarely that any act of cruelty or violence is recorded against them; and I always preferred the shelter of their humble huts to the dwellings of the foreign colonists, many of whom are deserters and vagabonds from every part of Europe: the Christian population of the Crimea being a complete menagerie." It would seem, therefore, that Russia is not to be believed, when she circulates, as she has done extensively, reports prejudicial to the Tartar reputation. The object, indeed, of the oppressor of the Caucasian races appears to have been to frighten travellers, and particularly the monied English, from penetrating into those shades of freedom, the mountain homes of Krim Tartary, by terrific bugbears of the dangers to be apprehended in purse and person from the natives.

The manner of travelling most commonly in vogue with the Tartar tribes is on the horse—of which they have several very hardy and sure-footed varieties; but the camel is very often used for conveying their wives and families. They also make use of the madjar, a long narrow vehicle, covered with dried sheepskins, and supported by wooden wheels; the whole of this carriage is constructed without the use of iron, the bark of the linden tree being used instead of nails, and box-wood wherever the vehicle is subject to friction. This vehicle, however, is, notwithstanding its frailty, used in carrying astonishing loads. Owing to the fact that the Tartars never grease their wheels, the traveller has very frequently the pleasure of a serenade of one of the most detestable sorts of music that can well be imagined.

The tribes are not only rich in flocks of sheep, but are abundantly possessed of every variety of black cattle. These they use in drawing their chariots and luggage-cars, when camels are not plenty enough to supply their need; for this laborious animal is one of the best calculated to endure the climate and to do the toll required in the Crimea.

The costume of the tribe is moderately gay, but very inelegant—the inelegance principally arising from their injudicious mixture of colours. Silk, coral, and pearls are not scarce amongst the wealthier Tartars, and they are generally (more particularly the females) provided with what they consider amulets and safeguards.

Russia is determined on subjecting the free spirit of the Tartar to its own servile admeasurement of political obedience. When this has been accomplished, the shepherd will make his last migration from the hills; his flocks and his herds will be sold to the highest bidder, and he himself will become the victim of "civilisation" (?). To this end, we are told, that since the Crimea has been more nearly connected with Russian settlers, the influx of foreigners has been greater, and the number of those "wandering" has imperceptibly diminished, and the people have become more keenly sensible to the charms of a settled life. But for all this, and in spite of its Christian professions, we may entertain a not very reserved opinion that Russia feels but little interest in the religious, moral, or political welfare of its Tartar subjects. She wishes them under her thumb, and desires to use them in the subjugation of others—that's all.

ANNUAL MIGRATION OF A TARTAR FAMILY.

THE THEATRES.

COVENT GARDEN.

M. Jullien is most fortunately gifted with the art of hitting the public, and suiting his productions to the popular taste. High-school musicians may deride his musical knowledge, and affect to despise his compositions as evanescent trash; but M. Jullien puts forward a Polka, or a national set of quadrilles, thousands go to applaud, and keep time to their inspiring measure with heads, heels, sticks, and umbrellas; they are reiterated at public balls and evening parties, and the fortunate arranger finds the reward of his tact and ingenuity accordingly. Since last season the house has been entirely redecorated, and its appearance even surpasses that of last year. The buffet at the extremity of the promenade has a very striking effect from the front of the house, and all the ornamental arrangements are made in the best taste. On Tuesday evening M. Baumann, the bassoon-player, took his benefit; and, to judge from the look of the house, it must have been a very excellent one. The beneficere executed, with his usual expression, the cavatina, "Una voce poco fa" from "Il Barbiere," and elicited a most rapturous encore, which, however, he did not take.

The Welsh Quadrilles formed the conclusion of the first part of the programme, composed by M. Jullien, as a companion to the English, Irish and Scotch ones—although certainly not equal to them. There was an addition to the orchestra of nine harps, the leading one being played by Mr. Ellis Roberts, the gentleman to whom was awarded the first prize at the late congress of Bards and Minstrels; and who had the honour of performing before her Majesty at Burghley House. But the great attraction of the evening was the Distin family, who have been for the last six months in Paris and Germany, during which time they have lost no opportunity of improving themselves or their instruments. The latter, now used by them, are of silver, and were presented to them by Louis Philippe, in consequence of the pleasure he received from their performance during the late Exposition. Their instruments, termed "Sax Horns," were originally invented by M. Sax, of Paris, but have been greatly improved by the Distins, who performed, on Tuesday, the magnificent "Robert, toi que j'aime," and Donizetti's touching "Fra Poco"—the finale to "Lucia di Lammermoor," in both of which they were most enthusiastically encored. We really advise all who have not heard them to take an early opportunity of so doing.

M. Jullien advertises another grand Bal Masqué on the 16th inst. The amusement is scarcely germane to English notions; but certainly the last was the most brilliant and well-conducted affair, up to an hour, when it behoved all to leave, that we had ever seen in London.

HAYMARKET.

"Young England," was the popular title of a farce produced here on Saturday evening with success, from the pen of Mr. Morton; and derives its name, not from any political characters of this "new generation" introduced into it, but from a little baby of a few months old, upon whom the plot turns. Mr. Parley (Buckstone) is left at the railway terminus, at Southampton, with an infant placed in his arms by accident; and his terrible perplexities arising therefrom, added to his personation of somebody else from motives of pure good temper, plunge him into all sorts of equivocal and dilemmas, in which Buckstone's absurd terror can be readily imagined. There was nothing very novel in the situations, but they were brought in with tact, and although wonderfully improbable, kept the audience in continuous laughter. It was announced for repetition amidst unmixed applause.

A second successful piece was brought out on Wednesday evening, called "Somebody Else"—an adaptation of Madame Albert's favourite piece of "Georgette"—we understand, from the pen of Mr. Planche. There is not much plot in it; but it is of that light class of pieces which formerly found such favour at the Olympic, in its palmy days, under the Vestris management—very intelligible, very elegant, and, what is more, very safe. "The Swiss Cottage," from Adolph Adams's opera, "Le Chalet," is a good specimen of this style. A young Swiss wheelwright has fallen in love with a young girl confided to his care by her brother, who is from home. But he is engaged to another—a lively, mischief-loving lass; and at this time the brother returns, bringing with him a sister for his sister. The coquetish Minnie (Madame Vestris) pretends to be the sister, marries the new comer, and leaves the young wheelwright free to follow his own choice, after giving rise to an amusing equivoque.

It will be seen that there is not much in all this, but it went smoothly enough, telling well with the audience. There was a very pretty scene; and a very pretty song, sung by Madame Vestris, and encored. The lady was also called before the curtain at the end of

Remember, to any extent, can be had at five minutes' notice, at the following prices:—
Men's Pants, dress coat, vest, and trousers .. .. . from $1 10c. 00.
Hats, jackets, vest, and trousers .. .. . from $0 10c. 00.
Fur-trimmed, ladies' articles purchased or ordered, if not approved of, exchanged, as the buyer preferred.

CHURCH.—E. MORRIS and SON, Tailors, Wholesale and Retail Woollen Drapers, Outfitters, and General Warehousemen, 124, Mitre-street, and 55, Aldgate, City, opposite the Church.

CUTION.—E. MORRIS and SON are obliged to guard the public against imitations having learned that the extraderman-like falsehood of being associated with them, or in the same concern, has been resorted to in many instances, and for obvious reasons. They are an entirely unconnected party with any other establishment; and those who desire genuine Clothing, and clothing at the most reasonable and satisfactory prices, should call on or send to 124, Mitre-street, or 55, Aldgate, opposite the Church.

N.B.—No business transacted at this Establishment from sunset on Friday till sunset on Saturday, when business is resumed till twelve o'clock.

STRESSED NEEDLEWOMEN OF THE METROPOLIS.

of the Society for the Protection and Employment of the Distressed, and for Clothing the Poor, at which Lord Ashley presided, was held on Monday.

I gave a pleasing account of the success which had attended the Society to provide work for this class of females at a fair price, the gratifying fact, that no instance had occurred of work being the persons employed. It also appeared that the number of day attended from the Institution, and engaged at wages of not less than 10s per week, was 275. The circumstance, that so large a number of good character have been recommended by the Institution since then, affords a strong proof of the useful nature of such an establishment. It is satisfactory to add, that benevolent individuals had rendered such the Society, that there was a balance of nearly £400 after paying any expenses.

After dwelling upon the melancholy statements which have been of the destitute condition of that industrious class of women to direct their special attention, made a forcible appeal in their aid the Institution had been founded for the purpose of carrying and unquestionable truth, that "the labourer was worthy of his hire," in all the money they bestowed, and in all the advice they took to give, they should do all they could to encourage that moral system, that institution of God himself, the domestic system, under which the mother should be kept at home, there to learn and to high and holy calling of a wife and mother. After alluding to the which poor girls were subjected, Lord Ashley, with equal benevolence, proceeded to say:—

that they heard of needlewomen rising early, and late taking rest, day after day, for 20 hours without intermission, and the domestic nature would hold out no longer. (Hear.) But what had ground the lowest point of remuneration, if such a term could be applied to the work taken by parties maintained at the public expense, who ed in making goods for warehouses in the neighbourhood at as a penny a shirt, and sometimes only at one half-penny. Thus the were used to bring persons into that very house which was held up as an for that very house was made the instrument of their ruin and (Hear, hear.) That was the first thing to be remedied. The Noble announced that her Majesty had contributed £10, the Queen Dowager £10, and Prince Albert £15, to the funds of the Society.

concluded in these terms:— Napoleon asked Madame Campan what he should do for the benefit that excellent woman replied, "Train up for us a race of mothers." That was true as holy writ, because it was derived from it; and they would that day do something effectual towards that great end, not being content with saying, "Be ye warmed and filled," but, if a sister be suffering from want and nakedness, at once to acknowledge it, and prove that all are the children of one common Father." The meeting to use exertions to promote the prosperity of the Society were agreed to. For ourselves, we may add that which has for its object to succour and protect industry and virtue, be most extended patronage, and if Lord Ashley had not already observed and gratitude of all who admire unaffected benevolence, his in behalf of this institution must have insured them.

CHESS.

REPORTS.—Communications have been received from "G. M. G.," "I. B.," "Clericus," "C. Wood," and "A. T. B." "Both the problem and solution are quite correct." by Subscriber, and "R. Eyre," Dublin.—The King cannot capture the, if it be defended; the question of the defending piece being on or unable to move, does not alter this absolute law. —"Sunderland."—His problem is received, and thanks for his offer. If our space will allow of it next week, the match between Sunderland and Durham Chess Clubs shall be inserted. —"If he will look at the solution, he will find that if King to K1's square, white can play K R P, and afterwards checkmate by the Queen with K B P."

Solution to our last.

WHITE. Black checks at adv. K R sq. Kt covers. Black checks at Q Kt 2nd. Kt covers. K to his R 4th. B P 1 sq.

Black takes Kt and mates.

PROBLEM by J. KLING, Esq.

White to move and mate in five moves.

BLACK.

WHITE.

The Solution in our next.

THE METROPOLITAN IMPROVEMENTS.—The various new lines of street which have been suggested in the west and east ends of the metropolis, to effect which above 600 houses have been disposed of and taken down, are now nearly ready for the erection of the houses. At the east end the line is completely marked out from Spitalfields Church to the London Docks, the vaults for the buildings on either side, between High-street, Whitechapel, and Spitalfields Church, being erected. In Cranbourne-street, formerly Cranbourne-alley, several first-rate edifices are being erected, which will be finished in a few months, and south of Sidney-alley, where the opening will be, to form the line from Coventry-street, the houses are also nearly finished. Along the line between Oxford-street and Holborn the gas-pipes are all laid down, and the water-pipes are being now placed in the ground, so that there only requires the order of the commissioners to receive contracts for the houses. Many applications are already made for plots of ground. At the lower end of Flamingo-street three large houses are being built in the Elizabethan style, with red bricks and stone, under the direction of Mr. Prynne, the government architect, as designs after which others are to be erected in that neighbourhood. Nearly adjoining these, a French Protestant church, with school attached, will be raised. During the last few days about a dozen houses have been cleared away to form the line into Broad-street from Great St. Andrew's street, which has much improved that locality. In Belton-street, Christ Church, which is in the parish of St. Giles, and which is formed of Kenish rags and bricks, is completed, and presents a handsome appearance.

CONVERSION OF A WHOLE CONGREGATION OF DISSENTERS.—The Bishop of Chester consecrated a new church at Bolton, on Sunday morning, under somewhat peculiar circumstances. The building was erected twenty-two years ago for the use of the Methodist new connection, and was always well attended, on account of the learning and eloquence of the preacher. About four years ago the minister and congregation held several meetings, the result of which was that they determined on conforming to the Established Church. Since that period the building has been occupied as a chapel of ease to the parish church. A district has been assigned to it under the provisions of the 6th and 7th Victoria, c. 29, and on its consecration it became a parish church, under the name of Christ Church. The building is a plain brick structure, accommodating 30 persons, and is situated in the poorest and most spiritually destitute part of the town. The bishop licensed the Rev. Thomas Berry to the incumbency of the new parish.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 120, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, of 120, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1844.

partments; in the inner one is a large centre window, opening on a balcony, and looking over the Grand Canal, with a moonlight view of Venice. A lamp suspended from the ceiling throws a dim light over the room, and the scenic effect is altogether remarkably successful.

The action is at the close of the scene, at the moment that the curtain of a secret chamber on the left is undrawn, and the Assassins enter, preceded by Moncenigo:—

Mon. (Smilingly.)

A king on and a crown those tears will dry—

Catarina!—

(Painting to the body of Catarina, then addressing the Assassins. With her to Cyprus his.)

(The Assassins go up the stage, as Moncenigo exit at the secret chamber door, and the scene closes them in.)

VICTORIA PARK.—A great many hands are now employed in the commencement of operations, and should the weather continue favourable for working, a very considerable progress will be made by the Spring. On Monday the workmen commenced laying down the telegraph posts and park railings on the boundary adjacent to the Grove road. The line of road has been struck out for the new ROYAL VISIT TO STONE.—We are enabled to announce that her Majesty has signified her intention of honouring by an early visit his Grace the Duke of Buckingham, at his princely mansion in Buckinghamshire. The precise day is not yet fixed, but we believe we may state that the Court will leave Windsor in 1845 either during the week before or the week after, Christmas.

CHINESE DRAWING OF AN ENGLISH WAR-STEAMER.

Among our communications received by the Overland Mail, on Wednesday last, is a curious drawing of an English War-Steamer, executed by a Chinese artist, soon after its arrival at Hong-Kong. If we remember rightly, the term applied to one of our steamers, when first seen by the Chinese, was the uncomplimentary cognomen of "Fire-Devil."

The reader must make allowance for the low state of the art of drawing in China, in looking at our engraving; the colours of the drawing itself are, however, very superb. In drawings where perspective is not very strictly required, as in representations of birds, insects, fruit, and flowers, the Chinese artists are very successful; and Viscount Jocelyn assures us that the best pictures of Chinese life are to be found upon the porcelain tea-services manufactured in China.

CURIOUS CHINESE DRAWING OF AN ENGLISH WAR-STEAMER.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 137.—Vol. V.]

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1844.

[SIXPENCE.]

HEALTH OF TOWNS.

HE increasing attention paid to social questions by those who have leisure to think and power to act, is one of the most satisfactory symptoms that meet the observer of men and things in the present epoch. Political disputes and party contests we have still, loud and bitter enough, and shall continue to have them. But along with all these men are beginning to feel that there is much to be done that may be effected by other means than changes of ministries and the conflicts of hustings and polling booths. The time was when nearly all our energies were thrown into the field where party battled with party, and where the many, fighting for the few, forgot that the same amount of strength and activity, differently directed, would have wrought out ten times the quantity of real good for themselves and for those below, but not the less among, them. Of late, even the greatest question that agitates the political world is not so much one of constitutional change as of social policy; the largest and most completely organised association of the present day, is united solely by an opposition to the regulations that affect our trade and commerce, and includes within itself men of very opposite opinions on every other question, of very different parties in what are generally understood as politics. The agitating societies of former days were directed against the Church, against the power of the Crown, and sought for organic changes in the Constitution itself. The practical character of the present age is but little inclined to indulge in Utopian visions of impossibly perfect systems of Government. It looks at the actual condition of the world around us—inquires, examines, and elicits facts; and as more men will agree as to a fact than in an abstract opinion, when an evil is clearly pointed out, there is a greater chance of unanimity as to the remedy. There may be a difference of belief, even to the degree of violent hostility, on such a question as the extension of the franchise, but there cannot, among reasonable men, be two opinions as to the advantages of a good system of drainage, or an improvement of the habitations of the poor. It is the gradual operation of a feeling of this kind that is producing the discussions on the possibility of ameliorating the physical condition of the poor; the wealthy, the noble, and the influential, are beginning to perceive that all their duty is not discharged by the due payment of their poor rate, and hence we see societies for the Protection of Female Labour, associations for providing Baths and Washing Houses for the poor, and now the proposal of a society to procure and promote legislative and other measures for the Improvement of the Sanitary Condition of Towns.

This society was formed at a public meeting held at Exeter Hall, on Wednesday last, presided over by the Marquis of Normanby, who has paid great attention to the subject, and more than once brought it under the notice of the Legislature.

To one and all of these efforts we say God speed! Some may fail entirely, and others may not effect all the good they purpose; many men will say their objects are impracticable, if not impossible; but when conceived in the spirit of benevolence, and supported by zeal, who can say where is the limit of human exertion, or pronounce what will be its measure of success? Time and determination have ere now produced results little short of miraculous, and will do so again. It was a very few men who commenced the movement that terminated with the abolition of slavery, and who shall say that the evils that lie close around us cannot be conquered by effort guided by the same, or a kindred spirit?

With regard to the society just formed, it has such a wide field for exertion before it, and so many obstacles to overcome, that it would be rash to indulge in speculations as to its future progress. But its great object is one on which a few words may not be altogether useless.

We have heard the present age called "the age of great cities." In England, certainly, the effect of commerce and manufactures has been to congregate men together in immense masses; towns have grown up into cities, and villages have become towns; we have Liverpools, Manchesters, Birminghamas, and a Metropolis that has expanded into a magnitude to which there is nothing in the world equal. This crowding of men together, and adding house to house, and street to street, till tracts that may be measured by miles become covered with bricks and mortar, has produced many evils which are too obvious to require pointing out. The districts inhabited by poverty are the seats of disease, occasioned by want, dirt, and bad ventilation, and drainage. The bills of mortality are sad indices of the extent to which these causes are operating, and lately both in London and the larger provincial towns the deaths have been above the average. There are localities in London which are never free from fever, as there are places in Constantinople where the plague may always be found striking down its single victims, ready for that conjuncture of causes which brings it forth to slay its thousands. It is these nests of contagion, where disease is bred and nourished, that should be watched, for there danger is always existing:—

The pestilence that langueth in the clouds,
The bright sun soon disperseth it,—but when
The rank infection in some dunghill lies,
There's work for bells and graves.

The poor, who are compelled to dwell in these abodes o

THE EXPERIMENTAL BRIG SQUADRON.—(See next page.)

wretchedness, cannot struggle against the paralyzing influence of all that surrounds them; the rich are, for the most part, wholly ignorant of the state of neighbourhoods which often lie at their very doors. And yet the rich, as being exposed to the same peril that so often makes desolate the family of the poor, are interested in removing the causes of contagion, even if from no better or higher motive than personal safety. But a removal from immediate contact with an evil, too frequently causes it to be forgotten. Anything, therefore, that tends to awake attention to the subject, is praiseworthy, and the first step towards improvement. We are not sanguine of an immediate change at all; nor even at a distant date can we expect a total one; there are too many evils inseparable from poverty and destitution that cannot be remedied while that destitution exists. But more, much more, may be done, than has hitherto been attempted. In the future additions that are to be made to our cities and towns, the errors of former builders may be repaired, and their omissions supplied; proper drainage to every new street may be made compulsory. The means of cleanliness may be placed within the reach of all, and the young of another generation accustomed to the habit of it; these are the objects which the societies we have alluded to may endeavour to obtain. In justice to the Government, we must add that the question of the sanitary condition of our towns is engaging its attention. A commission, specially appointed to inquire into it, has already made one report, and is still engaged in further investigations. The new Society must avoid any appearance of opposition or rivalry with the Executive or the Legislature in a matter that so legitimately falls under their cognizance. Properly conducted, the Society may be the instrument through which the public, or at least the more influential part of it, can materially assist the ruling powers.

THE EXPERIMENTAL SQUADRON OF BRIGGS.

Many complaints having arisen that the building of our ships of war was confined principally to the department of the Surveyor of the Navy, a School of Naval Architecture was established for the purpose of educating young men to fill the office of Master Shipwright, &c., at our naval dock-yards, and the result has been some clever pupils, who now fill those important stations. The Government, willing to encourage science, granted permission to certain persons (the Architectural School included) to compete with the Surveyor of the Navy in building 12-gun brigs on their own plans and specifications. The Flying Fish was built at Pembroke, by Sir W. Symonds. The Epigale at Chatham, by a committee of the School of Naval Architecture. The Daring at Portsmouth, by Mr. White, of Cowes. The Marine at Chatham, by Mr. Fitzmaurice, Master Shipwright of that yard. The Osprey at Portsmouth, by Mr. Blake, the Master Shipwright there (and one is now on the stocks at the yard of Messrs. Ditchburn and Mear, Blackwall).

In the construction of these vessels there was considerable difference, except that the whole of the hulls adopted much of the plan of Sir William Symonds, by giving great breadth of beam, and in other particulars. They were appointed to sail together on a trial, and for the purpose of testing them with some of the old vessels—the Cruiser, 16, built in 1823, at Chatham; the Pantaloon, 10, built at Portsmouth; and the Waterwitch, 10, built by Sir W. White, of Cowes, for a yacht, and afterwards purchased into the service, were ordered to join them in their trial of sailing—the squadron to be under the directions of Capt. A. L. Corry, in the Firebrand steam-frigate. The whole were commissioned on the 9th September, and assembled at Spithead, from whence they took their departure October 2nd, under the command of the following officers:—

The FIREBRAND steam-frigate, Capt. A. L. Corry, as Superintendent. He entered the service in 1835, and was passed July 23d, 1841.

The FLYING FISH, Commander H. Parris, who entered the service in 1837, and attained his present rank July 23d, 1841.

The DARING, Commander H. J. Nelson (who as Lieutenant commanded the Waterwitch on the coast of Africa), entered the service in 1832, and was made commander 17th July, 1842.

The EPIGALE, Commander F. P. Thompson, entered 1832, and present rank 23d November, 1841.

The MARINE, Commander B. B. Crawford, entered in 1834, and promoted to present rank 23d December, 1842.

The OSPREY, Commander F. Patten, entered in 1834, made commander 10th January, 1842.

The CRUISER, Commander E. G. Fanshawe, entered 1838, present rank 23d August, 1841.

The WATERWITCH, Commander T. F. Birch, entered in 1830, present rank 20th December, 1842.

The PANTALON, Lieutenant E. Wilson, made 12th October, 1824.

The cruising ground in the first instance was about the latitude of 51 deg. north, and longitude 9 deg. 30 min. west; but the weather being at times extremely severe they were compelled occasionally to shift as far to the southward as 46 deg. north. At the commencement of the trials, for about three weeks, they experienced hard gales, squalls, and heavy seas, that kept them continually wet. When not engaged in trial evolutions, the order of sailing was,

STARBOARD DIVISION.	LEEWARD DIVISION.
Epigale	Cruiser
Daring	Pantaloon
Marine	Waterwitch
Osprey	Flying Fish

Firebrand leading.

The following are the particulars relative to the trials.—The brigs were not brought into a line, or had any order in starting, but made sail from the position in which they happened at the time to be.

Soon after quitting Spithead a slight trial took place with the wind at East, and the course West-North-West. The Flying Fish had rather the disadvantage at starting, but after four hours run she gained the lead, with the Pantaloon second. The others were nearly in a line abreast, with the exception of the Osprey, which was about one mile in the rear. The brigs carried royals and studding sails.

Oct. 29. On a wind; moderate weather; royals set; rate of sailing seven knots. Time occupied 2 hours 35 minutes. Position at time of shortening sail: 1st, Flying Fish; 2nd, Daring; not far from each other; 3rd, Pantaloon; 4th, (considerably astern), Osprey; 5th, Waterwitch; 6th, Cruiser. The Marine and Epigale were not included in the trial.

Oct. 30. Beating to windward in a fresh breeze; topsails (single reefed), courses, jib, and boom in use; heavy head-wind. The Daring got to windward, with the Pantaloon second and near to her, and the Flying Fish at no great distance. The weather came on thick, and the others not placed, but much beaten.

Oct. 31. On a wind; nasty squally top-gallant breeze; about seven knots. Position at close, after three hours trial: Pantaloon and Waterwitch leading; Daring and Flying Fish at no great distance astern; the rest far to leeward.

Nov. 1. (During period of company in the night previous). On a wind; variable; four hours run. Position at close: 1st, Flying Fish; 2nd, Pantaloon; Waterwitch and Marine equal, the rest astern and to leeward.

Nov. 2. (During period of company). Going free; pleasant breeze; at the end of four hours, 1st, Flying Fish; 2nd, Daring; 3rd, Pantaloon; 4th, Marine; 5th, Cruiser; 6th, Waterwitch and Osprey; 7th, Epigale.

Nov. 3. On a wind; double-reefed topsails; cross sea. After two hours trial Flying Fish carried away her jib boom and struck her foretop-gallant mast. At the close of four hours the positions were: 1st, Daring, well to windward; 2nd, Waterwitch; 3rd, Marine; 4th, Flying Fish (without her jib); the rest to leeward.

Nov. 18. (No trial till now from the 8th); the squadron scattered by strong gales. On a wind; pleasant breeze; all sail. Position at close: 1st, Flying Fish and Daring close together; 2nd, Epigale at some distance; all the rest far astern.

Nov. 19. Wind at beam, rate about eight knots; under all sail; Flying Fish carried away starboard topmast studding sail-yard, and shifted it. Position at the end of four hours: 1st, Flying Fish and Daring nearly equal; 2nd, Marine; 3rd, Epigale; 4th, Waterwitch; 5th, Pantaloon; 6th, Osprey; 7th, Cruiser.

Nov. 21. (Without the Pantaloon.) Wind at beam; under royals; fine breeze; two hours' trial. Positions at the close:—1st, Daring; 2nd, Flying Fish; 3d, Epigale and Marine equal; 4th, Waterwitch; 5th, Cruiser; 6th, Osprey.

Nov. 22. Little wind; trial of no importance.

Nov. 23. Still breeze; on a wind. Position at close:—1st, Daring; 2nd, Flying Fish; 3rd, Marine; the others well astern, and to leeward.

Other trials took place, but with much similar results. The Flying Fish and Daring have proved themselves fine sea-boats; in rough weather, the former has the preference. The Daring takes the lead upon the wind, but she has a greater spread of canvas than the Flying Fish, draws two feet more water, carries seventy tons of ballast, whereas the latter has only thirteen tons. The two vessels may, however, be considered as nearly equal—the Daring, from the reasons we have stated, going to windward when close at hand, the Flying Fish beating her when running free. The former rolls very much when before the wind, and pitches to alarming extent in a head sea upon a wind. Still the Daring is, most assuredly, a beautiful vessel.

The brigs returned into port at Plymouth yesterday week, where they are ordered to refit; and it is reported that the Marine, Epigale, and Cruiser, are to proceed to the East Indies, the others to the coast of Africa, to suppress the slave-trade.

A PRINCELY PURCHASE.—Luton Hoo, or Luton Park, Bedfordshire, with the mansion and estate of near 4000 acres of land, belonging to the Marquis of Bute, has been purchased by Mr. Ward, of Clapham House, Warwickshire, for £250,000.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARISIANA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Wednesday.

At your very doors a marvellous change is preparing. When Louis Philippe was at Windsor, he said to a certain commercial deputation, "There is no inflexible script for our future conduct; join your money with ours; make rail-roads—praise and amity must follow upon community of interest, and that constant communication by steam which approaches nearest in rapidity to the interchange of thought." On the road to Rouleaux this revolution is begun; in a year or two you may breakfast in London at night, and dine at six in Paris. How marvellous the results!—how immense the change! From ten to twelve hours to Dover, from five to twenty-four across the Channel (when feasible), was the time in 1815. Even the mail took thirty-eight hours for the journey from Calais to Paris; twenty-seven hours in 1820, and sixteen as now. But the great change is in the access to Rouleaux; for two-thirds of the year western winds blow perpendicularly on Rouleaux, rendering its approach most perilous, when even possible, for sailing vessels; whilst steamers readily defy the danger. The first steam-boat that entered Rouleaux operated a great revolution in intercourse—brought London 35 kilometres (and those the worst part of the road) nearer Paris, and began the ruin of Calais. Even so recently as 1831, the passengers usually to Rouleaux were only 11,331; to Calais, 38,556; total, 49,737. Now, already in 1833, to Rouleaux the number of arrivals was 36,681; to Calais, only 19,679; and the total had augmented to 56,360; whilst the population of Rouleaux has increased from 10 to 40 thousand! Calais, however, retains an enduring advantage from its past intercourse: a colony of 6000 artisans, manufacturers of tools, has been established by the English in one of its suburbs.

Within a few days, the mechanics and artisans of the capital, clothing their small savings together, have flocked to the Bourse in such numbers, that it is expected the Government must interfere, and prevent their becoming the victims of low and artful stock-jobbers. Two circumstances have created great excitement amongst the literateurs in Paris. It appears desired that, against every assertion and expectation, the journal Le Progres, availing itself of a slip of the pen in the treaty with the publisher who bought Chateaubriand's manuscript, his "Memoirs Beyond the Grave" (Mémoires d'outre-tombe), are to be dealt out piecemeal in the feuilletons of the above newspaper. The two reviews, the most in vogue in France, "La Revue des Deux Mondes" and "La Revue de Paris," having embarked upon the degradation of literature, through the instrumentality of the newspaper, "Romantisme," Alexandre Dumas, seconded by all the most celebrated novel writers in France, has begun a war of the most terrible aspect against M. Balzac, the proprietor of both the reviews above-mentioned, and who is also Commissary of the King for the supervision of the Theatre Français. Most extraordinary anecdotes, illustrative of the relations of authors and publishers have been revealed, and have created deep interest and astonishment.

Literary men, philosophers, and philanthropists,—the whole of the thinking world was convulsed by Voltaire, when he seized on the execution of the Protestant Calas, to demonstrate the persecution of Catholic bigots, and the judicial murders committed through their influence. A great sensation was then produced in Paris by M. Mary Lafont proving, in his "Histoire du Midi de la France," by undeniable documents, that Voltaire had drawn on his imagination for his facts. On turning forward the documents which determined the sentence of the judges, M. Mary Lafont proved—firstly, that the Capitouls, the grand judges of Toulouse, and the councillors of La Tourneille did no more than obey the dictates of their conscience, in the condemnation of Calas; and, secondly, that if Voltaire, incited as much by his hatred of every form of religion as by his love of justice, had not persuaded the Cardinal de Noailles, the Count de St. Florentin, the Count de Choiseul, Nicolas, Huetten, Dumortier, and even M. de Pompadour, to exact all their influence in this affair, the memory of Calas would have remained stained with a fearful crime, instead of being canonized by the philosophers as an innocent martyr.

Other novelties have likewise produced sensation in the Paris literary world. Hence, the celebrated German author and poet, a converted Israelite, for many years residing in Paris, has produced a new poem, entitled "Germany," full of reckless wit, here and there a somewhat free-thinking and dangerous; it attacks the King of Prussia and his royal colleagues with the arms of withering ridicule. The political world look at this work with anxiety, for it is published close upon that of Freiligrath, another popular poet of Germany, who, like his celebrated colleague, Herwegh, now in Paris, returned with much the passions of the King of Prussia, and attacked him unparagonably—whilst the Gazette d'Augsbourg has migrated from the Bavarian dominions, in order to be able to vindicate its liberal opinions without censorship and restriction. The other literary novelties, independent of the amusing illustrated new-year publications, like the "Etrangers à Paris," are not very remarkable.

A pretty bonnet novel, by Countess Dash, is a recital of the Louis XV. spirit and Pompadour perfume—"La Comtesse Olympe"—"China Laid Open," by "Old Nick" and the painter Bonnat has been written; whilst a recondite of a subject upon which a hundred authors have written, not excepting Ben Jonson, in English; Voltaire, in French; and the writer Abbate Casti, in Italian (who, by the by, turned the subject into an opera buffa, to please the philosophical Emperor Joseph II.). This new work, I repeat, is entitled "Catholicism Romanique." It hosts everything in its absurdity—as the Americans say—"to immortal smash." The literary rage of Paris is in expectation of a great treat, M. Saint Marc Girardin, the professor, deputy, and writer in the Deliberé; Sainte Beuve, the classic critic; and Mérimée, the author of "Clara Gissel"; are the three new academicians elected. Now it happens that it falls to the lot of Victor Hugo to make the opening and responding speeches to the two first of these literary characters on their reception, and they have been the most warring enemies of the romantic school, of which he is the head. Amidst the long orations and unsparing compliments and eulogies customary on these occasions, a great deal of ill-concealed animus is expected to break out, and in the literary sparring nothing out "facere" will be given.

Parisian Society is deeply agitated by the remarkable number of sudden deaths that have followed each other, even amongst the fair sex. But three days since, Madame Tuerle, the wife of a banker, fell down dead in the street; and the young and lovely Madame la Comtesse de Bethony, an illustrious daughter of the Duke de Rohan-Chabot, whilst playing in her bed with her infant suddenly fell back, and when the nurse raised her she was dead. The Parisian resource, however, for all increase of sorrows, is to drown thoughts in a wilder vortex of pleasure. Maquarades and fancy balls are now to begin long before the ordinary period, and every means is employed to render these mad festivities as attractive and as intoxicating as possible.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR WINTER.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Every change of weather or of season, every fresh circumstance, however trivial, or even however great, is seized upon by our Parisian elegancies as the occasion for new triumphs of toilette. What wonder then that the approach of the winter season should bring forth under new and charming forms all those becoming resources with which the fair coquettes shield themselves from its inclemency; at the same time that they enhance their charms. Fur, the symbol of rank, in the north, as gems and feathers in Oriental climes—fur is more than ever in the highest vogue. In all the carriages rolling along the Bois de Boulogne are seen ladies wrapped in Palatine mantles trimmed with Zibeline or sable—Russian mantles in velvet with peltsine and border of Gribou or ample Vichemane, which, when left open under the influence of a stray sunbeam, display a splendid lining of the same fur. Velvets, bonnets, trimmed with crepe de willow, or foliage, and feathers gleams and with mantles inside, composed of rose half shaded by tulle, producing a charming effect, encircling the face—are much worn with these mantles. These bonnets are also often trimmed with two large rosettes made of velvet and black lace, from which fall two lappets of the same material. The prevailing shape for bonnets is perfectly straight and of a medium size. Heron feathers are much worn for the promenade and have a very distinguished appearance.

Many of our elegancies wear, over high dresses, periwinkles or pailottes, half waisted, drawn in at the waist, with a pelote. The disadvantage of this form of dress, distinguished and graceful as it is when worn with good taste, is that a little exaggeration or alteration may make it quite the reverse.

The douillettes, which have been laid aside for some years, are now again in vogue; but have more trimming than formerly: gimp and velvet laces are much used for this purpose. The Vicomtesse de B. wore one, with laces and cross folds, and a châteleine in velvet. This latter material, now going so much out of fashion in male attire, becomes daily more general in female toilette.

Our elegancies have added another to the list of their borrowings from our grandmothers, and have adopted (not, however, without alteration and correction) the caraco, or kirtle, which we find in all the journals of fashion of 1740. One of the most distinguished of our houses, the Duchesse de C., wore, the other day, a dress made in this manner; the body close up to the throat; the skirt descended so far below the waist, as to admit of two little pockets placed obliquely, one on each side. The sleeves of this dress were nearly tight at the top, enlarging sufficiently at the wrist to show a full under-sleeve beneath, and were trimmed with a small jockey. This form of dress, made in Pekin velvet, in pelt de sole glacé, or silk with four different colours, is extremely elegant; when made of one colour, it is trimmed with three little bands of velvet, like that worn by the Comtesse de V. the other day. Late is also used as a trimming for these dresses—in fact it is in universal request for every species of garniture, especially for satin or velvet bonnets.

Folds and bands of velvet on satin bonnets are very distinguished. I will give you, as an example, a description of the elegant morning costume worn the other day by La Mlle. P.—de T.—it was composed of a bonnet of deep blue satin, trimmed with mantles of pink satin ribbon inside; a doublette of iron-grey satin, with gimp and velvet to match, and a sable pelote. Velvet capotes, trimmed with the same material, are in very good taste, but great care is requisite in the arrangement of the trimming, to avoid a heavy look, which is to be feared in the employing of this material for half-dress.

Caps and turbans in general aim at an Oriental tourment; materials brocaded in gold are much used for this purpose. We have remarked at the Italiens, and at those few soirées which have anticipated the season, a cashmere turban of an entirely new form. It is composed of a mass coloured scarf, with a border embroidered in silver and coloured silk, and an Arabian fringe. Another coiffure in great favour is made of shawl-coloured velvet, with a bouquet of velvet flowers, in colours to match, on the right side, and a deep fringe of pearls on the left. Agrafes of diamonds are so much in vogue that they are placed on bonnets as on dresses. But as the latter, for evenings, are so often worn with two shirrs, something even prettier than these bonnets has been imagined to loop up the outer shirr; the flowers are arranged in a chain, which is placed at each side on a line with the knee. These chains are made of mixed flowers, are narrow at the top and terminate with a large flower at the end. It is useless to say that the trimming of the body and sleeves is to match. The head-dress similar to the rest, encircles the head in the form of a crown, but on one side drops a graceful bow, also terminated by a flower larger than the rest. Another trimming equally pretty and new is composed of ten bunches of flowers, made of rose and other flowers of the colour of flame de pource, as this colour has a very good effect for candle light. These ten bunches loop up the dress all round at regular intervals; rows of cord symmetrically arranged forming an tailor in front.

It is impossible, however, to form an idea of effect from the description of detached portions of dress—two balltotes which I have lately seen worn by elegancies of the highest order will give your fair readers a far better notion of the ensemble. La Baronne T.—wore the other day, in the Champs Elysées, a black velvet bonnet trimmed with a single white marsh-mallow gland black. Her dress was of garnet-coloured satin; the body made high, plain, and forming into a point in front; the sleeves rather loose at the top, and very large at the wrist—fall under sleeves of muslin with very small cuffs. Agrafes of a lappet form to match the dress, surrounded with lace, were placed down the front, gradually increasing in size towards the bottom. A trimming of a similar kind ornamented the pelerins which surrounded the opening of the sleeves; a handkerchief with an heraldic crest, and sleeves à l'empire, completed this elegant costume. The Mlle. de B.—, who is noted for her exquisite taste, appeared in a bonnet of current-coloured satin, trimmed round the front with lace, which also ornamented the crown, and was caught up under a bouquet of mixed flowers. Her dress à l'empire was garnet, and that with four d'orient-colour; the body high, opening in front, without a collar, the front à l'empire. The line of the waist slightly sloped towards the middle, and the skirt round and slightly cut away in front, like the fashionable coats of two or three years ago, gradually increasing in depth behind. The sleeves tight at top and rather loose, and turned up at the wrist.

FRANCE.

The Paris papers announce an outbreak in Switzerland, arising out of religious differences. The movement appears to have been of a serious character, but details are not given. It appears that the Radical party in the Canton of Lucerne had made an attempt to overthrow the Government, but failed. In seeking to obtain possession of four pieces of cannon they were defeated. One letter expresses fears that a universal outbreak "against the Jesuits" would take place in all the Protestant Cantons.

The Duke and Duchess d'Aumale have returned to France. They were received at Mireville with much enthusiasm. The preparations to receive them were on a large scale. A triumphal arch had been erected near that part of the port which touches the Garonne. On its summit were on either side the arms and initials of the Duke and Duchess d'Aumale, and the sides and front were decorated with trophies representing the battles of Tangier, Magenta, the Smala, and Buzareo. They landed at the triumphal arch. The Princess were on horseback, and the Princess and the ladies of honour were placed in an open carriage, and escorted by a squadron of hussars, a brigade of gendarmes, and hundreds of lighted torches. They traversed the Cambronne, the rue St. Ferriol, to the Hotel d'Orléans, at the rue Grignon, the air resounding with the firing of guns, the ringing of bells, and the voices of the thousands of persons shouting "Vive le Duc d'Aumale," "Vive la Duchesse," "Vive le Prince de Joinville," "Vive le Roi," &c.

At ten o'clock the Royal party went to the theatre; their reception was most enthusiastic. The Princess is not regularly handsome, but her general appearance is dignified and agreeable. She is very pale and rather short in stature, her magnificent auburn hair hanging tastefully on her well rounded shoulders. Her dress was simple and elegant—a white satin; on her neck she wore a necklace of topazes, a present from Prince de Joinville.

The Journal des Débats states that a letter from Vienna alludes to a report from Constantinople, of the dangerous illness of the Sultan, but it does not seem to attach credence to the report.

The chief domestic topic at Paris, as in London, is the weather. The cold is very severe in the former capital. On Monday morning, at six o'clock, the thermometer marked 9° 4 below zero (15 Fahrenheit). The last severe winter felt in Paris was in 1838, the thermometer of the Observatory being down to 19 degrees centigrade (3 below zero of Fahrenheit).

It was believed that, should the temperature continue to fall for three days more, the snow would be laid over. All the accounts received from the provinces, from Germany, Belgium, Holland, and Italy, concurred in announcing the increasing rigour of the season.

On Monday, the loan of £200,000, was adjudged to De Rotherchild, Brothers, at 94 7/8; the united houses of Hottinger and Co., and Durand and Co., of Paris, and Haring, Brothers, of London, bid 93 1/2. The new loan rose 3 per cent, premium in the course of the day.

A fire broke out on Sunday last at the wine stores of M. Ruhner, in the Rue Cadet, which occasioned loss of life as well as much damage to property. At nine o'clock, as one party of firemen, exhausted with fatigue, had been relieved by a party from the Rue Vieux Colombier, a fresh disaster added to the calamity. A wall fell out into the street and crushed several persons. The dead body of a fireman was withdrawn from the ruins, together with ten wounded, two of whom shortly afterwards expired. A Municipal Guard had his foot crushed, and several persons of the neighbourhood, who had exerted themselves more heroically, were more or less wounded. The parish priest of the church of Notre Dame de Lorette, who attended at the scene of desolation with one of his curates, stated the dangers of the humbust mechanic. The amount of property destroyed is said to be no less than £12,000.

SPAIN.

The letters from Spain bring accounts of more sanguinary atrocities. On the 30th ult., the second son of Zurbarán, together with Don José Ballesteros, a captain in the army, and Zurbarán's secretary, and Don Francisco Hervás, a cloth manufacturer of Escorial, were shot at Logroño, at seven in the morning.

Don Feliciano Zurbarán, the young man now shot, was a lieutenant in the army, and twenty-four years of age; his brother Don Benito, who was shot a day or two before, was eighteen. A great many arrests have taken place in the north, and amongst others Señor Gamboa, formerly Finance Minister, and who has been staying at St. Sebastian for some time, has just been thrown into prison at Talien, on the charge of being implicated in the late unfortunate movement. The Carlist general, Iturbide, passed through Vittoria on the 1st instant, under arrest, on the way to Logroño, to be tried by a court martial, on the same charge.

There is still no certain intelligence respecting Zurbarán, the leader of the late movement. The Logroño correspondent of the Revista Commerciale writes that his house had been rased to the ground, his furniture burned, and his horses and cattle destroyed. The ten men of his band who voluntarily surrendered have been sentenced respectively to six or ten years imprisonment in prison. Colonel Ortega, Aide-de-Camp of General Prim, had been sent off under an escort to Cadix, whence he was to be transported to the Hawaiian Islands.

Our latest accounts from Madrid inform us that the Bill for the new Spanish Constitution has passed the Chamber of Deputies by a very large majority, so that the Cabinet of Narváez may now be considered as firmly placed in power as it is possible for any ministry to be in Spain under present circumstances. It is, however, a purely despotic Cabinet, as the recent executions prove.

PORTUGAL.

Our advice from Lisbon, which are to the 3rd instant, present nothing worth particular notice, and the passing of the Indemnity Bill in the Cortes, has diverted the proceedings of that body of most of their interest. In the Chamber of Deputies, the Government have presented two projects; one for the establishment of savings' banks throughout the country, and the other for the establishment of a bank in the Casa Market department, for the sole purpose of lending money at 6 per cent, to the farmers, on the security of the corn there deposited by them.

A Royal decree has been issued ordering the collection of the new duties, imposed by the Chamber, on wine and salt, and on the importation of foreign hemp, flax, and corn.

THE WEST INDIA MAIL.

LOSS OF THE ACTEON STEAMSHIP.—The Royal Mail Company's ship, Acteon, Captain Smith, has arrived at Southampton with mails from Tampico, to Oct. 25; Vera Cruz, to Nov. 2; Havannah, to the 10th; Demerara, to the 3rd; Trinidad, to the 10th; Grenada, to the 10th; St. Thomas, to the 15th; and Bermuda to the 23d, being the day of the Acteon's departure.

We regret to state that this vessel brings an account of the total loss of the Acteon steam-ship, belonging to the Royal Mail Company, on the morning of the 28th of October. She was rounding the Punta Cana, at eight in the morning, the Pope, or high land, within the city being S.E. The Acteon, steering south, struck at 8 1/2, upon a sunken rock, supposed to be the Negrito, but which, according to the chart, should have been nearer the land than the ship then was. Sail was made to force her on shore, or into shallow water. Precisely, however, at twenty minutes past eleven she went down in 6 fathoms.

The captain, officers, and crew, on this trying occasion, behaved with the most praiseworthy courage. The captain was the last to leave the ill-fated vessel. All hands were safely got into the boats, and steered for Carthagena, from which they were about nine miles distant. They landed in safety, and were hospitably received by the authorities. There were only three passengers on board at the time of the disaster.

The Acteon makes the fourth vessel lost since the establishment of the Royal Mail Steam Company, being a quarter of the number of steam ships it has lost. They are—the Medina, the Ica, the Solway (in which so many lives were sacrificed), and now this unfortunate ship completes the number. The Acteon, however, was the smallest of the four, being only 500 tons burthen. Her value, exclusive of stores, &c., was about £25,000. It is not known whether the Acteon was insured.

INDIA.

THE CAPTURE OF THE FORT OF SAMUNGHUR.—In our last we gave the details of the capture of the Fort of Samunghur, received by the overland mail. A correspondent, who was present at the engagement, has forwarded us some additional particulars, and also an accurate sketch of the fort. This interesting sketch is engraved, and will be presented to our readers next week, as the pressure of important subjects prevents us from doing so in the present number. Our correspondent states that the fort was defended by 5 or 600 men, 70 were killed in the fort, 150 prisoners taken, and the rest threw themselves over the walls, or escaped through one of the gates, only to be killed by a troop of the 5th Madras Cavalry, under the orders of Captain Gwynne. The colours of the 26th Regt. of M. N. I. were placed on the breach by Ensign Robson, assisted by Lieut. and Adjutant White, both of the same regiment.

To the list of officers whose daily rate of pay is twenty-five shillings, have been added the names of Major-General Sir Frederick Smith, K.C.B., and Sir Guy Campbell, Bart., two Peninsular campaigners of considerable standing and merit.

IRELAND.

THE REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—The Repeal Association met on Monday. The Chairman was Mr. Henry Grattan, M.P., who, in a very long and rather violent speech, in the course of which he said the English must cut the Tories, or be content to lose Ireland; for, in the words of Mr. Burke (whom he quoted extensively in the course of his remarks), they (the Tories) had violated the law, and proclaimed anarchy. Yes; thirteen of the best Judges of the land, and three of the law Lords had declared that they had violated the law by the State prosecutions; and yet up started the Prime Minister in his place in the House of Commons, and announced that he was ready to vindicate his authority. (Cheers.) He (Mr. Grattan) came forward, therefore, to join in demanding inquiry into the late State prosecutions against O'Connell and his fellow-martyrs, in order to prevent that anarchy which was sure to follow in any country subject to such acts of gross injustice as the present Tory Ministry were inflicting on Ireland. Mr. O'Connell followed in a speech in which much strange language occurred. The hon. and learned gentleman excused himself for not reporting on his ten propositions about the Union, according to promise. He then launched into some furious diatribes against the English press for accusing him of incoherence. As a specimen of this effusion, we extract the epithets applied by Mr. O'Connell to a writer in a Whig London journal. The hon. and learned gentleman said, "The circumstance of his having given two characters of Lord J. Russell under different circumstances, was made the ground of an atrocious and insolent calumny against him by a writer, a miscreant who, whilst he (Mr. O'Connell) had been labouring for his country, was revelling in a garret. He had brought his country under the notice of the whole civilized world—he had made known her wants, her sufferings, her fidelity, her religious perseverance, and all those high qualities which distinguish her people; and was this the recompense he was to receive from a nameless scoundrel scribbler in London? (Cheers.) He had already replied to him in the severest language, and what other could he have used towards a base calumniator of that kind? (Hear, hear.) He had called him a miscreant, a calumniator, and a foul liar. He repeated these epithets, for they were suitable ones, unless, indeed, the language could supply him with harsher, in which case he would admit that those terms were too mild. (A laugh.) Oh, the writer of that article was a base, a brutal, and, perhaps, a bribed wretch, for assailing him in that way. He did not care whether he was bribed or not. If he were a rascal for nothing he only proved himself the greater scoundrel. (A laugh.) He proclaimed every word of his accusation to be a falsehood." Appropriate language this, for Conciliation Hall. Mr. O'Connell announced the rest for the week to be £333 3s. 3d.

FIGHTFUL PARRICIDE.—A murder of an atrocious kind was committed last week at Mullinabogue. It appears that as William Shea, of Kilmessan (within five miles of Callan, on the Fethard-road), was proceeding to spread a quantity of seed wheat for his son-law, named Egan, who is sick of a fever, he was hindered from the performance of his charitable office by his son, Michael Shea, who struck him on the head with a stone, and afterwards with a spade, and killed him on the spot. His skull is fractured in a most frightful manner. It appears that young Shea had been at variance with his sister's husband, the aforesaid Egan, and hence arose the altercation. The Mullinabogue police were speedily in attendance, but the parricide had fled; he attempted to drown himself, but was prevented by two men, who happened to have seen him. An inquest was held, and a verdict returned according to the circumstances. The parricide is a plodder breaker. Had it not been for the timely interposition of a neighbour, he would, in all probability, have killed his wife also, with a stick or some weapon, on hearing her exclaim, "Oh, you murderer, why did you kill your poor father?"

ANOTHER MURDER.—Mr. Samuel M. Kevin, a respectable farmer, residing at Carrickmahugh, county Sligo, about eight miles from the town of Sligo, was barbarously murdered on Tuesday night. He had just said his prayers in his bed-room, on a ground floor, and was stooping down to untie his shoes, when the assassin fired through the window a gun or blunderbuss, loaded with two balls, both of which entered his head, and he immediately died. There is no ground for believing that the crime proceeded from any motive of a religious, party, or political nature. The deceased was much liked by all classes, and of a most kind and charitable disposition; in fact, the universal feeling of the country is, that the awful deed originated in very different motives.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

FRACAS IN THE SPORTING WORLD.—On Tuesday, in the Court of Exchequer, an action was tried, Scott v. O'Brien, for an assault which took place on the 1st of July, when the famous Running Race was tried. The parties are well known in the sporting world, and the assault appeared to have originated out of some dispute connected with sporting transactions. The nature of it will be understood by the following evidence given by Captain Hugh Brabson Higgins. He stated that he was outside Westminster Hall on the 1st of July. There were a great number of persons assembled connected with the turf. Witness was walking with Captain Garth when Mr. Scott joined them. It was about two o'clock in the afternoon when witness observed O'Brien approaching. He seemed so much excited that witness remarked to Captain Garth that he looked very warlike. As O'Brien passed witness, Captain Garth and Scott he said, addressing Captain Garth, "How can you walk with that wretch?" Witness had no doubt the observation was meant for Scott. Scott immediately replied by saying, "What do you mean, you thief?" O'Brien then attempted to take a stick out of Captain Garth's hand, but did not succeed. He then rushed at Scott, struck him several blows, and knocked him down. Scott got up with an intention of defending himself, but was immediately knocked down again. In fact, he had no chance whatever. Witness observed O'Brien take plaintiff by the hair of the head, and inflict on him several blows whilst plaintiff was stretched at full length on the flagway. There was no further provocation for the assault than what witness had stated. Witness saw plaintiff in a day or two after, and his face still bore marks of the assault. Witness had heard there was a dispute between plaintiff and defendant, which was referred to Captain Ross, who had decided in Scott's favour. Witness also heard that defendant had given the plaintiff the guarantee of a most respectable gentleman for payment of his debt. Was not walking arm-in-arm with plaintiff when the assault took place. Knew plaintiff, but not intimately. Had dined with him once. Also knew defendant by meeting him at Tattersall's and elsewhere. Scott was at Tattersall's the evening of the day on which the assault was committed.—Mr. Travers, the eminent surgeon, was called to prove that he saw the plaintiff shortly after the accident, when his face exhibited some severe contusions.—After some other evidence respecting the transaction, Mr. Jervis then addressed the jury for the defendant. He said it was now quite clear that Mr. O'Brien believed that Mr. Scott had been propagating reports on the turf prejudicial to his honour, and that he had been anxious to obtain an explanation from him. Stung with these imputations, which were as slanderous as they were unfounded, and which went to charge Mr. O'Brien as being a leveller, and desirous of escaping from his honourable engagements. Mr. O'Brien, upon seeing Mr. Scott walking with Captain Garth and Captain Higgins did use the expression "wretch," as opposed to "now," "wretch" was an unmeaning word, it might mean anything; but the word "thief," which Mr. Scott used in reply, was far more offensive, especially when applied by him to Mr. O'Brien. The defendant could not receive a greater provocation, and he inflicted such chastisement on Mr. Scott, as any one, under such circumstances, might expect from a man whose temper was not under perfect control. The Lord Chief Baron thought that a gentleman who applied the word "wretch" to another must not be surprised if the word "thief" was retorted. There was no evidence that the plaintiff had previously done the defendant any injustice.—The jury, after a short consultation, returned with a verdict for the plaintiff—Damages, £100.

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

A WOMAN ACCUSED OF POISONING HER FATHER.—At the assizes at Chester, a young woman of twenty, named Mary Gallop, was tried on the charge of poisoning her father, Richard Gallop, at Monk's Copenhall, on the 2nd of November, by the administration of arsenic. The Attorney-General for the Principality, Mr. Temple, and Mr. Townsend, were counsel for the prosecution; and Mr. Trafford for the prisoner. From the evidence adduced in support of the charge, it appeared that about eight months ago, the deceased, who was a joiner, and his family, removed to Crewe, in the township of Monk's Copenhall, for the purpose of working at the extensive works belonging to the Grand Junction Railway Company. The deceased and his wife did not live happily together, and about six months ago the latter committed suicide by cutting her throat. After that the family consisted of the prisoner, her father, the daughter of his wife by a former husband, and a lodger named William Fraser. After the death of his wife, the prisoner's father treated her with considerable severity, and on one occasion, when she had roasted some potatoes too hard, he threatened to beat her with a strap. She complained to her half-sister, and said that as she had no comfort at home she would go to service. During the time the prisoner was residing in Liverpool she had become acquainted with a young man named David, and about the beginning of October, there being a cheap train from Crewe to Liverpool, the prisoner announced her intention of going by it, but her father was very angry with her, and refused to allow her to go, so he said it was only for the purpose of seeing her sweetheart, and he disapproved of the connection. Shortly after that the prisoner purchased a pennyworth of arsenic for the purpose, as she said, of destroying rats and mice. Subsequently she purchased a second pennyworth, and on the second of November she purchased two pennyworth. About three weeks before the last-mentioned day the father of the prisoner became ill, and to continue up to that day, when, after partaking of some arrow-root, he was seized with violent vomiting, which increased during the night, and early on the morning of the 3rd of November, he died. A surgeon attended him during the night and treated him for cholera. On the Sunday morning a constable named Kinty went to the house and saw the prisoner. He told her he had come for the purpose of making inquiry respecting the death of her father, and continued her. After this he proceeded to put a number of questions to her, which, together with her answers, he produced. Mr. Trafford objected to this evidence being admissible, as it had been made by the prisoner under inducement, and he cited the case of the King and Drew, quoted in the 2nd vol. of Russell on Crime, p. 229. The learned Judge overruled the objection. It was proved, by the evidence of Mr. Stevenson, a surgeon, that the body of the deceased, on post-mortem examination, presented all the appearances internally of having been acted on by some irritant poison, and both he and Mr. Beyer, of Stockport, were of opinion that death was caused by the effects of arsenic.

It was attempted to elicit, in behalf of the prisoner, that she was labouring under insanity, but the only facts deposed to by the witnesses on this point were that about six months ago, at the time her mother committed suicide, her conduct was rather strange, and that she did not sleep for a whole week, and that the mother of the prisoner had been insane, and several times attempted to destroy herself.

Mr. Trafford addressed the jury for the prisoner at some length, contending that the case was developed in so much doubt that the jury could not safely convict, that the probability was that the deceased had taken the arsenic by mistake, and that if administered by the prisoner at all, it was when she was labouring under the effects of insanity.

The learned Judge briefly summed up the case to the jury, telling them that if they believed the prisoner had administered the arsenic, it was their duty to find her guilty. As to the plea of insanity, his lordship observed that there was no evidence to support it. That was a species of defence too much relied on of late years, to the danger of public security, and the great hindrance of justice.

The jury consulted together for about five minutes, and then pronounced a verdict of Guilty, but begged strongly to recommend the prisoner to mercy.

The Judge.—What, recommend a prisoner to mercy who has been guilty of the murder of a parent!

The learned Judge having placed the black cap on, proceeded to pass sentence on the prisoner. His lordship said—"Mary Gallop, after a long and patient trial, you have been found guilty by the jury, upon evidence which could leave no doubt, of the murder of your own father. That murder was committed by the most odious and detestable of all means—those of poison—an act of deliberation, with great art and contrivance, and I wish I could see any symptoms in the conduct you afterwards exhibited of repentance, or any feelings of remorse for what you have done. It is impossible for me to show you any mercy. Prepare for that awful account to which you sent the author of your being with little or no preparation at all. Look for the mercy of God; repent of this and all your sins; and by that means seek for that mercy hereafter which it is not in my power, consistently with my public duty, to show you here." His lordship then passed sentence of death upon her in the usual form, and the prisoner walked from the bar with a steady step, having manifested throughout the whole trial little or no consciousness of the situation in which she stood, beyond a wild and almost incessant roll of the eye, and an occasional flush of the countenance.

[The verdicts of juries have been much discussed of late. That given in the case of Boleyn has been strongly censured, at least by implication; and in the recent case of alleged robbery at the Robt. Bazaar, the decision has been impugned as if contrary to evidence, or from a supposed leaning towards a rich prisoner. Generally speaking, we think it a dangerous, or at least an unprofitable thing, to discuss the verdicts of juries. They hear the sworn testimony, and have to judge of various circumstances, some of which, perhaps, do not appear in the report, and credit should be given to them for coming to an honest and just decision. In the above case of parricide, however, there is a most strange circumstance. The French law, we are aware, admits of circumstances of extenuation in cases of murder, which reduce the punishment, but what extenuation there can be for parricide it would be very difficult to say. The Judge (Mr. Baron Gurney) might well express his astonishment. If the jury did not believe the girl guilty, they ought to have acquitted her, but it would indeed be a novel thing to make degrees in the crime of parricide. We think the Judge did some service, also, when he disapproved the practice which has of late been too much abused, of endeavouring to explain away guilt by pleas of insanity.]

THE MURDER OF MR. INCHBALD.—At the assizes at York, on Tuesday, William Kendrew, aged 22, farm-labourer, and John Kendrew, 24, shoemaker, brothers, were charged, the former with the wilful murder of Mr. William Inchbald, at Dunsforth, in the parish of Aldborough, in the West Riding, and the latter with feloniously harbouring and maintaining William Kendrew, well knowing him to have committed a felony in shooting William Inchbald. The circumstances will, no doubt, be in the recollection of our readers. The deceased was shot on the evening of the 28th of September, on his return from Boroughbridge market, and was found dying in the road. The deceased was in the habit of carrying large sums of money about him, and exhibiting them in public houses. It did not appear that he had been robbed on this occasion. The evidence was entirely circumstantial, and the jury, after an absence of ten minutes, returned with a verdict of Guilty against William Kendrew, and of Acquittal as regarded John Kendrew. Mr. Justice Coleridge sentenced William Kendrew to death. The wretched man appeared wholly unmoved, and left the bar in the most careless manner, exclaiming, as he went, "Thank ye, if that be all."

POLICE.

THE FORGED TREASURY AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND.—COMMUNAL OF BURGER.—On Wednesday Burgess was finally examined at the Mansion-house, the evidence of two witnesses having completed the case.—Mr. Charles Chetham Lawrence, of No. 8, Lincoln-place, New North-road, Middlesex, stated that he was a cashier in the banking-house of Sir John Lubbock and Co., in Mansion-house-street. On Thursday, the 3rd of September, about 20 minutes before two o'clock in the afternoon, the check produced for the sum of £5000, drawn by Mr. Charles Keyser upon Sir John W. Lubbock and Co., was presented to him for payment by a person who was not known to him, but who was accompanied by, he very believed, the prisoner Burgess. Witness inquired the name of the party presenting the check, upon which the person who accompanied the prisoner gave the name of Ouseford. Witness then inquired how they would have the amount of the check?—upon which one of them said, "in gold," or "part in gold," or words to that effect. Witness then stated that as they wanted the money in gold, they had better get it at the Bank of England, and he would give them eight £1000 notes, and he accordingly gave the person who accompanied the prisoner the eight £1000 bank-notes produced.—The witness was cross-examined by Mr. Salomon, a solicitor on the part of the prisoner, but his evidence was not shaken. Mr. T. Ager, of No. 15, Edmond-terrace, a teller in the issue department of the Bank of England, stated that at about two o'clock on the 3rd of September, a person who was a stranger to him presented at the counter the eight bank notes for £1000 each produced, and required payment thereof in gold. Witness was short of money at the time, and determined to get £10,000 from the treasury, and accordingly went with Leonard Deane, one of the powers in the issue department of the Bank, to the Treasury, where he was in an adjoining department, to get the gold. They brought back ten bags, each containing £1000 in gold, and witness desired Deane to lay eight of the bags on the counter before the person who was then standing there, and who then produced two large canvas bags from a carpet bag, which he had with him, and put both the bags into the carpet bag and then attempted to lift it, but was unable to do so, and was ultimately assisted by two porters, who carried the two bags for him out of the Bank.—Cross-examined by Mr. Salomon: The bank-notes were presented by a stranger, not by the prisoner. The prisoner was not present at the time. Witness did not get the person to put his name and address upon the notes.—Mr. Salomon then contended that the evidence did not affect Burgess, as he had not presented the cheque or received the sovereigns. He said there was no proof whatever that the prisoner had performed any act calculated to show that he was aware that Elder, who had since destroyed himself, was any other than the Mr. Ouseford he represented himself to be.—The Lord Mayor said he believed the prisoner was a guilty participator, and decided upon committing him for trial.

ROBBERIES AT LINCOLN-DRAYERS' SHOPS.—At New-street, on Tuesday, Leah Mary Raper, the person who stood remanded on a charge of shop-lifting, was again examined before Mr. Jardine. Two more cases were made out against her, and it appeared that about £60 worth of duplicates for silk and satin, which the prisoner had pledged, were found at her lodgings, Michael's-place, Brompton. Several shopkeepers, who were present, recognised the prisoner as having frequented their shops; and in some cases identified pledged property which had been stolen from them. The prisoner, who said nothing in her defence, was again remanded, in order to make the evidence in some of the cases more complete against her. It was stated by the officer who searched her lodgings, that she had been in the habit of paying some of the persons with whom she dealt with the duplicates of stolen silks. The prisoner is a small, dark, and rather ill-favoured person, and is lame.

COUNTRY NEWS.

THE INCENDIARY FIRE AT WATTON.—At Hertford, on Saturday, Thomas Wade, who was remanded on Friday, was fully committed for trial at the next assizes.

THE ACCIDENT ON THE MIDLAND COUNTIES RAILWAY.—Mr. James Bolestridge, landlord of the Three Horse Shoes public-house, Derby road, who was a passenger in the up-train which met with so much damage at the time of the collision, died on Tuesday morning at his own house. Mr. Bolestridge was about 45 years of age, and a remarkably good-looking man. He was formerly butler to Thomas Thorne, Esq., of Dove Cliff, Derbyshire, and held that situation for a great number of years. Shortly after the death of his master he commenced business as an inn-keeper in Nottingham; in this latter capacity he has been attended with an extraordinary amount of misfortune. In the early part of October last, three men took up their abode at his house for a night. On their departure the next morning it was discovered that they had found their way into Mr. Bolestridge's sleeping apartment, and stole from a drawer gold and notes to the amount of £2000. Mr. Edward Roberts, the gentleman who has had his leg amputated, and who was in the same carriage with Mr. Bolestridge, is still in a very precarious state. The other sufferers are all doing well. An inquest has been commenced upon the body of Mr. Bolestridge. The evidence adduced is very similar to that given on the former inquest. The jury have not yet given their verdict.

SINGULAR AFFAIR AT TONG.—The Shrewsbury papers, in noticing the death of G. Durant, Esq., of Tong Castle, mention a singular occurrence which took place on the occasion. In the year 1839, Mr. Durant took legal proceedings against his first wife, and, in consequence of the jury having decided in his favour, he erected a monument on an eminence on his estate at Tong Knowls to commemorate the event. Immediately on his death being known to his family, two of his sons, accompanied by 19 labourers, went to the place, and commenced excavating round it to the depth of six feet; after which they made a hole in it, and placed 20 pounds of gunpowder in a cask, and 20 pounds in another package, under the monument, and at three o'clock on the morning of the 30th a fuse was fixed to it, and set fire to, and in a few minutes the monument was laid flat on the ground without any accident. The eldest son and heir to the estate died some years ago, and on his death-bed he requested the younger branches of the family that as soon as their father was dead they would cause the monument to be blown up, that it might cease to exist with the founder, and that the memory of the scandalous cause for which it was erected and he might perish together.

REPRESENTATION OF DARTMOUTH.—There are two candidates for the representation of Dartmouth, in the room of the late Lieut.-Colonel Seale—Mr. Joseph Seaman, the extensive ship-owner, on the Conservative side, and Mr. Medford, a London merchant on the Liberal interest.

SUDEN DEATH OF MARTIN TAPPER.—A distressing event occurred at Southill Park, the seat of the late Earl of Limerick, on Sunday morning. Martin Tapper, Esq., of New Burlington-street, had long been the medical attendant of the above noble family, and was at Southill Park when the late Earl expired, on Saturday evening. Mr. Tapper retired to his apartment about twelve o'clock, in apparently perfect health, but when his servant went to call him in the morning, he was found dead in his bed.

LATE HARVEST IN WILTSHIRE.—A correspondent at Meltonbury informs us that in the northern part of Wiltshire, within these few days, two fields of barley have been cut and carried—a very rare occurrence at this advanced season of the year.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

EXPLOSION AND LOSS OF LIFE ON THE DOVER RAILWAY.

On Wednesday morning, about one o'clock, a frightful accident took place on the Dover Railway, near the Bricklayers' Arms station, Old Kent-road, by which one man, named Robert Buckley, an engine-driver, was killed on the spot, and Aaron Wilkinson, the stoker, received such extensive injuries that his recovery is utterly impossible. It appears that the train, which was exclusively a goods train, left the Bricklayers' Arms station for Dover at twenty minutes after twelve o'clock, the engine being driven by Robert Buckley, an experienced driver, attended by a fireman, or stoker, named Aaron Wilkinson. It consisted of eleven luggage waggons and a second class carriage, in which were deposited the packages for the foreign mail. There were in the break wagon the company's guards, as well as the servants of the carriers, in all five or six persons. This carriage was the last on the train, and escaped uninjured. The whole of the others, except the second class carriage, were more or less shattered by the force of the concussion. As the train advanced another engine followed in the rear, and it is stated that just reached the train, when a terrific explosion occurred. One of the guards stated that the first thing which alarmed him was a smart explosion, and the next instant it was followed by another explosion of far greater force than the preceding one, and which, with a subsequent tremendous crash, almost stunned him. The concussion threw him forward, and the carriage in which he was so violently shaken that he thought it was falling to pieces.

As soon as the steam and smoke had cleared away, he discovered the line to be completely blocked up with waggons, which were spread across the two lines of rails, and piled, many of them, upon each other. He with the rest of the guards called to the engine driver and also to his companion, the stoker, but receiving no answer, they climbed over the pile of waggons in the direction they expected to find the engine. On arriving at the other end of the train they discovered that the engine had burst, and had gone over the viaduct, and was partially buried in the earth beneath, whilst the tender was hanging over the side of the viaduct, torn and folded up as if it had been made of mere paste board, its carriage having fallen to the ground about twenty yards from where the engine lay. In the meanwhile search was made for the engine driver, and the stoker and shortly the former, Robert Buckley, was found lying some twenty or thirty yards further up the line, where the engine went off, with one of the large waggons partly resting on his body. He was dead, and even then the body could not be extricated for upwards of an hour and a half. The stoker was found in the rear of the train, lying on the opposite side, bleeding profusely, and apparently dead, with the whole of his jacket, except the collar, blown off his back. Immediately upon the arrival of assistance from the station, Mr. George, the secretary, who came with the engine, had the poor fellow wrapped in blankets, and conveyed to Guy's Hospital.

As soon as possible the line was cleared of all obstructions, so that the regular traffic might not be impeded, and at an early hour the directors, who had assembled on the spot, with Mr. Cubitt, the locomotive engineer, and Mr. Gregory, of the Croydon line, considered it necessary to forward immediate intelligence of what had happened to Colonel Pauley, the Inspector-General of Railways, and who arrived soon after nine o'clock, when a strict examination was gone into.

The result is said to be this:—The bursting of the locomotive being the supposed cause of the accident, their first object was to examine the engine as it lay embedded in the earth. After getting off the viaduct it had pitched head foremost into the earth a depth of four feet, and then turned over. They found the fire-box was blown out, as well as the whole of the fire-bars and the inner casing, between which and the outer casing the steam generated, were also torn away. The next point was to examine what effect the explosion had had upon the viaduct, and the probable cause of the engine getting off the same. They found that there had been two explosions: the first apparently took place about eighty feet from the spot where the engine was lying. The fire bar at the bottom of the fire-box had been blown completely through the viaduct into arch No. 124, making a hole three or four feet square. The second explosion (the most severe of the two) not only blew the fire-box through the arch No. 123, but such was the force of the steam, that the engine "jumped," and descended partly on the rails and partly off, a distance of eight or ten yards, crushing the ironwork pieces of timber that supported the viaduct.

The stoker, Aaron Wilkinson, had his skull fractured, his left arm broken, and other parts of his person dreadfully scaled. His unfortunate companion was about thirty two years of age; he was a single man, and resided at Ashford, near Dover, where his relatives live.

MURDER AND HIGHWAY ROBBERY IN WALES.—On Friday week, between eleven and twelve o'clock, David Lewis, a butter carrier, was robbed and murdered whilst on the road between Brecon and Trecastell, in the county of Brecon, North Wales. His death was caused by a pistol ball, shot through his head, and suspicion fell upon a man named Thomas Thomas, who resided with his father, at Maseddwa, in the parish of Llanfynydd, Carmarthenshire. He was the last person seen in the deceased's company, and has since been apprehended.

ANOTHER FATAL RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—A fatal accident occurred on Saturday morning on the line of the Newcastle and Carlisle Railway, near Eton station, about half past six o'clock for Carlisle, was proceeding at the usual rate, it ran into a cow which was straying on the line, and the force of the concussion was so great as to throw the engine and tender over a low embankment, the engine falling on its side, and the tender being crushed up beside it. The stoker was fortunate enough to jump off just before the collision took place, and escaped with only a few slight bruises. The engineer did not jump off, and he was crushed to death between the engine and the tender. Had the accident occurred 20 yards further along the line, where the railway runs close to the river Tyne, the whole train would have gone into the water. The trucks suffered no injury, and but little displacement. The engineer's name was Thomas Graham; he was a steady experienced driver, but the morning was very dark, and the animal was not discovered until the engine was close upon it.

MELANCHOLY CATASTROPHE.—Five Men Drowned.—A few days ago Mr. De Larnage, one of the coroners of Kent, held an inquest at Whitstable on the bodies of Edward Polhill, aged 34, William Polhill, aged 25, George Miles, aged 22, John Mason, aged 31, and Henry Pym, aged 23, the whole of whom had been unfortunately drowned on the evening of Wednesday last, whilst passing from Whitstable to the Isle of Sheppey. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidentally drowned," leaving a small dividend on the boat.

MANSLAUGHTER BY A CAPTAIN OF ONE OF THE WATERMEN STEAMERS.—An inquest was held on Monday on the body of William Morgan, a seaman, who it will be recollected was, together with Edward Everett, an aged waterman, run down off the Thames Pier, Wapping, on the morning of the 25th of October, by the Waterman steam-boat No. 5, Captain Sumner, and drowned, several others in the ship having narrowly escaped a similar fate. The evidence was nearly a recapitulation of the testimony given at the former inquest held on the body of the unfortunate Everett. The jury returned a verdict of "Manslaughter" against Sumner, the master of the steamer, who is now in Newgate, having been convicted of the manslaughter of Everett at the Central Criminal Court, and sentenced to four months imprisonment.

DEATH FROM STARVATION.—On Monday afternoon a long investigation was entered into before Mr. Higgs, at the Golden Lion, Lower Edmonton, on the remains of a man, name unknown, aged 32, whose death was occasioned by the want of food and exposure to the inclemency of the weather. It appeared from the evidence of Richard Pugh, with whom the deceased had lodged, that he had for some weeks been out of work. He had during that period obtained a scanty pittance by vending sensitive matches, balls of cotton, &c. The police interfered with him and threatened to apprehend him as a vagrant, saying that his offering things for sale was merely an excuse for begging. Deceased was, in consequence, very frightened, and did not go out with his basket again. He stopped at witness's house till the following Tuesday, when he absented himself, having left then from the day the police spoke to him lived upon stale crusts, which he got from other lodgers in exchange for coppers, and the drugs of the teapot when others had done with it. On Saturday night last, about half-past ten o'clock, witness was returning home, when he saw the deceased sitting on the ground in the street crouched up in a corner. He asked him why he did not come to his house, when he replied, because he had no money, adding that he was very cold and thirsty and had a pain in his side. Witness assisted him home, where he made him some gruel, putting into it half a pint of ale, which deceased swallowed ravenously. Deceased was then put to bed, and he died on Sunday morning. Since the Tuesday he had slept in hotels and open sheds, and had had scarcely a particle of food. The jury returned a verdict "That the deceased died from want of the common necessities of life and exposure to the cold."

DRAYTON MANOR.—In consequence of the lamented demise of the Dowager Lady Floyd, Sir Robert and Lady Peel will be prevented from receiving company at the manner this winter.

Sir Robert Peel's fourth son, Mr. John Floyd Peel, has just entered the Scots Fusilier Guards as ensign and lieutenant.

LONDON LECTURE SOCIETY.—On Tuesday evening, the first public meeting of this institution was held at the Hall of Commerce, Threadneedle-street. The programme included sixteen specimens of senatorial and forensic eloquence, and sublime poetry, relieved by one or two scenes of exquisite humour from Mr. Dickens's works, all of which were delivered with good effect. Mr. Albert Smith presided, and was much applauded on taking the chair, and on quitting the room at the close of an evening most rationally passed. The room was crowded throughout the performance.

OPENING OF THE LEAMINGTON AND WARWICK RAILWAY

KENILWORTH STATION.

The "opening train," unadorned, and in simple business guise—according to the custom of the London and Birmingham Company, who seem to have a natural horror of flags and bands of music—left Coventry a little after nine o'clock in the morning; and although the weather was far from propitious, its departure was witnessed and cheered by a vast multitude of well-dressed spectators. In its course past the numerous bridges, which give a character to the rail, and at other good points of observation, the same testimonies of respect were paid to the "courageous" inmates of the snug "first classes" on this, their gallant venture. At Kenilworth, many ladies graced the triumph with their presence, and some danger was incurred by their very close proximity to the rails. At Leamington an immense assemblage of respectable persons, together with the défilé of the neighbourhood, received the train, which was hereafter to put them within three hours and a half of the metropolis, with every mark of intelligent gratulation. The day then became a universal holiday. Business was every where suspended, festivities of all sorts were interchanged by the delighted people, and at night a grand dinner given to the directors and friends of the railway, came off in grand style at the Regent's Hotel, and crowned the "opening day." To those who would wish for particulars, we may say that the dinner was served at six o'clock, and that upwards of fifty first-rate gentlemen sat down to it. Capt. Musgrave (in place of Dr. Jephson) took the chair, supported by the Hon. and

MELBOURNE GRANGE VIADUCT.

Rev. Mr. Somerville, Mr. Wilkison, Mr. Stracey, Mr. Drinkwater, and other gentlemen connected with the county. The dinner, consisting of all the delicacies of the season, was served with their usual skill and precision by Messrs. Beech and Jeffereys. A deputation from the Nuneaton and Bedworth Railway Company, headed by Mr. Wilkinson, chairman, was present, and added greatly to the good fellowship of the meeting.

The tract of country through which the railway passes is picturesque in the extreme: well wooded hills, luxuriant meadows, and fertile valleys, alternate with romantic villages, and sites of abiding historic interest. The remains of Stoneleigh Abbey, Kenilworth Castle and Abbey, Warwick Castle in the immediate neighbourhood, may be cited in illustration.

The distinguishing feature of the line (which for the present consists only of a single pair of rails) is found in the undulatory character of its gradients. The entire length rises and falls like the surface of a gently rolling ocean taken at any one moment of time, and these "ups and downs," or dips, as they are called, are so contrived that the impetus acquired in running down one incline is contrived exactly to compensate for the retardation of the succeeding ascent. An obvious example of this mode of construction occurs in the Melbourn valley, as shown in the accompanying engraving. The valley is of considerable depth, and in the formation of a permanent way across it, it was held expedient to build, not a horizontal, but a curved viaduct, the lowest point being near the centre, a mode of procedure which has produced a great saving of material, and a considerable gain in the working speed. It is built of brick and stone and consists of seventeen elliptical arches, each thirty feet span.

The stations are remarkable for convenience of arrangement, and simplicity of design. The one at Kenilworth is an elegant and very light structure, fitted with spacious booking-offices, comfortable waiting-rooms, &c.; and stands within a quarter of a mile of the village, with excellent approaches, and covered reception arcade, for carriages and passengers. We give a view of it, as a model of its kind.

The Leamington Terminus, about midway between, and immediately adjoining the turnpike road from Warwick to Leamington, near the Birmingham and Warwick Canal, contains all necessary accommodation for the usual routine of railway business; but, throughout, of a greatly superior character. The waiting-rooms are replete with every modern accommodation, and are elegantly furnished with ottomans, couches, &c. The booking-offices are fitted with care for the prompt dispatch of business. At the north end is an Italian tower, intended for the reception of a forcing-pump and reservoir of water, so that a jet of water, in case of fire, may be instantly obtained.

The stations, and all the works on the line, as well as the formation of the permanent way, have been designed and carried out by Robert B. Doekray, Esq., the resident engineer to the London and Birmingham Railway Company.

The length of the line is nearly nine miles; and the sum expended in its construction amounts to nearly £175,000 a very large sum, the excess having been incurred in the purchase of expensive lands.

THE TOTTENHAM CHURCHES.

These churches have, of late, in connexion with certain rubrical observances, been the subject of much discussion; so that a brief outline of their structural character may be especially interesting at the present moment.

The village of Tottenham lies four miles east of the metropolis, at the verge of Middlesex upon Essex. The parish church, the subject of the first engraving, dedicated to Allhallows, is a vicarage in the patronage of the Dean and

TOTTENHAM OLD CHURCH.

Chapter of St. Paul's Cathedral. It is situated upon an eminence, almost surrounded by the Mose, a rivulet which rises on Maxwell Hill. The church is built of hewn stone, flint, and rubble; its architecture is of various periods, though, probably, none older than the thirteenth century. It must have undergone considerable repair about the reign of Henry the Seventh. There is a curious old porch, with an oratory, and priests' room above it, containing the ear larks of a confessional, perfect, and places for holy water, &c. The font is elaborately sculptured, and is much admired; and there are several fine brasses about the church. The vestry attached to the east end of the north aisle, is a modern addition, in bad taste: it was built in 1650, at the expense of Harry Lord Coleraine, and beneath it is the burial place of his family. The staircases and other traces of the roof-loft remain. The parish registers contain information as far back as the reign of Elizabeth. At the east end is a painted glass window, the gift of John Willmet, Esq., in 1807. We must not let pass, without censure, the unsightly vestry, the ugly wooden porch outside the chancel door, and the sad disfigurement with plaster of some fine sculpture inside the old porch. The church will hold from 1200 to 1500 persons.

The second, or new church, is a gratifying result of the very beneficial exertions for "church extension." It is situated in the district of Tottenham, known as Wood Green, a hamlet containing a population of about 400, and the church affords accommodation for about half that number. The building has attracted attention and elicited much admiration from its strict architectural propriety, and from the order and neatness of its internal arrangement. The style adopted by the architects, Messrs. Scott and Moffat, is the earlier variety of the Decorated, or that of the close of the thirteenth century. It is entirely of stone, Kentish rag and Broomhill stone. The plain portions of the exterior are of Kentish rag, hammer-dressed; and the quoins, window, and other dressings, are of a sandstone from the neighbourhood of Speldhurst, in Kent: it is of a pleasing colour, and forms an agreeable variety with the Kentish rag.

TOTTENHAM NEW CHURCH, WOOD GREEN.

The church consists of a chancel, internally about 14 feet by 23 feet; a nave, about 50 feet by 20 feet; a south porch, and a vestry adjoining the north side of the chancel. The pulpit and font are elegantly sculptured in Painswick stone, by Mr. Cox, of Oxford. The service for the holy communion, which is of silver, has been made after the fashion of that which was lately presented to the new church at Malta. The roof is open; the seats are also open, so that this church adds another testimony to the daily increase of a disposition to restore the poor to their privileges in the house of God.

The history of the building of this little church may afford a useful lesson to committees engaged in any similar undertaking. For some time it had been contemplated to make provision for the spiritual of Wood-green; but the resources of the hamlet were evidently not equal to the expense of building a church. An appeal, however, was made to the parish generally: contributions flowed in, many of them anonymously; and these, aided by a grant by the Incorporated Society, has enabled the committee to meet the cost of the church, about £1700. The church was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of London, on the 3rd of October last, when the bishop preached, and a collection was made at the offertory, in aid of the building fund, to the amount of £101 1s. 4d. The festival of the consecration was celebrated with much joy, and, at the same time, with the strictest order and propriety.

Our readers may recollect that in noticing the elegant reprint of Drexelius's "Reflections on Eternity," a few weeks since, we stated that the profits from the sale of the work are to be liberally contributed to the building fund of the church at Wood-green, by the pious editor of the above work, the Rev. M. F. Dunster curate of Tottenham.

LEAMINGTON TERMINUS.

RAILWAY SIGNALS.

Obedience to the "signals" used on a railway is indispensable to the safe passage of a train. A moment's inattention to any one of their significant motions may be followed by the instant death of heedless unsuspecting multitudes, while, on the other hand, a due observance of them at all times, in all seasons, by night as well as by day, directs the speed of even the fastest pleasure train of danger. It is, of course, most important that the servants of a line should become practically familiar with the things signified by the symbols used in their several establishments, but we also deem it to be of much consequence that the public itself should be acquainted with them, for, were such the case, we should cease to hear of the difficulty of obtaining evidence against negligent servants, which on occasions of accident has ordinarily prevailed. Every traveller would then be an observer and a judge of the means used for his preservation, and in proportion to the vigilance of his survey would be the attention of servants entrusted with duties so important to the lives and limbs of passengers.

The signals used on railways are of great variety. Most of the lines have systems peculiar to themselves; and, in consequence, no uniform observance prevails between them, which is a practice much to be regretted, as it tends to confuse the observation of men engaged on different lines, and of engineers who change one service for another. It cannot, however, be expected that so complicated an operation, and one, too, which has grown up under the management of independent companies, should speedily reach perfection. For the present, the signals are necessarily different on different lines; but we hope to see the day, when the set, which experience has proved the best, shall be universally and compulsorily adopted. We shall now describe the signals used on the more important lines.

Those observed on the London and Birmingham Railway demand the first attention. They consist of Police Signals—Signals shown at Intermediate Stations and the Long Tunnels; and the Engine Signals.

1. POLICE SIGNALS.—When the line is clear, and no obstruction in the way of the onward course of the train is either seen or suspected, the policeman stands erect, with his flags in his hand, but showing no signal. See Fig. 1. If it be required that the engine should slacken speed, and proceed with caution, from another engine having passed on the same line within five minutes, a Green Flag is held up in the manner shown in Fig. 2. If it be desired that the engine should slacken speed, and proceed with caution, from any defect in the rails, the Green flag is lowered, and held as shown in Fig. 3. But if it be necessary that the engine should stop altogether at any given point, a Red Flag is shown, and

BIRMINGHAM—"ALL CLEAR."

"SLACKEN SPEED—ENGINE."

"CAUTION—RAILS."

DOVER—"CAUTION—RAILS."

2. SIGNALS SHOWN AT INTERMEDIATE STATIONS AND THE LONG TUNNELS.—Signal posts are erected on the "up" and "down" lines at the Intermediate Stations, and at the entrance of Primrose-hill, Watford, and Kilby Tunnels, showing a Red Board of a large size, and a Green Board of a smaller size, as day signals. A Green or Red Light is substituted as night signals. On a train or engine passing an intermediate station, the Green signal is exhibited for the space of few minutes, to denote that a train on the same line has passed within that period, and therefore, due caution must be observed on the part of the drivers and guards. On a train stopping at an intermediate station, the Red Signal is shown, and continued for five minutes after its departure, when the Green Signal is turned on, to complete the ten minutes' precautionary signal. On a train entering one of the tunnels, the Red signal is shown for the space of ten minutes, to prevent another engine entering within that time; unless the policeman can previously see through that the line is clear, when the Red Signal will be turned off, and the Green shown, to complete the ten minutes' signal. Should the Red Signal be shown waved backwards and forwards, the policeman facing towards the coming engine. At night the same signals are given, by means of coloured lamps. A White Light denotes the line clear; a Green Light requires the use of caution; and when the engine is required to stop, a Red Light is shown, but in place of being held steadily, it is waved backwards and forwards. The engine-drivers and guards are, however, warned, that any signal, either by day or night, violently waved, denotes danger, and a necessity of stopping.

JUNCTION SIGNAL-MAN AT WORK.

STATION POST SIGNAL—"CAUTION AND DANGER."

DOVER JUNCTION: DANGER: UP AND DOWN LINES, BRICKLAYER'S ARMS. CAUTION, UP LINE; DANGER, DOWN LINE, LONDON BRIDGE.

an engine passing on that line is ordered invariably to stop on coming up to it.

3. ENGINE SIGNALS.—These consist of white and coloured boards by day, and white and coloured lamps by night, placed before and behind the train, to announce its character, whether it be on passenger, luggage, or special service. The whistle is an important adjunct to the system, as it serves to give an almost irresistible warning, to all parties within reach of its shrill and earnest notes.

In giving orders for the use of these signals, the most imperative obedience is enjoined on all parties concerned; but, at the same time, they are told not to rely on the signals being given at all times, but to exercise due and proper diligence, and on no account to be running before their proper time, or beyond their regular speed. The engine driver is also charged to stand by his "head gear," and to "keep a good look out."

In addition to these arrangements, a code of standing orders is issued, for precautions to be observed on the unexpected stoppage of an engine on the line and during fogs. For example:—Should any accident occur to cause the stoppage of an engine or train on the line, the under-guard, or brakeman, is instantly sent back to the front foot board, with a Red Signal, to warn any engine that may be following on the same line.

PLACING A FOG SIGNAL.

It will be seen that these arrangements are very simple, and, so far, well adapted to the intelligence of the ordinary working men to whom they are addressed, and for the requirements of a comparatively limited and uniform traffic. Signals of greater intelligence, will, however, be required when the great lines become, according to their original designation, trunk lines, loaded with the traffic of numerous branch lines, and intersecting with various junctions in their course.

Engine must then be made to talk with engine, station with station, and line with line. And, that such facilities of communication will be obtained, our trust in the ingenuity of the national mind forbids us to doubt. So far as well as might have yet to be used, symbols have to be multiplied till the "parts of speech" are no longer confined to the grammar book, and, above all, the subtle sciences of electricity admit of combinations which will bring the ends of the earth together. We have, therefore, much pleasure in noting that every new railway, and every new arrangement of business on old ones, is, in most instances, accompanied with improved signals, and that the general and instantaneous correspondence of one part of the line with another, is, in a corresponding degree, facilitated and secured. One of the most recent of these improvements is to be found on the Brighton, Croydon, and Dover Railways, where an entirely new set of signals has recently been introduced. They consist of—

1. Hand Signals. Day.—The signal, All Right, is shown by extending the arm horizontally as far as is distinctly seen by the engine-driver. The Caution Signal, to slacken speed, is shown by a Green Flag; or (in the absence of a green flag) by holding one arm straight up. The Danger Signal, always to stop, is shown by a Red Flag, or (in the absence of a Red Flag) by holding both arms straight up, or waving with violence a hat, or any other object.

Night.—The signal, All Right, is shown by a steady White Light. The Caution Signal, to slacken speed, is shown by a steady Green Light. The Danger Signal, always to stop, is shown by a Red Light; or, in cases of emergency, by waving a light with violence.

2. Post Signals.—These are placed at all the stations. Our cut represents the first from London. These Signal Posts are furnished with two arms, one pointing outwards to give signals to trains on the down line, and another pointing out on the other side of the Signal Post, to give signals on the up line of rails. The signal, All Right, is shown by the left hand side of the Signal Post, as seen by an approaching engine-driver, being clear. The Caution Signal, to slacken speed, is shown by the arm on the left hand side being raised half-way to the horizontal position. The Danger Signal, always to stop, is shown by the arm on the left hand side being raised to the horizontal position. The position of the arm on the right hand side, has reference to the right hand line, and is consequently a signal to trains running in the contrary direction. At night, the arrangements are as follows:—Each Signal Post is furnished with lamps, showing three colours, in fixed directions by night as follows:—The signal, All Right, is shown by the White Light. The Caution Signal, to slacken speed, is shown by the Green Light. The Danger Signal, always to stop, is shown by the Red Light.

3. Junction Signals.—These are of great importance, demanding from the servants entrusted with their management an almost automatic regularity in the discharge of their solemn duties—a trust which we are happy to say, they have hitherto fulfilled with the most gratifying diligence, no accident having ever occurred through neglect or mistake. A junction is furnished with two signal posts corresponding with the two meeting railways, and the signals for each railway are given on that signal post which corresponds with that particular railway. The signals for trains running to or from the right-hand railway are given on the right hand signal post; and the signals for trains running to or from the left-hand railway are given on the left-hand signal post. At each post the regular day and night signals are given as described in the post signals. On a train or engine approaching a junction, the engine-driver holds out his hand by day, or a white light by night, to the right or left of his engine, to point out to the switchman the direction in which the train or engine is to be passed. The cut (6) shows the Junction Signal Station at the point of union between the Croydon line and the Brighton line. Arms branch off the Dover, near New Cesse. In the distance, the wooden viaduct is seen, and the position of the train marks the spot on which the actual explosion and destruction of a luggage train took place on Wednesday morning. The cut (5) shows the machinery by which the signals and the switches are worked.

4. Fog Signals.—In foggy weather both day and night signals are given; but in addition, when a danger or sudden emergency requires, "Copper's Fog Signal" is used. This is a detonating compound, packed in the shape of a small circular box, which flares to flash to the rail, and which, on a train passing over it, explodes with a tremendous boom. The signal thus given is the warning immediately to stop the train. Our engraving shows a policeman placing one in its position on a low wall.

5. Train Signals.—Each train, after sunset or in foggy weather, is provided with White, Red, and Blue Tail Lights. The Brighton trains carry Two White Lights on the top of the buffer beam. The Croydon trains One White Light on the top of the buffer beam, and the Dover trains, One White Light on the buffer beam, and one on the top of the smoke box. Every train carries two Tail Lights placed back to back. A Red Tail Light by day or a Third Red Tail Light by night, indicates that a special, or extra train, will follow. Express engines or trains, which have two or three of the above, carry a White B and in front by day, and three White Lights by night. The tremendous sound of the whistle is the signal for the guard to put on their brakes.

6. For the management and combination of the signals, the following very clear instructions have been issued to the men:—

The signals, both by day and night, are to be shown by the signal-man, until every engine or train in the train shall have passed him. In all cases where hand signals are used, the signal-man is to stand on the opposite side of the railway, that he may be quite conspicuous to the driver and fireman, as well as to the locomotive and guards, taking great care not to be in the way of any engine or train approaching in the opposite direction. The Danger Signal is always to be shown immediately after an engine or carriage of any description has passed along the line, and is to be continued for five minutes; it is also to be made who ever there is any obstruction on the line, or any danger of obstruction; and at a signal, whatever the state of the atmosphere, or the smoke, or any other cause, shall make it at all doubtful whether the line within the tunnel is quite free, even though more than five minutes may have elapsed since the entrance of the last engine or carriage. The Caution Signal is always to follow the Danger Signal, and is to be continued five minutes; it is also to be made whenever the state of the road or other circumstances, though not such as to require the Danger Signal, make it desirable that the speed should be reduced. The All Right Signal is to be shown when the signal-man has satisfied himself that the line is clear and unobstructed, and that there is no danger to the free passage of the engine or carriage. In cases of a fog, the day and night signals must be used simultaneously. When Copper's Fog Signal is used, it must be fixed to the upper flange of the rail by means of the lead clip, and, if possible, not less than half a mile from the place of obstruction. In the event of any accident occurring, which may cause obstruction, or of a train stopping on the main line (except at a station), the signal-man, or, in his absence, the guard, is instantly to display the Danger Signal, and send or himself back in the proper direction to stop any engine that may be approaching, until he has succeeded half a mile from the obstruction, when he must remain with the Danger Signal shown, until he knows the line to be again perfectly clear. Every signal-man is immediately to report to his nearest superior officer any instance of disobedience of the signals given.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Dec. 15.—Third Sunday in Advent.
MONDAY, 16.—L. returns died, 1774.
TUESDAY, 17.—Bonaparte's Milan decree, 1807.
WEDNESDAY, 18.—Raid on Born, 1877.
THURSDAY, 19.—Steno Bracco born, 1546.
FRIDAY, 20.—Bakery made a kingdom, 1866.
SATURDAY, 21.—St. Thomas and Paul died.

High Water at London Bridge, for the Week ending Dec. 21.

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
6.40	7.3	7.20	7.15	6.23	9.4
6.40	7.3	7.20	7.15	6.23	9.4

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

- "F. W. H."—There is a clock in the Palace of Hampton Court, which goes 12 months with once winding up. The method of lengthening the line of going is to add to the number of your wheels, and increase the weight. A clock to go 12 months will require about 100 lbs.; but if wheels be added to make it go 12 months, the weight would, probably, be 200 lbs.
- "A Protestant of the Church of England."—The two-fold designation was not intentional.
- "Stockwell."—Unaccountable.
- "J. G."—Thank you for the correction—(see page 364)—where for "Amusement for Married Couples," read "Amusement for Married Women and Lightermen, and their Wives."
- "A Subscriber and a Constant Reader."—Russia leather or cedar-wood shavings and drive away with you from far, &c.; but the best plan is to take them out of the drawer and shake them occasionally.
- "J. B."—Southampton.—The subject is not characteristic.
- "A Constant Subscriber, and a Resident at Home Hill."—The points of the New Church shall be explored in our account of the consecration.
- "Alfred."—Dublin.—A small treatise on the Ingueritope may be purchased of any maker of philosophical instruments.
- "H. W."—Shedding is thought for the watch of the Poor's Box; which, however, we have not room to engage.
- "A New Subscriber."—Unaccountable.—We cannot entertain the suggestion.
- "C. N."—Narvik current.—The play of "The Stranger" is by Kotzebue.
- "A. H. B."—Long Salton.—Perhaps, our correspondent will favour us with a sketch.
- "B. G."—Glasgow.—Unclaimed letters are returned by the Post-office within about a month.
- "A Lady, and subscriber from No. 1."—The Church of England Magazine.
- "A Constant Reader."—Lentaster.—We cannot decipher the characters on the ring. Any person may have arms, provided he pay the tax for the same. Inquiry should be made at Herald's College.

- "H. B. F."—A deacon may be nominated chaplain to a nobleman.
- "Cambridge."—Sussex is not a man of colour.
- "Norfolkensis."—A letter addressed Messrs. Baring and Co., New York, will be sufficient.
- "Dramaticus."—The subject is not eligible for illustration.
- "Z. O."—Aristotle.—The question can only be decided by a magistrate.
- "Civil Engineer."—Is thanked for his suggestion.
- "The Man without a Name."—Philip Quirrell is a fiction.
- "J. S."—The illustrations shall appear shortly.
- "A Country Advertiser."—George I. presented £1500 to the parish of St. Martin's in the Fields towards the purchase of an organ.
- "A Subscriber from the Beginning."—Dublin.—When the Sheffield and Manchester Railway is opened throughout, we shall, probably, illustrate it.
- "A Constant Subscriber."—Dorking.—On the third finger of the right hand.
- "Buckfield."—Should write to the gentleman named in the description of the Abolitionist.
- "L. E."—We shall be glad to receive the block.
- "H. J."—Harworth.—We are not aware.
- "T. S. A."—Received the engraving, which shall appear as soon as possible.
- "W. K."—Forrester.—The paper for Oct. 28 was duly sent. Our correspondent will receive the Large Print.
- "Philomachus."—Apply to the publisher of the work.
- "P. R."—The Lord Lieutenant of Shropshire is the Duke of Sutherland.
- "A Subscriber."—We believe the statue was altered in the manner stated.
- "Tom's Pet."—And better apply to a respectable solicitor.
- "A Constant Reader."—A magistrate in such a case could commit.
- "G. B."—The Duke of Wellington challenged the Earl of Warriston; the difference arose from the conduct of the Government on the Catholic Question.
- "A Country Squire."—We know no work of the kind that can be depended on.
- "An Original Subscriber."—The contribution was omitted for want of room.
- "A Subscriber."—Mr. Crookford died a few days after the last Derby day.
- "J. B."—Alton.—Indiscrete.
- "A. F. H."—Mr. Betty has never played in London. It is reported that Fremont will perform here during the next season.
- "F. C."—There might have been a fresh deal.
- "Clericus."—Burlington, should refer to Michael Angelo Titmarsh's clever account of the second finding of Napoleon.
- "Gentleman."—If the writer of the letter on the Duke of Rutland and the Belvoir House will send us his name, his observations shall have a reply.
- THE LARGE PRINT.—A Loyal Subject; J. D. P., Dulwich; B. B., Loughborough; J. N. A., Casarumagus; T. W. S.—R. R. S., Gisle; L. L., Anglesby; G. S., A. B., Dursley; W. H. B., R. R. H., A., Kester; H., Mullinger; B. G., Glasgow; will be entitled to the Large Print.
- * * Our Chess department is unavoidably omitted this week.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We have great pleasure in announcing the completion of the SPLENDID ENGRAVING OF THE

PANORAMA

THE RIVER THAMES,

showing at one view "the Royal-embellished Thames," its "Forests of Masts," its crowded Docks and Ports, its Fleet of Steamers, its

NOBLE BRIDGES, UNEQUALLED IN THE WORLD;

its busy Wharfs and Quays; and the various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate banks, including

GREENWICH, AND ITS SUPERB PALACE-HOSPITAL;

and exhibiting the winding of the "Silver Thames" through the mighty mass of buildings that form the metropolis of the Commercial World.

Showing as distinctly as in a Map, yet with beautifully picturesque effect, the several

STREETS OF THE METROPOLIS;

with the many hundred Churches, Palaces, Colleges, and Archbishops' Houses; Government Offices, and Public Institutions; Civil Houses, Noble Mansions, and Palatial Homes; embellished Street Architecture, Terraces, and Villas; Theatres, Railways, Parks and Public Walks; Factories and Workshops; and, in short, a perfect Picture of the vast Empire, Architectural Character, and Most Recent Improvement of the

BANKS OF THIS NOBLE RIVER.

FIRST STYLE OF THE ART.

From a most Elaborate Drawing made expressly for the

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS;

And which has occupied the Artists for several months, so that the strictest reliance may be placed on its accuracy.

The entire length of the PRINT will be

UPWARDS OF EIGHT FEET!

but it is impossible to enumerate its details at the present time.

The PRINT will be ready to issue early in January next. It is printed on a beautiful starch paper, and is intended for the purpose of giving to the public a complete

Picture of the Thames, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate

banks, as described in the Large Print, and its various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate on the ground of a prejudice in favour of England. In the whole scale of duties there is no change that can be called more than nominal; it is a change that alters nothing, and a concession that concedes as little as possible. The reductions are made on articles that no one uses, or they are so slight in amount as to be of little visible advantage. In fact, the whole scheme is open to the same charge that was so often made against the Tariff of Sir R. Peel; it deals with numberless small articles, and does not touch the great staples of commerce; the life of nations, the well-being of a people as far as they are dependent on food and clothing, are very slightly affected by remissions of duty on mother of pearl, cotton oil, and rattans. If France would admit English woollens and hardware, and if England would admit French wines, both nations would gain something in wealth and comfort. But here occurs the difficulty as to who is to make the great relaxation first; and we must confess, that as we are not free from reproach on the same matter, we cannot with much justice blame our neighbours.

The Governments of both nations will probably arrive at commercial wisdom by degrees; and, in the meantime, no small consolation may be derived from this fact, that the energies of the people of each nation are gradually breaking through the barriers that confine and embarrass, but cannot altogether restrain them. In no one article which England exports on a great scale, has France relaxed her tariff; on the contrary, on some she has increased the duties. Yet, in spite of this, superior skill and our natural advantages will prevail, and much as French Ministries and French manufacturers may wish to see the commerce of England crippled, the first are compelled to see it flourish, and the latter are obliged to buy. In the last ten years the imports of France from England have increased sevenfold! And, we believe, we take from France goods to a greater amount than they take from us; except the United States, we are the best customers the French possess in the markets of the world. But what we are to each other is as nothing to what we might and should become, did not hostile tariffs, that seem constructed on the principle of retaliating injury for injury, interpose; they are, from time to time, as in the present case, modified, but with no improvement that is appreciable; and, from the present state of French party, we can hardly expect it to emanate from any Government that can hold power in a nation afflicted with a thing so monstrous as a "war party," utterly opposed to, and destructive of, the intercourse and commerce of mankind, and more anxious to seek national greatness from battles than barter.

A SPEECH from Mr. Ferrand to his constituents at Knaresborough has broken the political flatness of the week. It has the defect of being excessively long, and the merit of being peculiarly personal; we call the last a merit in this case, because it will probably obtain for it that which its bulk would, under ordinary circumstances, prevent—a reading. The matter of the speech is not new; it is little more than a re-statement of the scenes and squabbles in which the Member for Knaresborough was a principal party concerned, during the last session—in all which implications, explications, and replications, valuable time was consumed, which the country thought might have been much better employed. Besides re-statements of what Mr. Ferrand did do, and did not do, and dared the House of Commons to do—with all which the public are familiar—there are various descriptions of the political characters of Sir R. Peel and Sir J. Graham, which are quite the reverse of flattering, and some prophecies of what will occur to this doomed nation and people, if they are much longer suffered to be at the head of its affairs. His glances into futurity are of very Cassandra-like gloom and despondency, and we must be excused for receiving them with very Trojan disbelief. His premises are sadly exaggerated; and his conclusions false in proportion. It is a curious phenomenon, that, according to the solemn declaration of violent party-men, it is always the worst and most worthless men in the country that are trusted with the ruling it. Thus, Sir R. Peel, according to Mr. Ferrand, is "a lunatic or a traitor;"—a lunatic on the score of his Canada Corn Bill, and a traitor, because, having got O'Connell safely caged in Richmond Penitentiary, he did not put him on the prison dietary—a bread and gruel regimen, in the opinion of the Member for Knaresborough, being the best possible quencher of political agitation. Having omitted to seize that one opportunity of distinguishing himself as a statesman, and having, over and above supporting the Poor Law, compared Mr. Ferrand to the "humble conjurer," who did not perform what he promised, in Sir R. Peel there is no safety—he will ruin the country—he will beggar the landed interest—he will betray the Protestant Church! There is nothing he will not do, except perhaps good, of which Mr. Ferrand pronounced him incapable. "As sure as we stand here to-day, the present race of farmers will be ruined, and one-half the land of England will change hands in ten years, unless Sir R. Peel is driven from office;" "Sir R. Peel has ruined the home trade;" England certainly never had so fatal a Minister, and yet the funds perversely indicate anything but alarm, for Consols have this week been at 100! It is the same abroad; we are going to ruin headlong; not a bale of British goods will leave Liverpool in a British bottom, if nations refrain from cutting each other's throats. "It is my conviction, that if peace continues throughout the world for a few years longer, our foreign trade will be entirely gone." Sad is the prospect indeed; he is equally decisive as to China, and foreshadows the commercial policy of the Celestial Empire:—"The Emperor of China has but slight hold of the affections of his subjects, and when the poor of that country find themselves without the means of existence, by the trade forced on them from England, they will drive the manufactures of England from China, and compel their own Government to rescind their commercial treaty with England."

Were not prophetic sounds so full of woe.

And for all this there is but one remedy—Sir R. Peel out of Downing-street. But, like many other men, who let their passions prompt them rather than their reason, Mr. Ferrand overlooks his enmity. People will ask if, perchance, there is no personal hostility at the bottom of all this raving about national ruin and social destruction? "All seems yellow to the jaundiced eye," but there is no persuading the healthy one to see things in the same colour. We are no champions of the Poor-law, and we give up the cold heartlessness of much that occurs in the working of it to Mr. Ferrand's zealous detestation, wishing only that he had discretion and knowledge enough to make his enmity effective. But when he denounces as rotten the whole gigantic system of modern trade—which he has not taken the trouble to understand—and makes the most reckless accusations against a minister whose policy he cannot comprehend, he must be content to be set down as speaking from that unreasoning bitterness, which animates the disappointed partisan, angered with the position of others and dissatisfied with his own. He spares the people as little as the Premier, and declares that England has degenerated into "a nation of humbugs." Looking at the whole of the Member's public career, we fancy he speaks more from an intimate knowledge of himself than acquaintance with his countrymen; but if we are so fallen, he may stand as the type of the whole.

Behold a nation in a man expressed.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1844.

THE French Government has published a modification of its Tariff; any thing relating to the commercial affairs of one of the great powers of Europe is important to England, especially at a period when a great portion of the Continent, in pursuance of its own policy, or as a consequence of ours, exhibits a but too decided inclination to exclude us, if possible, from its markets. In France this inclination has been made more strikingly visible than anywhere else; national antipathies have sharpened commercial rivalries; the manufacturing interest of that country shares the general feeling that is often so ludicrously, sometimes also so painfully, visible in their public journals, of dislike of England and everything belonging to her; but among the commercial classes it is intensified, if we may use the term, and to them, we fear, we not only seem competitors, but enemies. To this feeling the French Ministry are of course compelled, in some degree, to yield; if it required all the political skill and sagacity of Louis Philippe and Guizot combined, to keep the war party of France from openly flying at our throats, we cannot be surprised at their not venturing on any plan of commercial reform that would expose them to the suspicion of "favouring England." And we must confess the modification of the French Tariff just promulgated is not open to any such suspicion; the Ministry may meet the Chambers without any fear of attack from the Opposition,

THE French police is falling into disgrace with the Parisians. It has been so long and so successfully used as a political instrument, that it has ceased to be effective for the prevention and detection of crime, or rather its constitution and management did not so well fit it for that purpose as for the other. As far as person and property are concerned, the good people of Paris are left pretty much to take care of themselves; against the dangers of political meetings and the immorality of the outward expression of free opinions, there is not a better watched and guarded people in Europe. But the number of robberies and murders in the streets of the capital have so increased, that serious alarm has been created, especially as the police appears utterly unable to check these crimes, or even to discover them.

A trial which has recently taken place has brought to light the existence of a gang of regularly organized assassins and robbers, who have carried on their nefarious trade without being discovered by the police. Fifteen have now been convicted and sentenced to different degrees of punishment, which will relieve society of their presence for a good many years; but this result has been obtained, not by the exertions and intelligence of the police, but by a quarrel among themselves, which induced one of them to give a clue to the authorities of the practice and hunt for his companions. This is the fourth gang of the same kind that has been discovered within the last few months, and, curiously enough, the police had not the merit of bringing one of them to justice. In every case one of the rogues (generally the greatest) turned King's evidence, and betrayed his companions.

Paris, in fact, in the state London was a century and a half ago, when to walk the streets by night was an actual danger. The whole patrol system, of a guard passing round at a stated time, is even worse than that of our old and inefficient watchmen, that was broken up by Sir R. Peel for the introduction of the present police; the continual vigilance that is thus kept up in the streets, in conjunction with our generally well supplied gas-lights, renders outrages almost impossible; the quiet and safety of our metropolis at all hours, make the dreadful crimes detailed by the Paris papers appear almost incredible. But it is the natural effect of perverting a system of police from its true purpose, and making it a political instrument, for watching opinion rather than actions. A conspiracy in Paris could scarcely escape detection; a citizen may be strangled and robbed in the streets with something approaching impunity. The facts given in the above quotation have awakened the Parisians to a perception of their true interest in the matter, and it has been seriously proposed to establish a police similar to our own. Remembering how loudly the superior skill of the French police has been vaunted, and the great opposition and dislike shown by the people to our force when first formed, this result is a great proof how well the plan was calculated to secure that great object—public safety.

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

HER MAJESTY AND PRINCE ALBERT.—Her Majesty and Prince Albert took their departure for Chiswick on Saturday last. On Sunday they attended divine service accompanied by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Wartenberg, Archdeacon Wilberforce officiating. On Monday the Queen and Prince Albert took their usual walks in the gardens. The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Royal children and the illustrious visitors, returned to Windsor on Wednesday afternoon. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, Lady Fanny Howard, and the Countess Wrangham, joined the Royal circle at the Castle at dinner in the evening.

WINDSOR, Thursday Evening.—(From our own Correspondent.)—Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by the reigning Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg, and the Duke Ernest of Wurttemberg, and attended by members of their respective households, visited their Royal Highnesses the Dukes of Kent, at Frogmore, this morning. Their Royal Highnesses Prince Albert and the Dukes of Saxe-Coburg and Wurttemberg skated on the lake, in front of the mansion; the illustrious party returning to the Castle to an early luncheon. A chapter of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, at which nearly the whole of the Knights Companions were present, was held in the Turret room, this afternoon, at half-past two o'clock. The Queen being seated in the chair of state, the Knights Companions took their respective seats at the table; the Prelate standing on the right hand of her Majesty, and the Chancellor of the Order on the left. The Registrar and Black Rod stood at the bottom of the table. His Royal Highness the Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha was, by her Majesty's command, conducted from an adjoining apartment, between the two senior Knights Companions present, to the Chapter-room, where his Royal Highness was received by the Queen and the Knights Companions, standing. The Queen then announced to the reigning Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha that his Royal Highness had been elected a Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter. His Royal Highness was then invested with the insignia of the order, with the usual formalities, the Chancellor pronouncing the admonition. Her Majesty then gave the accolade to the newly elected Knight; and his Royal Highness received the congratulations of each of the Knights Companions present, passing round the table, and shaking hands with each. The Marquis of Aberdeen, the Earl de Grey, the Earl of Powis, and the Earl Talbot, were afterwards elected Knights Companions of the Order, and introduced and invested with the customary ceremony. The Hon. Corps of Gentlemen at Arms and the Yeomen of the Guard were on duty at the Castle. A Guard of Honour from the Scots' Fusilier Guards, with the band of the Regiment, were stationed in the Quadrangle; the band performing select pieces of music during the imposing ceremony. It was the intention of her Majesty to have given a grand banquet this evening, in St. George's Hall, in honour of the occasion, but the recent demise of her late Royal Highness the Princess Sophia of Gloucester, caused this arrangement to be abandoned. Dinner was served this evening in the grand dining-room, covers being laid for twenty-eight. The infant Royal Family were taken out for their accustomed airing this day at noon in the private pavilion in the Home Park.

RENOVATION OF HER LATE ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS SOPHIA, MAILED OF GLOUCESTER.—On all occasions of a public nature, whether a church was to be built or a school founded, her Royal Highness was always first to contribute her subscription on a most liberal scale. She was an annual subscriber to every charity in the parish. A year before her demise her Royal Highness placed in the hands of the vicar (the Rev. W. A. Searles) £100, to be invested for the Jubilee Almshouses, and £100 for the Blue-coat Girls' School; but her liberality was chiefly felt in acts of private charity, which were dispensed with a most judicious discrimination.

DEATH OF THE EARL OF LINCOLN.—We are sorry to have to announce the death of the venerable Earl of Lincoln, which took place at his lordship's seat, South Hill Park, near Bracknell, Berkshire. The deceased nobleman, Edmund Henry Perry, Earl and Viscount Lincoln, and Baron Glenworth, in the peerage of Ireland; Baron Parnell, of Stackpole Court, in the county of Clare, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, was born on the 8th of January, 1758, consequently had nearly completed his 87th year. He succeeded to the barony of Glenworth on the demise of his father, 4th of July, 1794, was elected a representative peer for Ireland by the Act of Union, created Earl and Viscount Lincoln, 11th of February, 1833, and succeeded amongst the peers of the United Kingdom, by the title of Baron Parnell, 11th of August, 1833; married, 30th of January, 1783, Alice Mary, only daughter and heiress of Henry Ormsby, Esq., of Clapton, county of Mayo, by Mary, his wife, sister of Sir Henry Harcourt, Bart. His lordship is succeeded in his titles and estates by his grandson, the Hon. William Tenslow Perry, now Earl of Lincoln, who is at present in Australia. We understand that the Earl of Rose is likely to be the new representative peer of Ireland, in the room of the late earl.

DEATH OF THE DOWAGER LADY FLOYD.—We regret to hear of the sudden death of the Dowager Lady Floyd, mother of Lady Peel. Her ladyship, who was at the banquet given at the Royal Exchange in honour of the Queen's visit, in the enjoyment of excellent health, a fortnight back left this country for Italy, with the intention of sojourning a short time at Nice. On reaching Paris, however, the deceased lady was seized with symptoms of indigestion, which in two days terminated in her death. The deceased was sister of the late General Sir John Floyd, Bart., whom she had survived twenty-six years. By that gallant general her ladyship leaves issue Lady Fuller, widow of the late Lieutenant-General Sir J. Fuller, who died in October, 1841, and Lady Peel, wife of the Right Hon. Sir Robert Peel.

MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—On Wednesday the marriage of Count de Jarnac, eldest son of Viscount de Chabot, K.C.H., and nephew of the Duke of Leinster, premier secretary to the French Embassy, and the Hon. Geraldine Augusta Foley, second daughter of the late and sister of the present Lord Foley, was solemnized at St. George's Church, Hanover-square, in the presence of a large circle of relatives.

THE ROYAL VISIT TO STRATHFIELD-RAVE.—We understand that the Duke of Wellington has received an invitation from the Queen, that the day intended for the visit of her Majesty and her Royal Consort to the ducal seat in Hampshire (which was to have taken place in the course of the ensuing week) must be postponed until after Christmas. We also learn that her Majesty's visit to the Duke and Duchess of Buckingham, at Stowe, has been deferred until after Christmas.

COVENT GARDEN THEATRE.—This theatre is likely to open with deaf. Shakespeare, who has been lately banished from the national stage, will again be introduced to it. Henry Betty, who has acquired considerable renown in the provinces, is to play Hamlet on the 28th instant, and will also, we hear, appear in Macbeth soon afterwards. M. Laurent is an enterprising manager; and, if report speak true, he has in preparation various novelties of an enticing character.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

A lousy winter,
Frosty but kindly.—SHARPSHARK.

With the present week frost commenced its reign of rural monopoly—winning on earth and water with ruthless vigour, and assisting the spirit element before the petrifying breath of its nostrils. No longer is the merry horn heard with in the covert, nor the joyful snicker seen in the field; rural sports have ceased, and men and youths have but one excuse for leaving the chimney corner—the lousy henry ice! What a passion for skating exists in this country! The most timid rush upon a solid death as fearless as Currier into his chariot, and cockneys make oblations to the Serpentine as desperately as Hindoos to Juggernaut. Notwithstanding this universal taste, the use of the skate is probably the only art or science without a professor in this metropolis. Some time ago, indeed, a gentleman announced that he was prepared to lay down surfaces in drawing-rooms, and the like, on which the pastime of skating might be pursued; but the novelty had a short life: either it died a natural death, or was assassinated by the Fokas. In this dour and difficultly of instruction, and as there is every indication of a long visit from the elementary depot, we cannot do better than volunteer such hints for the aspirant after the honours of the ice as experience of the slippery subject enables us to furnish.

The first thing to be done is to procure the tools. Let the skate be plain—by no means fluted—a poor invention. Having procured his skates, the novice may learn how to affix them—as also to walk with them when attached—in doors. This is the first lesson in the balance. Next as to costume. Skirts should be eschewed, as they get foul of the legs; a dress coat is good, but a sailor's jacket best. Let the trousers fit close, and the boots lace; this will be found a great support to the ankles. Do not be afraid to take his way towards the water he has selected for his death. We would not recommend the learner to begin on the ornamental waters of the parks—but penetrate a few miles into the suburbs. If a Londoner, the inhabitant of the rural districts will have no trouble in this head. If he is to be a little rough, so much the better; and, donning the iron, let him make his essay. At the first step—which, like all of its class, is the most trying—let him avail himself of a friend's hand, holding his feet not far apart. Losing this support, he will scramble about for a space, but, presently finding his legs, he will be able to attempt a tolerable perpendicular. Now he may strike out, keeping the leg which is on the ice straight, or bringing it into that form as soon after making his stroke as he can. Let him incline his person slightly forward, but not, like the foolish fellow in "The Pilgrims and the Peas."

"Hobbling with outstretched knee—and bended knee."

His whole bearing must be free from constraint or rigidity; the secret of the art is balance. Having learnt to stand and slide on the inside edge, which is the inclination of the foot opposite to the surface, by pressing that edge against the ice, a means of propulsion is obtained. Then he should place the foot used in propelling, in advance, and repeating this, he will soon be enabled to shove himself onward alternately with both feet, and the first step is accomplished. He will soon, as it were instinctively, commence inclining towards the outer edge, on which all graceful skating is performed. To make the first easy step, he should throw forward the left shoulder the instant he has impelled himself on the right foot, bring his right arm back, and look over his right shoulder, inclining his whole person decidedly and confidently towards that side. He must be in no fear of his foot-bell foreaking him, but lean over boldly: "one trial will prove its efficacy." Reversing the order, he should then give his other leg a lesson, and so on till he has relinquished all uncertainty of stroke, and accomplished "the outside edge"—the degree of A in the science of skating. Having attained this amount of knowledge he will go on in the embellishments of his art, and according to the extent of his boldness and agility in one season the most perfect command of the skates may be acquired by any one who combines courage with manly activity. In case of accidents, the following maxims should be borne in mind. Lose no time. Avoid all rough treatment. Never hold up the body by the feet. Strip, and rub it dry, wrap it in hot blankets, and lay it in a warm room, with the head somewhat elevated. If possible, place the patient in a hot bath; at all events, rub him briskly with the hand. Should he appear lifeless from intense cold, rub the body with snow, and restore animation by slow degrees; afterwards treat it as above; but the immediate application of heat in this latter case is full of danger.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

It is currently reported and generally believed, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer intends proposing the reduction of the Three per Cents, on the meeting of the ensuing Parliament, having met with such great encouragement in the reduction of the Three-and-a-Half per Cents, which is the cause of the continued rise of the New Three-and-a-Quarter.

DINNER TO SIR HENRY POTTINGER.—A splendid entertainment was given to Sir Henry Pottinger by the principal merchants in London, in Merchant Tailors' Hall, on Wednesday. The Chairman, John Abel Smith, Esq., M.P., in proposing the health of the guest, dwelt on the advantages which would be derived from the commercial treaty concluded under his auspices. Sir Henry Pottinger, in returning thanks, explained the results to which that treaty would lead. He said he believed the treaty included everything that was favorable to England and to other nations. After the time that had elapsed since the ratification, he was still of opinion that in all the main features of the treaty, no amendment could be made. Everything had been so arranged as to be mutually beneficial to the Chinese and English. An erroneous impression had gone abroad as to the value of Hong Kong, compared with other islands that might have been claimed. Among these the island of Chusan was named, but, taking into consideration the population, and other circumstances, he was still of opinion that Hong Kong was the more suitable for the purposes of a British settlement. The meeting had nothing of a political character in it. Indeed both Lord Aberdeen and Lord Palmerston were present, and Lord Aberdeen congratulated the latter noble lord on having been the means of obtaining for this country the services of Sir Henry Pottinger.

THE ANTI-CORN LAW LEAGUE.—The Anti-Corn Law League resumed their meetings at Covent Garden Theatre, on Wednesday. Nothing remarkable, however, occurred. The theatre, as usual, was excessively crowded, and there were long speeches from Mr. Villiers, Mr. Cobden, and Mr. Bright. Scarcely a new argument was brought forward. The Chairman, Mr. Wilson, however, asserted that the exertions made by the League, at the Registrations, would produce a difference in favour of the League of sixty-four votes (or thirty-two members) on Mr. Villiers's annual motion in behalf of free trade. Mr. Wilson also detailed at great length the exertions which the League were making in erecting new votes for counties by purchasing freeholds. In this respect, Mr. Wilson stated the League had met with great success, and they believed they had already created a sufficient number of votes to secure the representation of South Lancashire, North Cheshire, York West Riding, and other counties.

METROPOLITAN PAUPERISM AND DESTITUTION.—By Returns sent to the Rev. W. Tuckett, M.A., St. George's in the East, it appears that on November 27th, 1844, there was a decrease, compared with the corresponding period of the preceding year, of paupers in the various unions and workhouses of the Metropolis and its suburbs, to the amount of 888, and in mendicants, vagrants, and destitute persons, to the amount of 445; and by comparing the two years together it will be perceived that when the Houses of Refuge were not open, the unions and workhouses were more frequented, and the vagrants, &c., were more scattered amongst the different parishes; but as soon as the refuges are open, no doubt, fresh arrivals will flock into the Metropolis, and take up their abodes in these places; and by supposing the refuges to be full as last year, and consequently less in the workhouses, &c., the numbers are not the tens of thousands, as generally supposed, but in round numbers the average number of these nightly wanderers is about one thousand.

MORTALITY IN THE METROPOLIS.—Deaths from all causes, in the week ended Saturday, Dec. 7.—Males, 512; females, 470; total, 982.—Weekly average: Males, 468; females, 433; total, 901.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

A letter from Bilbao, dated the 4th inst., states that a Spanish vessel had just arrived, in thirty-two days, from the island of Cuba, with the intelligence that the Havana had been nearly swept away by a terrible earthquake. No further details are given respecting this dreadful convulsion.

It may be mentioned as an instance of the improvement in commercial affairs, that the Customs' revenue of Liverpool for the past year is likely to yield upwards of £4,500,000 sterling, a sum greater by very nearly £200,000 than the amount anticipated last year.

A letter from St. Petersburg states that the Emperor of Russia, considering the expense necessary in 1845 for the construction of the railroad between Petersburg and Moscow, orders that a loan of twelve millions of silver rubles shall be opened abroad, on the same basis as that of the 3½ per cent. loan. The repayments of 500 silver rubles each are to be divided in 104 equal portions, and to bear interest from the 1st of August this year.

According to a private letter from Oran, the colonel of the 2nd Regiment of Hussars, who was detached with his regiment, to Sedona, having gone to shoot game with the surgeon and some privates of his regiment, was surrounded by a number of Arabs, who carried off the entire party. It is supposed that this feat was performed by some of Abd-el-Kader's troops, who were camped on the frontiers of Algeria.

Daniel and John Forrester, the celebrated Police officers, are natives of Cambridgeshire. They were born at Nantycra, three miles from Camerton, their father having kept the public-house now occupied by a man named Levi Llewellyn. Another brother was accidentally shot near Nantycra.

Advices from Ichaboe to Oct. 3, state that there were at that date upwards of three hundred vessels lying at Ichaboe, and that four or five vessels were loading with guano at each pier, and vessels were arriving daily. A previous letter, dated Sept. 26, states that there was sufficient guano on the island to load all the vessels that could be loaded for the next six months at the then rate.

Middle. Brohan, an actress of the Theatre Francaise, some time back was knocked against in the street by a man carrying a heavy package. The blow struck her on the bosom, and caused acute pain. For two months she suffered constantly, the part affected being exceedingly swollen and inflamed. Recently, an eminent surgeon gave it as his opinion that some substance had got into the flesh, and caused the pain. He procured certain remedies, and two or three days after a needle worked its way out. It is supposed that having been accidentally placed in Middle. Brohan's dress, it was forced into the flesh by the blow. The lady is now doing well.

A letter from Brussels of the 7th inst., states that the mercury in the centigrade thermometer had fallen to 11 deg. (8 deg. and a half Reaumur) below zero. The navigation in the canals from Brussels to Willemshoek and Ghent was completely stopped, and also the canal of Louvain. The sea was already several inches thick. The rivers Dyle and Senne were beginning to freeze.

The High Court of Appeal has reformed the sentence against Tschich (the intended murderer of the King of Prussia), inasmuch as he is to be sentenced, instead of being executed by the sword. It may be expected that in a sentence will again be pronounced into detention or transportation. The behaviour of Tschich was, without a moment's weakness, unflinchingly firm and resolute. He insisted upon having acted by motives of general well-being, without being influenced by any assumptions. Nevertheless it is the general belief at Berlin that Tschich has acted under the influence of a conspiracy.

A letter from Tahiti, June 2, states that the chiefs of Wallis's Islands and of the Island of Fomani are henceforward under the protection of France, this step, which was applied for several months back, being consented to by the French Government. The Governor of Tahiti has, in consequence, dispatched a vessel to those islands to notify that they were to be occupied. The protectorate of the Gambier Islands has also been notified.

POSTSCRIPT.

SMITHFIELD CLUB DINNER.—Yesterday (Friday), the annual dinner of the members of the club took place at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-Inn-Fields. The Right Hon. the Earl Spencer presided, and there were present the Duke of Richmond and several very influential agriculturists. The secretary, Mr. Gibbs, and the officers connected with the society, were congratulated on the manner in which the three days of the show had passed off. Dinner was on the table at half-past four o'clock.

SMITHFIELD CLUB CATTLE SHOW.—The visitors, yesterday (Friday), were quite as numerous as on Wednesday and Thursday. The room containing the farming implements, &c., attracted considerable attention. A general meeting of the club took place at one o'clock, which was attended by the Earl Spencer, President, the Duke of Richmond, and other distinguished individuals. Some business connected with the distribution of the prizes was gone through.

AGRICULTURAL PROTECTION SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN.—Yesterday (Friday) the first general meeting of the members of this society was held at the office, 17, Old Broad-street. The Duke of Richmond presided, and was supported by the Duke of Cleveland, Mr. Pusey, M.P., Mr. Blackstone, M.P., Mr. Miles, M.P., and several other members of Parliament. A long report of the proceedings of the society was read by Mr. Hyson, the secretary. The question of the introduction of Canadian corn was entered into very fully. The noble chairman said he would move for certain papers on the matter on the meeting of Parliament. The report was adopted. The annual dinner is fixed for the 2nd of February.

IMPORTANT RAILWAY MEETINGS.—Two important railway meetings have been held at Liverpool this week—first, for the purpose of submitting the conditional agreement entered into by the Liverpool and Manchester Company with the North Union Company, for the amalgamation of the line, and other minor matters; and, secondly, to obtain the sanction of the proprietors of the Grand Junction Company to the consolidation of the Manchester line with theirs. The latter proposal was agreed to.

THE WEATHER.—The weather continued to be excessively cold yesterday. Last night there was a cutting N.E. wind, and the thermometer was three degrees below freezing point. During the day the sky continued to amuse themselves in the parks, although the ice is not yet by any means secure.

ANOTHER STRAM-BOWING EXPLOSION.—We regret to learn that a steam-boiler explosion occurred on Monday, at Messrs. Lloyd and Foster's colliery, near Wednesbury, by which the engineer was killed.

THE EXPLOSION ON THE DOVER RAILWAY.—This unfortunate occurrence has attracted the serious attention of the officers and directors belonging to the line, as well as of the other metropolitan railway officials, several of whom inspected the spot yesterday for the purpose of collecting information, for it has not previously occurred that the boiler of a locomotive, while running, has exploded. On further search being made by Mr. Cubitt (the engineer of the line), Mr. George, and other gentlemen, it was discovered that the safety valve was badly down, from which it was inferred that the explosion arose solely from the circumstance of the engine-driver having neglected to open it. The steam then, having no means of escape, had ceased the casing to collapse, and the explosion that followed. The engine was quite new, and had only been shipped on to the line a few days since from Liverpool. The inquiry was expected to have taken place yesterday, but it being doubtful whether the body was lying in Mr. Payne's district or that of Mr. Carter, some time was lost before information was sent to the right corner, and the warrant for impounding the jury has not been received. The body of the engine-driver, which lies at the Bricklayers' Arms-station, is that of a fine young man upwards of six feet in height, and from the appearances it is probable that death was instantaneous. The neck was broken, and also the left arm where the wagon wheel passed over. The damage done to the conduct, engine, tender, and waggon, was roughly estimated at £2500. The stoker, Aaron Wilkinson, died last night. During the time that the men were employed in removing the waggon off the line, another accident occurred, which nearly cost an excavator his life. He, with several other men, were clearing the line, when a wagon slipped from the top of another one, and to save himself he ran forward and fell through one of the holes to the bottom of the viaduct. When picked up he was perfectly insensible.

MOOR INCENDIARY FIRES IN HERTFORDSHIRE.—On Monday night a fire broke out on the Parnassus Farm at King's Walden, near Stevenage, occupied by Mr. G. Roberts, an eminent agriculturist. The whole of the buildings, with the exception of one barn, a cow-house, and the farm-house, which stood at a distance from the barns, were reduced to ashes. The loss is estimated at £2000. Suspicion has fallen on two labouring men. On the following night (Tuesday) another fire occurred in a wheat stack on the Bedford-road, about a mile from Hitchin. Near the stack in which the fire originated were three other stacks, and the flames extended to these with great rapidity, ending with their total destruction. The loss is estimated at £750. These fires are believed to have been the work of incendiaries.

THE LATE BANK ROBBERY.—The retention of the Bank of England to call in all the £1000 notes dated 13th May last has been officially noted to all the banks by Mr. Hoher, with the view of adopting some measures for cancelling those notes from Messrs. Rogers.

A LAD SHOT BY HIS RELATIVES.—A youth, named Birch, was yesterday shot, while out in Chiswick fields shooting birds. The parties charged are the brother and cousin of the deceased, who were yesterday examined at Rammer-smith Police-court, and remanded, but adjourned to 11th. It appeared from the evidence of a witness that he was with deceased and the two prisoners at others that morning, about eleven o'clock, in the Home Fields, Chiswick. They had for some time been engaged in shooting birds. The prisoner Walker (the cousin), had the gun which belonged to the prisoner Birch, and was going to shoot a bird, when the prisoner Birch went up and laid hold of the gun to take it away from him. A scuffle then took place between the two prisoners as to which of them should have and fire the gun, which was loaded with shot, when the gun exploded, and the charge entered the body of the deceased, who was standing within a yard of witness, and about two or three yards from where the two prisoners were struggling about the gun.

THE FROST.

The severe weather has continued; the thermometer at seven o'clock on Sunday morning, at the Racing-house, Hyde Park, was 20 degrees (three degrees of frost); and during the day it varied only from 29 to 30 degrees, and at six o'clock the mercury was at 29 degrees, with a dense and cloudy sky. The parks and Kensington-gardens were throughout the day thronged by respectably-dressed persons.

The Serpentine River, in Hyde Park, was entirely frozen over; the ice was, however, not more than an inch and a half thick, and was, therefore, dangerous. During the day full 3000 persons ventured, at the risk of their lives, upon the ice, notwithstanding the repeated cautions they received from the men of the Royal Humane Society. Shortly after four o'clock an accident occurred, which had high proved fatal to no less than ten persons. The first that became immersed was a young man, named Charles Fox, residing at No. 3, Harris's-square, Oxford-street. The ice gave way in the centre, between the Receiving-house and the bridge, where there were six feet of water. Sparks and Hagley, two of the men, instantly hastened to his assistance, but on approaching the edge of the breakage, the ice gave way, and they also were immersed, the sinking men clinging to them. At that juncture several of the women and other persons came to their aid, when a third breakage took place, through which seven more persons were immersed. A sailor courageously jumped into the hole, and got out three, while the others were got out by the women. One of the men got out by him, named Martin Connell, living at No. 3, Barrett's-court, Oxford-street, was in a very faint state, and both he and Fox were instantly conveyed to the Receiving-house, where they received proper attention, and after a hot bath, &c., were able to proceed home. On the Strand-jond in Kensington-gardens, the ice round the edges was thin and insecure, although in the centre it was very firm. About 1500 persons were on it during the day without accident. On the Long-water, that portion of the ice between the islands and the Haywater end, was most secure. About 2500 persons, during the day, were on the upper part.

On the lake, in St. James's Park, there were also a great number of persons on the ice.

About four o'clock when some thousands of persons were engaged in sliding and skating, the ice gave way on the north side of the island, at the east end, and seven or eight men and boys were instantly immersed in fourteen feet of water.

Seaman Joseph Clapstone repaired to their assistance, with ladders, &c., but then, from the rottenness of the ice, giving way, he fearlessly sprang into the water, and, with the aid of one of the park-keepers and bystanders, succeeded in extricating five.

Some of the daily papers gave accounts, evidently furnished by the same reporter who every winter ascribes to induced terms, and indeed in the same phraseology, under the same head, "The Weather and the Parks," the various "moving accidents" upon the ice. Some persons having fallen into the water, the attempt is made to invert the account with a certain sort of interest, by stating that a hat or handkerchief was found upon the ice, and that men have been employed in dragging, "as it is feared some persons have met a watery grave." We have watched these statements from day to day, and are happy to find that here is no confirmation of the supposition. On Thursday, the alarming statement of this report dwindled down to the fact that an owner had been found for the property, which the writer describes in these terms in one of the morning papers:—"The hit and the blue handkerchief, and also the white handkerchief marked 'E. H., S.' which were found on the previous day while dragging for the bodies supposed to be under the ice, were yesterday identified, and claimed by T. Lane, of 88, Margaret-street, Cavendish-square." As statements like James's Park next the Palace. The ice was much broken on the water next the Horse Guards, and no persons were in consequence allowed to approach it. Skating was also resumed in Hyde Park, Regent's Park, and the Surrey Zoological Gardens.

SKATING IN THE REGENT'S PARK.

Up to the time of our going to press the frost continued, and the weather was intensely cold. It has been very foggy at intervals during the week. On Wednesday, a dense fog hung over the greater part of London all the morning, particularly in those parts of the metropolis adjacent to the course of the river sion by the ice breaking, the boats being brought to the spot, and the space between the planks being just over the aperture in the ice, the ice-man may, with greater facility, extricate the person in danger; the boat is also provided with a ladder, hook, and other implements.

We have received from a Correspondent the following

LINES,

WRITTEN UPON SEEING THE SKATING CLUB IN REGENT'S PARK.

Oh! slippery sport, that oft brings heads and heels
In closer contact than quite pleasant feels
To bodies corporate, or even slender
(An icy fall's not over nice or tender),
Thou art here, at last, attained thy true perfection,
Under the gallant Skating Club's protection!
Such whirled and darts—such swallow skims and turns—
With nose and fingers cold, our bosom burns,
In emulation warm, as hundred feet
Before our weeping eyes, like visions fleet!
Hail, noble art! ethereal science, hail!
A double power is on thy freezing gale;
The young, the gay, the rich, may all endure
Its icy wing; but oh, the houseless poor!

THE CATTLE SHOW OF THE SMITHFIELD CLUB.

The annual exhibition of prize cattle, extra stock, and agricultural implements, collected under the auspices of the Smithfield Club, was, on Wednesday, for the fifth year, opened to the public at the Horse Bazaar, King-street, Portman-square, and from an early hour in the morning up to a late hour in the evening, the vicinity of Baker-street and the surrounding locality was one continued scene of bustle and excitement, and it is computed that upwards of 10,000 persons visited the building.

At eleven o'clock in the forenoon the annual meeting of the Smithfield Cattle

HUMANE SOCIETY'S ICEMAN.

those to which we allude sometimes create pain and unnecessary alarm, we think it right to give this explanation respecting them.

An unpleasant accident took place at the west end of the lake, near Buckingham Palace, where the ice broke completely across from the northern to the southern shore, and about fifteen persons were suddenly thrown into ten feet of water.

The whole of these persons were, however, extricated and restored, and were enabled to proceed homeward.

The first snow storm of the season occurred on Sunday night, between seven and eight o'clock. Within one hour it fell rapidly, and in the outskirts of the metropolis, more particularly at Islington, Dalston, and the northern districts, the ground was speedily covered.

At seven o'clock on Monday morning, the mercury stood as low as 24, eight degrees below the freezing point.

The Parks were from an early hour again thronged.

It is computed that from 3000 to 10,000 persons were on the Serpentine during the day.

In the Regent's Park, the ice was visited by several thousand persons.

The number of persons on the lake of St. James's Park was limited, in consequence of the extreme insecurity of the ice in many places.

The frost during Tuesday was considerably diminished in severity, but there was by no means any appearance of a thaw.

The ice on the Long-water and Round-pond in Kensington-gardens was very strong and in good condition, and on them during the day the number of skaters was upwards of 2000. On the north bank of the Long-water, the Skating Club had their marquee erected, and several of the members skated on the ice during the afternoon. No accidents, we are happy to say, occurred.

On Tuesday about 2500 skaters ventured on the Serpentine, and the banks were thronged by respectably and fashionably-dressed persons. One accident only occurred during the day, and that took place about ten minutes to three o'clock, when a man named William Somers, who was engaged on the north bank of the Serpentine at the east end in cutting the ice for removal to the ice-works of Buckingham Palace for the use of her Majesty, became immersed in ten feet water, was speedily extricated.

On the lake in St. James's Park was on Tuesday about two inches in ice, and rather less dangerous than on the preceding day, but by no means during the day there were several thousand skaters, but no accident what-

Wednesday the number of persons on the Serpentine exceeded 3000, and no accidents occurred. On the Long Water the ice is very good, and the number of skaters there was about 3000. Amongst them were several of the members of the Skating Club, whose admirable skating attracted the attention of a number of the public assembly who witnessed it. The ice on the Round-pond was also very strong, and about 2000 persons skated there. No accidents occurred in the gardens during the day.

In St. James's Park the ice was very dangerous, and the number of skaters on the lake was limited. About a quarter to three o'clock p.m. a man named George Wilson, who was engaged on the north bank of the Serpentine at the east end in cutting the ice for removal to the ice-works of Buckingham Palace for the use of her Majesty, became immersed in ten feet water, was speedily extricated.

On the lake in St. James's Park was on Tuesday about two inches in ice, and rather less dangerous than on the preceding day, but by no means during the day there were several thousand skaters, but no accident what-

Wednesday the number of persons on the Serpentine exceeded 3000, and no accidents occurred. On the Long Water the ice is very good, and the number of skaters there was about 3000. Amongst them were several of the members of the Skating Club, whose admirable skating attracted the attention of a number of the public assembly who witnessed it. The ice on the Round-pond was also very strong, and about 2000 persons skated there. No accidents occurred in the gardens during the day.

In St. James's Park the ice was very dangerous, and the number of skaters on the lake was limited. About a quarter to three o'clock p.m. a man named George Wilson, who was engaged on the north bank of the Serpentine at the east end in cutting the ice for removal to the ice-works of Buckingham Palace for the use of her Majesty, became immersed in ten feet water, was speedily extricated.

On the lake in St. James's Park was on Tuesday about two inches in ice, and rather less dangerous than on the preceding day, but by no means during the day there were several thousand skaters, but no accident what-

Wednesday the number of persons on the Serpentine exceeded 3000, and no accidents occurred. On the Long Water the ice is very good, and the number of skaters there was about 3000. Amongst them were several of the members of the Skating Club, whose admirable skating attracted the attention of a number of the public assembly who witnessed it. The ice on the Round-pond was also very strong, and about 2000 persons skated there. No accidents occurred in the gardens during the day.

In St. James's Park the ice was very dangerous, and the number of skaters on the lake was limited. About a quarter to three o'clock p.m. a man named George Wilson, who was engaged on the north bank of the Serpentine at the east end in cutting the ice for removal to the ice-works of Buckingham Palace for the use of her Majesty, became immersed in ten feet water, was speedily extricated.

BOAT FOR SAVING PERSONS FROM DROWNING.

Thames. It hung over the town like a dull, opaque, dirty brown pall; candles and gas were in requisition in all these districts throughout nearly the whole day. In some of the northern districts the day was cloudy, but the fog only slightly obstructed business. The river navigation was nearly suspended.

In the Regent's Park the ice was about three inches in thickness, and the number of skaters 6000. No accidents occurred.

Our engraving represents the spirited scene, with some of the most distinguished members of the Skating Club; a sketch of one of the "ice-men" of the Humane Society; and a Double Boat, constructed this season, for the rescue of persons from drowning. It is of cast-iron, sinked, and consists of two boats, connected by cross planks, placed at such a distance, that in cases of submer-

SMITHFIELD CATTLE-SHOW.—RED STOCK DEER FROM WINDSOR.

THE SMITHFIELD CLUB CHRISTMAS CATTLE SHOW.

ARRIVAL OF PRIZE CATTLE AT THE BAZAAR, BAKER-STREET.

Club took place in one of the rooms of the Bazaar, Earl Spencer, the President, in the chair. The meeting was very fully attended by the members, and amongst a large number of distinguished agriculturists present, were his Grace the Duke of Richmond, his Grace the Duke of Bedford, the Hon. Captain Spencer, Mr. Pusey, M.P., Earl Radnor, Mr. E. J. Barnard, M.P., &c. The report as to the state of the affairs of the club was read by the secretary, Mr. B. T. Brandreth Gibbs, and was unanimously approved and adopted. The award of the judges, with respect to the cattle, stock, &c., exhibited this year, was then read and confirmed, and several gentlemen congratulated the Club on the general excellence of the animals produced for competition as compared with former years.

The club then proceeded to the settlement of various questions in dispute concerning the improper entries of cattle, &c., and Earl Spencer having been unanimously re-elected president of the club for the ensuing year, and the Duke of Richmond and Bedford, and several noblemen and gentlemen, vice-presidents, Mr. B. T. Brandreth Gibbs was unanimously re-elected to the office of secretary. After a vote of thanks to the noble chairman, the meeting broke up, and the members of the club proceeded to view the various specimens of cattle, at which they expressed themselves generally much gratified.

Soon after the opening of the bazaar to the public, considerable competition was exhibited among the butchers and salesmen to obtain possession of those animals which had secured to their owners the highest prizes.

Prince Albert's beautiful polled ox, of the Scotch breed, bred by his Royal Highness at the Flemish Farm, Windsor, was purchased by Mr. Rannister, of Threadneedle-street, butcher to her Majesty, for the sum of 60 guineas. The ox which obtained the first prize of £20 and the silver medal, bred by Mr. R. Smith, of Hurley-on-the-Hill, near Oakham, Rutland, was purchased by Mr. Minton, of Windsor, purveyor to her Majesty, at the enormous price of 70 guineas. In class 2, the 4 years and 8 months old Hereford ox, belonging to Mr. J. T. Senior, of Broughton-house, near Aylesbury, and bred by Mr. James Nash, of Aconbury, near Hereford, which obtained the second-class prize of £20, was sold to Mr. Joseph Armfield, of Brook-street, Bond-street, for £60. The prices of the other prize oxen sold varied between 40 and 60 guineas.

In class 6, the short-horned cow bred by Earl Spencer, and which obtained land, of Oxford-market; and in class 16, Prince Albert's pen of pigs, which obtained the 2nd prize of £5, was purchased by Mr. Smelter, of Knightsbridge. The purchasers of the South-down and other sheep, bred by the Duke of Richmond and Bedford, for which prizes were obtained, have not yet transpired.

Those animals which had obtained the highest prizes appeared throughout the day to attract the earnest attention of the visitors, but the most prominent objects of interest appeared to be the Scotch ox belonging to his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the splendid deer brought up by Mr. Pook, of Windsor, and bred in the Windsor Great Park.

The whole of the arrangements for the accommodation of the public, both with respect to the cattle department and that in which the implements of agriculture are exhibited, were excellent in the extreme.

The show this year surpasses both in numbers and the quality of the things exhibited any former years. The Leicester sheep and the Southdown sheeps of the first quality, and the oxen and cows are many of them very superb specimens. The pigs are also good. It may be seen that his Royal Highness Prince Albert has obtained the second prize for pigs. Lord Spencer has not been so successful as in some former years, though he has obtained a prize. The Duke of Bedford has obtained several prizes, and the Duke of Richmond is also amongst the winners. The implements of husbandry and the other things connected with husbandry are more than usually numerous.

On Thursday the attendance was much greater than on the preceding days. Several purchases of sheep and cattle from the Extra Stock were made by gentlemen who attended from various parts of England for the purpose. The butchers in London and its vicinity were also very prominent amongst the buyers. The council issued a notice to the effect that a silver medal will be awarded to the butcher that shall lay out the largest sum in the purchase of cattle, not, however, including the Extra Stock. His Royal Highness Prince Albert's stock was the subject of much interest amongst all the visitors. Some sheep of the south

PRINCE ALBERT'S ANGUS POLLED OX.

MR. HUDSON'S 3 YEARS AND 10 MONTHS OLD HEREFORD OX.—PRIZE £15.

MR. SENIOR'S 4 YEARS AND 8 MONTHS OLD HEREFORD OX.—PRIZE £20.

Adorned with Eight Escutcheons of her late Royal Highness's Arms.

Gentleman Usher.	Garter Principal King at Arms.	Gentleman Usher.
Supporter to the Chief Mourner, Veiled.	THE CHIEF MOURNER, Her train borne by Miss Waldegrave, Veiled.	Supporter to the Chief Mourner, Veiled.

The Executors and Executrixes named in the will of her late Royal Highness.—The Hon. H. Legge, Mr. George Banks, Curator Baron, the Lady Alicia Gordon, and Miss Cotes.

THE LADIES INVITED.—Lady Georgiana Bathurst, Lady in Waiting on the Duchess of Gloucester; Lady Fanny Howard, Lady in Waiting on the Duchess of Kent; Lady Caroline Murray; and Miss Vyse.

THE GENTLEMEN INVITED.—Sir John Mordaunt Wilson, of the Queen Dowager's household; Baron Knebeck, Esquerry to the Duke of Cambridge; Colonel Sir George Cooper, Bart., First Esquerry to the Duchess of Kent; the Hon. Captain Liddell, First Esquerry to the Duchess of Gloucester; Lord Wrottesley; Captain Feild, R.N.; the Hon. Major Legge; the Hon. Captain Waldegrave; the Hon. and Rev. Charles Leslie Courtenay; and the Rev. Mr. Cotes.

The Lord Chamberlain of her Majesty's Household, had on his right Sir William Martins, Gentleman Usher, and on his left Sir Noel Harris, Gentleman Usher.

The Pall was supported at the feet by Mrs. George Banks and Mrs. Morier, and at the head by the Hon. Mrs. Henry Legge and the Hon. Mrs. William Cust.

1. Sir Charles Young, Garter Principal King of Arms, carrying his Sceptre and wearing his Badge of Office, was supported on each side by a Gentleman Usher.

The Chief Mourner was the Countess of Gainsborough, veiled, her train borne by Mrs. Waldegrave, veiled. The countess was supported on the right by Lady Gardiner, veiled, and on the left by the Hon. Mrs. Brund, veiled.

Arrived within the choir, the coffin was placed upon trestles near the centre, the feet being turned towards the altar. The coronet and cushion were placed upon the coffin. The chief mourner sat at the head, the supporters on each side of her. The supporters of the pall sat near on either side, and the Lord Chamberlain at the feet of the corpse. The other members of the procession took their usual places. The choristers occupied their usual positions. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, wearing his Field-Marshal's uniform, with a mourning scarf, occupied his stall as a Knight of the Garter. The Marquis of Exeter stood on the right of the Prince, at the south side of the choir, wearing his insignia of the Garter. Sir Edward Bowater was next the Marquis of Exeter, and the Earl of Hardwicke and Colonel B. Drummond stood at a short distance to his right. On the north side were the officers of the Guards and some other gentlemen who took part in the ceremony. The rest of those who had formed the procession through the nave stood on the floor in the body of the choir.

PRINCESS SOPHIA OF GLOUCESTER, DIED 29 NOV<sup>R</sup> 1844.

The burial service was performed by the Dean of Windsor, Dr. Hobart.

During the service the coffin had remained where it was first deposited, near the centre of the choir. It was now brought down to the grave, near the Sovereign's stall, and, the pall and coronet having been removed, it was lowered. While it was being brought down towards the grave the choir sang—"Man that is born of a woman," by Croft, with the verse by Purcell, "Thou knowest, Lord, the secrets of our hearts." The Dean, who now stood over the grave, then read the prayer, "For as much as it has pleased Almighty God." After which the choir sang—"I heard a voice from Heaven." Then the Dean read the Lord's Prayer and the prayer, "Almighty God, with whom do live." After which the choir sang the second anthem, "Her body is buried in peace, but her name liveth evermore."—Handel. The ceremony concluded with the final prayers.

The Garter King at Arms then proclaimed her late Royal Highness's style, according to the usual form, and while those who had been present at the ceremony were leaving the chapel, Dr. Elvey, the organist, played the "Dead March."

The choir consisted of Messrs. Salmon, French, Palmer, Harris, Mitchell, Turner, Mudge, Bridgewater, Foster, James Mitchell, and Smith, assisted by the 10 chorister boys. The choral parts of the service were chanted in a manner fully bearing out the high character of this choir. The whole of the musical arrangements were under the direction of Dr. Elvey, the organist of St. George's Chapel.

The whole ceremonial was as private as it could be, consistently with custom and the rank of the deceased.

The attendance of the military within the chapel was on this occasion dispensed with.

The musical service, which was very beautifully performed, was chiefly selected from the score written expressly for the funeral of Queen Caroline in 1737.

At the conclusion of the service the public, previously admitted by tickets to the nave, were permitted to enter the choir and view the coffin as it rested, which remained stationary a few feet below the surface of the ground.

The body was deposited in the vault of the Gloucester branch of the Royal Family, which is situated near the Sovereign's stall, on the right, upon entering the choir. The ceremony was concluded at half-past nine o'clock.

The tomb in which the remains of her late Royal Highness were deposited is at the south-western extremity of the choir, and close to the stall of the Sovereign of the Order of the Garter. At the eastern end of the vault, which is between seven and eight feet square, are eight catacombs to contain that number of coffins—two tiers for three in each, and the upper tier to contain two. In the lower tier are deposited the bodies of the following members of the Royal Family; we give the names as they are emblazoned on the stones in front of the respective catacombs:—

CEREMONY OF LYING IN STATE AT THE BANGER'S HOUSE, ON MONDAY LAST.

DEPARTURE OF THE FUNERAL PROCESSION, ON TUESDAY.

William, Duke of Gloucester, 1805.
 Maria, Duchess of Gloucester, 1807.
 William Frederick, Duke of Gloucester, 1834.

The remains of the Princess Caroline Augusta Maria of Gloucester, the sister of her late Royal Highness, who died in infancy, in 1775, are deposited on the left hand of the second tier.

ARRIVAL OF THE FUNERAL PROCESSION AT ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL, WINDSOR.

Richard and John Clark, Coppersmiths by appointment, 124, Strand, opposite Somerset House. Their Illustrated Catalogue may be had gratis, or sent to any post-free Merablisland 1918.

Evening of Wednesday, the 11th, about seven o'clock, being the highest of December, was appointed for the passage of the Great Britain through the Cumberland basin, the last barrier to her free access to the sea. To

Now this, the bridge which crossed the lock, and a portion of its masonry, had been removed; and, all things being thus prepared, at the above early hour, notwithstanding the severity of the frost and the cutting of a brisk easterly wind, tens of thousands had assembled to witness the great labour. They were, however, doomed to disappointment; for the tide not having risen as high as was expected, on the first attempt of its being evident that there was not likely to be sufficient water, the great vessel was hauled back. No sooner had the water fallen, than large gangs of masons were set to work, under the scientific and practical eye of Mr. Brunel, to open the space for her passage on the evening's tide; and everything was done to render the vessel's draught of water as light as possible.

As in the morning, so at night, Captain Hobbs was obliged to make a dash at the lock, at the very last moment of the tide's rising, which it did to thirty-three feet and no more. The following details of the mighty spectacle, and of the trial trip, on Thursday morning, are from the British Review:

"We cannot attempt to describe in appropriate language the splendid appearance of the Great Britain as she entered the lock, and passed as it were through the crowds of people assembled on the occasion. On either side of the lock broad barrels of tar, with very short intervals between them, to the distance of more than 200 yards, the illumination from which, on the giant ship, the water, and the faces of the multitude, is not to be described. She passed through at a rapid pace, touching nothing but the rail of one of the bridges, which was hooked by the anchor and carried away like a thread. She was moored by the side of the wing wall outside the lock for the night, to be ready for her passage down in the morning.

At about seven o'clock in the morning, vessels began to arrive from the country, and by eight o'clock every possible place where there was standing room seemed to be on the night before to be occupied by anxious gazers. At about ten minutes past eight, the Sampson steaming, of sixty horses power, in which was Captain Claxton, R.N., was seen to take her in tow, and very soon after the word was given to turn ahead. Slowly and majestically, she left the entrance amidst the cheers of thousands, which were repeated by those on board. It was extraordinary to see with what ease she appeared to gather way, and to see, even before two other steamers were attached, one on either side to her quarters, although the flood tide, which was against her, had not done running.

After passing the Hotwell-house, the steamers alluded to added their powers to those of the Sampson, and the crowds of people who accompanied her by the side of the river were very soon brought to a run. She passed Round Point with the greatest ease, and all the other points of the river, and reached Kingroad, a distance of nearly seven miles, in an hour and eight minutes, three-fourths of the way without any tide in her favour. Considering that she was towed by steam-boats whose united power did not exceed one hundred and twenty horses, it is to be assumed that the Great Britain could pass through the water upon the most approved principle.

Having arrived at Kingroad, preparations were made for putting her engines in motion. They were pronounced to be ready between eleven and twelve, and the steam tugs, which up to that time had been holding her against the wind and tide, were ordered to let go, and the word given to turn ahead. It was not deemed prudent to put the engines at first to the test of a severe trial, and for some time they were kept going at about seven revolutions, which were allowed gradually to increase up to the time of her arrival at the Holms, when they had reached between eleven and twelve, the speed of the ship being in the proper proportion to the progress of the error, at this time it having reached about eight knots. Long before she arrived at the Holms she had left behind her the steam tugs; the other, well known to be the latest steam paddle-boat out of the port, more than held her own up to this time. Near the Holms this gallant ship was twice turned round, and she came round in much less time, and in a much smaller circle, than from her extreme length, and the strong breeze blowing against her could have been anticipated.

A severe storm threatening it was deemed prudent to put her head homewards, and it was at this time that she was anchored before dark. She returned at about the same speed until the time near Blackmore, about four miles from Kingroad. The last S-moon was at this time, about half past four, alongside of her. The engines were then allowed rather to exceed water revolutions, which is equal to four-fifths of the screw; the speed of the ship suddenly increasing to better than fifteen knots, when she left her little competitor rapidly behind. She came to an anchor about five o'clock; and we understood, on board, from the scientific gentlemen concerned, that on doing so remains on their minds as to her being able to accomplish from twelve to fifteen knots, without the aid of her canvas, none of which was burnt on the trial. The ship, of course, was eight per cent; the loss, we were told, of paddle-works in sea-going steamers under similar circumstances would have been 50 per cent. The steam was cut off at a foot, and six of the three were not lighted at all, so that even at twenty revolutions or upwards, there is no doubt there will be plenty of speed. The driving chains and the shaft of the screw made an noise whatever. In the fore-cabin nobody would have known that an engine was at work, and in the after part it was necessary to feel the pillars with the hand to ascertain whether there was any vibration.

It may be well to state, as an answer to the objections that have been made to the navigation of our port, that a vessel of such vast dimensions as the Great Britain went down on a spring tide, and came up at dead low water, having gone on the last of the tide, and came back on the first of the flood.

With all our boats and all the Directors and the Company upon the banks of the great river at night. Like many others we were, we may have felt it a little up on many points; but it is now our conviction that this ship is destined not only to work a great revolution in naval architecture, but, in conjunction with our well-known Great Western, to remunerate the Company for the risk they have incurred, and the anxiety they have gone through."

At three o'clock on Thursday, a large party set down, in the saloon of the ship, to an excellent cold collation, which being despatched, several toasts were drunk; such as the health of Mrs. Miller, who had christened the Great Western and the Great Britain; of the Duke of Devonshire, Captain Hobbs, and Mr. Smith (the patron of the work), and last, though not least, "the health of Captain Claxton, R.N.," was received with overwhelming cheers. "He was," said the British Review, "the life of the meeting, as he has been the very soul of the undertaking, and most sincerely do we rejoice with him on the magnificent result of his unwearied exertions." Shortly after the meeting broke up.

The ship having arrived at Kingroad, the visitors landed at about seven o'clock.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARISIANA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

"Germany," the poem of which I spoke to you before, as a satirical witty work, by Heine, residing here, creates a great sensation in Paris, where one translation has already been published, and others are handed about in society. The following, translated from the original German, is a sample of the more ludicrous parts of the poem:

Poignant had a familiar spirit—
A little red man would Napoleon visit—
Upon the eve of events and great occasions—
A little, perhaps, or a foreign incursion.
Socrates, too, had among them say,
To do his bidding night and day.
I too, when writing at night's lone hour,
Behold a spirit of might and power
Stand silent behind me; and loud and bright
Shines under his mantle all cheering light.
I bid him stand, with eye like the star,
Wandering and shining in E her far;
Yet silent and still he'd stand the distance,
N'er disturbing my labours with slightest resistance.
And time past on, and I did him quite,
Till the Spirit again, one moonlight night,
Dug my steps to send Cologne.
"Nath the Minister's shadow cold and lone,
And I turned appalled, nor longer could bear
His marble aspect and eyes' cold glare."
"Spoke! what yet thou wilt me, pray!"
Why, when I bid thee move a peep,
And lightning thoughts on mine obey,
Thou standest, strange being, ever behind?
Why 'neath the mantle's terrible shadow
Thou light, like the spirit of holy mine?"
And the Spirit answered, creased and frown,
"Pray don't be pathetic, for this is mine hour,
Of the Past no phantom or phantasm,
Nath thou art, and I am, and I am, and I am,
Your mind's reflections, your every thought,
By me to future is minute brought.
I create slowly, but surely set it;
Thou art the Judge—Examiner, I;
At Rome, as you see, in days of yore,
An axe was carried the Consul's door.
Thou too, hast the hour, but he follows behind
With the axe of the headman's."

Then linger not longer; hence! forward! haste!
Thou man of strange thoughts, haste!"

One need not be conjuror to be able to predict that the Paris season, which formerly descended so exactly upon our own, will soon run back and break with it, to the glory of both. The fashionable private society have not yet begun the diplomatic alone are in full, growing numbers. The houses, the most famous, the most picturesque, are those of Lady Clarendon, Countess of Argyll, Countess of Bessborough, and the Prince de Ligne. The Countess of Argyll is the most powerful in her class. She it was that first introduced in Paris, during the last winter, the whole of the day's through, although daylight is nearly trying for the members of our Parisian families. These morning balls soon became the rage, but only looked by all classes on account of the economy of illumination, they were now but a fashion, and even the accomplished Countess would not revive them at her country seat at Ayr, near Paris, the season before last.

The inclement weather victimising the streets thronging at this season to Paris, the present is a glorious time for the triumph of civilization. However, by the Hydropathic, and Mesmerism, have now entered the ranks of the Parisian gossamers. Now the system in vogue is that of the well-known Magnet, a great natural philosopher, and a still greater rascal, and carrying the most singular eccentricity in all his opinions. He avers that the diseases of the body depend upon the two great influences of parasitic animals preying upon our organs, and, although invisible, as demonstrably present as the miasma we behold in a drop of water, at your Polychrome. His universal passions and solid's example, which destroys these invisible enemies, and the cancer must be inhaled. You therefore see, in all directions in the streets of Paris, persons moving about, having quills in their mouths; in these quills are bits of camphor, which they inhale with the air they breathe. Thousands of persons flock to consult Raspail, and all his advice is gratuitous, which renders it probable he will have no disciples amongst the doctors.

Magnetism affords, at Paris, as elsewhere, a fertile subject of discussion, and the adepts, who everywhere form a larger portion of the community, are now triumphing in the failure of a recent experiment, made by two zealous believers. They presented themselves a short time ago before the Academie des Sciences, affirming that it was possible by the mere influence of will to imbue a piece of iron with a large quantity of magnetic fluid. M. Arago was delighted by that learned body to examine into this phenomenon. The experiment failed, but these gentlemen attributed its non-success wholly to the influence of the determined scepticism of M. Arago. A French Abbe, M. Lombert, has recently published a book on the so-called science, defending it from the attacks of doubters, on the one hand, and the disapprobation of the church on the other.

I told you in a former letter, how much the number of sudden deaths, which have lately taken place in high society, had afflicted every one. Another is now added to the number. The Duc de Lorges, who, as you remember, had his amiable wife shortly after her return from England, where she had, with her daughter, shared the sorrows of the Duke de Richelieu, has now sustained another heavy affliction. The Comtesse du San d'Altenheim, his sister, died at the chateau de Font Perthes, after an illness of three days, in the arms of her mother, the Dowager Duchess de Lorges. Her funeral was attended by crowds of weeping peasants. By this event, the great legitimist families of La Rochefoucauld and Cister are placed in mourning.

Another death has contributed to cast a gloom over Parisian society, especially that of a faubourg St. Germain. It is that of the young and talented Prince Elim Tcherny, the author of a collection of French poetry, as yet unnoticed, and of a tragedy destined to the genius of Moliere. He has been carried off by an inflammation of the chest. One of the most distinguished and witty of our poets, M. Emile Deschamps, has undertaken the editing of these works of this youthful and lamented author.

The faubourg St. Germain has another cause for agitation. Prince Robert de Montmorency, who bears one of the proudest and most illustrious names in France, has been brought before the Police Correctionnelle, and sentenced to a month of imprisonment, and a fine of a thousand francs. You heard of the late trial of the noblemen, for endeavouring to cause sedition among the people. He was then acquitted; but the French Government, unwilling to lose hold of him, have now accused him of a delinquency which falls under the cognizance of the police—that of distributing, without a licence, a quantity of books of the Duc de Richelieu, which had been already placed under the ban of Government. These books had been executed by the elegant and handsome fine of Paris, Countess of St. Germain, a successful sculptor, although a rich man. His principal performance is the statue of William of Nassau, in one of the principal squares of the Hague.

The danger to which one of our staples has been lately exposed, and her rescue by a preux chevalier, afford another topic of conversation in Parisian society. This lady, taking an excursion with a friend, in her carriage, which was harnessed to a baron, and drawn by two horses—the one on which the position rode, was frightened by the horse of a cabman who was passing, and after throwing his rider, set off at a full gallop, dragging his fellow horse along with him. The danger was extreme; the carriage threatened every moment to be shattered to pieces, when a young and fashionably-attired gentleman who was passing, rushed forwards, seized the horses' heads, and although the frightful rapidity with which they were going caused him to be dragged forwards some yards, to the imminent risk of his life, he managed at last to master and to stop them. After having calmed the horses, and given them back to the care of the young pillion, who was more frightened than hurt, he did not wait to receive the thanks of the grateful and terrified ladies, but disappeared immediately. It has been since ascertained that this courageous individual is a young and noble dandy, the Marquis de St. Jaeger.

According to one of our newspapers, M. Guizot has been attacked by an affection of the larynx, so severe that his doctors do not answer for his cure should he persist in sustaining his official duties this season.

The Marquis Joseph-Napoleon Pignatelli, grandson of Murat, the King of Naples, and brother-in-law of Napoleon, has lately married the Princess Frida de Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, daughter of the reigning Prince. The young couple reside at Rome.

The Parisians amuse themselves with punning on a late threatened collision of two Royal personages—the King of Hanover and the Duke of Brunswick, both travelling on the same railway in Germany, in two trains going in different directions, an accident like the late deplorable one detailed by your newspapers appeared inevitable, but the carriages were most fortunately stopped in time to avoid the danger.

The Royal Family are now all assembled, including the King and Queen of the Belgians, but the arrival of the youthful Duchess d'Angoulême amongst them must have appeared to her somewhat insignificant. I told you last week of the disasters of her passage; the weather continued unpropitious to the end; and on the morning after her arrival at Paris, the eyes of the young bride—accustomed to the cloudless skies and eternal sunshine of her own land—were greeted with a fog so dense, that it would have caused any boulevard of London, and a whole sheeting of snow, which had not even respected the dwelling of Royalty, or the Temple of Hyem. Her reception, besides, lacked its intended gaiety, in consequence of a sudden postponement of the Mise au Pot-au-feu. It was certainly remarkable that these Royal marriages, whose honeymoon had been thus celebrated—those of the Duchess de Berry; the Princess Marie of Wurtemberg, a daughter of Louis Philippe, who died early; and the Duchess of Orleans—should have all terminated so unhappily.

ENGLISH THEATRICALS IN PARIS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

On Monday evening the Salle Ventoura was crowded to excess to witness the performance of "Othello." The selection of this tragedy for the debut of Marreedy before the critical world of Paris, was in bad taste; if it were necessary to open the season with a work of Shakespeare's, it should not have been one in which the fat of the London public had declared the actor's incapacity. The result proved our anticipations to be well founded. The applause which greeted the performance was solely due to the genius of the author, and in compliment to the spirit of the entrepreneur, accepting, indeed, the last acts, which were played by Miss Helen Faucit, with a simple energy and a purity, which made the climax of the tragedy her own. Her appealing call in the fourth act in the scene of Othello's rage, was the only great and involuntary burst of cheering fairly won throughout the performance. The great improvement to Miss Faucit since Mr. Marreedy's departure from America is incredible. In juvenile tragedy, indeed, she now stands pre-eminently alone. The great impression of the evening was, unquestionably, made by her graceful and interesting impersonation of the gentle Desdemona. The performance did not commence till eight, and it was half past eleven before they had concluded. Amongst the elite of literature and art who studied the brilliantly fashionable audience, we recognized Jules Janin, Alexandre Dumas, Dupuy, Labrousse, Anna Tholme, Gauthier, Theophile Gautier, Osborne, Berlioz, the Comtesse Merlin, &c. &c.

The deeps with which this correspondence is sent precludes the possibility of doing justice to an illustration of the performance; in our next, we shall give a criticism of the performances up to Wednesday, with illustrations.

FRANCE.

Our intelligence from France comprises several articles of interest. The insurrectionary movement at Lyons has been suppressed, but considerable excitement prevails there and in several other cities. The Duke d'Angoulême, with his newly-married bride, had arrived in Paris. When they reached the Tuilleries, the King and the Queen of the French descended to the foot of the grand staircase to receive their new daughter-in-law. All the members of the Royal Family were assembled at the Palace. According to the Commerce, about the 15th of January, the Prince and Princess de Joinville will, owing to the delicate state of the health of the latter, quit Paris, and repair for the winter to a country-house hired for them at Hérès. The Nouvelles de Marseille gives the following portrait of the young Duchess d'Angoulême:—"The Duchess d'Angoulême is a blonde and rather fragile young woman, with a lively countenance and a haughty nose. All who are admitted to her presence speak in the highest terms of her excellent disposition and her high moral qualifications. Her toilet is charmingly simple; over a white dress her Royal Highness wears a white scarf variegated with pink, and a blushing rose adorns her beautiful hair." The King and Queen of the Belgians are also now on a visit to Paris.

The Monsieur publishes the terms of the treaty between France and Morocco, but it is not necessary to recapitulate them, as the main points were mentioned at the time of the conclusion of the treaty.

The Journal des Debats of Monday contains a sort of official disclaimer of the Gazette Francoise, the newspaper established at Tahiti by Captain Bruat, and condemns the tone adopted in that publication towards the English. It is reasonable to suppose that the French Ministry are annoyed at the insults heaped by this journal on the English, to which, probably, they give no sanction whatever; but of a dissent with the paper was established by Captain Bruat, and is under his control, there can be no doubt.

The celebrated church of St. Ruvache, at Paris, narrowly escaped total destruction by fire on Monday evening, owing to the carelessness of a workman, who left a lighted candle in the organ-loft. The fire commenced in that part of the building; it destroyed the organ, one of the most celebrated in Europe, but the pictures and other valuable property were saved, owing to the great caution of the fire-brigade and the authorities.

The Constitutionnel says, and the marriage of Queen Isabella II. with the Count of Trajano is finally decided on; and that the affair has been definitively arranged by the Prince de Joinville and the Duke d'Angoulême during the trip to Spain. The Constitutionnel thinks that this marriage, instead of paralyzing Spain, will be the signal for a renewal of the civil war, by destroying the hopes of the Carlists, and rendering them desperate. It also disapproves of the marriage, as likely to lead France into further difficulties, while it cannot be expected to obtain the sanction of the northern powers.

Another accident occurred on the left bank of the Versailles Railway between Giverville and St. Denis, on Monday, in consequence of the pin breaking which connected the bar of the longest carriage with that of the passenger's carriage. The train was thrown off the rails. The engineer was killed on the spot and five passengers were more or less wounded. The accident did not cause any interruption to the traffic.

The Journal des Debats of Tuesday contains an article upon the prospects of the coming Session, which may be considered as an official manifestation of the confidence of Ministers that their opponents will not be able to defeat them. The Debats contends that M. Dupin ought to be re-elected President of the Chamber, instead of M. Naquet, but, at the same time, it does not consider the question as altogether a Ministerial one. It says—"It is evident that it is not upon the Presidency that this question will be tried. The Ministry will no more be saved if the Chamber elect M. Naquet, than it will be lost if M. Dupin is elected. The votes are perfectly free and one reason alone remains to be weighed—that of capacity. We are far from saying that M. Naquet is an incapable President—we only consider M. Dupin to be more capable; and as it is important that the Chamber should be presided over by the greatest capability, we think that the majority should give its votes in preference to M. Dupin. We mean no more."

The thaw which continued in Paris, and throughout France. The ice which had formed in the rivers Seine and Marne had broken up, unaccompanied by any unpleasant incident.

SPAIN.

We are glad to find by our accounts from Madrid that the Government is now disposed to adopt a more lenient course in reference to the late insurrectionary movements. Colonel Rengifo, Captain Pedro Garcia, and Surgeon Manuel Arilla, who after the sentence of the court-martial held at Madrid, had been placed on parole previous to their execution, were, after a meeting of the Cabinet Council, pardoned by the Queen.

A letter from Figueras of the 13th inst., states that the partisans of Espartero were assembling on the neighbouring frontier to enter Languedoc, and that General Somoza appeared to be their principal chief. The latter was assisted by an aide-de-camp of Espartero, who had hitherto eluded the surveillance of the French police. On the same day a battalion of the regiment of Saragossa entered the town. The inhabitants of the country were animated with the best possible spirit, and were only awaiting orders to rise en masse against the rebels.

On the 10th the news reached Madrid of a popular movement having taken place at Cadix. It is stated to have been checked without bloodshed.

No intelligence whatever has been obtained respecting Zaragoza. A letter from Bayona says—"Twenty inhabitants of the lately revolted districts of Eche, Anso, and Sireak, Upper Arragon, arrived at the French frontier town of Beldous on the 6th, and presented themselves before the Police Commissary. They looked the very picture of famine, cold, and despair, having passed several days in the mountains almost without food, and exposed to all the rigours of the present season. Twelve of the inhabitants of Eche and Anso, who took a part in the insurrection of those places, have been shot by the order of the Captain-General of Arragon."

PORTUGAL.

We have accounts from Lisbon to the 10th inst. The discussions in the Chamber of Peers have lost their interest for the present; but the Chamber of Deputies has been engaged with some propositions on local matters, which excited some attention.

A sumptuous entertainment was given a few days ago by her Majesty, at the Palace of Belem, to celebrate the birthday of her brother, the Emperor of Brazil. All the Ministers of State were present, as well as the corps diplomatique, together with many of the nobility and persons of distinction; a good deal of pomp was exhibited with the formality of the occasion. The Queen and Royal family continued to inhabit the palace above mentioned, owing to the alterations at the Necessidades not yet being completed, and it is expected that it will be their residence during the winter.

TURKEY.

A private letter from Constantinople dated Nov. 27, has reached us, which states that considerable sensation had been caused by the sudden departure of the English Ambassador, Sir Stratford Canning. There had lately been several discussions between our Ambassador and the Grand Vizier upon points respecting which there was some difference; for instance, the recent conduct of the Porte of Trebizond towards the British Consul there, and the alarm of the capital under a report of an important rupture. On the other hand, it is stated that the Ambassador had nearly departed on a shooting excursion to the Dardanelles, and had availed himself of the departure of an English vessel which had sailed to obtain a supply of stores and provisions.

UNITED STATES.

ARRIVAL OF THE REIYANNA.—The Hannibal steamer has reached Liverpool with New York papers to the 20th ult. The news, however, is unimportant. The message of the Acting President was expected at New York on the 20th inst., and will probably reach England by the next vessel, as it generally arrives about this time of year.

New Orleans papers contain later dates from Texas. The Clarksville (Texas) Northern Standard of October 16, contains a paragraph from another Texas paper, in which it is said that President Houston has received another communication from Santa Anna, of a pacific character. It is further stated that the contemplated invasion of Texas by Mexico is abandoned, and it is settled that England and France have offered to obtain an acknowledgment of Texas independence, on condition that Mexico shall have the right to renew the war whenever Texas offers herself to the United States.

There was little alteration in stocks at New York. The cotton market was dull.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

ARMY MOVEMENTS.—The following removals of troops have just taken place, namely, the 6th Foot from Chester, en route to Ireland; the 8th Foot from Bolton to Chester, to succeed the 6th Foot; the 16th Foot from Dublin to Cork; and the 56th Foot has arrived at Liverpool, from Dublin.

DEATH OF REAR-ADMIRAL EDWARD ROBERTS.—An effluence has been removed of the death of the above gallant flag officer, after a protracted illness. He died at Liphm, near Plymouth, last week, at the age of 62 years. The deceased admiral had been in the naval service of his country about fifty years.

DEATH OF SIR JOHN JAMISON, Kt.—Intelligence has been received of the demise of the above venerable knight, well known some years back as an eminent physician in the navy, and one of the inspectors of hospitals and fleets. He died at his villa, near Sydney, on the 27th of June last.

It is rumored in the naval circles that Admiral Sir Charles Ogle, Bart., is likely to succeed Admiral Sir David Milne, G.C.B., as Commander-in-Chief at Plymouth.

THE EXPECTED REVEREND.—It is confidently said that the long-expected brief will take place at the commencement of the new year. This has been long due to the army, and we are sure that it will be graciously received.

PORTSMOUTH.—The Royal yacht Victoria and Albert is complete, all her ventilating apparatus, which is being fitted under the superintendence of Mr. Reid. It is expected she will leave the dock and make trial of her speed after her alterations in a few days. The St. Vincent, 120, progresses rapidly at her berth in dock. It is expected she will be able to leave in about two months.

PORTSMOUTH, Tuesday.—A court martial was held to-day upon Mr. Bell, mate of the Excellent, charged by Captain St. Thomas Hastings, with dereliction of duty in abandoning himself from his watch on the 7th inst. Evidence was given, and the court pronounced the prisoner guilty. He was ordered to be severely reprimanded, and to remain on the mainmast for two years more than the ordinary term before advancement is a possibility.

COUNTRY NEWS.

DAERMOUTH ELECTION.—The nomination, it is said, will take place on Monday next, and the polling on the day following.

PROPOSED INCORPORATION OF BRIGHTON.—A large adjourned meeting was held at Brighton on Monday, upon the subject of the proposed incorporation of Brighton. After a long discussion the proposition was rejected by a considerable majority.

EXPLOSION OF FIRE-DAWK.—Another of these accidents took place on Friday last, at the Edwards Colliery, Pen-y-rhiid (Wales), when five persons were severely burnt. It appears that the explosion took place in consequence of Simon Davies (the manager) and his son going into an old stall, which had been discontinued working, with a naked candle.

MURDER OF A POLICE OFFICER AT LIVERPOOL.—A brutal outrage was committed at an early hour on Sunday morning last at Liverpool, upon two police officers named Fairclough and Price, by a young man, named William Jones. Jones had been dreadfully abusing his sister in a house situated in Whitfield-street, Toxteth-park, in that town. The two officers intended to restore peace, and they prevailed upon them to re-enter the house, out of which Jones had violently driven his sister. Immediately afterwards, however, Jones came out with a poker in his hand, and suddenly struck both the officers over the head. Serious injuries were the consequence, from which Fairclough died on Monday afternoon, and Price was disabled. Tuesday the coroner was remanded by the magistrate to decide the issue of the coroner's inquest.

A MURDER COMMITTED TWO YEARS AGO.—A man named James Crowley had been apprehended at Chester, charged with the murder of William Threl, on the 12th of Dec., 1842. From the statement made before the magistrates, it appeared that Crowley's father, having reason to dread some fatal act of violence on the part of his son, had one of his farm-servants, named William Threl, sworn to as a special constable for his (the father's) protection; and on Christmas Day, 1842, the family and a party of friends having just taken their seats at the dinner-table, the prisoner's mother suddenly started up, and said to her husband, "For God's sake go upstairs; there's James coming across the field with his gun to shoot some of us." The old man accordingly hurried from the apartment, and the prisoner, who had been seen by his mother through the window advancing in the way she described, went round to the back of the house and thrust the muzzle of his gun through a pane of glass. In the meantime Threl went out to speak with the prisoner, who, on seeing him, retreated a few paces exclaiming, "It's you, is it?" and at the same time fired at the unfortunate man, and shot him dead upon the spot. He then shouldered the gun, and was heard to say as he walked away, "I've another charge for somebody else." Crowley was heard of no more until a few days since. He has, it appears, been in the United States in the interim, but has returned ever since March last to Chester. A woman with whom he has recently lived, in a fit of jealousy beat him. The prisoner admitted that he shot Threl. He was ordered to be taken to Warwick, where he will undergo further examination.

SUSPICION OF THREE PERSONS AT CHABLES.—On Saturday night last, three haberdashers in the employ of John Oakley, Esq., (farmer, at Dullop, near Chatham), were found dead in their bed-rooms. It appears that the three whose names are John Hodgson, aged 25 years, Thomas Webb, 18, and George Wright, 17, lodged at the hall's cottage, on the opposite side of the road to the farm-house, and in consequence of the severity of the cold, they had begged the hall's wife to warm their room. On Saturday last, the night being very cold, she allowed them to do so, and as the bed-room had not a fire place, she procured a stable lantern, filled it with charcoal, and placed it in the centre of the room. About eight o'clock on Sunday night Steadman retired to rest, and he was followed about an hour afterwards by the other two, Webb and Wright. Nothing was heard of them until next morning. Not coming down stairs at the usual hour, about seven o'clock, the hall's wife went up stairs to room them. Wright was found lying on the floor behind the door; he had evidently dropped down dead the instant he entered the room, which must at the time have been filled with carbonic gas. Webb was lying on his back on the bed, with his head to his hand; as if he had been seized by death in the act of undressing. Steadman had his jacket off, and had partly removed his trousers from his person, and had fallen back on the bed. At the inquest, which was held on Monday, the jury returned a verdict—that the deaths of the young men were accidental, caused by suffocation by charcoal being burnt in the bed-room.

IRELAND.

REPEAL DEMONSTRATION AT WATERFORD.—What is called a Repeal demonstration has taken place at Waterford, in the shape of a banquet, over which Thomas Meagher, Esq., the mayor of that town, presided; but it was rather a sorry affair. There was very little in Mr. O'Connell's speech worth noting. The honourable and learned gentleman spoke very confidently about procuring Repeal. He said he was as certain of it as of his own existence. Various circumstances might lead to it at once; but he based principally upon the idea of its being brought on by the threat of danger to England. He said—"There is no event menacing England—there is no event menacing the public peace of the world that will not give us Repeal more readily than I can pronounce the word. (Cheers.)" England would then want the people of Ireland, and the people of Ireland she can have by buying them, for they want a price for their services, and that price is Repeal. (Loud cheers.) It cannot be remote when we consider the accumulating strength of such a nation as the Irish, amounting, I may say from the first authority, to 500,000 grown up men—not including the boys of from eleven to fourteen, who are rather handy. (Laughter.) Yes, circumstances as Ireland is, with the physical force she contains—with the determination she is evincing—with the combination that is rapidly accumulating into an entirely new force before us and with the state of Europe in our contemplation, I say it is impossible that the Union should not soon be repealed. (Cheers.) Mr. O'Connell next touched upon the old grievances, and mooted a new and very singular one—the apathy of the English people and the indifference of the English press to the affairs of Ireland. "The English press will not report the real state of the country, nor put forward our grievances. They would do so if the English people felt an interest in the subject, for then their own interests would be affected if they did not do so, but their interests are not affected by their neglect, which proves the foregone apathy of the English people. (Hear.) It is all the same to them, for they have no interest and no sympathy, as they think, in the chains of the Union, and that we are not able or willing to break them. They were never more mistaken since the world began. (Loud cheers.) We are both able and willing to break them—(cheers); and with the blessing of heaven we will break them into fragments. (Cheers.) The Irish shall not continue in chains. (Cheers.) The hour of freedom is going by, and it is the duty of those who require security for the integrity of the empire and its continued consolidation under the same crown, to look to our complaints, and endeavour to mitigate them by doing us justice." This is really very rich. The English press has been literally swamped with "Ireland and the Irish," and yet O'Connell has the face to complain that the press neglects Irish interests. No far from reporting "Irish grievances," the columns of the English papers have been crowded with them, very often, no doubt, to the annoyance of their readers.

THE REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—At the meeting of the Repeal Association on Monday, Mr. O'Connell made a speech of considerable length, but of little novelty or interest. Much of it was devoted to attacks upon the English press. The impudence and insolence of one writer, he said, was only equalled by his ignorance. Mr. O'Connell said he was again unprepared with the report from the committee on his own propositions. The learned gentleman of course again alluded to his trial. He said:—By the Court's proclamation the Government had challenged the people of Ireland to war, but finding that they would not fight, they went to law with them. From October to May the litigation had been going on, and would be continued till his back on those who caused that litigation, and he defied them to state any crime of which he had been guilty. There were crimes committed, but not by Repealers. They had the satisfaction of keeping him in jail for 160 days, when they had no right to detain him for the hundredth part of a minute. Mr. O'Connell, in conclusion, called on the people to rally as if they were only really beginning to agitate for Repeal (cheers), and as if all they had hitherto done were as nothing. 1843 was the year for monster meetings; 1844 for peace, patience, and for legal triumph; 1845 should be marked by the weekly collection of the Repeal rent. (Cheers.) Surely Mr. O'Connell has something better to promise for 1845 than the weekly collection of the Repeal rent. This the people have been well accustomed to in former years. Mr. O'Connell announced the rent for the week to be £179 13s. 2d.

SHIPWRECKS OFF KINGSTOWN.—A letter from Dublin, dated Dec. 16, states that there has been some boisterous weather, which has produced the most disastrous effects. The shore at Seapoint, a mile and a half on the Dublin side of Kingstown, is strewn with better barrels and the wreck of a vessel of very considerable size. It is supposed she was bound from Cork for London, with a cargo of butter. Several other serious injuries have been done to the shipping both in Kingstown and in Dublin harbours.

MURDER IN THE COUNTY OF CLARE.—Another murder has been committed in Clare, where the magistracy had assembled last week to devise measures for bringing to justice the persons concerned in the assassination of Mr. Arthur Clancy, a magistrate. Yesterday week Thomas Heffernan, a farmer, residing near Ennis, the assize town of the county, was fired at by some miscreants who lay in wait, and died instantly. The murder was committed about three o'clock, and it is stated that some of the neighbours of the victim were quite near at the time. This murder, like almost all the crimes perpetrated in the south, was connected with disputes about land. It appears that Heffernan was proceeding by ejectment against his mother and brother-in-law. The latter, whose name is Clancy, has been apprehended on suspicion of being accessory to the murder.

MURDER.—On Friday week a murder of a most atrocious nature was committed on a female respectably dressed, but whose name could not be discovered. On the following day an inquest was held, and adjourned till next day, in order to ascertain, if possible, some clue to the perpetrator of the foul deed. But the police were unsuccessful in their pursuit of the murderer. It appeared from the evidence that the deceased and the supposed murderer were travelling on the road from Tralee to Annewinn, at one o'clock on the Friday; and at two o'clock on the same day the poor woman was found on the road, about one hundred yards from a cabin, into which the murderer went to light a pipe, with her head completely smashed, and it appeared from the appearance of the body that death must have been instantaneous, as no signs of struggling or protracted death appeared on her person. The Supplementary indicates the following account of another murder:—It affords us the deepest pain to record another of those crying murders which have brought down on our country a notoriety so unenviable. In this case the parties were nearly related. An uncle was the victim, two brothers the alleged perpetrators of the awful deed which has deprived him of life! But in the name of the persons; the scene of the dreadful deed near Inch, Burren; the cause of quarrel some dispute about land, or the right of passage through a green lane. For a long time these persons have been squabbling and litigating at the Burrenleigh Petty Sessions. On Tuesday, it would appear, they all met in the green lane, the cause of their contention—a violent altercation commenced—blows ensued—and the uncle, overpowered, fell a sacrifice.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

OPENING OF THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.—On Wednesday the public were allowed free access to the Merchants' Area, which was much crowded during the day. This interesting circumstance took place at eleven o'clock and the building remained open till dusk. This will now occur every day, and on the 1st of January it will be given up to the merchants for their use. The Greatham Committee have adopted this arrangement, for the purpose of allowing a natural curiosity to be gratified, without the interruption which it would have caused to the merchants, if the free access of the public and the removal of the merchants from the temporary Exchange had occurred at the same time. The avenue to the eastward remains closed, in order to facilitate the finishing and furnishing of Lloyd's apartments, which are entered from the eastern area, and which are in a great state of forwardness.

ASSOCIATION FOR PROMOTING RELIEF OF DISTRESS IN THE METROPOLIS.—Thursday last the first annual meeting of this association was held at the Hanover-square Rooms. The Bishop of London presided; and there were present, Lord Randon, Sir Robert Inglis, M.P., Hon. Mr. Cowper, M.P., and several other clergymen and gentlemen. The Lord Bishop addressed the meeting at some length, and entered into details respecting the destitute condition of the poor. The secretary, Mr. Reilly, then read a report, which referred to the state of the poor in London, in 1843, the moral evils resulting, remedial measures proposed, &c. The report stated, that at the commencement of the winter of 1843, public attention was drawn to the condition of the poorer classes of the population, and that at a meeting, presided over by the Bishop of London, the association was formed. With reference to funds, the report stated that they were diminishing. The total funds were £13,428, of which, there had been expended £9,557. The report was unanimously adopted.

TESTIMONIAL TO FATHER MATHEW.—On Thursday evening a public meeting was held at Exeter Hall, for the purpose of considering the best means of relieving Father Mathew from the pecuniary embarrassments in which his labours and sacrifices in the cause of Temperance have involved him. The body of the Hall was crowded, the platform was not quite so well filled, and there was an unusually small proportion of females present. Many persons in the meeting wore the Temperance medal. Lord John Russell presided. In his opening address he highly eulogised the zealous labours of Father Mathew, and the moral reformation of which he had been the instrument in Ireland. Resolutions approving of the objects of the meeting were moved and seconded by the following gentlemen:—Sir E. Canning, J. B. Buckington, Esq., W. Ewart, Esq., M.P., Mr. B. C. Hall, and the Rev. Mr. Sherman. In the course of the evening, it was stated that Father Mathew's present liabilities incurred in the Temperance cause amount to £7,000. A collection was made, and a subscription commenced, to which Lord John Russell gives £25. The committee of the Temperance Society is empowered to carry out the object of the meeting.

MEETING OF PAPER MANUFACTURERS.—An important meeting of paper manufacturers took place at the London Coffee-house on Thursday, Mr. John Dickinson in the chair, at which various statements were made to show the important operation of the duty on paper, and resolutions were agreed to with a view to the adoption of the best steps for procuring its repeal.

KING WILLIAM'S STATUE IN THE CITY.—The colossal statue of King William IV. has been placed on the pedestal in King William street, fronting London-bow. The figure is fifteen feet three inches in height, and weighs 26 tons. It was cut out of two enormous blocks of granite, and the work has occupied the artist (Mr. Nixon) nearly three years. The dress of the statue appears to be that of an Admiral's uniform, a cloak hanging gracefully over the shoulders. The right hand holds a scroll.

THE WEATHER.—Last Saturday afternoon the frost gave way, and there was a gradual thaw in the night. During the early part of Sunday morning, however, the ice on the Serpentine was quite dry, and from between seven and eight o'clock until about nine the skaters enjoyed some excellent sport; but their number having then become much increased, and the cracks in the ice having been affected by the thaw, some water oozed through, and eventually the whole surface became covered, in some parts to the depth of full an inch. Throughout the middle of the day and the afternoon the number of skaters was very great, but the number of skaters during the day did not exceed 4000. Towards evening the ice became very dangerous. About three o'clock much amusement was occasioned by a lady, accompanied by a respectfully dressed man, appearing with skates on the ice. For about an hour she performed various evolutions with much ability, but she then had a fall, and immediately left the ice. On the Serpentine in Kensington-gardens the number of skaters on Saturday, was 3000, and on the Long-water 4000, without any accidents. On Sunday, on the latter place of ice, the number of skaters was nearly the same. In the Regent's-park, on Sunday, the ice was sloppy and dangerous, but during the day there were upwards of 6000 skaters and sliders. The pickpockets mustered very strongly in all the parks, particularly in St. James's, where, from the absence of the police, it is supposed they made a rich harvest. It has been foggy during the week in London, and on some occasions lights have been necessary in the day-time. The temperature was much warmer during the early part of the week, but on Thursday there was a very cold wind, and symptoms of a return of frost.

FIRE IN THE COMMERCIAL-ROAD.—On Tuesday forenoon a fire broke out in the marine signal light manufactory in the occupation of Messrs. Robeson and Highams, the patentees, in the Commercial-road, East, near the Regent's Canal. The progress of the fire was unusually rapid, and in the course of a few minutes the building became one complete flaming mass. The firemen were unable to extinguish the fire before the stock in trade and the building were nearly destroyed. The Messrs. Robeson and Highams are uninsured.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

THE CONDEMNED FARRICIDE.—The wretched convict, Mary Gallop, now under sentence of death in Chester Castle, for poisoning her father at Crews, has since her condemnation manifested a great change of temper and disposition. She has made a full confession of her guilt. It appears that she would be twenty-one years of age next March. She has lived with her parents at Warrington, Runcorn, Liverpool, Windsor near Liverpool, and lastly at Crews. During her residence in Liverpool, she formed an acquaintance with a youth, who is still in his apprenticeship; on leaving that town, she corresponded with him, and a warm attachment was the result. She was in the habit of showing the letters to her mother, but her father resolutely forbade all intercourse between the lovers. About half a year ago, the mother committed suicide; and so determined was the unhappy convict to maintain her intimacy with the object of her affections, that she contemplated taking a servant's situation in Liverpool, for the purpose of obtaining interviews with him. The father persisted in refusing his assent; and one day, as her sister was relating an instance of some woman having poisoned her husband by mixing arsenic in a pudding, the dreadful thought took possession of Mary Gallop's mind, that if she could so kill her father, there would be no hindrance to the indulgence of her desires. Accordingly she mixed some arsenic with the dough of which she made some tea-cakes; and subsequently put a portion of the deadly poison into some arrow-root, which she administered to her father in his illness. The fatal sickness and death of her parent followed as the sad consequence of her wickedness. She now manifests the deepest contrition for her crime. The execution of the miserable girl is fixed for Saturday next, Dec. 28.—[This is the character whom a jury recommended to mercy.]

THE EXPLOSION ON THE DOWRY RAILWAY.—Since our last an inquest has been held to inquire into the cause of the death of Aaron Wilkinson, fireman, belonging to the "Forster" locomotive engine, which exploded, and so injured him that he died, as already stated. The evidence was given principally by the same parties as in the case of Robert Buckley. The only new feature presented itself in the deposition of Mr. Berry, of the firm of Berry, Curtis, and Kennedy, the makers of the engine, who deposed that he could only account for the explosion by the excessive pressure of the steam, and that most decidedly there would not have been any explosion had the safety-valve been open—that is, had there been sufficient water in the tubes. He did think it was purely accidental. After a few minutes' consultation, the following verdict was returned:—"That the deceased came by his death by the accidental explosion of a locomotive steam-engine."

UNDESIRABLE WRECK NEAR HARWICH.—During the heavy north-easterly gales on last week, a vessel was lost on Langard East Beach, near Harwich, accompanied with shocking loss of life. The vessel was the Hero (a schooner of 100 tons), belonging to Amsterdam, Mr. South, master, to which port she was bound from London. The crew, seven in number, including the master, took to the rigging for safety, but the excessive darkness of the night prevented them being seen until the ship had almost broken up. The principal officer of the 30-foot revenue cutter endeavoured to save them by a line, which he had contrived to throw over the wreck by the aid of a common rocket; however, the poor fellows were so benumbed with cold, that they were completely powerless, and sunk into the boiling surf and perished.

DEATH FROM A NAIL.—On Tuesday Mr. Baker held an inquest at the Cumberland Head, City-road, on the body of Emma Parr, aged seventeen months, the daughter of a shoemaker. It appeared that deceased was at play with her brother, and during their frolics she fell off the bed on which she was at the time, upon the heel of a shoe, on which was a nail sticking up. The nail penetrated the back part of the head to the depth of half an inch. Mr. Wright, a surgeon, was in attendance upon deceased, and extracted the nail; she, however, lingered for a few days, and died on Sunday night last. That gentleman said deceased had died from the effects of the injuries she had sustained. Verdict, "Accidental death."

DEATHS OF CHILDREN FROM FIRE.—On Monday Mr. Wakley, M.P., held an inquest in the Middlesex Hospital, on the body of Anne Dobson, a child, eight years old, who was burnt to death during her parents' temporary absence from home. Mr. Wakley observed that the loss of life by fire amongst children was truly awful. During the past few days he held inquests on thirteen who perished by fire. Mr. Deputy Coroner Mills said that very lately a score of children were burnt. A juror attributed the lamentable loss of life to the parents being obliged to go out in search of their daily bread, whilst they left their children in their rooms by themselves, not having the means either to pay a person to watch them, or to send them to school. Mr. Wakley remarked that the trifling outlay of a shilling in the purchase of a fire-guard would prevent such tragical occurrences.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday evening, an errand-cart belonging to Mr. Maynard, of Berkley, was upset by a heap of paving-stones, opposite the Hall of Commerce. A man named Dean was passing with a truck at the moment, and was so injured by the van that he died before reaching St. Bartholomew's Hospital. A boy, who had been sitting with the driver of the van, was also severely injured.—(Sargood, the driver of the errand-cart, was examined before the Lord Mayor on Wednesday, on the charge of having been instrumental in Dean's death; and a witness named Kyle, who said he had placed the stones in the street, and that they had projected into the carriage-way, and thus caused the accident, was ordered into custody. Sargood was held to bail.)

SUDDEN DEATH IN A CATHOLIC CHAPEL.—On Tuesday night an inquest was held at the Three Swedish Crowns, Old Gravel-lane, before Mr. Baker, on the remains of Mary Roach, a pauper, belonging to the parish of St. George's in the East, aged 73 years. From the evidence it appeared, that on Sunday morning last the deceased was at the nine o'clock mass, in Virginia-street Chapel, and while engaged in prayer suddenly fell against a young woman, named Ann Bryant, who was kneeling alongside her. Mr. Henry, a medical gentleman, who was one of the congregation, was in immediate attendance on the poor woman, but all earthly assistance was of no avail, and the poor woman was instantly a corpse. Mr. Henry gave it as his opinion that apoplexy was the immediate cause of death, and the jury returned a verdict to that effect.

STEAM-BOAT COLLISION OFF OTTENDUN.—The Princess Mary and the Princess Alice came into collision on Tuesday, as the former, in a dense fog, was leaving Ottendun with the mail, and the latter entering. No lives have been lost, but much damage has been done to the vessels, the Princess Mary suffering the most; a week or two will, however, put her right. The mail was landed. A vessel will be immediately put upon the station to fill the Princess Mary's place until she is able to resume her post.

SUICIDE ON A RAILWAY.—On Sunday night shortly before the train which leaves Manchester for Birmingham at a quarter-past six o'clock, had reached Wilmanslow station, it passed over something on the rails, which afterwards proved to be the body of a young woman, about twenty-eight years of age. It appears that her name was Elizabeth Frith; that she had left her home at Audley, in Staffordshire, a day or two before, and had since been wandering about. Just before the passing of the train, she had placed herself across the rails, being in a state of insanity; but nothing was known of it till after the accident took place. An inquest was held on the body at Wilmanslow on Monday night, when the jury returned a verdict to the effect, that she had placed herself across the rails while in a state of insanity, and was then and there killed. She was struck by the buffer, and one of her legs was nearly taken off. She died almost immediately.

A MOTHER-IN-LAW KILLED BY A POLICEMAN.—On Wednesday afternoon the following fatal occurrence took place at the lodgings of James Clark, police-constable No. 33, of the C division. It appears that Clark having returned home after attending as a witness at Marlborough street Police Court, had a violent altercation with his wife respecting some family disagreements, during which the wife's mother interposed, taking part with her daughter, when Clark took her by the shoulders and gave her a violent push, from the effects of which she reeled backwards, and fell headlong down the stairs from the first-floor landing, and sustained such injury that she shortly after expired. In the course of the evening Clark surrendered himself at the station-house of the C division in Vine-street, Finsbury.

EVERY BODY'S COLUMN.

EVENING MELODIES.—II. THE POET DREAMS OF HEAVEN!
The poet dreams of Heaven!
He dreams, a little child, amidst the gleam
Where in his boyhood he'd been wont to dream;
He heard the very sounds he loved as then
And knew the overtones. 'Twas in this way
The poet dreams of Heaven!
The Mother dreams of Heaven!
She saw her children decked in gossamer and flowers;
And one, whose health had always been weak,
Was blooming now as those celestial flowers
He laughed to see him so. And, dreaming thus,
The Mother dreams of Heaven!
Her Children dream of Heaven!
Oh! 'twas a glorious land, where daisies grew,
And hidden music round it sounded low;
And playtime lasted there the whole year through,
And an angel came and joined with them.
'Twas so
Her Children dream of Heaven!

A CLASSICAL ACCOUNT OF THE ORIGIN OF KISSING.
Pliny, in his Natural History, says that Cato was of opinion that the use of kissing first began between kinsmen and kinwomen, however nearly allied or far off, only to know, by kissing, whether their wives, daughters, or nieces, had tasted any wine.

A NEW INVENTION FOR STEERING A SHIP.
A useful invention is now in the act of being applied to one of our men of war. It is called a "manœuvrer;" it is the proposition of H. Foulerton, Esq., and consists of an Archimedean screw, fitted through the deadwood of the ship at right angles with the keel, and set in motion by the captain, for the purpose of turning the ship round when, from calm weather, the helm has no effect on the vessel.

THE SHORTEST DAY.
Why, how is this! past nine o'clock!
I fear I'm very late;
I really thought—'t is so dark—
That it was only eight.
I shall be excused, surely,
And waiting need I say,
Except, what everybody knows,
It is the shortest day!
It's very dark! I cannot see
At what I'm about;
Ay, there—I knew it would be so—
My stocking's wrong side out.
It is not worth while getting up;
I save what you say;
But really we should stay in bed
All through the shortest day.
I cannot see to dress myself;
I shall be such a fright;
But to be sure it matters not,
The day is more like night.
The air is thick as thick pea-soup;
You scarce can see your way;
I've half a mind to grope about
Upon the shortest day.
I wonder what kind people do,
Of optics quite bereft—
I've made a blunder in my shoe.
My right foot's in my left!
Misfortune never single comes,
I've heard old sages say,
And thus I'm bothered on all hands
Upon the shortest day.

A FRENCH BULL.
A Paris paper states that, in consequence of the scenes of disorder which have sometimes arisen at the churches during midnight mass, that ceremony will this year be performed at eight o'clock in the morning. This reminds us of a change once made in the meetings of a provincial club in Ireland, which was thus announced:—"Notice is hereby given, that the quarterly meetings of this society will in future be held every six weeks, and not every two months, as formerly."

AN ECCENTRIC CENTENARIAN.
A Chester paper mentions the death of Mrs. Walker, of Cholton, near Nantwich, who lived to more than 103 years. She had a peculiar fondness for the feline race; she has been known to have as many as 38 cats at one time, and though she was never known to sell one, she once exchanged four for a bushel of wheat.

ANECDOTE OF BUNYAN.
One day, when Bunyan had preached with peculiar warmth and enlargement, some of his friends came to shake hands with him after the service, and observed to him what "a sweet sermon!" he had delivered. "Ay!" he replied, "you need not remind me of that; for the devil told me of it before I was out of the pulpit."—Soutley's Life of Bunyan.

PRECEPT AND EXAMPLE.
Thomson, the author of "The Seasons," wrote in bed his beautiful rhapsody on early rising, commencing "Falsely luxurious! will not man awake?"

A NEW DEFINITION OF LIGHT.
"What is light?" asked a schoolmaster of the boys of a class. "A sovereign that isn't full weight is light," was the prompt reply.

WIT OF LOUIS XVIII.
At a masked ball at the Opera in Paris, the Count de Provence, afterwards Louis XVIII., who was enormously fat, went in disguise, where Madame de Staël, who, although well-looking, was celebrated for her immense feet, accosted him rudely. "I know you, bon masque, by your bulky figure." "And I you by your pedestal!" (mad de Staël), retorted the witty Prince.

THE POLK FAMILY.
The new President of the United States is of Scottish lineage, and his curious looking name an abridgment of a good old Scotch one. Mr. Polk's father or grandfather is said to have been a Lanarkshire man, of the name of Pollock. In the somewhat peculiar dialect of the upper ward of that county the name is pronounced Polek, and hence, probably, the orthography adopted by the Transatlantic branch of the family.

STATISTICS OF THE COLD IN PARIS.
In 1867, 1810, 1805, 1854, 1408, and 1420, the Parisians had very severe winters, and in 1408 the soldiers' rations of wine were cut with an axe. In 1433 the frost set in on the last day of the year, and lasted three months. The winters of 1460, 1480, 1490, 1600, and 1832, are recorded as especially cold. In 1554 wine was cut with an axe throughout France, in the cake. In 1653 and 1665 the frost continued in Paris from Dec. 6 to March 8. In 1670 and 1677 the Seine was frozen over for 25 days consecutively. The average cold of a great number of years at Paris is about 10 or 11 degrees centigrade above zero. At 0 degrees centigrade the Seine freezes. The severest cold hitherto known at Paris was in 1793, when the thermometer fell to 23 1/2 0.

STATISTICS OF DRUNKENNESS.
A very curious document has been lately drawn up on the origin, causes, remedies, metaphysics, philosophy, and psychology of drunkenness. One of the most curious chapters is that which contains a table of the various circumstances to which intemperance may be attributed. The report divides intemperance into several heads, including the mussy, which is a sort of minor branch. Among the mussy, six cases out of ten may be traced to spasms, and that one-nineteenth arises from birthdays; that among confidential clerks intemperance is rare, but when it occurs, pickled salmon, or the arrival of a friend from the country, are found to be the most usual causes of the malady. Drunkenness has also been known to arise, in some instances, from taking up a bill; but as the latter is an operation which persons given to intemperate self-indulgence perform, the number of cases to be attributed to this source is very insignificant. A wife's birthday has often been known to lead to a total prostration of the husband; but it is a remarkable fact, that the day is frequently mistaken in three instances; and, such is the power of imagination, that a man has been known to drop down into the gutter eight or nine times in a year, through having fancied that the birthday of his wife occurred repeatedly in the course of a twelvemonth.—Punch.

THE HEALTH OF THE METROPOLIS.
The industrious bees were so indisposed last week, that they were confined for three days to their watery blanket. Napoleon is still laid up with chilblains, owing to the severity of the weather. His charger, also, is suffering from weakness in the knees, in consequence of the slipperiness of the wood pavement of the Pembroke table. They are not expected to perform again with their usual animation before the return of the spring.—Punch.

A STRANGE CERTIFICATE.
The following original medical certificate was presented to the magistrates at Hammer-smith a short time ago:—

"With Dr. Collier's compliments,
"I certify that the within-named Mr. George Seaman is confined to his house with gout in both feet, and totally unable to comply with any summons, except it come from the other world, as is not improbable from day to day."
"GEO. FRANK COLLIER, M.D.,
"Member of the Royal College of Physicians, &c."

LITERATURE IN BRUSSELS.
The activity of the newspapers of Brussels has been excited of late to an incredible point. Two of the principal journals announce that they will give (gratis) to their yearly subscribers "The History of the Consulate and of the Empire," by M. Thiers, which will be published in Paris, in next January, besides a weekly distribution of the best French romance. A bookdealer of Brussels has paid to the editor of the history of M. Thiers 50,000*fr.*, to be at liberty to publish that work at Brussels the same day as it will appear in the French capital.

AMERICAN PRAIRIE ON FIRE.

AMERICAN PRAIRIE ON FIRE.

Conflagrations of prairies, of vast extent, have been of late, by no means unfrequent in "the far West." Thus, in a recent New York paper, date November 16th, we find the following paragraph:—

"A fire broke out in the Monticello Prairie, a few miles back of Alton, Ill., on Thursday week, which destroyed many buildings and a considerable amount of personal property. The citizens of Alton turned out en masse, to render assistance in saving property and arresting the progress of the fire, which is said to have raged with great fury."

Our correspondent adds: "Several bodies have been found; and among them, a father with his son in his arms, burnt to death."

The terrific catastrophe of a prairie on fire, such as our artist, in New York, has depicted, has been nowhere more vividly described than in the very attractive "Adventures of Mons. Violet," edited by Captain Marryat:

The breeze freshened, and I heard the distant and muffled noise which in the west announces either an earthquake or an "estampede" of herds of wild cattle and other animals. Our horses, too, were aware of some danger, for now they were positively mad, struggling to break the traces and escape.

"Up," I cried, "up Gabriel, Roche! up, up, strangers! quick! saddle your horses! run for your lives; the prairie is on fire, and the buffaloes are upon us." They all started upon their feet, but not a word was exchanged; each felt the danger of his position; speed was our only resource, if it was not already too late. In a minute our horses were saddled, in another we were madly galloping across the prairie, the bridle upon the necks of our steeds, allowing them to follow their instinct.

For an hour we dashed on with undiminished speed, when we felt the earth trembling behind us, and soon afterward the distant bellowing, mixed up with the roaring and sharper cries of other animals, was borne down unto our ears. The atmosphere grew oppressive and heavy, while the flames, swifter than the wind, appeared raging upon the horizon. The fleetest game of all kinds now shot past us like arrows; deer were bounding over the ground, in company with wolves and panthers; droves of elk and antelopes passed swifter than a dream; then a solitary horse or huge buffalo bull.

The atmosphere rapidly became more dense, the heat more oppressive, the roars sounded louder and louder in our ears; now and then they were mingled with terrific howls and shrill sounds, so unearthly, that even our horses would stop their mad career and tremble, as if they considered them supernatural; but it was only for a second, and they dashed on.

A noble stag passed close to us, his strength was exhausted; three minutes afterwards we passed him—dead. But soon, with the rushing noise of a whirlwind, the mass of heavier and less speedy animals were close upon us; buffaloes and wild horses, all mixed together—an immense dark body, miles in front, miles in depth: on they came, trampling and dashing through every obstacle. This phalanx was but two miles from us.

It was an awful sight! a sea of fire, roaring in its fury, with its heaving waves and unearthly noises, approaching nearer and nearer, rushing on swifter than the sharp morning breeze.

Away we dashed, over hills and down declivities; for now the ground had become more broken. The fire was gaining fast upon us, when we perceived that, a mile ahead, the immense herds before us had entered a deep, broad chasm, into which they dashed, thousands upon thousands, tumbling headlong into the abyss. But now the fire rushing quicker, blazing fiercer, than before, as if determined not to lose its prey, curled its waves above our heads, smothering us with its heat and lurid smoke.

A few seconds more we spurred in agony; speed was life; the chasm was to be our preservation or our tomb. Down we darted, actually borne upon the backs of the descending mass, and landed, without sense or motion, more than a hundred feet below. As soon as we recovered from the shock, we found that we had been most mercifully preserved: strange to say, neither horse nor rider had received any serious injury. We heard, above our heads, the hissing and cracking of the fire; we contemplated with awe the flames, which were roaring along the edge of the precipice—now rising, now lowering, just as if they would leap over the space and annihilate all life in these western solitudes.

We were preserved; our fall had been broken by the animals, who had taken the leap a second before us, and by the thousands of bodies which were heaped up as a haystack, and received us as a cushion below. With difficulty we extricated ourselves and horses, and descending the mass of carcasses, we at last succeeded in reaching a few acres of clear ground.

ALARMING STEAM-BOAT COLLISION.

A steam-boat collision, involving fatal results, took place on Tuesday afternoon, about half-past two o'clock.

As the Sylph, belonging to the Old Woolwich Steam-boat Company, was proceeding on her down-passage to Woolwich, having just left the Greenwich stone pier, and when off the east end of the Royal Hospital, she was run down by the Orwell (Ipswich steamer), proceeding to London-bridge-wharf. A dense fog prevailed at the time, and the shrieks of the passengers on board both vessels were heart-rending in the extreme. In an instant nearly thirty watermen put off in their boats, and arrived just in time to save several persons from the ill-fated Sylph, before she sank in deep water.

It appears that the Orwell struck the Sylph on her starboard-bow, and cut her nearly in two. Immediately on the Orwell receding from the Sylph, three of the cabin passengers were carried to the surface by the rush of water thus created. They were picked up, and taken ashore by the boats in attendance, as well as the crew of the Sylph, and numerous deck passengers who had been washed overboard. One of the officers of the Orwell rushed on board the sinking vessel, with an axe in his hand, and rescued two persons who were wedged in between the broken timbers and the vessel's side. These were also taken on shore. Some children were picked up, and taken on board the Orwell. One person, whose name is Sheppard, was taken to the Union public-house, East Greenwich, with his skull frightfully fractured, one eye knocked out, and a leg and arm broken: he is since dead. The Orwell remained with the Sylph till the last, when the Witch steam-boat, belonging also to the Old Woolwich Company, arrived, and towed, or rather dragged, the Sylph towards the south shore.

The passengers belonging to the Orwell were landed at Greenwich, and were forwarded by railway and omnibus to their respective destinations. The Orwell was much behind time, having been two days on her passage from Ipswich.

The statement of Captain S. Rackham, the commander of the Orwell, al connected with this melancholy event, is to the following effect:—The Orwell was due at five o'clock on Monday evening, but on coming up the river, and when on the other side of Gravesend, the fog was so heavy that it was found necessary to cast anchor. About nine o'clock next morning she heaved her anchor, but in consequence of the continuance of the fog she came up the river at a very slow rate. Between one and two o'clock she was off Woolwich, and was two hours making the distance from that point to Greenwich. When off the latter place the Sylph was making for the pier, and, it being high tide, she was under the necessity of going at her full speed. In crossing from the north to the south shore the Orwell came in sight of the Sylph, when the pilot, whose name is Wiggins, being at the wheel of the Orwell, seeing the danger which the smaller boat was in, called out, "Stop her; ease her," and the Orwell was backed three turns astern. Unfortunately, the Sylph was not able to clear herself; for, although the backing took place, she was struck in the fore-sponson, or in front of the paddle-box on the larboard side, and instantly filled, the figure-head of the Orwell coming across the deck of the Sylph. The cries and shrieks of the unfortunate passengers were truly alarming; but before any aid could be rendered, the Sylph pitched head downwards. The crew and passengers of the Orwell rendered every assistance, and dragged several of the ill-fated passengers through the aperture that had been made; but for this, the loss of human life must have been much greater.

From the difficulty of obtaining accurate particulars, some exaggerated accounts of the number of persons drowned obtained circulation, but from subsequent search it appears that the loss of life is confined to the two men brought ashore. Sheppard is a man well known in Greenwich and Woolwich as a carrier between the two towns. It is evident that this unfortunate man must have been sitting on the starboard side of the fore cabin, at that part where the Orwell struck the Sylph; and there is little doubt, from the extent of the injuries he was found to have received, that he must have been killed on the instant.

WRECK OF THE "SYLPH."

The other unfortunate man was a seller of oranges on board the Greenwich and Woolwich steam-boats. When taken from the wreck the poor fellow was alive, and although the greatest despatch was used in conveying him to the Dreadnought hospital-ship, he died before reaching it.

It cannot be ascertained how many persons were on board the Sylph at the time of the accident, but it is almost certain that the two abovementioned are the only sufferers.

As to the cause of the collision, there is but one opinion among those connected with the river. It is on all hands acknowledged to be the result of accident; but then some of the old pilots say, that they would not have ventured to take a vessel in such hazy weather. The Orwell, which at the time of the collision was in the charge of Mr. Wiggins, pilot, received no damage whatever.

The ill-fated vessel the Sylph was only built last spring, and was an iron boat, being built on the newest principle; she was divided into three compartments—the forepart, including the fore-cabin, the engine-house, and afterpart; each of these is completely water-tight, and although one portion may be struck and knocked in, yet the other portions cannot be affected by the water; and from this circumstance alone is to be attributed the saving of some of the passengers; for the instant she filled the stern rose out of the water, and to that part all the passengers on deck rushed, where they clung hold of the seats, sides, &c., until rescued from their perilous situation. The Sylph was of about 30 tons burden, while the Orwell is of 120 tons, having two engines of 40-horse power, and has been under the command of the present captain (who, for skill and attention, bears a very high character) for about three years.

The damage done to the Sylph is very great. She is nearly cut in two just before the paddle-box, the fore part being only held on by the keel. She is a complete wreck, and it will cost a great sum to put her again afloat. Her machinery has received no further injury than what would arise from immersion.

According to another version of the accident, the poor creatures in the water were struggling to keep afloat, and clutched at everything they fancied within reach. Four women who thus floated out of the cabin were secured. One of them had an infant in her arms, and holding the infant, and at the same time grasping the splinters of the wreck in the greatest possible human agony, turned to the people with the most piteous supplication, saying, "For God's sake save me." Her appeal was not made in vain, for she was saved and her child too. In the meanwhile, the crew, who had returned to the Sylph, with the assistance of the crew of the Orwell and the watermen, picked up two or three other females, one of whom was hauled out of the cabin by the steersman; and two children floating on the water were also saved and taken on board the Orwell. Just as the Orwell was coming on board, a woman was sitting on the cabin skylight, and most probably owed her life to one of the crew calling to her "For God's sake go off."

COLLISION BETWEEN "THE ORWELL" AND "SYLPH" STEAMERS, OFF GREENWICH.

The others were all females. Miss Williams, of Woolwich, Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. Morris, and Mrs. Russell, were supported to the Golden Anchor public-house, where they fainted on arriving. They were put to bed, and restoratives having been applied, they soon recovered. On board the Dreadnought three females were conveyed, named Maria Green, Rachel Tustin, and Esther Sullivan. They were put to bed, and the two latter left the ship as soon as their clothes were dry. Mrs. Green, up to two hours after the accident, had bewailed the loss of her infant, but, to her great joy, it was restored to her in safety. This poor woman received a blow on her face, but she was well enough to quit the Dreadnought on Tuesday night.

PRINCE ALBERT'S POLLED OX—On Monday, in pursuance of the desire of her Majesty, when viewing the black polled ox of the Scotch breed bred by his Royal Highness Prince Albert at Norfolk Farm, at the Smithfield Club Cattle Show on Saturday, that animal, instead of being removed to the residence of Mr. Hannister, butcher, who had purchased it for sixty guineas, was conveyed to Windsor Park, where it will in future be kept. The moment Mr. Hannister was made acquainted with the wishes of her Majesty, he intimated his desire to relinquish all claim; and, indeed, expressed a hope that her Majesty would permit him to make it a present. This, however, was declined.

BURNS' MAUSOLEUM.

In the eastern corner of St. Michael's churchyard, at Dumfries, stands a small Doric Temple, known by the name of Burns' Mausoleum, in which the remains of the poet Burns and his two children are interred. They were originally interred in the opposite corner of the churchyard, but in the year 1814, a meeting, consisting of noblemen, gentlemen, clergymen, and some of the principal citizens of Dumfries having been called, it was determined that "a Mausoleum ought to be reared over the grave of Burns." The situation in which the remains of Burns had been interred being rather low and confined in an angle of the churchyard it was found necessary to erect it in the opposite corner.

BURNS' MAUSOLEUM, AT DUMFRIES.

Allan Cunningham, in his "Life of Robert Burns," speaks rather sarcastically of this erection. He says:—"The body of Burns was not, however, to remain long in its place. To suit the plan of a rather showy mausoleum, his remains were removed into a more commodious spot of the same kirkyard, on the 5th of June, 1815. The coffin was partly dissolved away; but the dark, curling locks of the poet were as glossy, and seemed as fresh, as on the day of his death. In the interior of the structure stands a marble monument, embodying with little skill or grace, that well known passage in the dedication to the Caledonian Hunt:—"The poetic genius of my country found me, as the prophetic bard Elijah did Elisha—at the plough; and threw her inspiring mantle over me." Nor is the indifferent sculpture redeemed by the inscription. The merits of him who wrote "Tam O'Shanter," and "The Cottar's Saturday Night," are concealed in Latin. Here, as to a shrine, flock annually vast numbers of pilgrims; many, very many, are from America; not a few from France and Germany; and the list-book contains the names of the most eminent men of England, Scotland, and Ireland."

The architect was Mr. T. F. Hunt, of London.

ALMSHOUSES ON PENGES COMMON.

In our journal of last week, we corrected an error in our description of the goodly prospect from the London and Brighton Railway; the Almshouses there seen having been built for Poor, Aged, Decayed, and Maimed Free Watermen and Lightermen of the river Thames, and their Wives and Widows, and not for the Licensed Victuallers, as we stated.

The Almshouses are pleasantly situated upon Penges Common, on a piece of ground given to the Watermen's Company for the purpose, by Mr. John Dudin Brown, of Sydenham, who has also been a very liberal contributor to the asylum. The houses are intended for the reception of a portion of a large body of men who did great service to their country during the late war; and who have been thrown out of employment by the great changes that have taken place on the river Thames by the introduction of steam navigation, the building of bridges, docks, &c. Upwards of 4000 members of this body served in the Royal Navy, whilst others enrolled themselves in the various corps of River Fencibles, ready to defend their country against any sudden invasion; and, at the present time, in case of war, such a number of Free Watermen and Lightermen, as the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty shall have occasion for, are compelled to serve in the Royal Navy.

ALMS HOUSES FOR FREE WATERMEN AND LIGHTERMEN, PENGES, SURREY.

Another claim which this body has upon the consideration of the public is, that the funds arising from the Sunday ferries, which are exclusively applicable to the relief of the poor aged and decayed Watermen and Lightermen, and their Widows, and on which nearly seven hundred and fifty pensioners are now depending for support, are rapidly diminishing.

The charity is under the patronage of her Majesty the Queen Dowager; and the presidency of Mr. Alderman Lucas.

The almshouses are built in the old English style, from the designs of Mr. George Porter, architect to the Institution; and they are among the best erections of their class in the suburbs.

ELECTION OF RABBI, AT THE SYNAGOGUE, GREAT ST. HELEN'S.

ELECTION OF CHIEF RABBI OF THE JEWS.

An event has just occurred of great importance to the Jewish nation. In the absence of a High Priest, the post of Chief Rabbi of the English Jews is regarded as one of the greatest sacerdotal importance. The religious destinies of the "scattered people" may be influenced, or even consummated by his councils; he is their mediator with Heaven, the shadow of their former priests and kings, and may one day "lead them forth as sheep" to occupy the now desolate land of their fathers. His principles are as important as his position. A Christian bias, or even a liberal tendency in favour of a due regard to our "evidences," would expose both himself and his flock to the displeasure of foreign synagogues, and to the certain abhorrence of the lower and less educated orders. On them, then, and on many other equally important grounds, his election is regarded with feelings of the utmost concern. The Jew can perform no more solemn official acts than in giving his vote for Chief Rabbi. It was not, therefore, without feelings of considerable interest, we went last Saturday to the synagogue of St. Helen's-place, to hear the termination of the contest announced, which ended in the elevation of the Reverend Doctor Nathan Marcus Adler to the supreme authority. A multitude was present. A din of strange sounds saluted our ear, as we waited in succession the little knots which separate religious interests had brought together. A strong eastern character was stamped on every countenance. Every man was recognised as a foreigner, and felt to be a Jew. The election was over, and the fate of the several parties sealed. Each one would, of course, have had his own man elected; but yet every one spoke of Dr. Adler in terms of kindness. He was said to be a learned man, strongly given to philosophic inquiry, and more deeply affected with the spirituality of religious observances than is usual with the Jews. A revival and a change was therefore looked for, and in that hope we left the company, but not without fear, when, in parting, we learned that the new Rabbi, who lives at Hanover, is under the special patronage of King Ernest.

The synagogue, which is the most beautiful in the metropolis, was well seen on the occasion. Our cut conveys an accurate idea of it.

NEW CAB.

Perhaps a greater change has not taken place in anything which comes under the immediate observation of the public, than in the various metamorphoses the street cabs have undergone during the last few years.

Vehicles of all kinds have been started as candidates for public favour, some of which have survived the ordeal of public opinion, and others condemned to return from whence they came, and from thence to no one knows where, for they have not been visible since. We have had Broughams, which are now the most numerous; then came the "pill box" cab, which seemed to have been constructed for no other purpose than allowing the "fare" to cheat the driver with impunity by quietly letting himself out while the unmerciful cabman proceeded to his destination vainly anticipating being paid for "the job." This was fatal to the existence of the "pill box," and it was consequently consigned to an early tomb. This was succeeded by "Hansom's Patent Safety," which may be called the aristocratic cab, for no first-rate man on wheels would think of stepping into any other; they are also great favourites with the public generally, being always first off "the stand." We have since had the "Tribe," which, though compact and handsome, does not possess any great advantages over the Brougham—yet its appearance will always carry the day with the uninitiated. The last improvement which has appeared is that which our engraving represents; it is the invention of Mr. Okey, landier of the Hero of Waterloo, in the Waterloo-road who is also the builder and proprietor. It is constructed to carry four inside, and is, consequently, to be called a "Quadrupole." Its appearance is very compact and elegant; and to a person seated inside, has an unusually light and pleasing appearance.

THE NEW PATENT "QUARTUS" CAB.

The great improvement consists in the front and hind wheels being not more than a foot apart, the draught being consequently much easier than in the old cabs, the wheels of which are nearly five feet asunder.

SPLENDID PRESENT

FOR THE SUBSCRIBERS

TO

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS,

The PROPRIETORS have great pleasure in announcing that on January 11th, 1845, will be published,

A SUPERB PANORAMIC PICTURE

THE RIVER THAMES,

UPWARDS OF EIGHT FEET IN LENGTH

Exhibiting, as distinctly as in a map, yet with beautifully picturesque effect, the "Royal Towered Thames," its "Forest of Masts," its crowded Docks and Quays, its Fleet of Steamers, its Noble Bridges, its busy Wharves and Quays; and the various objects of interest and beauty upon its immediate banks, land, and sea.

GREENWICH, AND ITS SUPERB PALACE-HOSPITAL; and showing the windings of the "Silver Thames" through the mighty mass of buildings that form the

METROPOLIS OF THE WORLD:—

Including the Streets, Squares, Terraces, and Greenways; the many hundred Churches, (with their forms of Steeple, Tower, Columns, Arches, and Noble Mansions); Government Offices and Public Institutions; Club Houses and Taverns; embelished Street Architecture; Factories and Workshops; Railways, Parks, and Public Walks; in short, a perfect Tableau of the vast extent, Architectural Character, and most recent Improvements of the

BANKS OF THIS NOBLE RIVER;

The entire Prospect being EIGHT MILES IN LENGTH, and embracing an Infinity of Objects of Art, Luxury, and High Civilization spread over a CIRCUIT OF THIRTY MILES.

This magnificent Print is engraved in the First Style of the Art, from a recent elaborate Drawing made expressly for the purpose. The engraving has escaped the attacks for several months, so that the strictest reliance may be placed on its accuracy. It will be printed upon a beautifully tinted paper, manufactured expressly for the purpose.

With the Print will be published an engraved OUTLINE KEY, containing the principal objects in the View, with 250 REFERENCES.

ALSO AN

ORIGINAL DESCRIPTIVE SURVEY;

EMBRACING THE

Situation, Extent, and Population; Geology, Climate, and Social Economy; Historical Account of the Metropolis, and its Rise and Progress, from the British and Roman Period to the present time. With the history of the Thames, its Pictorial and Commercial Character; its Pastimes and Holiday Scenes.

Among the descriptive details of this "Original Print" will be found a concise History of every Public Building of importance in the Metropolis and its Environs; with the briefest of the principal Churches, Towers and Spires, the names of the Architects, &c.; besides an immense variety of original information, never before in print, and extending to upwards of

TWENTY-FOUR COLUMNS

closely printed, and forming altogether

A NEW PICTURE OF LONDON AND THE THAMES;

from the best and latest authorities; written expressly for "The Illustrated London News."

* Persons desirous of possessing this great Work of Art, must immediately enter their names as Subscribers, at their respective News-agents.

Every Copy of the Large Print will be stamped, and may be sent Post Free with the Illustrated London News.

Published at the Office of "The Illustrated London News," 140, Strand.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Dec. 22.—Fourth Sunday in Advent.
MONDAY, 23.—James II. died, 1688.
TUESDAY, 24.—Robert Hood died, 1787.
WEDNESDAY, 25.—Christmas-day; Sir I. Newton born, 1643.
THURSDAY, 26.—St. Stephen.
FRIDAY, 27.—St. John the Evangelist.
SATURDAY, 28.—Innocent.

RISE WATER at London-bridge, for the Week ending Dec. 25.

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
4.0	4.1	4.2	4.3	4.4	4.5
4.6	4.7	4.8	4.9	5.0	5.1
5.2	5.3	5.4	5.5	5.6	5.7

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

- "A Continental Subscriber."—Limerick.—The accent is on the last syllable.
- "Spec."—An letter of introduction should be sent.
- "J. R."—Wigan.—Every railway company is bound to run third-class carriages, at 1d. per mile, each per diem.
- "Spec."—should apply to the magistrate in which he resides.
- "J. D."—Goring.—is recommended to avoid foreign "Disturbances."
- "E. D. B."—Bang.—may obtain proper permission for drawings of any fancy stationer.
- "H. E. F. W."—Newcastle.—is thanked for his sketch; but we have not room.
- "W. Q."—will, perhaps, favour us with particulars of the schools, when the engraving shall appear.
- "A New Subscriber."—Shrew.—The Lord Mayor's title extends only through his year of office.
- "V. Z."—near Derby.—should insure the buildings.
- "A Subscriber."—is thanked for his sketch of the steamer.
- "A. O. P."—Dulton.—A sketch and memoir of the distinguished Persian will oblige.
- "C. C."—The recognition on the part of the lady would not be a breach of etiquette.
- "F. N. E."—The servant can only claim for one month.
- "J. S."—near Bath.—We are nearly of the same opinion as one of the parties to whom our correspondent has applied.
- "W. L."—near Newcastle.—The letter has been forwarded to Mr. Skell.
- "H. A. B."—Calais.—The view is not of sufficient interest.
- "Lines on the Landing of Louis Philippe."—is long past the time.
- "V. J."—Hendon.—Presentations to Christ's Hospital can only be obtained of the persons in whom such privilege is vested; and of whom a list appeared in a late No.
- "G. E. P."—should write to the publishers, 140, Strand.
- "Limerick."—Certainty.
- "A Bad Orthograph."—Limerick is pronounced as it is spelt; and Montague, Montagu.
- "N. J. R."—Should address a letter to Mr. Alderman Farebrother, London.
- "G. W."—Upper Seymour-street.—York Minister was burnt in 1839 and 1840.
- "Southampton."—The Archbishop of Canterbury cannot, by right, call a Synod of Bishops without the authority of Parliament.
- "J. N. A."—should apply to Messrs. Rogers and Co., bankers.
- "Bevan."—Blomfield-street.—Conrad D'Orsay is, we believe, on the Continent.
- "Aqua."—The sketch did not reach us in time.
- "A Subscriber."—Bishop Stortford.—Mr. Rowland Hill has not received any gratuity from Government for his admirable postage scheme.
- "Meluselah."—should read Burns's beautiful poem.
- "E. B. B."—The coin is of no great value; but any coin-dealer will decide.
- "J. G."—White Hart, Easter.—The Bachmanian Song will be found in No. 26 of our Journal.
- "Foul."—Dublin.—We do not know.
- "Capt. Moby."—Yarmouth.—is thanked for his communication, for which, however, we have not room.

"Bristol."—We do not answer impertinent questions respecting an illustrious personage.

"E. H. H."—Dover.—Under consideration.

"A Constant Reader."—The Indentures are cancelled by the Bankruptcy of a master.

"M. G. L."—Lambeth.—Taylor's Short-hand, simplified by Harding.

"W. S."—Regent's Park.—We have not room for the account of the Quilist.

"Prudence."—should apply to any Patent Agent.

"P. H."—Dartmouth.—The Almanachs are correct as to Easter Day next year.

"An Annual Subscriber."—Right.

"An Engineer."—Plymouth.—Plans of Locomotive Engines are published in the "Artisan," "Civil Engineer," and by Weale, Houlston, and other book-sellers.

"C. B."—Windsor.—Too late.

"J. G."—Swinsay.—Soldiers are only stationed at Her Majesty's Theatre.

"A Well Wisher."—is thanked.

"A Junior."—should apply to any maker of Accordeons.

"Harleygrove."—The money lent under the circumstances stated, would be lost.

"C. J."—Bristol.—"Z. P. M."—According to canon law, first cousins cannot marry.

THE LARGE PRINT.—In answer to several letters received respecting the Large Print, the writer of each will be entitled to an impression.

ERRATA.—In our account of the Brighton Railway, Sandstead and Bon street Down, and Regate are placed to the left, instead of the right; for Gilling, read Gilling.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1844.

THE quarrel between the Ministry and the Directors of the East India Company, was apparently concluded by the concurrence of both parties in the appointment of Sir H. Hardinge as the successor of Lord Ellenborough; but if forgiven, we doubt if the display of independence on the part of the Directors has been forgotten. The approaching Session will, it is more than probable, prove that it is not. The conduct of the Board will be exposed to a scrutiny that we hope will clear up the mystery that has shrouded the matter ever since it occurred; and the Ministry will, on the other hand, be put on its defence, for so decidedly accusing a body of men generally believed to be rather the reverse of rash or flighty, of "gross indiscretion," in removing a servant whose writings, sayings, and doings, they had reason to think somewhat dangerous. If a restriction of the power of the Directors is not actually attempted, it will at least be canvassed and discussed: this is inevitable. The question will then arise, if a transfer of their authority is made to the Government at once, either by vesting it in the Board of Control, or the Foreign or Colonial Offices, will the affairs of India be better administered, either for this country, or for the interests of the Indian Empire itself? On this point, the Directors will have a strong case, not founded perhaps so much on their own good policy, as from the errors and mismanagement they can point out in the conduct of the Ministers of the Crown in past times, with something of a tendency to the same failings in the present. A great deal is said of the necessity of having all power vested in Ministers duly appointed by, and responsible to, the Crown. There is a good deal in a phrase, and much may be done with its aid till it comes to be examined. The responsibility of Ministers, in modern times, resolves itself, for the most part, into this:—After a tolerably long course of what their own party call successful policy, and their opponents stigmatise as blundering, and when they can no longer command a "working majority," they resign, leaving a legacy of financial and other difficulties to their successors. With a majority, a Minister has no fear of what is called responsibility, and without one, no man will ever be in the position that incurs it. What security has responsibility been against Governments pursuing the most mischievous courses? The responsible Ministers of the Crown were those who, by ignorance and obstinacy, lost the American Colonies. We had a responsible Ministry not many years ago that suffered Canada to break out into open rebellion before it could be driven to proper activity. And, to come down to the present time, have we not had the bitterest complaints from our Colonies of the conduct of Downing-street? At this moment the Governor of New Zealand is said to be deluging the Colony with paper money: the denunciations of the last regulation of the Currency should emigrate immediately. All sorts of things are done in Colonies that are never heard of here, and if they do turn up awkwardly in Parliament, the Minister for the time being has the "office" to fall back on, and by clever special pleading and piles of documents, generally has the best of it; if more than usually hard pressed, he can assert his "responsibility," and farther than this the attack cannot be pressed. The fact is, our Colonies have outgrown the possibility of being governed by one man, and he wholly unacquainted with them, placed at some thousands of miles distance, and tossed in and out at every change of political influence. Our Colonial-office is the growth of ages,—in some shape or other is as old as the Corporation of the East India House. That quiet, permanent body of merchants, holding no seals of office, and not mixing in political intrigues as the means of gaining political power, have built up and established an empire that has no equal in the present, and has scarcely had an equal in the past. Their government has produced the ablest statesmen, diplomats, and generals of the last century: the conqueror of Napoleon himself was formed by his early campaigns in India. Looking at the men that have been chosen by the Colonial-office for Colonial Governors, and seeing how often political influence, and nothing else, has procured their nomination, it would be a rash assertion to say that under the same system we should have established as great an empire as we now govern in the East.

On comparing results, a calm judgment on both would decide that if any change is required, it should rather be one that would assimilate the Government of the Colonies to the system by which the affairs of India are managed, than one that should place India under the unchecked authority of the Crown by delivering it over to a "department," with a minister at its head who could give but little security as to his policy, except that he would be "responsible." A great system is long in breaking up, but with a governing head, engaged in all the conflicts of party, at a great distance, and compelled to see every thing through an atmosphere of routine and red-tapeism, our Indian empire would not hold together for one generation. It is well, then, that the public should look a little at results, and be prepared for the discussion that is inevitably at hand.

Tax dinner given to Sir H. Pottinger at Liverpool, has far more interest than the banquet given to the same distinguished negotiator in London. At the latter there was little but the usual fluent compliments that come so naturally and are forgotten so soon, a little mutual official flattery between Lord Palmerston and the Earl of Aberdeen, and a short address from the guest of the evening that might as fitly have been spoken anywhere else or another occasion, being little more than one of those "neat and appropriate" addresses incumbent on every man to deliver in reply to the personal honour of a toast. But at Liverpool there has been a great improvement on this; the speeches are more characteristic, and take a wider range; they go beyond the threadbare congratulations of the concord that led two Ministries of opposite politics to agree in pursuing one line or policy in relation to China; and contain some remarks on that great empire and its inhabitants themselves, which contain information or opinions of value and weight. The speech of Sir H. Pottinger, for instance, gives some account of the spirit in which he conducted the negotiations, from which it appears that he acted more as a mediator for adjusting differences between the two parties, than as the agent of England demanding terms and enforcing conditions of peace. He also furnishes some particulars of the Chinese authorities with whom he had to deal, and they give a favourable idea of the Chinese character, at least as it is displayed by the rulers of the people. We have heard much of the craft, cunning, and double-dealing of the Chinese, and among the common mass in ordinary affairs, there is doubtless more than enough of it; an undue love of gain, and an overreaching spirit, are the vices of commerce, and of them the Chinese have not the exclusive possession. But among their negotiators and governors are to be found men of sound and clear views, great knowledge of business, and the power of adapting their policy to altered circumstances, which indicate a high degree of cultivation, though of a different kind from our own. Thus Sir H. Pottinger says of the Chinese High Commissioner, Ke-Ing:—

I believe, there does not exist an individual with more statesmanlike views in any country in the world—a man by feeling conscious of all the amenities of life, and particularly alive to that feeling which actuated and influenced those negotiations and characterised his conduct throughout. I could, if it were admissible in such a society and on such an occasion, relate to you instances of Ke-Ing's conduct as would astonish you; and I trust, that on some future occasion, her Majesty's Government will—if it were only to do him and the Chinese character generally justice—make his despatches and letters public.

The suggestion of making these documents public we strongly hope will be acted on; if faithfully translated, the "Blue Book" they would furnish would be what very few "Blue Books" of this kind are—entertaining as well as instructive. Sir Henry Pottinger again says:—

If those despatches and letters were published, it would not only astonish you, but all the world, to find such sentiments as they contain, expressed by one whom we have been in the habit of considering a well-versed Chinese Mandarin.

We have evidently rather underrated the talents of the Chinese Government, and we only require more knowledge to arrive at juster opinions of them. But, leaving this personal topic, Sir Henry Pottinger alludes to the treaty itself, which he again repeats (as if for the benefit of the wilfully ignorant conductors of the French press), secures to all the nations of the world the same advantages as England. It is no exclusive compact with this country; it was made by England, indeed, but it was in the name of the whole civilised world, and not for her own exclusive benefit. This was an advantage quickly perceived by the Chinese:—

The moment that I explained to the High Commissioner, Ke-Ing, the great advantages which must follow from such a provision in the treaty which I had the honour of conducting—advantages to China and to all other nations affected by it—he immediately concurred in my views and co-operated with my exertions, and did me the honour of requesting that, in case of any unforeseen difficulty arising in future, between China and those other European nations, I might act as the mediator between them, as the representative of England.

The advice Sir H. Pottinger gives of the necessity in our future intercourse with the Chinese, of conciliating the lower classes among them, and refraining from anything like interference with their political affairs, is valuable; and his opinion of the "incredible" and "unlimited" demand there is likely to be in that empire for our manufactures will be most satisfactory to those on whom the assertions of the market there being already overstocked, may have made some impression. Lord Stanley enlarged more freely on the questions involved in the proceedings than his colleague, the Earl of Aberdeen, on the occasion before alluded to. He enforced the necessity of the strictest observance of honour and good faith in all our transactions with the Chinese, and gave the following testimony, decisive from a Ministry, and referring no doubt to the punctual payment of the instalments of the ransom.

We have heard the Chinese spoken of as a tricky and over-reaching people, and that there may be such persons amongst them, particularly amongst the inferior dealers, I have no doubt; but I do not believe that such is the general character of the Chinese nation. On the contrary, so far as our later experience has gone, it has led me to believe that there is no nation which more highly values public faith in others than the Chinese; and, up to the present moment, I must say that there never was a government or a nation which more strictly and literally fulfilled the engagements into which it has entered.

He concluded by an impressive warning, that the Government, by arms and negotiations, had done its part, and that the issue was now intrusted to the merchants of England; and to them it may safely be left. It is a great credit to the men of Liverpool that they should have given so high a tone and so interesting a character to the proceedings of their complimentary dinner to Sir H. Pottinger. What was London about that its banquet was so commonplace in comparison with it?

THE COURT AND HAUT TON.

On Saturday last the Queen and Prince Albert came to town to see the cattle show. Her Majesty and the Prince returned to Windsor to dinner.

WINDSOR, SUNDAY.—This morning the Queen and Prince Albert, the Duke of Saxo-Coburg and Gotha, the Duke Ernest of Wurtemberg, the ladies and gentlemen of the Court, and the domestic household, attended divine service in the private chapel of the Castle. The Hon. and Rev. Charles Leslie Courtenay officiated.

MONDAY.—Their Royal Highnesses Prince Albert, the Duke of Saxo-Coburg and Gotha, and the Duke Ernest of Wurtemberg, attended by the Earl of Harrowick, Lord Charles Walsley, Mr. G. E. Anson, and Baron de Wangelmburg, left the Castle on horseback this morning to shoot in the neighbourhood of Cumberland Lodge. The Royal party returned early in the afternoon. The Queen, attended by the Marchioness of Dours, rode out in a pony phaeton at noon, attended on horseback by Major-General Sir Edward Bowater.

TUESDAY.—Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Saxo-Coburg and Gotha, and the Duke Ernest of Wurtemberg, left the Castle this morning, at a quarter before eleven o'clock, via Great Western and Dover Railways, en route to Ostend. The Queen and Prince Albert came to the door of the principal entrance to take leave of their Royal relatives. His Royal Highness Prince Albert rode out on horseback, attended by Major-General Sir Edward Bowater. The Countess of Charlemont has succeeded the Marchioness of Dours as the Lady in Waiting on the Queen. Vacant Hawarden has succeeded the Earl of Harrowick as the Lord in Waiting on her Majesty; and Admiral Sir Robert Otway has succeeded Colonel Berkeley Drummond as the Groom in Waiting.

WEDNESDAY.—The unfavourable state of the weather prevented the Queen and the Royal family from leaving the Castle to-day. His Royal Highness Prince Albert rode out on horseback in the morning, attended by Major-General Sir Edward Bowater.

WINDSOR, THURSDAY EVENING.—(From our own Correspondent.)—In consequence of the unfavourable state of the weather during the whole of the day, her Majesty has been prevented from taking her usual airing. The infant Royal Family have also, from the same cause, been confined within the Royal residence. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Major-General Sir Edward Bowater, took equestrian exercise in the New Riding-school. In consequence of her Majesty being slightly indisposed yesterday evening, the military band and her Majesty's private band were countermanded. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, attended by Lady Fanny Howard and the Countess of Worslaw, had the honour of dining at the Castle this evening.

DEATH OF LADY ANNE SMITH.—Lady Anne Calling Smith, daughter of the Earl of Mornington, died at Hampton Court Palace on Monday. This highly respected lady was sister of the late Marquis Walsley, of the present Earl of Mornington, the Duke of Wellington, Lord Cowley, and of the Hon. and Rev. Dr. Walsley.

LEAMINGTON SPA, Dec. 16.—Among the latest arrivals are Lord and Lady Montagu, the Baron Philipp Waldenoff, Sir George and Lady Soval, the Countess Alexander Dembinaka, and the Duke of Sutherland's family. The second subscription-hall of the season, which took place at the Upper Assembly Rooms on Wednesday last, was attended by a most numerous and brilliant company; among whom were the patron and patroness of the evening, Lady Georgiana Cathcart and R. Earl, Esq., Lord and Lady Somerville, Hon. Col. Cathcart, Lady Duberly, the Hon. J. Oughton, the Hon. Miss Yelverton, Col. Gooch, &c.

THE LATE PRINCESS SOPHIA.—A stone has just been affixed to the entrance to the catacomb containing the remains of her late Royal Highness the Princess Sophia of Gloucester, bearing the following inscription, "Princess Sophia Matilda, 1844."

JOLLY OLD CHRISTMAS.

WRITTEN AND COMPOSED BY J. AUGUSTINE WADE.

ten. risoluto p e roll. a tempo ten. f

A wel-come, Old Christ-mas, a wel-come once more! Though a twelve-month 'tis now since we met, Thy jol-ly old face looks as fresh as be-fore, Not a wrin-kle of age is there yet! Thy jol-ly old face looks as fresh as be-fore, Not a wrin-kle of age is there yet! And the rea-son is plain; for, while gay sum-mer bowers Em-broil-dor them-selves in their fast-fad-ing flowers, With man-tle of Hol-ly and I-vy thou'rt seen, With man-tle of Hol-ly and I-vy thou'rt seen, In the depth of De-

II.

A welcome, old Christmas, a welcome once more—
Though thy head be all frosty and chill,
Thy heart is as warm with its good kindly store
Of Affections and Fondnesses still
As ev'n in the days of our earlier years,
When our smiles were more often—less frequent our tears,
We greeted thy coming, and happy were we Thy evergreen Holly and Ivy to see!

CHORUS.

Then evergreen Holly and Ivy let's sing,
The leaves that crown'd Bacchus old Jolli-ty's King!

III.

What, tho' the sweet summer months have all sped,
And silence is in their lone bow'rs—
What, tho' the roses are wither'd or fled,
Still the Holly and Ivy are ours!

Oh! thus in the winter of life may we feel,
An enjoyment that even cold Time cannot steal—
A still blooming thought of some joy that is gone,
That will light us and warm us by Memory's sun!

CHORUS.

The evergreen Holly and Ivy let's sing,
The leaves that crown'd Bacchus, old Jolli-ty's King!

FINE ARTS.

THE BEAUTIES OF THE OPERA. Parts VIII. and IX. La Sylphide and Don Juan. BOQUE, Fleet-street.

This elegant work maintains its attraction: the portraits of Taglioni and Santag are complimentary (but we suppose gallantly so) to the two ladies. The expression of that of Taglioni, however, wants etherealism: as La Sylphide she is en caractère—we do not want a hall-room likeness of the fair dansuse; we should have preferred to have seen her portrayed as one of those beautiful personifications of a Muse or Grace in which she has so often proved how much poetry there may be in motion. The letter-press portion continues to be a little inflated;—but it seems to be written by an enthusiast, and we therefore excuse its occasional "bombast," and even think "it a style." The incidental illustrative cuts are exquisite, and in the highest degree characteristic. We have already lavished all our praise upon the getting up of this very elegant work—we can only repeat ourselves, and say our former meaning in other words, that it will be found an ornament to every literary table.

NEW MUSIC.

THE MUSICAL BIJOU, AN ALBUM OF POETRY AND MUSIC FOR 1845. D'ALMAINE, and Co., Soho-square.

This work does credit to the artists, in every department, who have been engaged upon it: the illustrations are beautiful in the extreme. We are informed that, "The whole have been copied, with slight alterations, by permission of the trustees, from manuscripts preserved in the British Museum; and executed in colours by J. Brandard;" and most beautifully we must say. The illuminated frontispiece and border are from the poems of the Duke of Orleans (father of Louis XII.), taken prisoner at the battle of Agincourt; the copy executed for Elizabeth of York, Queen of Henry VII. (Royal Col. 16, P. ii.) The illuminated title is from the same MS.—the presentation plate from various authorities—the table of contents from the Calendar prefixed to a fine missal (Sloane, 2905), and the covers; the front from a small, but rare missal (Harleian, 2936), the back composed. So much for the decorative part of the work, which, we regret to say, is the predominant excellence of the book, although many things in the vocal and instrumental departments deserve our heartiest commendation. Ubi plura nitent, we shall not be offended with the paris maculis which may be found throughout. Amongst the latter we must mention a mutilation of Bellini's duet from "Norma," which we cannot help thinking a musical sacrilege! But, altogether, the Bijou is a most elegant work—attractive in the ensemble, if not in detail. That enemy to true music, quadrille, occupies many pages which might have been more usefully applied—but "c'est la mode;" and a man or musician might as well be out of the world as out of the fashion.

FROST FAIR ON THE THAMES.

The recent frost has called up many recollections of similar visitations in this country; though, fortunately, that which has scarcely passed away, did not reach the severity of the event depicted in our engraving.

This represents a scene from "Frost Fair" on the Thames, in 1814; sketched by Luke Clennell, with all the skill of his truthful pencil. The locality is the immediate neighbourhood of London-bridge.

Of the event we find the following interesting notice in Mr. Cruden's valuable "History of Gravesend and the Port of London," lately published:—

"1814. The winter of this year was universally severe. On the eve of Epiphany, a frost commenced, that continued for several weeks; and during a great part of that time the Thames was frozen, to the indescribable distress of many industrious classes. On the 20th of January, a great fall of snow rendered the highway between Gravesend and Rochester impassable, until it was removed by the laborious exertions of the military stationed at Chatham. The intercourse by the water highway between Gravesend and London, was obstructed, but from this there could be no release by human aid; and those, whose means of earning a subsistence was suspended, awaited, with anxiety, the relief that was to be expected only from natural causes, and they hailed with gladness the day when the thaw commenced, that opened the avenues to the resumption of productive labour."

A sort of rude fair was held upon the ice; and printing-presses were set up there, at which were printed a memorial of the duration of this calamitous visitation—the following being a fac simile:—

FROST FAIR.

Amidst the Arts which on the THAMES appear,
To tell the wonders of this try year,
PRINTING claims prior place, which at one view,
Erects a monument of THAT and YOG.

Printed on the River THAMES, February 4, in the 54th year of the reign of King George the III. Anno Domini, 1814.

The frost soon afterwards terminated, and the Thames was again the scene of trade and industry.

FROST FAIR ON THE THAMES, IN 1814, FROM A DRAWING BY CLENNELL.

[illegible]

SMITHFIELD CATTLE MARKET, AT CHRISTMAS.

THE CHRISTMAS CATTLE AT SMITHFIELD.

The "Christmas Cattle Market" at Smithfield has this year excited considerable attention. As might be expected from the fine frosts experienced for some time past, and the consequent favourable state of the weather for slaughtering, the graziers were tolerably certain of realising more remunerating prices for the stock, especially the beasts, than we have reported for a lengthened period. In this expectation they were, however, in a great measure disappointed; for the atmosphere having suddenly become mild, many of the butchers in attendance, the number of which was exceedingly great, refused to purchase at anything like the asking quotations, some of which were high in the extreme. Hence the beef trade was, the time of year considered, in a very sluggish state, with the exception of a few of the finest animals producing high rates. The highest general figure did not exceed 4s. 6d. per 8lb.

In noticing the "pedigrees" of the show of beasts, we have to refer to the thirteen most wonderful Durhams and short horns sent by Sir C. Knightley, which for symmetry and weight were never excelled by any stock brought together for competition in any cattle yard in England. These extraordinary beasts, the whole of which were under five years old, were the admiration of all beholders, while there was only one of them under 200 stones (112).

The next in importance, were the thirty Herefords and Sussex beasts, the property of Mr. Senior, of Broughton House, near Aylesbury. Many of them weighed upwards of 250 stones, and were sold at from 25s to 26s per head. Mr. Senior was a successful exhibitor at the club's show.

We have also to mention the 43 Herefords offered by Mr. Rowland, of Crislow. This stock, considering the number shown by one gentleman as his own property, was decidedly the best in the market, though we consider that one of the Herefords sold by Mr. Senior was superior to anything we almost ever saw. Mr. Rowland exhibited an animal which carried off one of the prizes at a local show a few weeks since.

Mr. Guerrier had the celebrated short-horn which carried off the 23d prize, as awarded by the Smithfield Club. This, and three others—viz., a short-horn and two Herefords—were greatly and deservedly admired.

Mr. Morgan had the largest, and perhaps the most astonishing show of beasts of any salesman in the market, consisting of shorthorns, Devons, Herefords, &c. Mr. Vorley's stand was filled with many extremely good animals, which were sold at high prices.

On the whole, the Herefords stood at the top of the poll, both in weight and symmetry. The next in importance in these particulars, were the Devons, the next the Durhams, the next the short horns, and the next the Scots. In speaking of the latter breed, it is placed beyond a doubt, that the show was the very best ever noticed.

In the sheep, a very great improvement was noticed, indeed scarcely so fine a collection of half-breeds was ever known on such an occasion as the present. Mr. Wall had on offer forty wonderful Down and ten Gloucesters, the property of E. F. Wittingstall, Esq., of Langleybury, Herts; the former, which weighed on an average about 20 stones (140lb.), and produced 2s per head, were almost unrivalled; while the latter exceeded in weight 30 stones (210lb.), and found buyers at 4s each.

Very few foreign beasts or sheep were on sale, and there was scarcely any inquiry for them. The imports for the United Kingdom, since the previous Monday, amounted to 180 oxen and cows, and 290 sheep, in, for the most part, good condition.

The comparative supplies for this and last year were as follow:—

	Dec. 11, 1843.	Dec. 16, 1844.
Beasts .....	4,510	5,713
Sheep and Lambs .....	20,550	25,970
Cattle .....	93	111
Pigs .....	421	362

At the close of the market nearly the whole of the stock was disposed of.

ELECTION OF THE COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL.

St. Thomas's Day (Dec. 21), although the shortest day in the year, is, as regards the business of the Civil Government of the Metropolis, the longest, or, at least, the most important; for, upon this day, takes place, annually, the election of the members of the Court of Common Council. The writ and wage, who have sport of the citizens since the boom days of Charles II., have termed this council "the City Parliament." It is, however, the great legislative body of the Corporation; and a more appropriate opportunity of introducing its constitution to our readers, could not be chosen than this day, the anniversary of the election.

"The fluctuations in the constitution of the Common Council," say the Corporation Commissioners, "are not always to be accurately traced. In the earliest times, the words Comune Concilium, appear to have been applied sometimes to the whole body of citizens, sometimes to the magistracy (that is, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen), or the magistracy and sheriffs. In the reign of Henry III. a folkmoete seems to have been summoned to meet the magistracy three or four times in the year, and on special occasions. In the Saxon time, the folkmote, as the meeting of the entire body of people in the open air was called, or the hustings or common hall, when within doors, exercised the most important functions of local government; and, although these rights were placed in abeyance during the first shock of the Conquest, they were again claimed, and made the subject of frequent struggles, as reviving peace and prosperity afforded opportunities.

In the time of Edward I. and Edward II., a body analogous to the Common Council was formed by representatives from the different Wards of the City. From thence to the time of Richard II., the Companies or Mysteries returned representatives.

In the Mayoralty of Nicolas Pembre (7 and 8 Rich. II.), ordinances were made, establishing the election by Wardmotes.

The Common Council has increased its own number, and has altered the disposition of the different numbers among the several Wards, under the power which it claims of internal legislation. In the great Quo Warranto case, in the reign of Charles II., the City pleaded the custom as follows:—"That within the said City there has been, time out of mind, a Common Council assembled as often as necessary, consisting of the Mayor, Aldermen, and certain of the Citizens, not exceeding 250 persons thereunto annually elected, called the Commons of the City."

The number has never exceeded 240; but the real state of the custom is the subject of much doubt among those best acquainted with the Corporation.

We find the numbers to have been as follow:—In 1384 (7 Rich. II.), 96 members; July 31, 1384, 287; 1340, 197; Stowe's Survey, 1717, 231; Stowe, 1736 and 1755, 214; 1837, 240; reduced in 1840 to 265.

From 1669 to 1676, several attempts were made by the Aldermen to limit the choice of the Wardmotes to citizens of the higher classes; but no permanent regulation was the result.

In 1831, a Committee reported that persons convicted of defrauding in weights and measures, or having compounded with their creditors, or of having been bankrupt without paying 20s. in the pound, were ineligible as Common Councilmen, according to a supposed analogy to a standing order excluding them from Committees of that body.

The Court of Common Council consists, first, of the Aldermen (including the Lord Mayor), and secondly, of the Commons, or Common Councilmen, in all 265. They are elected by the 25 wards, excluding Bridge Without. The election, as we have already intimated, takes place every year, on St. Thomas's Day, 21st of December; the candidate must be a householder of the ward for which he declares; he must also be a freeman. The Alderman of the ward is the providing officer at the election; and the return of the persons elected is made on Monday next after the Epiphany, i.e., 6th January.

Of the functions of the Council, it will be only necessary to observe, that it is the legislative body of the corporation, and in that capacity enjoys an unusual degree of power, such as that of making important alterations in the constitution of the latter; that it dispenses the funds, manages the landed property, has the care of the bridges, and of the Thames navigation, with many other powers and trusts.

The Court also elects the Common Sergeant, the City Solicitor, the Town Clerk, the Remembrancer, the Judges of the Sheriffs' Court, the City Tradesmen, about one-half the Commissioners of Sewers; and several subordinate officers, as the Sergeant-Carver, Sergeants of the Channel, Yeomen of the Water-side, Sword-bearer, and Sword-bearer's Young Man.

A great defect in the constitution of the Court is the inequality of the wards, and the number of representatives returned for each ward bearing no just and uniform relation to the property of the ward, the number of inhabitants, or even of resident freemen. The Ward of Bridge, for example, returns eight Common Councilmen (formerly sixteen), while the large Ward of Farringdon Without, with a population fifteen times as numerous, returns only twice the number; so that one householder in the Ward of Bridge has the same influence as nearly eight householders in the Ward of Farringdon Without; and the same disproportion prevails in many other wards.

Each Common Councilman wears a robe of Messaline blue, trimmed with badger's fur—a costume, probably, of the reign of Edward VI. The chamber in which the meetings of the Court are held, with the presentation of a petition at the bar, is shown in our engraving. The Council-chamber is a very tasteful room, erected by the late George Dance, Esq., R. A., and is approached from the northern side of the Guildhall (i.e., the Great or Common Hall), by an elegant corridor. Within the chamber are assembled some of the chief historical treasures of the Corporation. In a marble niche, at the west end, behind the President's chair, is a marble statue of King George III., executed by Chantrey, for the Corporation, at an expense of £3089 9s. 6d.; on the pedestal is an inscription written by Mr. Alderman Birch, who, in the year of its erection, 1818, was Lord Mayor. Here, too, are busts of Admiral Lord Nelson, the Duke of Wellington, Granville Sharp, and Thomas Clarkson. The walls are hung with pictures, among which are a portrait of her present Majesty; portraits of Queen Caroline and the Princess Charlotte, by Lord Leighton; of Lord Rodney, Nelson, Duncan, St. Vincent, Howe, Hood, Cornwallis, &c.; and some pictures of battles, civil ceremonies, &c.; the collection being, altogether, a very interesting one. Among the latest additions is Mrs. Carpenter's excellent portrait of Lord Deans.

The office of Common Councilman may be regarded as the stepping-stone to the highest civic honour. Generally speaking, the Aldermen consist of Common Councilmen, who have won the good opinions of their fellow-citizens, and who are presumed to be fitted for the higher offices to which, as Aldermen, they are liable—the Sherifalty and the Mayoralty.

CHURCHES OF THE METROPOLIS.—No. L.

BEDDINGTON CHURCH.

The reader is aware that this series of illustrations occasionally extends beyond the metropolis; and on this occasion, we must crave the same license.

Beddington is one of the most rural villages in the picturesque environs of London. It lies in the hundred of Wellington, in Surrey, adjoining the parishes of Mitcham, Croydon, and Cansham. The village is rich in Roman remains and the ancient Stone-street, in all probability, crossed the parish.

BEDDINGTON CHURCH.

The church of Beddington, we gather from Brayley's laboriously compiled "History of Surrey," is mentioned in the Domesday Book; but no part of the present structure can be referred to the remote era of that record. It would seem, indeed, from the style of the architecture, to have been erected during the reign of Richard II.; a surmise receiving corroboration from a bequest made by Nicolas de Carreu, in 1390, of £20 "to the building of the church." The edifice is dedicated to St. Mary, and consists of a nave and aisles, a chancel, and, at the west end, a massive tower; together with a large south porch, and a monumental chapel for the Carreu family attached to the chancel. The tower, which is supported by strong buttresses at the angles, was partly rebuilt on the old plan, about the year 1839.

The entrance doorway to the tower is formed by a high-pointed arch, over which is a very large and handsome window, comprising three tiers of trefoiled lights, progressively rising to the apex. The entrance from the porch is by a pointed arch, with deep cavetto in the mouldings, and quatrefoils in the spandrels.

The interior fittings are mostly modern; there is an ancient dipping-funt; and in the singers' gallery, are four wooden stalls, or misericords, ornamented with foreign shields, a female head in a reticulated head-dress, and other carvings; these stalls having been, in all probability, provided for the "four St. chaplains" which Sir Nicolas de Carreu, in his will, dated 1387, directed "should be found, one of them for ever, and the others for five years, to pray for his soul, and all Christian souls, in the church of Beddington." The church abounds with costly monuments of the Carreu family; besides mural tablets, bosses, and other sepulchral memorials of persons of distinction; all which are elaborately detailed in Mr. Brayley's work.

The churchyard, too, abounds with these mementoes of mortality: the aisle the church is partly shrouded with ivy; and some noble elms, and a wide-spreading yew-tree, overshadow the graves in the inclosure.

EXTENSION OF THE SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.—The South Western Railway proprietors, at their meeting on Saturday last, empowered the directors to proceed with the usual forms necessary for extending the line from the present Nine Elms terminus to the vicinity of Hungerford and Waterloo bridges, and to the Thames; and from Wimbledon to Epsom; from Weybridge to Staines and Wokingham; from Wokingham, by Guildford, Godalming, and Chichester, to Portsmouth and Farnham, including the purchase of the Guildford Junction Railway; from Hook-pit, for a main line of railway to Mottisfont, on the Salisbury branch; and from Salisbury to Sherborne; and Yeovil to Dorchester and Weymouth; and from Basingstoke to the Great Western at Didcot and Swindon.

THE COMMON COUNCIL CHAMBER AT GUILDHALL.

CHRISTMAS DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES AT THE LIVERPOOL COLLEGIATE INSTITUTION.

CHRISTMAS DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES AT THE LIVERPOOL COLLEGIATE INSTITUTION.

The half-yearly Distribution of Prizes, at this well-conducted establishment, took place on Friday, the 13th inst., in the Lecture Hall of the College. The middle and upper galleries, which were appropriated to the parents and other relatives of the pupils, were crowded with ladies and gentlemen, comprising many of the first families in Liverpool. The body of the hall was devoted to the students, and the music-gallery, or stage, was completely filled. The whole number present must have considerably exceeded 3000. Our engraving, from a sketch by a clever Liverpool artist, represents this interesting scene. Before the proceedings of the day commenced, the vast assembly were gratified and entertained by an admirable selection of sacred music, performed by Mr. Brown, professor of music to the institution, upon the powerful and fine-toned organ belonging to the Philharmonic Society.

Shortly after eleven o'clock, the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Chester appeared on the platform, and took the chair, amidst loud acclamations. On the right of his lordship were James Lawrence, Esq., Mayor of Liverpool, the Rev. Rector Brooks, the Rev. H. M'Neale, the Rev. Dr. Tattershall, Thomas

Sands, Esq., the Rev. T. Nolan, the Rev. W. Hampton, G. Kendall, Esq., the Rev. J. H. Stewart, &c. On his lordship's left were the Rev. W. J. Conybeare, M.A., principal of the institution, the Rev. Dr. Booth and the Rev. J. B. Brown, M.A., vice principals, the Masters of the different classes in the institution, Rd. Herbert, Esq., A. Tians, Esq., Lords Ronger and Molyneux, Josiah Boker, Esq., &c. &c. The proceedings were opened by the scholars raising the chant, "Jam lucis orto sidera."

The Lord Bishop then came forward and addressed the meeting on the principles of the institution, and concluded in these emphatic words:—"One of the advantages of the present generation is, that religion is now made an essential part of education—that young people are not now taught everything but that which it behoves them most to know, as their fathers and grandfathers too often were. You, my young friends, may not understand this now; but you may believe that which the experience of your older friends will tell you, that the principles of religion in which you are instructed in your youth will become of more and more value to you as the value of everything else becomes less and less, and that they will stand you in stead when the time comes that everything else shall be of no value at all." (Applause.)

The distribution of the prizes was then proceeded with, by the Reverend Principal introducing the prizemen, the Lord Bishop presenting the prizes, and addressing the recipients.

The Lord Bishop expressed the great satisfaction he felt in giving the prizes. The prizemen were greeted with loud applause on leaving the platform; and the Principal then directed the scholars to sing "Jubilate Deo," which was accordingly done—the whole assembly joining in the psalm.

The Right Reverend Prelate having addressed the scholars, they sang, in beautiful style, the National Anthem, the company joining in chorus.

The Rev. Rector Brooks, Chairman of the Board of Directors, then proposed a vote of thanks to the Lord Bishop, which was seconded by his Worship the Mayor; and the Right Rev. Prelate having thanked the company, left the chair amidst loud applause, and the meeting separated.

Of the Liverpool Collegiate Institution, an Engraving and Description, with the details of the opening of the Establishment, will be found in No. 37 of our Journal. There are already upwards of 1800 pupils on its books, and, judging from the enthusiasm manifested on Friday, there is no reason to suppose that it has attained its maximum of success. We regret that we have not room for a list of the Prizes, which fill more than half of a column of the Liverpool Mail.

The Lecture-hall, in which the Prizes were delivered on Friday, is a handsome, well-ventilated apartment, 30 feet high, from the floor to the ceiling, with two Galleries, containing accommodation for 3700 persons; a spacious Music-room, with rising seats for 300 persons, opens from the Lecturer's Platform, through a lofty arch, the whole width of the wall of the Lecture-hall, in which a powerful organ is erected.

The Lecture Hall is a fine structure, comprising five sides of an octagon. It is lighted from the roof by a large octagonal window, richly grained, gracefully dropping from the centre; and by five lance-shaped flat lights placed around it. The body and galleries are so constructed that all can distinctly see and hear the speakers. In this hall lectures are delivered on Tuesday and Friday evenings, to the members of the Institution. Mr. Charles Kemble has delivered his readings in it during the past season, and this gentleman, with Sir H. Bishop, Dr. Reinhardt, Professors Taylor and Cowper, and other eminent lecturers, are announced to appear during the ensuing season. The Lecture Hall is illuminated in the evening by a powerful concentrated light, of a novel design, placed in the centre pendant, as well as by lights placed beneath each gallery, which were lighted on the occasion of the prize delivery.

FATAL AND DISTRESSING ACCIDENT TO MISS CLARA WEBSTER.

Last Saturday night a very lamentable accident took place at Drury-lane Theatre, during the performance of "The Revolt of the Harem," which has proved fatal to Miss Clara Webster, the dancer. In the second act of the ballet, the ladies of the Harem are discovered bathing, among whom Zulica, the royal slave (Miss Webster), is one. During the scene, the gas placed at the bottom of the stage, or under the sunken portion of it, where the water pieces, or waves, are placed, caught the light drapery of Miss Webster's dress, and in an instant her whole person was enveloped in flames.

This frightful event, taking place on the stage, in sight of the audience, the whole house was in a state of consternation, and screams issued from the ladies in front of the boxes and pit, who were the first to perceive the appalling accident.

The whole corps de ballet, who were on the stage with her, closed round her, to extinguish the flames, but, terrified at the appearance which presented itself, they retreated, and she rushed forward alone towards the front of the stage. Mrs. Plunkett alone endeavored to extinguish the flames, and in so doing was herself nearly falling a victim to her intrepidity and good feelings. At this moment a carpenter belonging to the theatre sprang from the wing of the stage, and throwing himself upon the young lady, extinguished the fire by rolling upon her. In doing so, however, he severely cut her upper lip, and received some slight injury himself from the burning clothes. Miss Webster was immediately taken into the green-room, and placed upon a sofa. Her clothes were nearly all consumed, at least all her external garments. Fortunately, Dr. Marsden was in the theatre, and his assistance was rendered without delay. The usual applications of spirits of wine and water, flour, &c., were had recourse to, and every as-assistance was rendered. Miss Webster's face was much blistered, and in some parts scorched, the eye-lashes and eye brows burnt off; but the hair of the head was untouched. The lower extremities were much scorched, and the flesh of the hips was also much burnt. The hands also suffered dreadfully. Miss Webster never lost her recollection, but exhibited, notwithstanding the dreadful agony under which she laboured, great physical power, and extraordinary moral fortitude. She was conveyed to her home, in Upper Notting-street, in a carriage, attended by Dr. Marsden, who administered fresh applications, and who was afterwards successful in his attendance. Mr. Liston, the eminent surgeon, and other medical gentlemen, were called in, but they concurred in all that Dr. Marsden had done, and his mode of treatment was adhered to.

THE LATE MISS CLARA WEBSTER.

On Monday there were some favourable symptoms, and it was hoped the unfortunate young lady would recover. We sincerely regret to state, however, that Miss Webster died at half past three o'clock on Tuesday morning, from the effects of the injuries she received. Her medical attendant, Dr. Marsden, was with her from ten to twelve on Monday night, at which time she was much worse than in the early part of the day, and symptoms of the most alarming nature continued to show themselves—namely, frequent vomitings and occasional faintings. Having communicated to her family and friends that nothing more could be done, and that there were no hopes of saving the patient's life, Dr. Marsden took his departure, and returned again at four o'clock on Tuesday morning, when he found that she had breathed her last about half an hour previously. She died very tranquilly; indeed, she went off as if merely sinking into a gentle slumber. She bore her sufferings with great fortitude, and did not appear to shrink from the prospect of death, which, it was intimated during the evening, awaited her.

Mr. Liston was present when she died. He had not been in the room more than a few minutes when Miss Webster ceased to breathe. Miss Webster's mother had but a short time left the room, for the purpose of taking a little rest, and when the melancholy intelligence of her daughter's death was made known to her she became almost distracted.

It is stated that even up to six o'clock on Monday evening every symptom appraised favourable, that shortly before that period she drank some tea, and partook of a small portion of roll, expressing herself thankful that she could enjoy that repast.

THE EMIGRANTS' FAREWELL.—See next page.

Mrs. Webster was in the 31st year of her age. Mr. Webster, of the Haymarket Theatre, is a brother, by a former marriage, of the late Mr. Webster, the father, who, we understand, was married three times, and had families by each wife. The deceased was the issue of the last marriage.

We perceive that a benefit is to take place at Drury Lane Theatre on Monday next for the benefit of Miss Webster's family, and we direct attention to it in the hope of being instrumental in affording some slight alleviation under the painful circumstances.

THE CORONER'S INQUIRY.

An inquest was held on the body of the unfortunate young lady on Thursday morning, at the Green Man public-house, New Road.

The jury, having been sworn, proceeded to view the body at the house where she died, 14, Upper Norton-street. It lay in the back bedroom on the first floor, and had been placed in a shell. The face, neck, and arms, were discoloured and blistered, from the effects of the burning. The face wore a calm, but sorrowful expression; it was bedecked with artificial flowers.

The first witness called was

Mrs. A. B. Taylor, the landlady of the house in which deceased lodged. She stated: I knew deceased, who, I believe, was 21 years of age. She died in my house at 14, Upper Norton-street, at ten minutes past three o'clock on Tuesday morning, in the presence of Mr. Lison, the surgeon, and the nurse. Mr. Lison first told me she was dead. I was at home when she was brought home in a coach, accompanied by Mr. Marsden and another gentleman, after the accident; she had received some severe injuries from the burning, but was quite sensible. She was immediately put to bed, and Dr. Marsden dressed her wounds with flour and wadding, and afterwards washed them with spirits of wine and water. The first application of spirits of wine was made at the theatre. Mr. Lison arrived shortly afterwards. Had continued to attend her until the nurse came. Had thought her better on Monday morning, but towards evening she became worse. I was with her on Monday evening till the time of her death, with the exception of a short interval.

The Coroner: Had she any difficulty in breathing?

Witness: Yes; she had great difficulty in breathing, which I first noticed about seven o'clock. I think she was insensible from that time until her death. She became delirious about that time, and gradually sunk until she died.

The Coroner: Did she make any complaint against any one, or blame any person for what had happened?

Witness: No, Sir; none whatever.

The Coroner: Do you blame any one, Mrs. Webster?

Mrs. Webster (sorrowfully): No, indeed, Sir.

The Coroner: You have no complaint to make against any person in authority at the theatre?

Mrs. Webster: No, Sir.

Mr. Robert Lison, the surgeon, of Clifford-street, Bond-street, was next called. He stated: At twelve o'clock on Saturday night I first commenced my attendance on the deceased; found her very severely injured, more especially about the upper parts of the body—the face, neck, and arms. I saw her within an hour after the accident had happened. The whole of the back and shoulders were also much injured. I found that flour and wadding had been applied. I heard that spirits of wine and water had also been applied. No alteration in treatment was made by me. Saline medicines were given, and wine, as a stimulant. She was not so much in pain as depressed in spirits. I saw her again on Sunday and Monday, and on Tuesday morning I entered the room just as she was expiring.

By the Coroner: She died from the injuries she received by the burning. She was washed with spirits of wine and water, in the proportion of two spoonfuls of spirits of wine to a pint of water. There was never any hope of her recovery from the effects of the injuries she received. I have no hesitation in saying that these injuries were the cause of death.

Daniel Coyle was next called. He said: I am a stone-mason, residing at 39, Crown-street, St. James's, and am regularly employed at Drury Lane Theatre as a carpenter. It was a bath scene in which she was performing, and her clothes caught fire in the bath, but I believe no person saw them ignite.

Mrs. Webster said she did not believe that any person saw them catch fire. Daniel Coyle (resumed): The bottom part of her dress was on fire when I first perceived her. She ran along out of the bath and up the steps leading on to the stage. The more she ran the more her clothes burnt. I ran after her, caught her in my arms, threw her down, and rolled over her.

The Coroner: Did that extinguish the flames?

Witness: Not quite; but some of the other men then came up and helped. I had nearly brushed the flames out with my arms and hands. (The poor fellow wore his right arm in a sling, and appeared to be suffering severe pain from the effects of the burns he had received.)

By the Coroner: There was nothing unusual in the disposition of the lamps that night. The lamps are of oil, and with glasses. There are two baths, one before the other; the performers stand in an opening about three feet wide. The lamps are a little under the stage, but under the stage and over the lamps the dresses of the performers might ignite themselves. If a wire work were over these the dresses could not get to them. The ladies in that scene are supposed to be throwing the water over themselves.

Mrs. Mary Webster: I have been a widow for nine years. The deceased was my daughter. At present I live with my son at 22, St. Martin's street, Leicester-square. I was in the dressing-room at the time when the accident happened. I was not told of it, but hearing a screaming, I came down and found that she had been taken into the green room. I said to her how was it that no one came sooner to your assistance? If I had been in the wings I could have saved you with my cloak. She replied: "Yes, mamma, you could." I had often been there before when she performed in the same part, and wore the same kind of gauze dress which she then had on. I never had any apprehension of danger.

Coyle was again recalled, and said there was a pump just underneath the stairs, and buckets were kept hanging along the side of the stage in case of fire. From the time he had first seen her to the time he caught her, she had run about eighteen yards. He caught her just as she got out of the sight of the audience.

The Coroner said he supposed the gentlemen of the jury had no doubt that the deceased had met her death accidentally.

The jury said they had none whatever.

The Coroner said it was a most unfortunate thing that persons when they are in their clothes on fire, almost in every instance lost all presence of mind, and rushed into passages or into the open air. The very act of moving was the worst thing they could do, and by standing up they made themselves a burning pile, the flames of which came up round the head and neck—the most vital parts. If he saw cases people could be extinguished for a moment, and throw themselves down on the ground, the flames might be extinguished and their lives saved. But by standing up, or running up, the most fatal consequences ensued. He then proceeded to make some observations on a process of preparing dresses in such a manner as to prevent their being inflammable. He had written to Dr. Gardner, an eminent chemist, and had received a letter in reply, stating that there was an invention by a Mr. Hodgson of a kind of starch prepared with an infusion of alum, or mixture of ammonia, and that material so prepared with this would not ignite. He produced several pieces of muslin so prepared and subjected them to the flame of a candle, but although the texture would become perfectly red hot it would not produce any flame. The Coroner also expressed his regret that the lamps alluded to had not been guarded by a lattice-work of wire, which would prevent the possibility of the dresses of the performers coming in contact with them. (Hear, hear, from the jurors.) The number of deaths from burning and scalding which continually occurred in the metropolis was perfectly surprising; and most of them resulting from the want of the commonest precautions. He had one such case the previous day at the Royal Free Hospital, in the Great-street-road, and another in the parish of Kensington.

Mr. Wall, the foreman of the jury, concurred in the observations which had fallen from the Coroner, and expressed the opinion of the jury that greater precautions than those at present adopted were necessary at our public theatres, considering the dangers to which the female artists were exposed. In this melancholy case there was not a bucket of water at hand, or an asbestos dress to throw over the burning clothes of the deceased.

The jury then recorded a verdict of "Accidental death."

Mr. Wakley condoled with Mrs. Webster on the distressing calamity.

EMIGRANTS ON THEIR WAY TO THE PLACE OF EMBARKATION.

In the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, of April 13, in the present year, we gave a full account, with picturesque views, of the embarkation of Emigrants by Sydney, together with an engraving of the ship St. Vincent. A scene in the between-decks, and plans of the accommodations on board, &c. Since that time Emigration has been progressively going on, not only to the South Seas, but also to the Canada, and vast numbers of persons have availed themselves of the Government grant to quit their native shores for the purpose of seeking a better subsistence in the land of the stranger; and when we look at the existing condition of a considerable portion of our agricultural and manufacturing population, it excites but little wonder that a feverish restlessness should arise for change, though, unfortunately, it but too frequently happens, that a removal from one locality causes very trifling improvement, if any at all, in another. Like disease, we may change the place of our abode, but still keep the pain.

By a vote of the House of Commons a large sum was appropriated to enable families, and single men and women, to emigrate, free of expense—the men to consist of agricultural labourers, shepherds, bricklayers, and masons, wheelwrights, smiths, carpenters, &c.; and the single women and single men not to be less than eighteen years of age, and under thirty. A form of application is sent up to the agents, stating the place to which the applicant wishes to emigrate, their name written by themselves (if they can write), whether in the receipt of parish relief, and if so, for how long? their present place of residence, and other minor particulars, together with the trade or calling of each, age at the last birth day, and certificate of baptism. The applicants are likewise required to make a declaration that they have read the regulations for the selection of emigrants; have neither by themselves nor any other person paid, or authorized to be paid, any sum of money beyond the Government bounty, excepting for bedding, box, and utensils, and they must pledge themselves to conform to the rules for the management and welfare of all on board, and not leave the ship until she reaches her destination. With these documents must be forwarded certificates, signed by two respectable householders, not being publicans, or dealers in beer or spirits (why this latter exclusion should be made we really cannot see), that they have known the applicants (for the time mentioned) working at their occupation, and that they believe them to be honest, industrious, sober—of general good character, and not likely to become a burthen to the Colony. The next requisites are the certificates of a physician or a surgeon, as to bodily health; of a magistrate, Protestant Clergyman, or Catholic Priest, that the signatures to the other certificates are genuine. These forms are invariably used in all cases of unmarried men and women, and those for married people with families are much the same, except that the plural is used instead of the singular.

It has been generally supposed that the free emigrants are all paupers, glad to escape from the thralldom and confinement of a union workhouse; but this is a great mistake. There may be, and so doubt are, many of this character, but the chief portion are cottagers, most of whom have never received parish relief—families struggling with numerous difficulties to gain a precarious livelihood, and enduring severe privations and hardships in the inclement season of winter; and some few are persons who have been better off in the world, but, reduced by unseasonable events, are desirous of speculating with their little remaining property, under a hope of retrieving their circumstances, and amongst these may be found individuals whose wounded pride cannot bear the thoughts of their old associates and friends witnessing their descent to poverty.

The general age of married men and women who wish to take advantage of the grant must be under forty at the time of embarkation, and parents who are still hale and capable of work, between forty and fifty years old, with grown-up children, are taken, provided some of the latter are above ten years of age, according to the following proportions:—

If the age of the father or mother, or both, be above....	40 and under 49 they must have 1 child above 10	50 and under 59 they must have 2 children	60 and under 69 they must have 3 children
40 ..	44 ..	48 ..	52 ..
44 ..	48 ..	52 ..	56 ..
48 ..	52 ..	56 ..	60 ..
52 ..	56 ..	60 ..	64 ..
56 ..	60 ..	64 ..	68 ..
60 ..	64 ..	68 ..	72 ..
64 ..	68 ..	72 ..	76 ..
68 ..	72 ..	76 ..	80 ..
72 ..	76 ..	80 ..	84 ..
76 ..	80 ..	84 ..	88 ..
80 ..	84 ..	88 ..	92 ..
84 ..	88 ..	92 ..	96 ..
88 ..	92 ..	96 ..	100 ..

and there have been, even at this latter period of life, many who have braved the perils of the ocean—

"Hope and enterprise filling the sails
With their eager breath!"

In order to locate themselves in an Eldorado of the imagination—unmindful of "Home, sweet Home," amidst the soil that is sanctified by the ashes of their forefathers; and, let the descendants be in what part of the habitable globe they may, they will still look towards England, and give no other place the name of "Home." It is no difficult matter to quit the land of our nativity; but whilst the pulses of existence continue to throb in the human frame, the link which binds us to the spot where our eyes first opened to the light of Heaven, as we hang upon the bosom of a mother, can never be broken. We have known settlers in various parts of the world who have been residents there thirty, ay, even forty years, and though on the verge of eternity, still their hearts beat, dearest affections, have been bound up with England, Ireland, or Scotland, and they have longed to lay their perishing remains by the side of kindred dust.

Beside the free emigrants, are what are denominated storage passengers—that is, those who pay for their voyage out according to a fixed scale, and generally consist of young men willing to push their fortunes, or having colonial appointments—eccentric talent and genius, longing to sift the treasures of a new world—cautious speculators in human wants and human miseries—debtors who have lived too freely in England, and consequently wish to test the acquaintance of their creditors with a long list of strangers. Some have prospered exceedingly; more have returned back, much worse than they set out, whilst in numerical superiority the greater part lie buried in the silent grave.

Yet all this is going on apparently without exciting the slightest observation from those who remain behind. Thousands quit the rural villages of this country to embark for far distant lands, and yet but little notice is taken of it. The political quack doctors of the times assert, that as phlebotomy is necessary to allow of an unrestrained action of the heart, so is running off the blood of kindred required to preserve a healthy state of society; otherwise, as the veins get clogged with the overflux of the streams of life, so is a superabundant population calculated to produce an unnatural and diseased condition amongst the community in general. It perhaps would be well if these empirics, with those who manufacture the nostrums, were shipped in bulk to experience the effects of their own prescriptions.

It has hitherto proved manifest that emigrants have not been lacking. Hundreds go out every month, and from what we have seen of the men, women, and children, they are certainly some of the finest specimens of the sons and daughters of Old England. We had frequently remarked this on former occasions, whilst witnessing their embarkation, and last week we had an opportunity of seeing an intermediate stage, between their acceptance as emigrants and departure from the endearing haunts of childhood, and the arrival at the depot near the Royal Dockyard at Deptford—which, to do the agents justice, is fitted up very comfortably for their reception. This intermediate stage forms the subject of our illustration. There were two covered or tiled farmer's hay-waggons—one from a parish in Buckinghamshire, and the other (we believe) from the neighbourhood of Northampton; they had joined company on the road. The women and children, with but few exceptions, occupied the conveyances, which were loaded with packages, bundles, and boxes; a few of the more elderly females walked on the pathway by the side of their husbands and sons; the younger men trudging it with seeming glee, and carrying various articles we conjecture for immediate use. It was indeed a most picturesque spectacle, and well worthy the pencil of the artist. The leafless trees and hedges—the merry road, with its long serpentine wheel tracks; the yellow waggons, with their animate and living freight, covered with light canvas; the women habited in blue or red cloaks; the men in their frocks blending in colour with the many hues of the bundles; and, above all, the object of their journey was well calculated to excite human sympathy. Yet no one appeared sad or sorrowful—on the contrary, all seemed to be cheerful; and their clean and decent appearance bore witness to the propriety of their general habits; the whole looked remarkably healthy, especially the children. By this time they are on their way to other regions: may prosperity and happiness attend them!

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COMMISSIONER OF LORARY.—On Tuesday a commission of lunacy was opened before Mr. Commissioner Winkles, at the Swan Tavern, Bridge-road, Battersea, to investigate as to the state of mind of Mr. John Smith, aged 60, formerly a wine merchant, described in the commission as "late of King-street, Golden-square, but now of Calcuttack place, Bridge-road, Battersea." Among other evidence of lunacy the following facts were stated:—About three years since he went out, and on being met by his second son in Red Lion-square, and asked where he was going? he said he was going to Newgate for the purpose of being hung, as he had robbed the country, and was also a murderer. On a subsequent occasion the son followed him when he went out. On this occasion Mr. Smith went to Newgate, and rang the bell at Mr. Cope's (the governor's) door, and was answered by a female. On being asked what he wanted, he said he wanted to see Mr. Cope, as he wished to be hung for having robbed the country. The jury returned a verdict, "That Mr. John Smith was of unsound mind, and had been so since the 1st of January, 1843."

THE LORD MAYOR AND ST. STEPHEN'S, WALKBROOK.—In the Court of Common Pleas on Thursday, the case of Gibbs and another v. Flight and another, which involved the most vexed questions respecting the accounts of the parish of St. Stephen, Walkbrook, was brought forward and excited much interest in court. It was an action of trover brought by Mr. Ald. Gibbs (the present Lord Mayor) as perpetual churchwarden of the parish of St. Stephen, Walkbrook, to recover possession of certain parish books, now in the possession of the defendant, but actually to try the legality of the select vestry existing in the parish. After a mass of documentary evidence had been read, counsel on both sides agreed that a nominal verdict for the plaintiff should be entered, subject to a special case for the consideration of the court above. Verdict entered for the plaintiff accordingly.

Mr. Edward King, residing at 2, Kensington-gardens, Brighton, died a few days ago in his 100th year. Mr. King was a clerk in the Middle-street Brewery before the time even of the late Mr. William Wigney, and continued in the counting-house till he was nearly 90 years old.

There is to be an investiture of the Knights of St. Patrick on the 4th of January. It is said that the Marquis of Waterford and the Earl of Rose are to be the new Knights, in the place of the late Marquis of Donagall and Earl Talbot, who has just received the Order of the Garter.

On the 20th ult., about mid-day, a fire broke out at Constantinople, in the quarter called Alajada Haman, a short distance from the port, and consumed about fifty houses, and a great number of shops.

Upwards of 3000 persons were assembled at Paris on Sunday in the Halles aux Draps, to witness the ceremony of the distribution of prizes, by the Prefect of the Seine, to the journeymen who have attended with the best success the lectures of the Professors at the Association Polytechnique. The scene was striking. The Prefect delivered an impressive address, and several musical compositions were sung by the pupils of the Association.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—"B. S. J."—In the problem alluded to, the difficulty is to make with a Pawn and not with the Queen. In the strategems of chess, those problems employing, what are termed capt Pawns, are the most ingenious. To his second question: Yes.

"A. M."—Yes.

"Vincenzo."—It is not stalemate if B has any pieces to move. If the King cannot move, A can oblige him to move his pieces. Stalemate is now recognized as a drawn game. The third question is uninteresting.

"A. R."—Pockington.—Try to find it out: it is so very easy. Communications are (thankfully) acknowledged from "S. R. C." and "E. Burbridge" (whose problem is too simple).

"T. P."—Under the circumstances, the King can castle. The second question is answered above. 16 moves are allowed to make your adversary's King at the end of the game; if you cannot checkmate after trying so long, you do not deserve to win. It must be then dismissed as a drawn game.

"R. H. B."—When the King castles on his Queen's side, he moves only two squares, the Rook occupying the Queen's square.

"D. D."—Two Queens are allowable.

There has been no time within our recollection, and we are old sinners at chess, so replete with excitement to the lovers of this noble game as this present period. No fewer than five or six matches by correspondence are in progress—chess dinners—fêtes &c., are continually being given. That excellent professional "The Chess Player's Chronicle," promises an increased fund of amusement during the ensuing year; and the "Palamede" for November, just come to hand, presents us with a chess vade-mecum. What next? Eight pages too of correspondence relative to the forthcoming match between England and France. When will this said match commence? The unfortunate check given to Mr. Staunton by that malicious player frer has made him caste whether he would or no; this, together with the difficulty of deciding the number of games to each de, and the mode of opening several of the games, places this interesting fight in a peculiarly perplexing predicament. We hope, for the sake of our readers, the games will shortly begin; if they do not, we shall feel obliged to challenge the "Palamede" or "Chess Player's Chronicle" to play a match with our illustrious selves. Sorry should we be, to be driven to no dreadful an alternative, as exciting to ourselves as it would be, we fear, tedious to our readers.

Solution to our last.

The solution sent by J. C. is correct and good. We however, prefer the following:—

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Bp to Q R's sq	King takes Bishop (best)
2. Rook to Q Kt 4th	King moves
3. King moves anywhere	King to adv. R sq
4. Kt to Q B 3d	Pawn moves
5. Rook mates at Q Kt sq

Krattum. In our last Solution, for B checks at Q Kt 2nd, read B checks at his square.

PROBLEM. No. 53.

The following excellent example of a conclusion of a game, is taken from "La Palamede," Nov. 15, just received

White to move and make in seven moves.

BLACK.

WHITE.

The Solution in our next.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

* In consequence of the largely increased circulation of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, the charge for Advertisements, in future, will be 7s. for the first four lines, and 1s. 3d. per line after.

SPLENDID CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY ENTERTAINMENTS.—Double Spectacle and Unparalleled Success of the Circle, at ARLETTY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Programme, and Manager, Mr. W. BATTY.—THURSDAY (Boxing day), Dec. 26, and following Evenings, at a quarter to Seven the 15th Night of the successful National Spectacle of the ROYAL FOX HUNT, or Life's Course of Man and Beast, introducing a real Fox-chase on the Stage and in the Circle, by Living Fox and complete Pack of Hounds. Succeeded by Extra Change in the Scenes of the Circle and Foss of Horsemanship, with First Night of the Grand Circle Circus—An Equestrian Pastime, with novel effects, entitled HARLEQUIN and JOHNNY GILPIN'S RIDE, or the Black Witch of Edinboro'. Harlequin, Mr. Howard Lewis. Columbian, Mrs. J. W. Collier. Clown, Mr. T. Barry. Pantaloon, Mr. Roadway. Acting and Stage Manager, Mr. W. D. Broadfoot. Box-office open daily, from Eleven till Five.—Mr. BATTY begs to acquaint the Nobility, Gentry, and his patrons, that, in compliance with numerous requests from the country, and by special desire, he has formed arrangements to present, during the Christmas Holidays, a series of EQUESTRIAN MORNING PETER and Fashionable DAY PERFORMANCES, to commence at half-past One, and terminate at half past Three; consisting of Batty's splendid Scenes of Equestrian in the Circle. The first three Morning Performances will take place on Monday, Dec. 31; Wednesday Jan. 1; Friday, Jan. 4.

THE IMPERIAL DRAGON FETE at the CHINESE COLLECTION. Hyde Park Corner, which has already gained the highest popularity and attracted the Commemorative Notice of the Public Press, will be REPEATED EVERY EVENING DURING THE NEXT WEEK. The gorgeous decorations displayed in the celebration of this brilliant Fete, far surpasses all the varied splendours of European pageantry. A full Military Band will be in attendance every evening. The Chinese Collection is open daily from Ten till Four, and from Seven till Ten. Admission One Shilling.

NEW CHRISTMAS GROUP.—MADAME TUSSAULT and BONY's Greatest Effort, which may challenge Europe. The House of Brunswick at One View.—George I., George II., George III., George IV.: Queen Charlotte, Queen Caroline; Princess Charlotte; the Dukes of York, Kent, Cambridge, Sussex; the Keeses of George IV. returned; The British Orders of the Garter, Bath, Thistle, and St. Patrick; the National Group; Mr. Cobden and Tom Thumb.—This is one of the very best sights in the Metropolis. The Times.—Open from 11 till 4, and from 7 till 10. Napoleons Rooms, Nassau, Baker street.

GENERAL TOM THUMB.—the AMERICAN MAN IN MINIATURE will return to London, and hold his PUBLIC LEVARS at the Gallery in Bedford-street, Pall-mall, commencing Monday, December 22, and continuing through the Week, after which he leaves for the Continent.—Whilst in Edinburgh, the General was presented with a beautiful Highland Dress, of the Royal Regent Tarran, manufactured by Messrs. Meyer and Mortimer, in which he will appear at each exhibition, in addition to his Chinese, Napoleon, and Court Dress. Hours of Exhibition from Eleven to One, Three to Five, and from Seven to Nine; Doors Open half an hour previous. Admission (regardless of age), 1s.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The arrangements for the CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS commence on MONDAY, the 22nd inst. One of the brilliant Novelties is the CHROMATROPE, to which may be added subjects in Nature and Art for the PROSCOPIC and the PHOTOCOPIC. The first Exhibition of a Series of beautiful DISSOLVING VIEWS. On the Evenings of Tuesday and Thursday, Mr. C. E. BORN lectures on the MUSIC OF DIFFERENT NATIONS. Dr. RYAN and Professor BACHOFFER's varied LECTURES daily. Dr. RYAN also lectures on the Kingdoms of Matter, Wednesday, and Friday. All these Lectures abound in interesting Experiments. NUNMARINE EXPERIMENTS by means of the DIVING-BELL, and DIVER. The HYDRO-ELECTRIC MACHINE.—Admission, 1s. School, Half price.—A New Edition of the Catalogue, price 1s.

FURS.—RUSSIAN and CANADIAN FUR COMPANY, 744, Regent-street.—The Proprietors respectfully inform the nobility, gentry, and public in general, that their Stock for the ensuing season is now complete, and consists of several countries, both continental and of their own introduction, which have met with the approbation of the highest patrons of fashion, the fete of the aristocracy. They particularly call attention to their Stock of RUSSIAN TABLE and KEMIN, which have proved for them such high reputation, and which are not to be equalled, for quality and price, by any other house in the world. Every kind of Fur, from the American and European Continents, may be procured at this Establishment, or, at the Manufacturers, 18, Lamb-wood-street, in immense variety, twenty per cent. lower than is usually charged. —E. G. BOURNE, Managing Proprietor, Russian and Canadian Fur Company, 744, Regent-street.—N. B. Furs cleaned, altered, repaired, or exchanged. Prices of cleaning Furs, Huffs, and Socks, 2s.; Cardigans, 1s.

MUTUAL INSURANCE BENEFIT INSTITUTION, 51, THREE-ROSE STREET, LONDON. Under the Patronage of H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, &c. &c. Established 1826.—Empowered and Enrolled by Act of Parliament.

This Institution places within the reach of all, advantages similar to those hitherto attainable only from Annuity and Life Assurance Companies, upon easy terms, payable Monthly or Quarterly, and in Annuity suited to the circumstances of each individual.

The funds of this Institution are invested in Government Securities bearing a high rate of interest: its stability is thus insured.

ANNUITIES, OR ANNUAL INCOME FOR LIFE, commencing immediately, or at a future period, obtainable by a sum of money paid down, or by easy Monthly or Quarterly payments.

ENDOWMENTS, OR SUMS OF MONEY FOR CHILDREN, OR FOR PERSONS OF ANY AGE, from £10 to £100.—Payable at 14, 21, or any other age, or after any number of Years.

PROVISION FOR WIDOWS AND ORPHANS, by Sums of Money, from £10 to £500, payable at the Death of the Insurer.

WEEKLY ALLOWANCES, with Medical Attendance and Medicines, during SICKNESS or ACCIDENT, from 5s. to 10s. per week.

Prospectuses and Tables of Payment, with every information, may be had, gratuitously, of the Agents, or Medical Officers, or at the Office, 51, Three-Rose-street, London.

"A ROWLAND and SON, 70, HATTON GARDEN," which is affixed on the KALYDON and OPDONT. — Sold by them and by Chemists and Perfumers. — "A. All others are FRAUDULENT IMITATIONS!!!

Digitized by Google

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 139.—Vol. V.]

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1844.

[SIXPENCE.]

OPENING OF THE FRENCH CHAMBERS.

HE opening of the French Chambers, which took place on Thursday last, gives the first impulse to that revival of activity in political affairs which is followed up by the commencement of our own Session. The policy pursued by the Cabinets of England and France is of the utmost importance to the whole of Europe; they are the active powers of the western world; their Governments are, to a certain extent, the creations of the will of the people, and the popular opinion has a powerful influence over them. The state of parties in either of them has, therefore, a continual interest to the people of both.

The necessity—or rather the custom—of making Royal speeches to elective assemblies as vague and general as possible, renders the address of the King of the French, which is no exception to the practice, of less value than it might be, as an indication of the probable course of affairs. But if what it does say is rather indistinct, something may still be inferred from what it does not say; the omission of certain topics and allusions is frequently as expressive as any words could be. First of all, then, we may gather from his Majesty's address, the certainty that the war fever has abated, and that there is a return, on the part of the French journals and their readers, to the condition of reason and common sense. The King speaks of peace, and sincerely do we rejoice that he does so; but he can do more than this; he can venture to make a distinct allusion to the satisfactory relations between the two countries, and the removal of all pretext for a misunderstanding between them. This is the result to which time and events have long been tending. Such a dispute as that which sprang out of the Protectorate of Otaheite, never could be permitted by so astute a monarch as Louis Philippe, and two such clear-headed Ministers as Peel and Guizot, to come to hostilities. The French themselves have found out, what the English press long ago told them, that a petty island in a distant sea could not be worth taking by either power. Poor Queen Pomare's "cocoa-nut empire" could afford nothing to a conqueror—not even the empty vanity of glory. To fancy that they were striking a blow at England by the occupation of such a place, was one of the wildest notions that could enter the rather flighty head of "Young France." The public has awakened to the true state of the case at last; the "Protectorate" is disavowed; Dupetit Thouars has returned home; and the war party, instead of finding him indignant at seeing his work undone, hear him agreeing that his Government have a perfect right to do as it pleases—that, in fact, he rather approves their censure of him; and finally, that all the "Haters of Albion" and "Friends of Liberty," who subscribed their half francs, and sous, and centimes to purchase him a "sword of honour," might as well have kept their money, for the sword he positively will not accept. The Admiral is not going to make himself a martyr to a popular delusion, and has too much good sense to indulge his vanity by an acceptance of a gift which would be followed by the certain loss of his commission. Thus M. Thiers and the French Opposition are made bankrupt of all the "political capital" which they had hoped to find in the Tahiti question. It is worn threadbare; it is old, which in France is fatal to its efficacy; and, more fatal still, it has been turned into ridicule. Queen Pomare and Mr. Pritchard succeeded the paragon of the Emperor of Morocco. Tahiti is no longer so much a grievance as a jest.

Another topic introduced into the speech of the King has an especial interest for us; he refers to the reception he met with from the Queen of England, and the hospitality of which he was the object. He expresses the gratification he feels not only on his own account but on that of France also; considering that to draw closer the relations between the two countries is the best guarantee for a general peace. The open and frank allusion made to this visit is another proof that the ravings of the war party have been utterly futile. Its organs asserted that the visit was a humiliation to France, a triumph to England, a weakness in Louis Philippe, and that its consequences would shake the Orleans dynasty. Had it but one-tenth of the importance they attributed to it, the Ministry would never have ventured to put it into the King's speech. There never was, perhaps, an instance of a party making so much noise with so little reason for it. The result is the very natural one of its not finding any real sympathy from those who are the real strength of the nation. We long hope to see a good understanding between the Tuileries and Windsor; not that the personal intercourse between the monarchs of England and France could create the same friendly feeling between the respective people, but because it may be taken as a certain indication that this mutual good feeling exists.

On the part of the speech relating to the "triumphs of the French arms in Africa," we shall not dwell. In Algiers the French have created for themselves a great difficulty; it is a conquest with no gain and but little glory. The victors of Austerlitz and Jena needed not the only laurels they could gather on such a field as that of Islay; and the little military renown that has been won is more than outweighed by the folly and absurdity that has made the civil government of the colony a curse to it. The last accounts state the blunders and mismanagement of the civil officers to have been so outrageous, that "there is not a French proprietor in Algeria who does not wish that the English would come and change places with their French masters." It is to cover all this, and give the people something in return for the enormous sums Algiers costs them, that the flourish about the triumphs of the French arms is made. If the French will take phrases for facts, and be content with empty glory, and scarcely that, as the return for wasted means and squandered wealth, it is their own concern, not ours.

Having thus run over the chief topics of the King's speech, we may briefly allude to its omissions, which, too, are not without their significance.

The part that France has taken in the affairs of Spain, and the disastrous issue of that interference, might have been mentioned, and would have been so, had not the subject been inconvenient. More than two hundred persons shot without trial in the course of twelve months for political opinions, a Constitution destroyed, and all power lodged in the hands of a bloody-minded soldier and a profligate Queen, could hardly be presented to any people in any manner that would not cause disgust and abhorrence. Spain is the blot on the Ministry of M. Guizot. It is one of those things on which silence is prudence.

The Right of Search question is not alluded to, so it may be taken for granted that nothing has been concluded upon it. And his Majesty does not press on the Chambers his demand for an allowance to the Duke of Nemours as future Regent. The demand would give a dangerous weapon to the Opposition; it is therefore postponed, but not, we fancy, abandoned.

The opening of the Chambers finds the present French Ministry strong enough to defy the attacks of an Opposition not well united and not furnished by events with facts that would enable them to prove the incapacity of the Government. The war-cry has failed, the Tahiti question is worn out, the Right of Search is pending, the Revenue is in a tolerably sound condition, and as far as peace is secured by the continuance of M. Guizot in power, we may congratulate both nations that his position at present seems so well secured.

CHRISTMAS, BY ALFRED CROWQUILL.—See next page.

A SONG TO CHRISTMAS.

Hail to thee, Father Christmas! a blessing on your brow!
These sixty years you never seemed so worshipful as now.
Of late I've felt dying, and weary and low,
I joy to see your rosy face, once more before I go.
Aye! you are come right welcome to brighten up my soul,
And to spice the last sweet drop that clings to life's enshrining bowl.
When you appear again, this hand will be in the cold ground,
And other ears than mine will hear the bells' rejoicing sound.

You come to tap old barrels, and to spread the dainty cheer,
To sing old Christmas Carols to the sad declining year;
And with joy and with holly, your wand is bright and green,
And like a sheet of moonlight stars your whitened beard is seen:
The trees have lost their lovely birds, the earth is wild below,
And the dark-eyed robin redbreast sings its dirge in the snow;
But a blessing from the "manger-side" dispels the winter storm,
And in spite of wind and icicles, the human heart grows warm.

How linked with goodness are the songs that hum from door to door,
As blessed are the tripping rhymes that sweetly rang of yore
Above the tombs of saintly men whose charity was pure,
And who feasted with their handmen and rejoiced with the poor.
We read the Holy Word of God, and hold its precepts dear,
But Christmas always teaches us to practice what we hear,
To overflow with kindness, to emulate the "child"
Who was so poor in Bethlehem—and held us pure and mild.

Oh! what delight it is to think of childhood's generous days!
The banquet of our parents dear, the "yule log's" flick'ring blaze;
Our brothers and our sisters—the laugh, the dance, the song,
And those old servants, clustering near all in a faithful throng,
With little lively children, the darlings of the scene,
Like fawns frisking to the sound of harp and tambourine;
The wassail bowl, the piping round, the silver cup
That ended with the kitchen folks that all might have their sup!

Right Reverend Father Christmas! my heart beats proud and high,
I'll drink the sole remaining flask, and wish the world good-bye!
We'll say a prayer together, we'll sing an ancient rhyme,
For the greatest good I ever did, was done at Christmas-time!
And we'll send a purse of charity to neighbours all around,
The honest and deserving, who destitute are found,
That I may have remembrance, and blessings right sincere,
When I am underneath the snow, and you return next year.

I had five brothers—goodly—a sister kind, as well,
We always met together, just as the season fell;
We made our parents happy upon the Holy Tide,
And trimmed their chairs with ivy leaves and mistletoe beside.
I am the only one of all the last left in the year,
Yet Christmas always comforts me—I seldom shed a tear.
Their Christmas is a better one, with angels in the skies,
In my bright bubbling wine I trace their watchful loving eyes.

In my bright youth I travelled, and I traversed o'er the sea,
The billow and the avalanche were cheerful things to me;
The firm array of battles—the conflict rude and wild—
Were just like playthings in my path, for I was but a child!
A charmed word like magic changed, my strong desire to roam;
A letter from my mother, and the darling ones at home.
It was dated from a festival; this was the mournful strain:
"From England—upon Christmas Day!" I soon returned again.

Let us assemble all our friends, the greatest and the least,
And bring to us good merriment—a gathering and a feast.
We'll hold fast hands together, and we'll send the golden round,
For all the cream of earthly joys at Christmas time is found!
And we will trip it cheerfully before the sunset fire,
Which, just like us, gives out the flame, before it doth expire.
I feel as youthful as a boy, my silly hair turns round,
God bless you! Father Christmas! and may your joys abound.

F. P. P.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARISIANA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

Since the Restoration, all Parisian fashions have taken an English taint. Now, however, we seem to have gone still further north in seeking for novelties of outward form. The Champs Elysées, this week, have presented a curious spectacle, and the beholders were irresistibly tempted to fancy themselves in the environs of St. Petersburg or of Moscow. A smooth, unbroken surface of snow was covered by a multitude of sledges; and, to complete the resemblance, both the coaches and their masters were enveloped in immense mantles of fur, in true Russian fashion. Amongst the number of fashionables, we distinguished Prince Orloff, who, with several others of the most gallant of his countrymen at present visitors to our capital, must have fancied themselves again on the banks of the Neva. Most unluckily, the show has suddenly put a stop to all this agreeable excitement, and the Parisians are again condemned to the common-place of their ordinary equipages. This fashion, however, though enjoyed with all the zest of novelty, dates from before the Revolution; and the sleigher that is seen to-day in Paris can bear but little comparison with the splendour of those in which the aristocratic cavaliers of that period—Count d'Artois, the Duke de Chartres, the Marquis de Condorcet, and the Duke de Launay—promenaded through Paris. Queen Marie Antoinette herself delighted in this amusement; often might she be seen in the avens of Versailles, conducting herself her sleigh, which was, as may be imagined, of peculiar elegance in form and decoration. Alas! it has undergone strange vicissitudes; the body of the sleigh of Marie Antoinette is the identical carriage in which, in Auber's opera of "The Philistère," at the Grand Opéra, Léonore, as Docteur Dulacourt, arrives on the stage, and from which he dispenses his quack medicines to the villagers. What a falling off was there!

The Paris police, so admirably organized for the tracing and detection of crime or the punishment of political offenders, offers but little immediate protection to individuals. The streets are often the scenes of midnight robberies, or even murders; the cry of "Au Volant!" creates far less attention than "Vive la République!" and men, whom business or pleasure calls into the more frequented parts of the town, no longer find the protection of a guard-squad and a fleet pair of legs sufficient. The number of persons attacked, many murdered, some thrown into the canal or the river when dispatched, and never again heard of—all these circumstances have spread great alarm in Paris. The circumstance of their attempt to murder a young docteur, M. Le Hon, at the very moment he had parted with his carriage, at the door of an hotel filled by the victims of pleasure, has brought these fears to their climax.

A somewhat ludicrous adventure happened to a young docteur the other night. On leaving a house situated in one of the most retired faubourgs, he perceived at a short distance a man, who followed him from one street to another, most pertinaciously dogging his footsteps. The young man, considerably annoyed, and feeling no doubt that this suspicious individual only waited a favourable opportunity to attack him, at last turned round upon him, in an angry tone demanding his business. His anger was soon however changed into amusement. The other, in a trembling voice, exclaimed, "A thousand pardons, Sir, I was so afraid of being attacked, and I thought you would defend me!"

The diplomatic relations continue to be the only parties given at this moment. Two brilliant routs at the Austrian Embassy, and the charming balls given by the Comtesse de Luxbourg, have alone enlivened the season. The Embassy of Bavaria, and our minister, M. Guizot, are disputing for the privilege of Wednesday, as a day of reception. One of the brightest stars of our fashionable world is the beautiful Lady D., the granddaughter of Sheridan. Each winter some foreign land has yielded up a reigning star to preside over Parisian society—I need only mention Lady M. D'Ossy, the Marquise Pallavicini, the Princess Galitzin. The sceptre has now returned to one of our fair countrywomen. The English Ambassador, Lady Cowley, had planned numerous soirées for this winter; amongst others, a splendid fancy ball, and even British dramatic entertainments. Magnificent dresses had been ordered, and the English secured to outstep the theatricals. All these projects of pleasure are, however, overthrown by the tidings of the death of Lady Anne Canning Smith, sister of Lady Cowley.

The enthusiasm excited here by the English actors has reached its climax. No part of the performance is passed unnoticed; even the costume of Miss Faucit as Desdemona, has not only excited the usual ardour of saluterie bestowed by the Parisians on their fair foreign neighbours, but is pronounced a model of taste, splendour and historical accuracy. The whiteness in dress embroidered in gold, with square borders, and various sleeves—even to the pink and silver scarf surrounding the waist, are made the subjects of the highest encomium.

A sad event, illustrating the mercantile and money-loving spirit of the times, which reached even the dome of art, has lately occurred. You have heard of M. Jasi, the celebrated furniture engraver. This gentleman a short time since did what a splendid engraving from Raphael's portrait of Leo X. This chief oeuvre had engaged the artist's whole attention for several years, and was an object of the deepest interest to him. On the strength of its merits he had been named member of the Legion of Honour, and corresponding member of the Institut. There was but one opinion amongst all the connoisseurs assembled to pronounce upon it, as to the excellence of the performance; it was instantly adjudged by them as one of the highest efforts of the art. M. Jasi had been for some time in correspondence with a well-known print-seller of Liège, who desired to purchase the greater number of the proofs of this beautiful production, and held out to the artist a prospect of most advantageous terms. The publisher, however, on arriving at Paris in order to conclude the negotiation, advised sagaciously, was desirous of occupying as much as possible the terms on which he was to purchase; he therefore began on his first interview with M. Jasi, to depreciate greatly the value of his performance; according to him, the work had been totally spoiled in drawing the proofs. M. Jasi made no answer to these unfavourable remarks, and the publisher retired, rejoicing in the prospect of a good bargain. M. Jasi remained shut up in his own room the whole day, and the next morning he was found by his friends in a state of complete mental alienation; he had even during the night attempted suicide, by dashing his head against a marble table. The unfortunate artist is now in a morose dejection; but hopes are entertained that if they succeed in making him comprehend the object of the Liège publisher's deception, he may recover his faculties; he may then indeed exclaim with his countryman, Metastasio—

"O, mente umana, cieca e superba!"

FRANCE.

OPENING OF THE FRENCH CHAMBERS.

The King of the French opened the Session of the two Chambers on Thursday. At one o'clock his Majesty left the Tuileries, and, upon arriving at the Chamber of Deputies, ascended the throne, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Duc de Nemours, Prince de Joinville, Duc d'Angoulême, and Duc de Montpensier. The Queen and Princesses occupied the usual places. His Majesty having taken his seat, delivered the following speech—

"Messieurs les Peers and Messieurs les Députés,
At the close of last session, complications, which might have become grave, were the objects of my solicitude. The necessity of securing our possessions in Africa against hostile and repeated incursions obliged us to carry war into the empire of Morocco. Our brave armies of land and sea, worthily commanded, attained with glory, and in a short time, the object marked out to their valour. Peace promptly followed victory, and Algiers, where three of my sons had this year the honour to serve their country, has secured a double pledge of security, for we have proved at once our power and our moderation."

"My Government was engaged with that of the Queen of Great Britain in discussion which might have given reason to fear that the relations of the two States might have been affected; a spirit of goodwill and equity has maintained between France and England this happy accord, which guarantees the peace of the world."

"During the visit which I paid the Queen of Great Britain to testify to her the price that I attach to the unity which unites us, and to that reciprocal friendship of which she has given me so many marks, I have been surrounded by manifestations the most satisfactory for France and for myself. I have gathered, in the sentiments that have been expressed to me, additional guarantees for the long duration of that generous peace, which assures to our country abroad a dignified and strong position, and at home an eternally increasing prosperity, with the enjoyment of her constitutional liberties."

"My relations with all foreign powers continue to be friendly and amicable.
"You are, Messieurs, yourselves witnesses of the prosperous state of France. You see manifested upon all parts of our territory our national activity, protected by war laws, and reaping in the bosom of order the fruits of its labours. The rise of public credit, and the equilibrium established between our annual receipts and expenditure, attest the happy influence of this situation upon the general affairs of the State for the well-being of all."

"Financial laws will be immediately presented to you. Projects of laws for the amelioration of our roads, of our ports, and of our internal navigation, for the completion of our railways, and for different objects of general utility, will be equally submitted to your deliberation."

"In the midst of the general prosperity of the country, Heaven has blessed my family. It has increased the number of my children; and the marriage of one of my well-beloved sons, the Duc d'Angoulême, with a Princess, who already was destined to me by so many ties, has been for me and mine a lively satisfaction."

"Messieurs, Providence has imposed upon me many labours, and painful trials. I have accepted the burden. I have devoted myself—I have devoted my family to the service of my country. To lay a lasting foundation of union and happiness has for fourteen years been the object of our constant efforts. I feel confident that with your loyal aid you will enable me to attain it, and that the gratitude of France, free and happy, will be the reward of our common devotedness, and be, too, the honour of my reign!"

Cries of "Vive le Roi!" interrupted some of the foregoing speech, and were renewed at the close. A heavy fog enveloped Paris all the morning.

The French Opposition press, ever ready to catch at straws, and to magnify events trifling in themselves into circumstances of importance, have seized with avidity upon a circumstance, which, we admit, is likely to cause some embarrassment to the Ministry; we allude to the expected return of Admiral Dupetit Thouars from Tahiti to France. The Admiral is expected at Cherbourg, where the restless spirits connected with republicanism and anarchy propose to receive him with great honours, as a reward for his supposed enmity towards the English. It is said that the National Guards are to be drawn up on his landing, and that they intend to present him with a wreath of laurels, by way of perpetration for the sword of honour with which he was invested. We believe that the French Government, with the same prudence as it evinced on a former occasion, will not permit its intestine to anarchy. According to the regulations of the French service, no officer can accept of any decoration or other mark of distinction, unless he chooses to give up his commission.

The language given to Mr. Pottinger has excited considerable attention among the journalists of Paris. His explanations respecting the treaty with China have completely falsified the insinuations which they some time since made respecting a supposed surreptitious introduction made in that treaty, and some of the journals are exceedingly displeased at the upright and truly statesmanlike tone assumed by our Representatives, and they affect to think that the letters expected from M. Lagrange, the French Minister, will give a different account of the feelings of the Chinese towards the English.

SPAIN.

We learn from Madrid that the Committee of the Senate appointed to report on the Reform Bill had communicated to both Chambers the result of its labours, and recommended its adoption.

The letters of the 15th inst. from Madrid say the Chamber of Deputies commenced on that day the discussion on the bill to authorize the conversion of the debt proceeding from contracts into Three per Cent. Stock.

Some sensation had been excited at Madrid by the resignation of M. Donoso Cortes, the Queen's Secretary. There were various reports upon the subject, but the general opinion was that it arose out of a praiseworthy determination to compel Narvaiz to exercise clemency in the case of Colonel Rengifo and his co-accused. It appears that Narvaiz was fully determined to have the unfortunate men executed forthwith, when M. Donoso Cortes remonstrated strongly, and pointed out the immense injury the execution of a sentence, declared by two superior courts to be illegal, would have throughout Europe. Narvaiz replied in such insulting terms, that M. Donoso Cortes thought it becoming to tender his resignation immediately, which he did accordingly. This unexpected proceeding alarmed Narvaiz, and he gave way. Colonel Rengifo's punishment was commuted to banishment for life, and all possible means are now being used to induce M. Donoso Cortes to withdraw his resignation.

Accounts from Victoria mention the death of General Jaurigui (El Pastor) in that town. El Pastor rendered essential service to the national cause during the war of independence.

PORTUGAL.

Our letters from Lisbon of the 17th inst. contain an account of the ceremonies which took place upon the closing of the Cortes. The Queen was present and dismissed the assembly with a brief speech in these terms—

"Illustrious Peers of the realm, and Deputies of the Portuguese nation,
"It is with unfeigned pleasure that I this day behold myself surrounded by the representatives of the nation. I congratulate you, conjointly with myself, on the fruitful result of your parliamentary labours. The measures resorted to by the legislative body, for the purpose of establishing upon a solid basis the public tranquillity, which has been unfortunately interrupted in various parts of the kingdom, have produced the desired effect; and those which have since been approved of, present the well-founded hope that the throne and constitutional institutions will not be offended again. The plans which have been adopted by you for the improvement of the public revenue finances will most powerfully tend to the attainment of that so generally desired object, viz., the complete organization of this important point. Public confidence, so generally manifested, together with the progressive augmentation of the general credit, furnish an undeniable testimony to the importance and utility of these measures. The affairs which have been submitted to your deliberation have been of the most weighty nature, and it behoves me to say that the views taken of the same, and resolutions adopted by you, have proved you to be worthy of the nation's confidence as well as of my most especial benevolence. The session is closed."

There was no political news of interest. There had been some very tempestuous weather on the coast for several days previously. On Saturday the 15th inst., during a heavy gale from south-west, the Portuguese brig Liberal, from Rio Janeiro, on attempting to enter the port of Lisbon, was driven on the bar, where she soon went to pieces. The master and seven seamen were drowned; the mate and three others were saved. In the course of the same day a Spanish whaler went on shore nearly at the same place. All the crew escaped, but four passengers perished.

Mr. Ticer, the British subject who was arrested in April last at Coimbra, on charges of a political nature, was tried at Oporto on the 11th inst., and acquitted.

GERMANY.

The Journal des Débats states that the interment of the mortal remains of the illustrious Carl Maria von Weber took place at Dresden, on the 14th inst. The coffin, covered with black velvet, embroidered with crowns of silver and green silk, arrived at Dresden from Magdeburg by the railroad. At eight o'clock in the evening it was transported in a boat to the right bank of the Elbe, where 300 infantry of the Royal Guard, with torches in their hands, were waiting to receive it. In the interior of a circle formed by the troops were placed the members of the King's musical band, those of the two theatres, and several other amateurs, by whom the coffin was removed from the boat. A funeral hymn, composed by Wagner, a pupil of Meyerbeer, was then chanted by 400 singers, with the necessary instrumental accompaniment. The coffin was then carried to the Catholic chapel of the principal cemetery of Dresden, and, after a funeral service was celebrated in that temple, the remains of Weber were interred beside those of his son, who died about five years since. All the houses in the streets through which the funeral procession passed were illuminated with wax candles, placed in the windows. An immense crowd followed.

SWITZERLAND.

The news from Switzerland is that the Government of Lucerne, on hearing of the resolutions adopted by the popular assemblies held at Fraubrunnen and Zugdigen had ordered the military commission to call out the landwehr. On the other hand, the cantons of Schwytz marshalled troops to the frontiers of Lucerne on the 10th.

The Swiss correspondent of the Confédération writes, on the 19th, that the events of Lucerne were the mere prelude of a crisis which might yet put in peril the present constitution of Switzerland.

TURKEY.

Accounts from Constantinople to the 24th inst. state that Sir Stratford Canning has returned, from his excursion to the Dardanelles, to his country house at Bagdady.

It was said that Abdallah, late Pacha of Trebizond, alarmed by the order of the Porte to justify himself, had offered a large pecuniary indemnification to the ill-used Greek. The Pacha is said to be also threatened with an address of the chief Turks of Trebizond to the Porte, representing the tyranny which makes him hated by all classes, and earnestly desiring that he may be removed. Dr. J. Wolff writes from Teheran that he is chiefly indebted to the support of the Persian Ambassador for his deliverance from the claws of the rapacious and murderous Bechabuzis; it was under his protection that he succeeded in returning safe to Teheran.

Several Turkish passengers were frozen to death in the last steam boat for Trebizond. The thermometer was at zero (Reaumur) and the roofs were covered with snow.

The apprehensions of a breach between Sir S. Canning and the Turkish Ministry are happily not confirmed. Sir Stratford acts with great moderation, and seems to be quite confident that all his demands will be granted. In his late excursion he visited the coast of Troy.

WEST INDIES.

The Thames has arrived at Southampton with the West India mails. She left Jamaica on the 23rd of November, Cartagena the 15th, Demerara the 15th, Trinidad the 20th, Barbadoes the 25th, Grenada the 25th, St. Thomas Dec. 1, and Fajal the 14th.

The papers state that the whole of the West India Islands were generally in a very healthy condition. The Governors of the Trinidad and the Windward Islands were about to proceed to Jamaica, to consult with Lord Elgin on the expediency of forming a final settlement for the West India colonies. There is every prospect of good crops throughout the islands generally. The weather has not been so propitious for many years.

The House of Assembly was sitting at Jamaica, but no business of importance has been under consideration.

SOUTH AMERICA.

IMPORTANT NEWS FROM PERU.—Accounts have arrived from Arica, stating that an outrage had been committed on the British Consul there by the authorities of the town. The outrage is mentioned as being of the grossest description. The British squadron engaged in the blockade of Italy had information of the outrage communicated by Mr. Wilson, the insulted consul, and her Majesty's ship Talbot was immediately despatched to Arica. It is said that water was refused this vessel. Our Peruvian Minister, Mr. Adams, happened to be on board the Talbot, and considered the circumstances of the case so flagrant as to demand an immediate apology, which was required in the name of the British Government by the commander of the Talbot. The apology being refused, the Talbot opened fire on the governor's residence; several shells were thrown in, and this was represented as being only a beginning, and that the town would be bombarded. This prompt mode of dealing brought the authorities to better behaviour—an ample apology was given, and tranquillity at once restored.

VALPARAISO, Aug. 5.—You will, perhaps, have heard of a schooner, the O. C. Raymond, having left China with a large amount of silver on board; she was supposed to have been lost, but she arrived here in September last, and the captain assigned himself to a most respectable firm in this place, stating that he had been, for two years past, trading amongst the islands in the Indian seas, and on the coast of China; that he originally sailed from the Sar harbour, with an assorted cargo, valued at 31,000 dollars; and that the vessel and cargo were the joint concern of himself, the mate, and parties in the United States. He brought a quantity of specie silver, which he caused to be melted into bars, that produced him in gold ounces 48,900 dollars. He then transferred his vessel before the American Consul to the mate, and left this place for the coast. Since his departure, we have heard that he had received the specie on board as freight from one port of China to another. The last board of the captain was, that he had, with two bags of gold ounces, taken his passage from Chagres in a vessel for New York. The mate also left this place in a vessel bound for New York. It is, therefore, probable that both the captain and mate may be secured.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

REFUSAL OF PROTECTION TO AN INSOLVENT UNDER THE NEW ACT.—In the Court of Bankruptcy, on Monday, the case of J. Mynde Cooke was decided upon. The particulars of it have been mentioned several times. The insolvent is an attorney, and was stated to have been deeply engaged in gambling transactions with persons well known in the play world. He now came up in custody from the Queen's Prison, his further examination having been adjourned, upon application for his final order.—After a good deal of argument, and the hearing of some evidence, the learned Commissioner said that this application was made to the Court under the 24th section of the act, which prayed that the insolvent might obtain his protection. The objection to the insolvent be considered to be perfectly legitimate, although no trade creditors, as such, were now said to oppose him. There were three charges made against the insolvent—first, his obtaining money from Mr. Fight upon bill, by means of false representations; second, his retaining £1,000 out of £1,000 in an improper manner; and third, his reckless expenditure. Now, as to the discount of the bill by Mr. Fight, he (the learned commissioner) believed the statement of Ricks and of Cox, who both said that the money was to be raised for Ricks, who had considerable expectations, and was then about to marry the daughter of a baronet, with a considerable fortune. Besides, the insolvent was all that time acting in the character of Stratford's solicitor, and no doubt it was only from the expectation of large gains that Fight discounted the bill. The transactions with Page were certainly left in doubt, for Evans, the wine-merchant, had not been called; but yet, taking the whole of the evidence upon that point, it was most decidedly against the insolvent. As to the transactions between him and his broker, they appeared to be a complete juggle; and, under all the circumstances of this case, which was full of fraud and culpable neglect, he (the learned commissioner) had no hesitation in saying that the insolvent Act was not intended to protect such persons as the insolvent, but only honest debtors, who by misfortune were unable to pay their debts. The application is discharged altogether.—Mr. Cooke: By the act, the insolvent must be protected after twelve months.—His Honour: I have nothing to do with that; it must go before another tribunal.—The insolvent was removed in custody.

ADVERSE DECISIONS AGAINST INSOLVENTS.—In the Court of Bankruptcy on Tuesday, the Rev. Mr. Kenny, Rector of St. Saviour's, Southwark, appeared before Mr. Commissioner Evans for his final order. His debts and liabilities amounted to about £12,000, and the insolvent had offered to set aside £4,000 out of his income of £600 per annum for the benefit of his creditors. Mr. Sturgeon opposed the granting of the final order on behalf of several creditors, upon the ground that the insolvent had contracted debts without any reasonable prospect of being able to pay them. Mr. Commissioner Evans: From the beginning I could see that there was no reasonable ground for his coming here, and I will dismiss his petition. A solicitor, who appeared for the insolvent, and that he thought the terms offered would be advantageous to the creditors, and he expected they would have accepted them. Mr. Commissioner Evans: I can listen to no such proposition. I am sworn to do justice, and my decided opinion is, that the insolvent had not the slightest means of meeting the bills which he accepted, or paying the debts which he contracted.—A discussion was also given in the same Court in the case of Lewis Jackson Randall, which shows, that in spite of the obloquy heaped on those who desire to extend a little mercy towards honest debtors, there are still simple means of punishing dishonest ones. The insolvent, a furniture broker, in Bethnal green, was opposed by Mr. Cooke for a creditor named Ricks, and supported by Mr. Woodhouse. The complaint was a breach of trust. The parties had been connected in business together, the creditor advancing money and receiving his capital on the sale of furniture, as also one-third of the profits. In July, 1843, the insolvent claimed the furniture as his own, and Mr. Ricks brought an action for £200, but only recovered £30. The law costs amounted to £91. The insolvent contradicted the opposing creditor. The furniture was his own. He watched his books to corroborate his statement. Some books were now exhibited, and the opposing creditor pointed out a number of items which had been falsified. The Chief Commissioner, after remarking on the conduct of the insolvent, remanded him for fourteen calendar months for falsifying and concealing his books.

POLICE.

CHARGE OF HOUSEBREAKING.—At Union Hall on Monday, Joseph Ashford, a man dressed as a mechanic, was charged with breaking into the dwelling-house of Mr. Court, at Netting-house-lane, Parkham, and stealing three suits of clothes and other apparel.—A brother of the prosecutor stated that at eight on Saturday morning he left the property safe in the bedroom of a small house attached to his father's residence in Netting-house-lane, where he and his brother slept. The front door was left on the latch and could be opened with a common latch key. At the rear of the premises, which had connection with his father's house, a large dog was kept, which would not only make a noise, but attack a stranger. At eight in the evening he entered by the back door, and proceeded into the bedroom, when he found that the drawers had been broken open and robbed of their contents. He also found the front door ajar, and he had every reason to think that the entrance was effected by that door, as it was seldom opened by any one.—Constable 47 M stated that about ten minutes past eight o'clock he was on duty in the Kent road, when he saw the prisoner with a bundle under each arm. He asked where he got them? He replied he was employed to carry them by a man he never saw before. He afterwards contradicted himself by saying he had found them. After he had said so he dropped the bundles and ran away, but he pursued and took him into custody.—The prosecutor identified the whole of the property. The drawers and desk had been forced with some brass compasses and a pair of snuffers, which were lying about and broken to pieces.—In answer to the charge, the prisoner said he put up the bundles. As for the robbery, he was quite innocent of it, and did not even know where the house was situated. He wished to be remanded, as some clue might be obtained of the real offenders. To this the magistrate assented.

A WHOLESALE STEALER OF BOOKS.—At Bow-street on Monday, Ebenezer Parson Kingston, a young man employed as a porter to the Professor of Physiology in King's College, Somerset House, was brought up for re-examination before Mr. Justice, charged with stealing a coat, a pocket book, a cigar case, several letters, an ink-stand, and a key, value £4 and upwards, the property of Mr. John Farmer, a medical student.—Several coffee-shop keepers, who had known the prisoner for a considerable time, were in attendance to identify a number of books that had been stolen from their premises, and which were found by the officer, with other property, on searching the prisoner's lodgings.—Constable West, F division, said that on Saturday last, while searching the priowner's lodgings, 25, Harwood-street, Hampstead-road, he found in a front room, concealed by the prisoner, three diagrams produced, which were used in anatomical lectures, "Jones's Animal Kingdom," "Owen's Odontology," a pocket compass, a small vase, a spirit measure, and part of a dog's skull—John Forster, curator at the museum, King's College, identified the diagrams as belonging to the corporation of the College. The "Animal Kingdom" was stolen from the library, and the other books, which belonged to Professor Thomas Homer Jones, was taken from a drawer. The compass and measure were also stolen from the College. The rice was the property of witnesses.—The proprietor of the four coffee house, in Long-acre, said that ten books which were found in the lodgings of the prisoner had been stolen from his rooms, which the prisoner was in the habit of frequenting.—The prisoner was remanded.

A MAN CHARGED WITH FORGERY UPON HIS BROTHER.—At Clerkenwell Police-court, on Tuesday, Mr. James Carr was charged with a forgery upon his brother. It appeared from the evidence that about fourteen years ago the prisoner, James William Carr, the prisoner's brother, was transported for seven years. He was entitled to the reversionary interest of freehold property in houses and lands in Sharp's-alley, Cow-cross, worth £500. The property not having been forfeited to the Crown, he, upon his return to this country, about four months ago, negotiated with Mr. Venables for the sale of his reversionary interest in it. The negotiation was near its conclusion, when it was discovered that the prisoner had made a deed of assignment, conveying the property to a man named Price, who had been since transported, and the very day after the above instrument was executed was a party to a mortgage deed, in which Price was the mortgagor, and a tenant-merchant, named Williams, residing in Llandudno, in Wales, the mortgagee. The consideration in the deed of assignment, which was dated 12th August, 1843, was £230. In another, which was dated the 13th of the same month and year, £250.—The prisoner deposed that his name signed to both instruments was in the prisoner's handwriting, and that he had never authorised the prisoner to execute them. The reversionary interest in the property was his and his only.—Mr. Combe asked if Mr. Williams had paid over the £230.—Mr. Keane, an attorney, residing in Red-lion-square, in whose office both deeds were executed, said that Mr. Williams had, through his agent, paid over about £30 of the mortgage money.—Police-constable A. M. said the prisoner had, when apprehended, confessed his guilt.—Prisoner: I put my brother's name to it, but I never received a farthing. Price received about £30. I thought the prosecutor was dead.—Mr. Combe: That would not make the forgery of his name the less culpable.—Mr. Combe decided upon committing the prisoner for trial to the Old Bailey, but, as some further evidence was necessary, he remanded the prisoner.

EXTRAORDINARY RESISTANCE BY A COINER AND HIS CHILD.—On Tuesday, at Worship-street Police-office, James Green, a well-dressed middle-aged man, of most determined aspect, and Anne Green, his daughter, a little girl eleven years of age, were charged with having been found engaged in the manufacture of a large quantity of spurious money; and also with having committed a murderous assault upon two of the officers of the G division of police.—It appeared from the evidence of Sergeant Brannan, who was in such a state of suffering as to be scarcely capable of giving his evidence, that having received information the prisoner was closely connected with an extensive gang of coiners who had recently put into circulation a large amount of spurious money, he proceeded, between nine and ten o'clock on the previous evening, accompanied by Cole, a constable on the same division, to the house of the prisoner in Bath-court, City-road. On knocking, the door was opened by the younger prisoner, who, the instant she saw the officers, called loudly to her father; on which the male prisoner suddenly made his appearance at the top of a flight of stairs communicating with a room into which the street door opened. Witness rushed up the stairs in the hope of seeing the man, and had reached within three steps of the landing, when the prisoner exclaimed, "You've not got me yet, Brannan, you thief," and, springing at him, struck him such a violent blow in the chest with his feet, that he was instantly hurled from the top of the stairs to the room below, where his spine came in contact with the edge of a chair, and the prisoner, who was unable to check his own impetus, fell with his whole weight upon the officer. Cole then seized the prisoner, and a severe struggle ensued between them, in the course of which, the witness, who had partially recovered from the shock of his fall, saw the younger prisoner in the act of concealing something in her bosom; this he forced from her, and found to be a parcel containing twenty-two counterfeit half-crowns, finished for circulation. The girl, a determined little villain, then broke from his grasp, and hastened up stairs, followed by the witness, who found her engaged in picking up a great number of base coins which were strewn about the table. While the witness was securing this spurious money the male prisoner, followed by Cole, burst into the room, and, seizing a large glass bottle filled with vinegar, dashed it at the officers, and a large quantity of the burning liquid was in consequence flung over their heads, faces, and the upper parts of their persons. While the officers were in this condition, the male prisoner pulled from under his apron a bag filled with counterfeit coin and handed it to the girl, desiring her to get rid of it; but the witness Brannan succeeded in getting it from her and securing the other false coin on the table, the whole together amounting to more than a hundred shillings and half-crown pieces. The witness and Cole then searched the room, which was fitted up like a regular workshop, with work-bench and every description of tools, among which were two very curiously-manufactured implements, consisting each of a bright double metal plate, 6 inches by 3, and furnished with screws and nuts, for the purpose of securing the coin tightly during the application to it of plating liquids and acids, several bottles of which were also found in the apartment. The prisoner, it appeared, never cast the coin himself, but received them in a rough y-manufactured state from other members of the gang, by whom he was employed in finishing and completing them for circulation. Brannan said, that the injuries he had received in his struggle with the prisoner were of such a nature that he was apprehensive he should feel the effects of them as long as he lived. Cole, the other officer, whose hands and wrists appeared severely scorched and swollen, corroborated the sergeant's evidence, and stated that while he was engaged in the struggle with the prisoner, the latter set a bull-dog upon him, which bit and clung to him with such pertinacity that he had the greatest difficulty in beating it off. Both the officers described the resistance offered by the male prisoner as being the most desperate they ever encountered, and said that he was most actively aided in it by his daughter, who exhibited a degree of violence scarcely creditable for a child of such tender years.—The male prisoner, in defence, declared that the whole of the articles found by the police had been left at his house only an hour previously by a man who had promised to call for them in a short time afterwards, and that he was wholly innocent of any guilt of them.—Sergeant Brannan intimated to the magistrate that he was satisfied the prisoner had been carrying on this system of fraud for a long time past, and that about a year ago the prisoner's youngest child, a little girl about two years old, had lost its life in consequence of drinking some of the burning liquids used by the prisoner in the process of manufacturing the base coin, the prisoner at the coroner's inquest accounting for the little creature's death by a statement precisely similar to that he now made.—Mr. Bingham expressed great regret at the injuries the officers had sustained, and ordered both prisoners to be remanded for a week, that the Solicitor to the Mint might attend and prosecute the case against them.

COMMITTEE OF A POSTMASTER FOR EMERGENCY.—On Tuesday, at Bow-street, Robert Hobson, the Post-office keeper of Walthamstow, who had been before examined on a charge of embezzling £180, the postage of a letter addressed to Calcutta, was again placed at the bar to answer further charges of detaining newspapers.—Mr. Feaback attended for the prosecution, and Mr. J. C. Evans, a barrister, conducted the defence. Peake, a constable, having produced several numbers of the Times, of recent dates, which he had found with other newspapers in the prisoner's house when searching it, under the direction of Mr. W. R. Southam, on Tuesday week.—Mr. R. Lloyd Pinching, a surveyor, residing in Walthamstow, identified five copies of the Times, dated October 29, November 4, November 5, December 3, and December 12, the direction on each of which was in his own handwriting. They were addressed to his sister, to Dr. Ross, and other parties resident in Ireland, to whom he was in the habit of sending his papers. Some of them had been posted by himself, but a lad in his service generally took them to the post-office, at the prisoner's shop. To the best of his (witness's) belief, the papers produced were directed and sent at different periods.—William Kwei, a servant to Mr. Pinching, deposed to having posted the Times newspaper, by his master's directions, at the prisoner's shop. He had generally put them in the letter-box, but had, on some occasions, a few months back, taken them into the shop when they had been too bulky to go through the aperture outside. They were always at those times delivered to the prisoner or one of his sons or daughters.—The constable said, that when the prisoner was requested to account for the possession of the papers, he replied, that he had lately purchased a quantity of waste paper, and supposed they must have come with it.—Another case of a similar nature was proved by the evidence of a young woman named Eliza Anthony, a servant at Walthamstow, who identified a paper which she had directed to a sister in Monmouth-street, and the envelope of which was found in the prisoner's bed-room.—Mr. Jardine, after hearing the prisoner's counsel, deterred not on committing him for trial, both for the embezzlement and the misdirection.—Mr. J. C. Evans hoped that had would be taken, in consideration of the respectability of the prisoner, whose wife and large family were dependent on his exertions in business.—The Rev. J. Freeman, of Walthamstow, with other parties of equal respectability, would, he said, be his vouches to any reasonable extent.—Mr. Jardine said he could not make any distinction in the case, and must therefore refuse the application so far as it related to the embezzlement.—The prisoner was then removed from the bar.—[We think the magistrate exercised a sound discretion in not allowing the respectability of the prisoner to have any weight in inducing him to take bail. The sooner the distinctions made in regard to offenders are done away with the better. While they continue, people will not believe that rich and poor are governed by the same law.]

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

THE COLLISION BETWEEN THE SYLPH AND ORWELL STEAMERS.

The inquiry into the circumstances attending the late fatal collision between the Orwell and Sylph steam-boats was resumed on Monday, before Mr. Cartier, at the Knight Bell, Greenwich. The first witness called was Dr. Mitchell, of Greenwich, who proved, from a post mortem examination, that Sullivan died from suffocation in the water, and Sheppard from the severe injuries he had sustained about the head and body.

Commander Henry Smith, of her Majesty's steam-frigate Hatter, said:—I was a passenger on board the Sylph, on the afternoon of Tuesday week, and was standing at the engine-room when that vessel left the Greenwich pier on her way towards Blackwall. The weather was as thick at that time that I was induced to remain on deck. There was a man in the bows looking out forward. After proceeding a short distance, I heard the noise of a steamer approaching us. I looked out forward, but saw nothing. Immediately afterwards the man on the look out said something to the captain, when he called out, "Stop her, go astern." I then saw a large steamer heading down upon us, at about twenty-five yards distance. At that time a collision was inevitable, and when the captain saw the large vessel so close to him, he folded his arms and said, "By G—d, it is all over with us!" I could not see the steamer on either side at that time. When the collision took place, the motion of the Sylph was quite stopped, and if a boat had been under her bows we should not have injured her. I am of opinion that the speed was on the Orwell when the collision occurred. She must have been going at a good speed, because she cut quite through the deck of the Sylph; and, from the position in which the latter was, it was impossible that she could have contributed much force to the collision. I am decidedly of opinion that the Sylph was motionless when the collision took place. Had the Orwell put her helm a-starboard as the Sylph did, no accident would have occurred. I think the Sylph was going down the river much quicker than a prudent captain would have brought her, considering the fog which prevailed; and I am of the same opinion as to the speed at which the Orwell was coming up. In such a state of the weather there should be some regulation to prevent vessels from proceeding at more than half speed. My impression was, that we were travelling much quicker than we ought to have been, and I kept on deck in consequence, fearing the possibility of an accident. After the collision I remained on the quarter-deck of the Sylph until all the deck passengers were got off, when I went on board the Orwell. I then called out to the man in charge to back astern, and get the two vessels clear, as I saw that the people were prevented from getting out of the cabin of the Sylph while the vessels hung together.

By Mr. Wilkinson: The engines of the Sylph were eased before I saw the Orwell. It was the fact of her being eased that attracted my attention, and I then looked out forward and saw the Orwell's bows close upon us. I judge of the speed of the Orwell by the nature of the injuries inflicted on the Sylph. I think she must have been going eight miles an hour at least.

Mr. George Edwards, of Sutton, Suffolk, said: I am a mariner, and was on board the Orwell when the accident occurred. I was standing near the paddle-box on the starboard side, when I saw a steam-boat ahead about one hundred yards. This vessel appeared to be across the river, with her bow a little downwards. I heard Captain Wrackham give the order to stop her, and back her astern. The collision took place directly after. I do not know what speed either vessel had upon her when the accident occurred, but the Sylph, when I first saw her, seemed to have headway. Captain Wrackham was forward at the time.

Robert Fuller, mariner of Ipswich, said: I am a seaman on board the Orwell, and was upon the look-out in the larboard bow on the afternoon of Thursday week. I first saw the Sylph when she was within fifty yards of the Orwell. I called out, "Stop her—go astern;" but in less than a minute she struck us. I think when I first saw her she was going at full speed. The paddles were going a-head just before she struck. The Orwell had very little speed on her, and as soon as those on the look-out called out, the master in charge (Wiggins) stopped the engines. He called out, "Stop her—go astern." The Orwell had been eased previously, and was going "quite easily" at the time. She had been eased all the way from Woolwich, and had come that distance about five or six miles an hour. We were about twenty yards from the north shore, and could see the edge of the bank very plainly. I do not think it was possible to have avoided the collision, owing to the speed at which the Sylph was proceeding.

William Fuller, another of the crew of the Orwell, gave similar evidence. William Linney, of Ipswich, another seaman on board the Orwell, said: I think that if the Sylph's helm had been port instead of being put a starboard, the collision might have been avoided. Very few seconds elapsed between our first seeing her and the collision taking place.

Henry Rogers (the call-boy on board the Orwell) proved having given the engine orders to go "Quite easy," after leaving Blackwall, and to "Stop," just before the collision took place.

Joseph Sutcliffe, the engineer in charge, deposed that on the passage up from Blackwall the engine had made about seven revolutions per minute, her full speed being from twenty-eight to thirty. He was standing by, as usual in foggy weather, between the engines when he heard the order given to "Stop her," and "Go astern." He did so, and after the engine had made two revolutions astern the collision took place, and he then shut the steam off and came on deck. It occupied about fifteen seconds to stop the engine and make the two revolutions astern.

James Wiggins, a brother of the master in charge, and supercargo on board the Orwell, was next examined. He was at the wheel when the collision took place, and his evidence differed in no respect from that of the other parties on board the Orwell.

The Coroner commenced summing up, and the jury after an absence of half an hour, returned the following unanimous verdict:—"We consider that the deceased met his death accidentally; but we are of opinion that the captain of the Sylph was highly to blame for the speed at which he had previously been going; we believe the Orwell to have been the moving power to the death of the deceased, but consider that the parties on board that vessel used due caution, and did all they could to avoid the accident, and the jury are unanimously of opinion that Captain Swinland should be severely reprimanded by the Coroner.

The verdict appeared to give general satisfaction, and Captain Swinland was suitably admonished by Mr. Cartier.

An inquest on the body of the man Sheppard was then opened pro forma, and after the examination of a single witness, the same verdict was recorded.

ANOTHER COLLIERY EXPLOSION.—Soon after the workmen entered the Penrith Colliery, the property of the Swansea Coal Company, situated near Morriston, on Monday week, they were alarmed by an explosion of foul air in one of the headings, ignited by a collier named Thomas James, who was most severely burnt. The workmen immediately proceeded from all parts of the pit to the scene of the lamentable occurrence, where they found the three lifeless bodies of John Hopkins, aged twenty, Matthew Fisher, aged twenty, both of whom were unmarried, and Thomas Morgan, a boy, ten years of age, who had been most shockingly disfigured—his head having been detached from the body by the violent concussion of air consequent on the explosion. In the course of the inquiry it was proved that the fan for ventilating the mines had not been worked either on Sunday night, Monday, or Monday night. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death," with an opinion, "that had the fan been worked during Sunday night, or early on Monday morning, the explosion would not have occurred—that there is blame attached to the overseer for not having seen that the pit was properly cleared, and for not having employed a person sufficiently strong to work at the fan."

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE IN ST. JAMES'S PARK.—On Monday afternoon, a young female (whose name could not be ascertained) made an attempt to commit suicide by throwing herself into the ornamental water in St. James's Park. Several persons who had observed her loitering about, directed the attention of one of the park-keepers, but before he could reach the place she plunged into the water. An alarm was instantly raised, when a crowd of persons rushed to the spot, and succeeded in rescuing her from a watery grave. She was conveyed, in an insensible state, to the nearest lodge, where she partly recovered, after considerable difficulty. She was subsequently removed to her residence in Prince-street, Queen-square, followed by a crowd of persons. She was very respectably attired, and seemed to be conversed with grief.

LAMENTABLE AFFAIR.—On Wednesday, the 11th instant, Thomas Pritchard, a mason, in the employ of C. H. Leigh, Esq., was working upon the roof of the forge called the Glyn, at Nissenon, Herefordshire, when, by some mishap, he lost his balance, and fell through the roof, directly upon the fly-wheel, which turned round with a tremendous velocity. The work of death was soon completed; he was so mangled, crushed, and torn, that an endeavor to recognise him would have been vain, had not his dress been identified. The day after the funeral his jaw bone was found. An inquest was held upon the body, and a verdict of "Accidental death" returned. The poor fellow has left behind him a wife and two children.

SUICIDE OF A LADY AT BROMPTON.—On Monday, Mr. Wakley, M.P., held an inquest at the Fulham-bridge Tavern, on the body of Mrs. Mary Bingley, about 50 years of age, the widow of a solicitor residing at No. 2, Queen's-buildings, Brompton, who committed suicide by cutting her throat on Friday morning. In the course of the evidence it appeared that the husband of the deceased lady died in August, 1843. For some time after his death she had been much disturbed in mind, and imagined that she was going to be sent to prison, and that she would come to be hung, and on that account became in quite a desponding state. Within the last six months, however, she had been much better, and appeared to perfectly sane until the present occurrence. Her husband died owing considerable debts, and the property was in Chancery, but only for the purpose of the affairs being settled, and not on any disputed point, as, after settling all claims, there will be a handsome property for the family, which consists of five children; the eldest (a girl) is 17 years of age.—Verdict, "Temporary insanity."

ACCIDENT TO THE SON OF CAPTAIN ROWLEY.—A melancholy accident happened last week on board the St. Vincent, at Portsmouth, to the son of Captain R. F. Rowley, a youth about twelve years of age, who fell from the lower deck of that ship into the hold, a depth of nearly eighteen feet. The unfortunate youth was taken up almost insensible, and remains in a very precarious state.

FATAL GUN ACCIDENT.—An inquest was held on Saturday before Mr. Higgs, at Enfield-highway, on Richard Moses, aged 18, who died from the effects of a gun shot wound. The deceased was in the service of Mrs. Bergen, a market-gardener. On Tuesday week he was shooting snipes. A witness looked at his gun, which was a very good one, and returned it. Witness said here comes your mistress, and deceased hid the gun amongst some rubbish, consisting of twigs, stopping up a gap in the hedge. Mrs. Bergen did not come towards them. As soon as she was out of sight deceased took hold of the muzzle of the gun, and drew it towards him, when it went off. Witness saw smoke come from the trousers of deceased, who exclaimed he was shot. He was then taken to a surgeon's, and subsequently removed to his father's at Enfield. He went on favourably at first, but erysipelas supervened. On Wednesday lock-jaw came on, which caused his death the next night. Verdict, "Died from lock-jaw, produced by a gun shot wound accidentally received."

MELANCHOLY FIRE AT THE EARL OF HARRINGTON'S.—On Monday some snow was caused at the mansion of the Earl of Harrington, in Whitehall Gardens, by the discovery of a fire which appears to have been smouldering for a considerable time, and had broken out in the drawing-room of his lordship on the second floor. The fire originated under the hearth of the dressing-rooms, passed along by the joists of the flooring, which at that time were all on fire,

An immediate attempt to extinguish the flames was made by the servants; but finding they were unable to do so, a messenger was despatched to the station of the fire brigade, engines from which speedily arrived. A plug in the garden was drawn, but the supply of water was scanty, and buckets filled from the cisterns around the edifice were used in staying the flames; but the fire was burning in so large a body under the flooring that it was found necessary to cut away the floor quite into the ball-room beneath, a considerable portion of the ceiling of which is destroyed. In the dressing-room also much damage is done. The recess is nearly burned out; the couch is destroyed; a great number of classical figures, beautifully overlaid with gold, are broken, and a variety of articles of vertu are spoiled, as is much of the furniture and elaborate appointments, both by fire, water, and removal. The ball-room is a beautiful specimen of modern architectural finish. It is elegantly fitted up, and has a deep medallion pattern cornice around the summit of the side wall.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY IN THE CITY.—An extensive robbery of plate and jewellery took place at the house of Mr. Muddell, No. 6, Little St. Thomas Apostle, Queen-street, Chancery, a few nights ago, the house having been broken into during the absence of the family. A reward of £30 is offered for the apprehension of the thieves.

FIRE IN GUILDFORD-STREET, AND LOSS OF FOUR LIVES.—In our late impression, last week, we gave an account of a fire, attended with the loss of four lives, which took place last Saturday morning, at the residence of Mr. John Fayer, civil engineer, No. 57, Guildford-street, Russell-square. The police effected an entrance at the stables in rear of the house, in Colonnade Mews, and succeeded in assisting the escape of the coachman, William Dillon, his wife, and two children. Several constables, headed by Mr. Greenwood and Inspector Dudley, obtained access to the roof of Mr. Fayer's house by entering Mrs. Austen's residence, which is adjoining. They here found that the cook, Mary Hall; Sarah Wall, the parlour maid; Maria Tanner, the housemaid; and Wm. Hall, the son of the cook; who slept in the back room of the third floor and in the attic, had escaped in their night-dresses, by a door leading on to the leads. They were immediately assisted into Mrs. Austen's house. As the flames were much increased by the wind, great fear was entertained that Mr. John Fayer and his wife, who slept in the second floor, and Mr. Edward Fayer, their son, who slept in the front room third floor, would perish. In a few minutes, however, before the whole of the upper floorings gave way, they succeeded in gaining the door on the leads, and were conducted by the police to Mrs. Austen's; and, after dressing themselves, were taken to a friend of the family, Mrs. Martinez, who resides at No. 25, opposite. By seven o'clock the fire was subdued, the houses on each side not being much damaged. Shortly afterwards the body of police-constable E 132 (named Birkmyre), was taken out; the poor fellow groaned once or twice, but died immediately afterwards. A second police-constable E 138 (named Wright), also perished in the ruins. Both the constables, it would appear, lost their lives in endeavouring to assist Jenkins, the groom, in the removal of the servants' property from the lower part of the house. The other inmates of the house were William Robinson, a lad aged 15, employed in Mr. Fayer's office, and Charles Jenkins, the groom. The former slept with young Hall in the attic, who returned no less than three times into the room, after having been aroused, to awake his bed-fellow, but he failed to make him sensible of the danger to which he was exposed, and the poor fellow was buried beneath the ruins. The other victim, Jenkins, resided in the immediate neighbourhood. On hearing of the fire he got up to render what assistance he could. He went in and out several times, and at length fell a victim to his intemperance—for he had scarcely entered the last time when the house fell in upon him. Like most other fires, the origin of it cannot be distinctly ascertained, but it is supposed to have been quite accidental. On Tuesday afternoon an inquest was held on the remains of the sufferers at the Angel Inn, High-street, St. Giles's, before Mr. Wakley. The jury having been sworn, proceeded to view the bodies, all of which are lying at St. Giles's Workhouse. The names of the sufferers as above stated are—William Robinson, aged 15, assistant-clerk to Mr. Fayer, the occupier of the house destroyed; he was burnt to death in the attic, and his body presented a shocking spectacle, being burnt almost to a cinder. Robert Birkmyre, aged 30, policeman, who was crushed by the falling timber, but taken out alive, on the morning of the fire. Charles Jenkins, the groom, aged 39; and John Wright, policeman, aged 39, recovered from the ruins on Tuesday, crushed to death. On the return of the jury, the Coroner inquired if anything was known as to the cause of the fire?—Mr. Fayer, who was present, and appeared very ill, said that nothing was known of it. The conjecture was that it came out of the chimney flue.—Some further conversation took place; and, at the request of the jury, the inquest was adjourned till Monday next, in order that the premises might be examined and the cause of the calamity, if possible, discovered.

SUDDEN DEATH IN A CAB.—On Tuesday afternoon an inquest was held at the Crown Tavern, Westminster-road, before Mr. W. Carter, on the body of an elderly man named Woods, a retired news-vender, who died suddenly in a cab. The deceased had resided near the Temple, and was on his way to the house of his daughter, who lived in Belvidere-road, Lambeth, on Friday night, when the cabman, on opening the door, found him quite dead. Medical assistance was procured by the daughter, but of course was of no avail. Verdict, "Died by the visitation of God."

DEATH FROM A TRIFLING CUT.—On Tuesday a young man of the name of Dawson, living in Church-street, Millbank, died in Westminster Hospital under very singular and melancholy circumstances. It appeared that a few days before he was chopping a piece of meat, in doing which he slightly cut his thumb; he took no notice of it at the time, but finding it afterwards got worse, he had some application made to it, which had no effect. He was then admitted into the hospital, but mortification quickly ensued, from the effects of which he died. He was a young man in the prime of life.

THE WEATHER AT HOME AND ABROAD.

ENGLAND.

The weather during the first part of the week was exceedingly cold, and there was a cutting easterly wind. The thermometer at the Rectory-house, Hyde-park, was during Monday night down to 21 degrees, but at seven o'clock on Tuesday morning the mercury had risen to 33½ degrees, and by twelve o'clock (noon) to 34 degrees. In the early part of the morning the wind shifted N.E. to nearly E., but in the course of the afternoon, it veered back again to E. At seven o'clock in the evening the thermometer had again fallen to 33½ degrees; and the time of the full moon (39 minutes past seven, P.M.), there was a slight driving with the wind, which was still East. The lovers of skating disported themselves in considerable numbers in the various parks during the day. No accidents occurred, except in the Regent's-park, where two or three gentlemen got into the water, but were speedily released by the officers of the Hamans Society.

On Tuesday the surface of the Thames at flood and ebb tide was partially covered with floating ice, but not such as to cause any material obstruction to the navigation. The docks are still clear of ice, but the channels are partly frozen. Owing to the prevailing easterly winds, which have now lasted upwards of three weeks, there are no fewer than 120 sail of vessels, outward bound, detained in various parts of the river.

On Wednesday morning, the thermometer was at 37 degrees, but towards evening it fell to 33 degrees. The wind during the day blew chiefly from the east, and was occasionally very cold and piercing. The atmosphere, however, was rather hazy, and apparently humid, giving indication of a thaw. It being a holiday, and the weather rather fine and dry for the season, a considerable number of persons from an early hour congregated in the vicinity of the ornamental waters of the parks. On the round pond and long-water in Kensington-gardens there were during the day between 2,000 and 4,000 skaters and sliders. In the Regent's-park there were about 3,000, though the ice was only about two-and-a-half inches thick, and in a very dangerous condition. On Thursday night the tendency was to a thaw, but it was still very cold.

FRANCE.

The late severe weather had the effect of forcing the wolves in several parts of France to leave their lurking-places, and come nearer than usual to human habitations in search of food. Close to Marseilles, two persons who lived at La Plaine found their passage barred by an enormous wolf. They at once fled towards the Boulevard Chave, and escaped. The animal remained all night in the neighbourhood, prowling about a stable of cows and goats, but without being able to commit any depredation. It was fired at twice in the morning without effect. Near Crepy the postman was followed for some time by four or five wolves, who seemed half-afraid to approach nearer. At last, when they appeared emboldened to form a more intimate acquaintance with him, he thought it best to throw down before them a little dog which he was carrying under his arm. He by that means got safe away. In the wood of Montpincon (Calvados) Mameau de Grouchy's gamekeeper killed not less than three wolves in two days. The number which he saw during that period amounted to eight.

The Journal de Paris states that during the early part of last week a greater quantity of snow had fallen in the department than was remembered by any one living. All communications were interrupted for several days. The mail from Aix to Draguignan, which generally is taken in ten hours by three horses, was twenty-eight hours in passing over the same distance with eight horses. Several travellers were obliged to leave their vehicles on the open road near Escagnole and take refuge in the nearest houses. At Carcassonne, the cold was so intense that one man was frozen to death in the Montagne Noire, and the body of another was found buried in the snow on the road between Quilès and Narbonne. In the mountains of the Upper Loire, at a place called the Palais du Roi, the lifeless body of a priest was found wrapped in his cloak.

ITALY.

A letter from Piedmont, of the 15th, states that a great quantity of snow at that date covered the valley of the Po. At Turin, it fell to the depth of three feet, and so great a weight of it covered the roofs of the houses, that men were employed to shove it off, fear being entertained of the wood-work giving way. At Alexandria, Asti, and some other parts of Piedmont, the snow was nearly four feet deep, and when the last accounts left everything foreboded a most severe winter.

HOLLAND.

On the 19th, at eleven, P.M., the barometer at Amsterdam stood at 76, and the thermometer at 28 deg.; on the 20th, at seven, P.M., at 77½ and 26 deg.; and on the 21st, at one, P.M., 77½ and 27 deg. During the 20th and 21st a wind was north-east. On the 19th the ice on the river at Zwolle was strong enough for foot passengers, but carriages were conveyed across by the ferry boat. On the 20th the ice at Nijmegen began to drift, an event which was not noticed by the inhabitants by the firing of cannon. The latest accounts state that the ice before the town and the immediate neighbourhood had completely broken up. Passengers and carriages, with the exception of diligences, were conveyed across the Old Rhine, at Utrecht, by the ferry boats. A few days ago, a diligence was crossed on foot.

GREAT NATIVE PROCESSION, IN NEW YORK.

EXPLOSION OF A MAGAZINE IN A NATIVE PROCESSION AT NEW YORK.

We have just received from our artist at New York, the sketch of the annexed spirited representation of a procession of the Native American Party, at New York, on Friday, the 16th ult. The muster took place at half past one o'clock; and at about ten minutes before two o'clock, the head of the column en route passed by the City Hall, up Broadway. It was preceded by a respectable number of marshals with cocked hats, badges, and devices of their party. Immediately after them rode six or eight men attired fantastically as Indian warriors, all mounted. Then came their banners and some flags, which were somewhat remarkable. The Bible appeared in some fifty different shapes and flags in the whole line, thus—"The Bible—it was bequeathed by our pilgrim fathers, we will protect and defend it." Again, "The Bible, without note or comment; it must be used in our public schools, William H. Seward and Bishop Hughes to the contrary notwithstanding." Again, a large flag, with "No Union of Church and State." Some of the wards had large cars drawn by six and eight horses, filled with children, all alluding to the Bible or public schools—such as thus: The cars were covered with flags with the following mottoes: "Our public schools, with the Bible as the basis of education; those who burn it, would burn us if they had the power." One car from the twelfth ward was highly decorated with flags, &c. On one was, "American Republicans, up, pure spirit, up." On another, "Our American Archer."

Some dozen of flags had the inscription, "Beware of Foreign Influence;" but among the most notable were two having an eagle flying with a dead coon and a cock in his talons, with the inscription, "Ah! my lady, I have ye both." The seventh ward had a large and conspicuous banner, with, "21 Years' Residence—The Ballot Box, a Rich Legacy, Americans Defend It;" another, "Oppression to None, Justice to Ourselves." In a word, nearly all the banners, flags, and devices had some allusion to the public schools, the Bible, resistance to foreign influence, and twenty-one years' residence as a qualification for citizenship.

The procession was orderly and decorous in their march; but when the procession had reached Second-street, near avenue A, and the gunner was in the act of firing a salute from the Miniature Ship, carried among the banners, &c., the powder-magazine exploded, carried away a large piece out of the side of the vessel, and shattered several windows in the vicinity. We regret to learn that two or three boys were severely hurt by the catastrophe.

The weather being fine, the procession extended their march as far as was contemplated, through the principal streets of our city, and the different associations were dismissed about thirty minutes past four, P.M.

We are of opinion that the entire force of the procession may have been about 4000.

WRECK OF THE VANGUARD STEAM-SHIP.

We are indebted to a correspondent for the annexed sketch of the wreck of the Vanguard steam-ship, as she lay, a few days since, on the rocks inside the entrance to Cork harbour. We gather from the Cork Reporter of the 14th inst., the following particulars of the accident from a passenger:—

"On Thursday, at eleven o'clock, the Vanguard, iron-built steamer, the property of the Dublin and Glasgow Steam Company, left Dublin, with about 40 passengers, and a large cargo, the wind at the time blowing desperately hard, accompanied with rain and sleet. The vessel, however, made a splendid run to the Light-house, near Cove, when the accident took place, at about half-past three A.M. When the Vanguard was nearing the above place, the captain was standing at the wheel, this being about half-past three o'clock this morning. The moment the captain saw he was abreast of the light, he moved forward to get on the paddle-box, but three or four minutes elapsed before he made his way. He then called to the man at the helm to put the helm a-starboard, and before he had time to repeat his commands, the vessel struck upon a rock, a little inside the Light-house, and almost opposite the Water-guard Station. At this moment, the most awful consternation prevailed on board, while the vessel itself was wrapped in a mist, which made it almost impossible to discern the light, though the vessel was abreast of it. There was a tremendous swell rolling at the time, which was drifting the vessel furiously up the rock. The captain endeavoured to back the vessel off, but in vain. Two guns were then fired, and lights were shown on the shore, but no person attempted to come off. Within a few hours the cabin began to fill with water, and all the passengers came on deck, where the furniture of the vessel had been also removed.

"At seven o'clock a boat of the Water-guards came alongside, when the writer, at the request of the captain, came off with two men into Cove, where he made known the occurrence to the different agents, and got all the large boats in the place to go out to the assistance of the steamer, and by this means all the persons on board, between thirty and forty in number, were conveyed ashore in the Ocean steamer. No blame whatever is to be attached to the captain, who, to do him justice, left nothing undone to save the vessel and passengers, not only by his own presence of mind, but by the prompt and ready directions which he issued from time to time. The captain reported that the situation of the vessel was most critical; the after-hold was full of water. There were several horses and carriages on board, which did not suffer, and the passengers' luggage was saved."

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

THE SYDNEY OAK, AT PENSHURST.

About six miles north of Tunbridge Wells, lies Penshurst Place, an embelished mansion of the time of Edward III., and the seat of the Sydneys from the time of Edward VI. The passenger by the South Eastern Railway may be reminded of the association of the Sydneys and Penshurst, upon his arrival at the Tunbridge station, though he will have little time for retrospection upon the glories of this olden place. It may be sufficient, however, to remind him, that at Penshurst, was born, on Nov. 30, 1554, Sir Philip Sydney, "whose spirit was too high for the court, and his integrity too stubborn for the cabinet." To commemorate the event of Sir Philip's birth, the oak represented in the engraving, is said to have been planted. Its bole measures about 28 feet in circumference. Waller thus refers to the planting of the tree:—

"Go, boy, and carve this passion on the bark
Of yonder tree, which stands the sacred mark
Of noble Sydney's birth; when such benign—
Such more than mortal-making stars did shine,
That there it cannot but for ever prove
The monument and pledge of humble love."

Ben Jonson thus alludes to this tree, in his "Forest":—

"Thou hast thy walks for health, as well as sport,
Thy mount to which the Dryads do resort,
When Pan and Bacchus their high feasts have made
Beneath the broad beech and the chestnut shade,
That tall tree, too, which of a nut was set,
At his great birth, where all the Muses met."

In a poem, by R. Coventry, are these lines:—

"What genius points to yonder oak!
What raptures does thy soul invoke!
There let me hang a garland high,
There let my muse her accents try:
Be there my earliest homage paid,
Be there my latest vigils made;
For thou wast planted in the earth
The day that shone on Sydney's birth."

"THE SYDNEY OAK," AT PENSHURST.

The character of Sir Philip Sydney is one of the finest in the long line of English chivalry. He was "a gentleman finished and complete, in whom mildness was associated with courage, erudition mollified by refinement, and courtliness dignified by truth. He is a specimen of what the English character is capable of producing, when foreign admixtures had not destroyed its simplicity, or politeness debased its honour. Of such a stamp was Sir Philip Sydney, and as such every Englishman has reason to be proud of him." Sir Walter Raleigh called him "the English Petrarch." The chivalry of his character, his learning, generous patronage of talent, and his untimely fate, contribute to make him an object of great interest. He died, says the author of the "Effigies Poeticæ," from his cradle to the grave amidst incense and flowers, and died in a dream of glory."

NEW MUSIC.

MY OWN LAND. Song written by G. LINLEY, Esq. Composed by L. LAVENU. Addition and Hodson.

No country in the world has been more rich in the production of native melody than England, and at the same time no country has been so indifferent to her own produce. Unless a tune be localised in a drama, and then too in an interesting situation, it falls flat upon the common ear, and becomes even a matter of indifference to the elegant. Hundreds of beautiful airs are daily born in our climate to an ephemeral existence, while their inferiors, imported from the continent, manage to live for more than a season or two. Mr. Lavenu is a young composer; no fault, for Mozart was so once, and is possessed of considerable inventive faculty, skill, and taste. The composition before us is replete with beauty—full of simple and graceful melody floating upon quaint and original harmonies. It is a most charming ballad, and though it can speak for itself, yet heard through the eloquent interpretation of Miss E. Lucombe, it cannot fail to delight all auditors.

THE DAUGHTER OF ST. MARK. Opera. The music by M. W. BALFE. Chappell, New Bond-street.

Of the general merit of this music we have already given an opinion in our notice on its first production. We shall now enter into a few details. "The Gondolier" (ballad sung by Miss Rainforth) is a pretty melody, easy of performance, and effective even in mediocre hands. The song, "When all around our Path is Dreary," is as delicious a composition as could be written for Borra's style of lugubrious chant. The canon (which should have been termed canon or round), "If True his Tale," wants the ars celandi artem—its construction is too apparent from the commencement. Moreover, the stammering subdivisions of the verbal as well as vocal phrases and syllables, are intolerable. The ballad, "We may be Happy Yet," is pretty, and further deponent sayeth not. The trombone symphony is quite preposterous. Mr. Burrows' arrangements, in four books of the airs, &c., for the pianoforte, with an ad libitum accompaniment for the flute, are in his usual correct and graceful manner.

MISS CLARA WEBSTER.—Unfortunately, the death of this accomplished dancer has not been the only evil attendant upon the late sad accident at Drury-lane Theatre. A nurse of the name of Hurd, supplied on the urgency of the case from the Middlesex Hospital to attend upon Miss Webster, fell down the stairs, and upon being conveyed back to the hospital was found to have sustained a serious fracture of the knee. She is now lying in the accident ward, whilst a sickly husband and three young children are deprived of the support they obtained from her labour.

WRECK OF "THE VANGUARD" STEAMER, OFF CORK LIGHTHOUSE.

GRAND BANQUET TO SIR H. POTTINGER, AT MANCHESTER.

BANQUET TO SIR HENRY POTTINGER AT MANCHESTER.

Yesterday (Friday) week a banquet was given at Manchester to Sir Henry Pottinger, at which the distinguished guest was received with as much enthusiasm as at Liverpool.

The entertainment was of a most sumptuous description, nothing being wanted that could contribute to the comfort of the guests.

The banquet took place in the Town Hall, which was magnificently fitted up for the occasion. Above 200 gentlemen sat down to dinner. The chair was occupied by the Mayor. On his right sat the Right Hon. Sir Henry Pottinger, Major General Sir Thomas Arbuthnot, Sir George Larpent (chairman of the London East India and China Association), J. W. Patten, Esq., M.P., Samuel Gregory, Esq., Colonel Malcolm, D. L. Barn, Esq., Dr. Wootton, J. Marvick, Esq., Archibald Hastie, Esq., M.P., Major Pottinger, R. Burgess, Esq., the Rev. Canon Parkinson, and Captain Eastwick. On the left were William Entwistle, Esq., M.P., J. M. McGregor, Esq., James Loch, Esq., M.P., Lieutenant-Colonel White, F. Pottinger, Esq., Colonel Brooke, W. Stewart, Esq., J. A. Turner, Esq., the Rev. C. D. Wray (sub-dean), Major Foster, Major Westmore, Dr. Bowring, M.P., Robertson Gladstone, Esq., &c. The principal vice-president was John Marvick, Esq.

After the usual toasts, the Mayor proposed the health of Sir Henry Pottinger, eulogizing in the strongest language his character, and his great services in bringing about the treaty with China, which promised to be of such immense benefit to Great Britain.

Sir Henry Pottinger, in his reply, went over some of the topics introduced into his speech at Liverpool, but in the course of his remarks he gave some very interesting information relative to China. Sir Henry said, "When I was first appointed to go to China, it was, I am proud to say, totally unexpected. I had been in India from the time that I was a boy of thirteen years of age. I came home to England; and I had very little intercourse with any of the leading men in both or either parties; in fact, I hardly knew any of them personally when I received an intimation from her Majesty's Ministers at the time, to the purpose that I should go out to China. Although my health was not quite established, I was ready and forward to do any service to my country, and I embarked for China with the full intention of doing all that I could, in a full and anxious exertion to carry out the instructions that I had received. Upon my arrival in China, gentlemen, I need hardly tell you, things were in a very unpleasant and awkward state; but through the valour of her Majesty's arms, and the distinguished services of her Majesty's navy, they soon came to have a better appearance. And as soon as that sort of persuasion induced the Chinese Government to listen to our terms, they were then more than ready to meet them more than half-way, and to show that moderation, which I am sure was best worthy of England, and which I am quite certain every person in this room would highly applaud.—(Hear, hear.) With that feeling, gentlemen, I undertook and I commenced that negotiation; and I had the happiness to meet, as already I have in another public situation stated, in consultation, my esteemed friend, the High Commissioner Koo-hing. The treaty was made as you have seen it, though afterwards there remained what were to me difficulties, and most important matters to be settled, in the commercial negotiations. There, however, I met with assistance which I could hardly have promised myself. Some of the gentlemen attached to the former mission were quite competent to give me every information, and they did so. One of them, alas! now so more, was peculiarly a person likely to be of use to me upon the occasion: I speak of Mr. Morrison, gentlemen. The other is a gentleman with whom, I dare say, some of you are acquainted—if not from the first—Mr. Thom, a gentleman from Glasgow. (Hear.) To those two gentlemen I am glad to have this public opportunity of saying I was greatly indebted for all the information upon which the tariff and the commercial part of the negotiations were regulated. For you will all readily understand that my habits and pursuits were not of that nature perfectly to give me a sufficient insight into this question myself. I, however, did not shrink from the responsibility; and I need not say that it rejoices and delights me to feel that I have not only your approbation, but I rejoice to see that I have the approbation, as it were, of all England. I say 'all England,' for when I see her Majesty's present and late Ministers each combining to say that they approve of what I have done—when I see the City of London, the great town of Liverpool, and the still greater town of Manchester—what am I to believe? I cannot believe that any of you have thought it necessary to meet, and come forward, and to speak wholly without cause for an humble individual like myself. I am not, however, the less thankful and grateful for your kindness. Believe me, that your good opinion and your approbation (and when I say yours I mean that of all my fellow-countrymen) is the most cheering—the most heart-cheering—reward that I can possibly have. I believe that the treaty continues all the advantages that a treaty with China ought to do. I have studied, I did study, in making it, to prevent any feeling of jealousy upon the part of the Chinese; they met me more than half way, and I thought it was my duty, and I felt that it accorded with the greatness and the feelings of England not to make it exclusive. I was therefore happy to recommend to the Chinese Government, with a full experience, to throw open the treaty with all the nations in the world.

TOUCAN, AT THE SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.

MOOSE DEER, AT THE SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—See next page.

Commodore (Arthur) Vicozani Sunday last, the 23rd ult., being nothing less than the capture by the American Commodore commanding the United States frigate Congress of the whole of the Argentine squadron. We recall to your recollection the fact, that since the departure of Commodore Purvis, the fishing-boats of Monte Video are seized by the Argentines whenever they can catch them. On Sunday one of these boats was pursued by an armed schooner bearing the Buenos Ayres flag, and the latter having the best of the chase, the boat ran aground, the crew of an American bark for security, upon which the armed schooner, without halting or other usual notice, fired shotted guns into the American bark, inflicting some damage, being at that time too within range of the Congress's guns. The American commodore then sent an armed boat to take possession of the aggressive schooner, and then of the whole Argentine squadron in detail, lowering the flags of each vessel in succession. Commodore Greenell, commanding the Brazilian naval force at Monte Video, sent a message to Captain Pippen, of the Argentine squadron, stating he considered the blockade to be void, as the blockading naval power had ceased to exist. Her Britannic Majesty's brig Philomel arrived here to-day, despatched by Mr. Turner, with letters to Mr. Montevideo, and there the affair stands for the present. We have detailed this affair to you because the circumstances are likely to be serious."

PANTOMIMES AND CHRISTMAS PIECES.

T FEW periods have the theatres displayed such general activity in preparing entertainments for the Christmas holiday-keepers as at the present time. There has also been a marked improvement in the style and nature of the pieces produced: there is a certain degree of meaning or allusion in every effect represented. Formerly, a rustic ballet-kind of opening to the pantomimes, with certain mechanical changes when the harlequinade commenced, was thought sufficient; but now the opening is in itself an elaborate story—the drollest whimsicalities are therein introduced, and it forms perhaps the most important part of the production: whilst in the pantomime, properly so called, all sorts of sly shafts are aimed at passing or past follies and events. The burlesque extravaganzas too, are productions increasing in popularity, and more and more adapted to the general taste, bid fair to supplant legitimate comedy in wit and satire. In fact, the present, the burlesque, and the introductory portion of a pantomime, are closely assimilated.

DRURY LANE.

To the industrious and successful pen of Mr. Madison Morton, we are indebted for the pantomime produced at this house, which is called "Puck's Pantomime; or, Harlequin and Robinson Crusoe." The subject has been before treated in various ways but this ought not to militate against the representation of a popular legend in another form, since every author takes a fresh view of its method of treatment.

In the first scene we are introduced to "An Attic Story," the abode of an author (Mr. Hance), who adopts the pen for his profession, and is consequently in distress. But he is in the greatest trouble, because he cannot find a subject for a pantomime. Hereat, Puck (Miss A. Payne)—a very clever little girl, by the way—comes to his aid, and after introducing a variety of well known friends of all, both old and young, at last produces "Robinson Crusoe," on which they decide. A view of the island is then shown, with the ship high and dry, the ocean slumbering in the back ground, and the crabs wide awake in the fore ground. Here Crusoe (Mr. W. H. Payne) is paying a visit to the wreck, and shows "his private opinion of the useful and the useless," by pitching overboard a chest containing "the legitimate drama." He is somewhat put out by a visit from the Caribbee islanders, and determined to avenge himself. The next scene is the interior of the island, and we here make acquaintance with Princess Tooraloola (Mr. Johnson) and her ten graduated brothers, who comes to implore Crusoe's aid to rescue her lover, Prince Paramatta (Mr. Wieland), who has been confined by his rival and elder brother, King Pariboo (Mr. T. Mathews), a passionate monarch, in a cage, and is about to be boiled alive. Crusoe promises to assist her; and speedily after this the savages appear bearing the hapless Paramatta, who is so soon to find himself in hot water. The preparations are being made for this Caribbee picnic, when Crusoe fires an infernal machine at them. The savages fly. Pariboo and his club-bearer, Hankipanki, (Mr. Howell) jump into the sea, and are swallowed by the celebrated shark, Sen Domingo Billy, rendered otherwise so famous by Mr. T. P. Cooke, in "Black Eyed Susan." Crusoe now adopts Paramatta, under the name of Friday, and they go fishing, when upon landing the aforesaid shark, he disgorges his "two insides," who again show fight, but are beaten by Crusoe, and "the Princess' little brothers." In the following scene, Crusoe is represented with his guests, in the happiness of domestic life, with his goat, his parrot, and all our old acquaintances of the story book about him, as well as the Princess and her relations. Here again the restless Caribbees attack them, and an awful skirmish is about to take place, when Puck once more appears: the "house that Crusoe built" turns to a view of the sea shore, and his sea-chest into a steamer, which is to convey him to England. The characters are now changed. Paramatta becomes Harlequin (Mr. Wieland); Pariboo is changed to Clown (Mr. T. Mathews); Hankipanki "assumes the form" of Pantaloon (Mr. Howell); and the Princess is turned to Columbine (Miss Carson); and the harlequinade commences. The various topics of the by-gone year—the Morocco war, the Act for Insolvent Debtors; the baths and washhouses of the labouring classes—are introduced, and the pantomime concludes with a grand tableau of her Majesty christening the new Royal Exchange.

SCENE FROM "HARLEQUIN CROTCHET AND QUAYER," AT COVENT GARDEN THEATRE.

SCENE FROM "VALENTINE AND ORSON," AT THE LYCEUM THEATRE.

Notwithstanding this attractive story, and a very good opening scene, the whole affair moved heavily from the first to the last scene; nor was the flagging of that description which repetition is likely to improve. Payne, as Crusoe, obtained the most applause: his attack on the ship was cleverly acted.

COVENT GARDEN.

The arrangements for the promenade concerts, and the decorations of the Bal Masqué having been cleared away by a transformation as wonderful as any in the Christmas piece, after the time-honoured "boxing-night" tragedy of "George Barnwell," a new comic pantomime by Mr. Nelson Lee was produced, called "Harlequin Crotchet and Quaver, or Music for the Million." The characters and plot are to the fullest extent musical. Semiquaver (Miss Massall) the music-seller to the Fair Court is beloved by Vassar Crotchet (Mr.

tage with her father, Old Demisemiquaver (Mr. Gourlet). Crotchet is favoured by Melody (Miss L. Lyons) whilst Discord is backed by his band, who rejoice in such names as Noise, Racket, Crash, Scream, &c. &c. These latter personages, resolved to stop the progress of music, determine to carry off the lovers, and having done so, Discord solicits Semiquaver's hand of her father, and tempting his avarice by a display of unbounded wealth, gains his consent. In "stave the fourth," the prisoners are seen chained to a bar and unable to frame a tune. The old man finding his daughter has already been carried off, is much enraged, and demands her restoration. The demon Discord, in a towering passion, orders them to be removed instantly to his Cave of Noise and Racket, when Melody changes the scene to the "Halls of Light in the Temple of Apollo." Apollo appears in the Star of Concord, and crushes the power of the guards of Discord, Flat, Sharp, and Natural (Messrs. Hann, Rogers, and Henry), represented in a pictorial manner on the play-bill, with the names very properly put beside them to show which is which, as without this guide it might be difficult to determine. Discord and her crew are defeated, and Harmony then causes to appear Two Harlequins (Messrs. Smithers and Spenser Forde); Two Columbinas (Miss Massall and Miss Ryalls). Discord becomes Clown (Mr. Charles Marsh); Demisemiquaver with another, turn to a Pair of Pantaloon (Messrs. Gourlet and T. Blanchard). A great deal is made in the pantomime of the late circus excitements, even to "A Full Moon" and "The Man in Brass." The baths and wash-houses also figure; and in the physical portion of the attractions there are feats upon the corde volante; the Mazourka by two clever dancers from the Lyceum, Mesdemoiselles Adele and Louise; a Nigger Polka by Messrs. Marshall and Forest; an Irish Tilt by Mr. Forest and Miss Frampton, together with several athletic exhibitions. Every thing is at last brought to a satisfactory wind-up in "Melody's Home, filled with Harmony, Union, and Love," and the piece concludes with the triumph of Melody over the powers of Discord.

After "George Barnwell," the Pantomime went off capitally, but had the fault of being too long. It wants cutting sadly, which will no doubt be attended to; and there were not many of those jokes and allusions which the public are now accustomed to expect in a piece of this kind. The scenery "hitched" several times, but this is excusable on a first representation. The Clown, Mr. Charles Marsh, wants activity. Mr. T. Blanchard was very good; and Miss Massall is an attractive young lady, with a nice figure, and an excellent dancer. The scenery is beautifully painted; and a mazurka, which must become very popular, composed by M. Jules de Glines, was played with great spirit and effect by the band.

SCENE

HAYMARKET.

Mr. Planché, the originator of the elegant school of burlesque, which has since become so popular, and to whom we are indebted for such pleasant reminiscences of "Fortunio," "The Fair One with the Golden Locks," and all the costly extravaganzas during the Vestris dynasty at Covent Garden, has again drawn from the graceful stories of the Countess d'Anois, and produced a new dramatic nursery tale, entitled "Gracioso and Percinet." At the commencement, we have Mr. James Bland, the king of burlesque potentates, as King Uxoriosa, a widower unexpectedly bewitched, who, in consequence of his ceaseless weeping over the decease of his first wife, is recommended to go a hunting for another, under the care of his chief huntsman, Lord Nimrod (Mr. Caulfield). In pursuing the sport, himself and train arrive at a castle, inhabited by a wicked fairy, disguised as the Duchess Grognon (Mrs. Stanley). The duchess has a capital cellar, and at last prevails upon the King, who is somewhat of a grasping disposition, to marry her. On her arriving at the palace she finds the King's daughter, Gracioso (Miss Julia Bennett), so beautiful and so popular, that she immediately conceives a violent hatred for her, and imposes a variety of strange tasks upon her, which it seems impossible that she can accomplish. Percinet, however, "a fairy prince, and the perfection of lovers," comes to her assistance, and aids her in getting through her labours; and in the end the pair are both made happy.

The dialogue is smart, and abounds with happy turns and allusions, and the mise-en-scène is unexceptionable, not perhaps presented with the brilliant effect which distinguished that of "The Fair One with the Golden Locks," and one or two others of the Christmas fairy productions of the same author, but still excellent and complete in its way. Several favourite arias, among them—"When other lips," from the "Bohemian Girl," were introduced, and those sung by Miss Horton drew forth repeated applause. The whole piece passed off most successfully, the curtain having fallen amidst enthusiastic plaudits.

LYCEUM.

The well-known story of "Valentine and Orson"—the foundling of the forest of Orleans—has been taken as the groundwork for a burlesque at this house. The construction of the melo-dramatic spectacle on the same subject played some years back, has been closely followed, with the exception of the opening scene: but the whole of the dialogue is filled with whimsical point and allusions, and written in burlesque verse. The first scene represents the annual dinner of the "Fairy Foundling Hospital," in the Field of the Forty Fungi, wherein Oberon (Mrs. Wigan) appoints Pacolet (Miss Turner) to look after the foundlings at Orleans. In the second scene, we find their mother, Belisaria (Mrs. Woolridge), formerly the Empress of Greece, reduced to keep a school. She explains her history to her writing-master, Blandin (Mr. Turner), and then prepares to take her young ladies to see the Royal visit to the City. The next scene is a view of Orleans, wherein King Pippin (Mr. F. Matthews) receives Valentine (Mrs. Keeley) returning from the wars, with a brilliant cortege and trophies. Henry and Haufray (Messrs. Wigan and Scotres) are jealous of Valentine's popularity; and knowing that there is a wild man ravaging the forests near the city, they persuade Valentine to try and capture him, hoping it will terminate in his death. Valentine departs, carrying with him the love of the Princess Eglantine (Miss Farebrother), and arrives at the forest with his squire, Hugo (Mr. Meadows). Here he encounters Orson (Mr. Keeley) and his nurse the bear, Bruina (Mr. Collier), who lives at the bottom of a bear-pit, like those at the Zoological Gardens. The bear gets tipsy, and ultimately dies: and Valentine leads Orson in triumph to Orleans, in spite of the efforts made by an evil spirit, Agramant, to oppose him. The second act commences with the arrival of the brothers at the palace, where a grand banquet is given, at which the wild man conducts himself in a most unseemly manner. The Duke of Aquitaine sends to request King Pippin's aid to rescue his daughter, Florimonda (Miss L. Howard), who is kept in captivity by the Green Knight (Mr. Emery). Valentine offers to release her, and the jealousy of Eglantine being roused, she determines to follow him, and for this purpose she arms the whole of her maids of honour. Henry and Haufray, his old enemies, waylay him on the way, and try to kill him; but Orson comes to his brothers' assistance, and they proceed together to the camp of Agramant, where Florimonda is working a Turk in Berlin wool, to beguile her captivity. Eglantine also arrives, and a general combat ensues, when, during the mêlée, Pacolet appears and the sorcerer is vanquished. The scene then changes to the Hall of the Brazen Head, wherein the oracle gives out its replies, in the style of the "answers to correspondents" in the Sunday newspapers, &c. The relationship of the brothers is made known; Valentine marries Eglantine, Orson takes the hand of Florimonda, the fairies are called to the weddings, and all ends happily.

SCENE FROM "CAT'S CASTLE," AT THE ADELPHI THEATRE.

SCENE FROM "GRACIOSO AND PERCINET," AT THE HAYMARKET THEATRE.

After an adaptation of "The Chimes," on Boxing Night, the burlesque was produced, and was completely successful. Our limits, and the late period of the week, will not allow us to do more than mention the great splendour with which it has been produced, and the general excellence of the performance. Mr. Keeley's Orson was the scene of burlesque acting, and his talented little wife made an admirable Valentine; whilst Mr. Wigan, by his singular imitation of a ridding tragedian, brought down loud applause. Miss Arden was favoured in a pretty way on "The Ivy Green," and Miss Farebrother came off with great eclat as the leader of the Amazons, whose evolutions were finely cooered. Mr. F. Matthews and Mr. Meadows were also very droll in their respective parts. It is in every respect as successful as "A. B. C. D." The house was densely crowded, and the audience tolerably quiet.

ADELPHI.

The Pantomime at this house is from the pen of Mr. Buckstone, and is called "Cat's Castle; or, Harlequin and the King of the Rats," and purports to be "founded upon a categorical and doggerel poem, written by a Laureate, who invoked the Muses of the middle ages." We can well remember an old lottery print upon the same subject, which was published by Messrs. Bowles and Carver, who formerly kept such an endless repository of entertaining pictures in St. Paul's Churchyard. The whole of the opening of this piece is taken up by the warlike preparations and battles of the contending parties. We find Whiskers, King of the Rats (Mr. C. J. Smith), and the Princess Molrow (Miss Lonsdale); there is also Prince Tortoiseshell Tom (Mr. T. Ireland), and Kill Cat, Generalissimo of the Rat Army (Mr. Sanders); while amongst the officers are such names, in the feline army, as Marshal Pantler, Colonel Purwell, and Major Fitz-spit. The siege and blowing up of Cat's Castle is the signal for the appearance of the Fairy Honeyuckle, in a radiant star, who transforms Tortoiseshell and Molrow to Harlequin and Columbine, and Whiskers and Kill Cat to Clown and Pantaloon. A number of allusions to passing events are introduced in the Pantomime, as well as the topics of the past year. Hungerford Suspension Bridge and the Invisible Shell; the Running Rein Fraud and the Insolvent Debtors' Court; the Washhouses for the Million; General Tom Thumb—all leading up to a succession of dioramic tableaux associated with events retrospective of the year 1844, painted by Mr. Charles Marshall.

The business after the transformations proved somewhat dull; and even making allowance for a first representation, the machinery was very much at fault. The tricks were old, and scarcely brought a laugh; and the audience appeared as dull as if witnessing a tragedy. The feats of the Infant Lauri Family drew down considerable applause, and were really clever; one or two things here and there were pretty good, as the "Box of American stores," changing to Tom Thumb's carriage, from which a capital likeness of the "General" alighted, and bowed to the audience. There was, also, a cleverly painted scene of Dioramic Tableaux of the most attractive events of the past year.

PRINCESS.

The old melodrama of the "Miller and his Men" has been entirely rewritten into a burlesque, by Mr. Gilbert à Beckett, whose "Open Sesame," "Wonderful Lamp in a New Light," &c., are fresh in our readers' recollections. It is here called "Joe Miller and his Men," and, as may be supposed, is crisscrossed with jokes of the quaintest kind. It commences in the Celestial Court of Bankruptcy, and goes on through the scenes of the well-known drama, with a ludicrous spirit of travesty. We have "A Grand Prize Robber Show," and the laying of the train is called "Magazine Day in Bohemia." Whether the audience were disappointed at not being re-

SCENE FROM "HARLEQUIN L. S. D." AT THE SURREY THEATRE.

ABSENTEES.

[illegible]

The Debats mentions a report that a M. Turquin has bequeathed to the hospitals of Paris the whole of his property, amounting in value to nine millions of francs.

RAILWAY SIGNALS

JUNCTION OF THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY WITH THE LONDON

We resume the important subject of Railway Signals, by an exhibition of those in use on the Great Western Railway. They consist of—

1. Line signals. These are divided into day and night signals. 1. Day: The line signals, during day, are performed by the arms of the policeman or servants in attendance. The signal "All Right"

2. Night: The line signals during night are given by means of coloured lights. To make the announcement "All Right" to an approaching train, the white light of a lamp is held steadily facing it, and as it passes by, the lamp is moved round, so that the light may continue to fall upon the engine. Great care is taken to keep the light steady, in order that it may not be mistaken for any other signal. The Caution signal "to Slacken Speed," is indicated in a similar manner, by the green glass of the lamp being turned on and shown as before mentioned. The Danger signal "to Stop," is shown in the same way, by the red glass of the lamp being turned on. In the absence of a red light, the violent waving of a light horizontally indicates danger.

The carriages are provided with red and green lamps; the red ones are placed at the rear of the carriages, and can only be seen by persons standing behind the train. The green ones are placed in front; they consequently denote the approach of a train. Locomotive engines moving without a train show the same lights.

II. STATION, TUNNEL, AND GATE SIGNALS. 1. Day. The signal "All Right" is indicated by a round board, placed on the top of a high mast, and having its face turned to the line. The holes pierced in it are merely for the purpose of making it more clearly distinguishable at a distance. Our small cut, in the first column, shows its form. The "Caution" signal, "to Slacken Speed," is shown by a Green Painted Board, pointing from the rails on the left-hand side of the train. The tall cut, in the second column, shows it in operation. The signal "To Stop" is shown by a cross-bar, placed beneath the round board before mentioned, and at right angles with it, so that in working it, when the cross bar is visible, the round board having only its edge towards the driver, is invisible. The same signal is also made by a red painted board pointing to the rails.

2. Night: The signal "All Right" is shown by a White lamp fixed on a staff in some place sufficiently conspicuous to be easily seen by an approaching train. The "Caution" signal, "to Slacken Speed," is indicated by a Green Lamp, shown in the same way. The "Danger" signal "To Stop," is indicated by a Red Lamp shown in the same way.

III. JUNCTION SIGNALS.—These are of immense importance. A moment's inattention to them, on the passage of a couple of trains, might involve them both in common ruin. Perhaps this fearful truth is nowhere more strongly exemplified than at the point on which the West London Branch crosses the Great Western Railway. The cut at the head of this article exhibits the junction of these two lines, and it will be seen that they meet at right angles, and in fact cross each other in "point blank" directions. To prevent collisions, the following signals have been contrived; and up to the present time they have, in spite of their very limited range, answered extremely well. Two signal-posts of great size, and conspicuous for their markings and colour, have been placed on the left of the up line, in the angle formed by the junction of the two lines. One of these posts—a very tall one—is devoted to the use of the Great Western Line; and the other—a short one—to the use of the West London. The mode of giving the signals is the same in principle as those already described, but, in their application, they are so arranged that the one is made to work relatively with the other. Thus, when the full face of the cross bar of the branch post is turned full on the line, giving warning "To Stop," the position of the round board above it gives signal of "All Clear" to the main line, and so on. Meantime the tall post makes its own signal of "All Clear" to the main line, and "Stop" to the branch one. At night these signals are made by lights.

In constructing a signal-post, it is of importance that it should be made of materials strong enough to be beyond the reach of ordinary accidents, and also, that its weight should not be so great as to impede its motion. These conditions are happily combined in the example under consideration. The taller ones are formed of sound pine masts, clamped in some places with iron, and shod with suitable materials to protect them against wet and damp. The turning apparatus consists either of a ball movement, or a swivel, and a simple handle, or compound lever, as the case may require. When a post has been turned to give a signal, it is held in its position by one of a series of hooks which lay hold of it in succession, as the several turns are completed. The notches on the sides of the post enable the policeman on duty to examine it from time to time, with a view to necessary repairs. The smaller posts are formed of lighter materials, but more gaudily painted than the larger ones.

In the management of the signal-men, a strict discipline is observed. On entering the service, they give a bond to "observe and obey" the company's regulations; and in all cases of failure, prompt punishment or dismissal follows. Occasional rewards for extraordinary services might be given with advantage.

It will be seen that this system of signals is very simple, and so far to be commended; but the success which has attended its use we attribute rather to the monotonous character of the hitherto direct and uniform traffic of the Great Western, than to any great excellence in the signals themselves. We are not going to find fault, but we may prove the truth of our opinion by remarking, that the signals apply to the up and down lines simultaneously, and in no respect possess the power of speaking to the trains or engines of a single pair of rails; neither is any caution signal made at the West London Junction—an economy which we deem to be most unwise.

The Magnetic Telegraph at work between the London and Slough stations, although admirably adapted for the entire signal service of the line, is only used for private purposes.

JUNCTION SIGNAL POST.

I. Line signals. These are divided into day and night signals. 1. Day: The line signals, during day, are performed by the arms of the policeman or servants in attendance. The signal "All Right"

STATION SIGNAL "ALL RIGHT"

consists in holding the right arm in a horizontal position, pointing across the line of rails on which the train is proceeding. See our engraving. The Caution signal to "Slacken Speed" is shown by the LINE SIGNAL "ALL RIGHT."

LINE SIGNALS "CAUTION."

LINE SIGNALS "STOP."

GREAT SKIFF RACE, AT NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE THAMES AND TYNE.

On Wednesday, the 18th, a grand skiff match for £100, was rowed between Coombes, the celebrated Thames waterman, and Henry Clasper, of Derwent Ham, who enjoys equal celebrity among the watermen of the Tyne. As might be expected, from the amount of the stakes, and the importance of the race—the championship of the Thames and Tyne depending on it—the contest drew together a great concourse of spectators; and, as the time of starting drew near, every available place was occupied, the bridge and each side of the river as far as the eye could reach being densely crowded. The river, too, was unusually animated; craft of all descriptions rowed leisurely about, while a host of steamers filled with company were prepared to accompany the competitors, so that a portion of the spectators witnessed the race from the beginning to the end. The weather, though fair, was gloomy, and about half-past ten o'clock, Coombes entered his skiff, and soon after Clasper (who had been on board the Laurel steamer, which was engaged by the umpires, referees, &c.) followed him, and was loudly cheered as he entered his boat.

Both men having made ready, rowed gently down the river and through the bridge, by which their neat and tiny skiffs, though each differing considerably in their structure, were seen to great advantage and excited general admiration: that of Coombes seemed to be of first-rate finish and modelled peculiar to those connected with the Thames; while Clasper's formed the beau idéal of his four oared gig the Five Brothers. Both boats were built expressly for the occasion—the London one being constructed of white wood by Messrs. Cowdson and Wintzell, of Lambeth and weighed 43 lbs.; and that of Newcastle, of mahogany, by Clasper himself, but was 6 lb. heavier. The betting at starting was in favour of Coombes, and varied from 6 to 4 to 3 to 1; and in many instances was freely taken.

On the skiffs returning up the river, they kept together; and on passing the bridge, the channel being completely clear, away they went in excellent style, amidst the cheers of the immense multitude; but before they had proceeded many yards, Clasper fouled his oars, by which his opponent gained an advantage, and led by a full boat's length. Clasper, however, having speedily recovered himself, again "bent his oar to the stroke," but unfortunately on reaching the Skippers' Burn he ran foul of a keel, when Coombes, by the accident, shot several yards ahead. After Clasper cleared, he again plied his oars, and from this point up to Radcliff seemed to gain upon his adversary until within four boat's length; but it soon became apparent that he could not win, for in making two or three attempts to reach his opponent, he failed, and Coombes ultimately came in a winner by six lengths or more.

After the race, a protest was made against Coombes receiving the stakes, in consequence of one of Coombes's friends crying out to him that he was pulling his skiff on shore, and waving at the same time with his hand to him the proper course to take. A meeting was held on the subject, and several witnesses were examined; after which the referee gave his decision the following morning, which was "that Coombes was entitled to the stakes," upon which they were immediately given up to him.

Throughout the race, Clasper's conduct was worthy of the highest commendation; not only did he produce, by his own skill and industry, a beautiful and well-designed skiff, which would do credit to any professional boat builder, but throughout the race he contended manfully for the prize. It is stated in the Newcastle Journal (whence these details are abridged), that a match is talked of between Clasper and Newell, another London waterman.

ENGLISH THEATRICALS AT PARIS.—THE SALLE VENTADOR.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The English company has now played "Othello," "Hamlet," and "Virginia." The performers are well known to the London public, and to enter upon a critique of their acting would in this instance be particularly misplaced. Macready's Hamlet, Othello, and Virginia are little altered by the year he has spent in America; and all have been lauded by friends, assailed by foes, and appreciated by true critics, for many years past. Something of the same sort may be said of Miss Faucit's Desdemona and Virginia; her Ophelia is new to the London public as well as to the Parisian. It is a remarkable performance. Miss Faucit does not, of course, sing the music with the finish of a prima donna—Shakespeare never intended that it should be so sung. The snatches of tunes are the components of tragic and of lyric passion, and so Miss Faucit need rather than executed them. But her voice is sweet and plaintive, and fully serves her to do what she requires. For the acting, nothing more true or tender has been given on the stage since the highest triumphs of Miss O'Neill—accordingly, though many heartily applauded, more as heartily wept. A critic in the Charivari gives us the best account of her powers, in saying that it would be impossible to produce effect with less effort; and this is, beyond all doubt, the perfection of art.

A foreign audience in the mass are only judges of the right and wrong, the interest for the good and against the bad characters of a drama. The sufferings therefore which prompt the stern justice of Othello, the conscience which is the indication of Hamlet, are beyond their appreciation. They take part against the Moor instead of sympathizing with him; and they call Hamlet deficient in action, because they perceive the absence of physical events, and are not aware of the presence of mental ones. It is this blunder which makes Victor Hugo think his own melodramatic story could excite them, the French audience responded freely and energetically; in many parts, they fairly took the actors' part in trust, and rewarded them generously. But in "Virginia" all is marked and clear. The right and wrong are there of a ballet, every accent being perfectly visible as well as audible. Here, therefore, the enthusiasm became enforced and spontaneous. The audience applauded to relieve themselves, and to please the actor or satisfy conviction. All was hearty from one end of the house to the other, and it may fairly be said, that every character in the piece earned his share of the respect shown to the performance. Inspired by the effort, Macready acted in his very first style, and has renewed the remembrance of his former successes, and fixed them in the hearts of many of those best worth winning opinions from. Rachel, Alexandre Jumas, and many others of high rank in the world of art; the Dukes of Nemours and Montpensier, and others lofty in rank; have had pleasure in showing such feelings.

The Salle itself is perhaps the most beautiful in the world. The rich gilding upon a white ground, relieved by the deep crimson velvet, which gives the only colour used in the theatre, places the splendid audience in the richest possible framework, and the boxes receding as they grow higher, and free from all division, so as to show every person as in the section of an amphitheatre. After a cover d'œil of quite unequalled magnificence, nothing can give a greater contrast to the quiet, exclusive, parted-off style of the Italian Opera in London.

The subject of our illustration is the last scene of Othello. The public are all anxious for "Macbeth," with the splendid service which will, it is to be hoped, be effectually presented them. This play and "Werner" are the remaining dramas to be offered the subscription of twelve nights, a very little beyond which is likely to be allowed, from the active opposition of the manager of the Académie, M. Leon Pillet.

FASHIONS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

FASHIONS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

DESCRIPTION OF THE FIGURES.

RIGHT HAND FIGURE.—A lace cap. A velvet cloak, trimmed with swans-down. A lace dress.

LEFT HAND FIGURE.—A satin hat. A satin cloak, trimmed with narrow velvet ribbon.

RIGHT HAND HALF-LENGTH FIGURE.—A collar, composed of gold net and tulle. A satin dress trimmed with black lace, having two volans of the same round the skirt.

LEFT HAND HALF-LENGTH FIGURE.—A satin hat, trimmed with black lace. A camelion silk dress, with spencer coverage.

MODES DE PARIS.

At no period have ladies' fashions been more graceful than at present; borrowing from the costumes adopted at the time of Louis XIII., XIV., and XV., whatever was elegant and commodious, and having established general forms, which are varied only by the accessories and ornaments; nothing can be more graceful or rational than the coverings, which display the full length of the bust; or the tight sleeves, that so well show off the arm; or the fulness and length of the skirts, which add to the natural grace of an élégante. It is therefore much to be desired that they will long continue in the same course, and avoid those follies to which they so frequently tend.

FASHIONS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

In acquitting myself of the imposed task of furnishing to the readers of your journal some monthly description of Parisian fashions, I shall have no remarkable changes to point out in essentials, but only those of the accessories and ornaments, which are as changeable as the others are fixed.

MANTLETS, PELISSERS, BALL DRESSERS, &c., are remarked for the simplicity of the forms and the elegance of the ornaments.

Velvet is still much used for the ornament of promenade and visiting dresses; it is adapted for the skirts of dresses—three biases of which are placed round, with a small space between each.

Pelissers are ornamented all down the front, with very narrow velvet ribbon, placed so as to imitate brandebourgs, fastened on each side with buttons, underneath which are concealed hooks and eyes, which serve to fasten the skirt. Pelissers, ornamented in this style, usually have double flaps of velvet, and also facings of velvet to the courage. It is evident that velvet and passementerie are still the principal materials for the trimmings of dresses; but, as passementerie has of late been so universally introduced, it must be adopted with great circumspection.

Fashions are indiscriminately employed, both for morning and evening dresses, with this difference, those for the first are close and heavy, whilst the latter are light, and a little draped.

Some elegant MANTLES for evening wear are made of light coloured satin as they are beautifully embroidered with white roses slightly shaded with the same colour as the Mantle; they are trimmed with a handsome fringe. Deep volans, of black or white lace are considered quite in good taste this year; two thirds and frequently three fourths of the skirts of dresses are occupied with these elegant ornaments.

Ball dresses are still made with double skirts, the upper of crape or tulle, and the under of satin; they are usually looped up with bouquets of delicate flowers. There is scarcely any alteration in the shape of HATS; they are low and close for night, and more open for a toilette more recherché.

HATS for morning wear are frequently made of black velvet covered with black lace; and for carriage, of coloured satin covered with white lace; they are ornamented inside the brims with a bow of ribbon or a flower surrounded with tulle.

FRUIT-BONDS of velvet are very fashionable for full toilette; they are frequently ornamented with a row of white beads on the edge of the brim, and anchor on the inside next the forehead.

ENGLISH THEATRICALS AT PARIS.—THE SALLE VENTADOR.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

It is by no means easy to do anything well—but a thousand times more difficult to do nothing in a becoming and convenient manner. Indeed, according to an old maxim of very considerable reputation, when people have nothing to do, they are sure to do mischief; and we are by no means confident we are not about to furnish a proof of the soundness of that doctrine. But, as the Frenchman says, "Que voulez vous?" Practical sporting is defunct for the nonce; all wood-craft is at an end, save the circumventing of a cosmopolitan woodcock, or bombarding amphibious wild fowl from a punt. In this dilemma we are forced into theory—and where so likely to find it as on the turf. With the readers' leave, therefore (which is a polite way for an author to say, whether they will or not), we will, as a finale to the year, say something about racing seasons—past and prospective.

There are people who object to the turf, of course—there are people (probably) who don't buy the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, but take the "Illustrated" instead. "Every one to his taste," as the man said, who showed him little head of it by his passage of vaccine gillantry. No doubt there is a great deal that is objectionable done upon race courses, and indirectly by the practice of horse-racing, but we should be glad to learn where is the human institution "whereunto foul things come not?" We must be content to take the evil and the good, and so long as the turf fosters a wholesome democratic spirit in our merry meetings—so long as it shall serve to draw together the classes into which society is too much separated, for one purpose of social enjoyment and good fellowship—so long do we pronounce it worthy the favour and fosterage of every true Englishman. The year—on the threshold of which we stand—will live long in the memory of the modern Olympian. It was stained by some of the foulest blots to be found in the annals of racing, and distinguished by some of the noblest sport to be found in its calendar. The progress that this most national pastime has made of late years, is, perhaps, not generally known. Twenty years ago, when Sir John Shelley won the Derby with Cedric, the number of subscribers was 38; last season's nominations amounted to 155; the entrancers for 1846 have reached 196! The facilities for enjoying it, too, have equally increased—the list of race meetings for next year contains the names of 129 places of sport in England and Scotland. If we need must propagate the utilitarian, let him look at the exports of thorough-bred stock made during the past summer and autumn, and say do they form a contemptible picture in our rural resources? If he tells us that the course has nothing to do with this, we ask him, why is not so valuable a produce cultivated in other countries—in climates far more favourable to its growth than ours? This we put to him, if some rusty old Smeillonius, with no more blood in his veins than the statue at Charing-cross—but if a jolly old gentleman, whose ignorance is his misfortune, and not his fault, we hereby offer him the near side of our hungry next Epsom races, and pledge ourselves that he shall return to his family circle as convinced there is no human invention so glorious as a Derby—as one of our peculiar lobster salads, and four flasks of champagne can make him. Until we have some open weather, betting will be slack. Race horses are now not allowed to leave the yards, and any exercise they get is "in the straw," which, indeed, is very characteristic of their being confined. Sweet reader, remember it is the season of jokes, and forgive us our pun—we promise not to offend again—until our next wassail bowl.

TATTERSALL'S.

Monday.—On the whole this was as busy an afternoon as we have seen on the eye of "Hogging Day" for many years, and not by any means without result. We may instance a decline in Anti-Repeller and Young Ripper, and a strong disposition to take Penn, the Roberts and Crippen colts, Pottas, Fitz Allen, and Westcott. Repeated inquiries were also made about Cabin Boy and the Minkie colt, and both may be expected to see a better day. The principal favourites kept their places, but were not backed to any amount. Several large bets were laid on the Chester Cup, and a few, in small sums, on the Oaks, at the odds quoted:—

25 to 1 against Winner	25 to 1 against Mid Lot	25 to 1 against Coroner
10 to 1 — Cabin (1)	50 to 1 — Westcott (2)	50 to 1 — Pottas (3)
10 to 1 — Ripper (1)	50 to 1 — Fitz Allen (3)	100 to 1 — Cedric (3)
10 to 1 — Repeller (3)	50 to 1 — Pottas (3)

11 to 1 against Winner	25 to 1 against Coroner	40 to 1 against Winner
15 to 1 — Cabin (1)	50 to 1 — Westcott (2)	50 to 1 — Pottas (3)
15 to 1 — Ripper (1)	50 to 1 — Fitz Allen (3)	100 to 1 — Cedric (3)
15 to 1 — Repeller (3)	50 to 1 — Pottas (3)

TELEGRAMS.—Few of the subscribers had rallied sufficiently from the effects of Christmas fare to find their way through the fog; the attendance, therefore, was small, and the horse race slack. Nevertheless, we are enabled to supply a brief quotation of prices:—

25 to 1 against Winner	25 to 1 against Mid Lot	25 to 1 against Coroner
10 to 1 — Cabin (1)	50 to 1 — Westcott (2)	50 to 1 — Pottas (3)
10 to 1 — Ripper (1)	50 to 1 — Fitz Allen (3)	100 to 1 — Cedric (3)
10 to 1 — Repeller (3)	50 to 1 — Pottas (3)

NOVEL TENNIS MATCH.—On Monday Mr. C. Taylor undertook to play, at Tompkins's Court, Brighton, whilst riding on a pony belonging to Mr. R. Smith, a match at Tennis with Mr. Ricardo. The match was the best of five sets. In consequence of the disadvantage under which Mr. Taylor entered the court, betting was in favour of Mr. Ricardo, who got three sets to one, and consequently won the match. There were about 100 spectators present.

RENNING MATCH FOR ONE HUNDRED POUNDS.—On Tuesday the long pending running match between Stewart, of London, and Robinson, of Newcastle, came off at Patter Ten, in the presence of a large concourse of spectators. Both men have acquired the fame of being the most superior runners of the day, and from the amount of stakes and the heavy betting, the greatest interest prevailed. The distance was 100 yards. In betting, 5 to 4 were laid on Stewart, which were readily taken. Robinson took a slight lead, which he maintained for twenty yards, when his opponent came up, and an interesting contest then ensued, both men exerting every effort. When within thirty yards of the winning mark, Stewart passed his adversary, and ran in a gallant winner of four yards. Very large sums of money were transferred on this occasion.

STURPLE CHASE AND TROTTING MATCH.—On Thursday last a steeple chase match for £500 a side, and a trotting match for £100 a side, came off at the East Surrey Race-course, situated to the Broomfield Branch, Peckham. Notwithstanding the extreme coldness of the weather, the grounds were very well filled. The result of the sport was:—

Mr. Griffin's big Mooraker .. .. .	1
Mr. Griffin's big Mooraker .. .. .	2
Mr. Griffin's big Mooraker .. .. .	3
Mr. Griffin's big Mooraker .. .. .	4
Mr. Griffin's big Mooraker .. .. .	5
Mr. Griffin's big Mooraker .. .. .	6
Mr. Griffin's big Mooraker .. .. .	7
Mr. Griffin's big Mooraker .. .. .	8
Mr. Griffin's big Mooraker .. .. .	9
Mr. Griffin's big Mooraker .. .. .	10

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

W learn by the last arrival from the island of Bourbon that the guillotine had just been used there for the first time, for the execution of three blacks, two for mutiny, and the other for the horrible crime of murdering a person and eating his flesh. It is twenty years since any one has been convicted of this latter crime.

Mr. Kemp, of Kemptown, died suddenly at Paris yesterday week. He was in the 61st year of his age.

The Revue de Paris, alluding to the report lately circulated of the King of Prussia having determined to give a constitution to his subjects, says that the report is perfectly well founded, but that the King has been prevailed on, by the remonstrances of the Russian and Austrian Cabinets, to postpone his intentions for the present.

An earthquake of some violence was felt in Savoy during the night of the 20th inst. At Rumilly and Châtillon the furniture in the apartments was so shaken that the glasses and other articles left on tables were thrown down. At Chambéry, however, it was so slight, that it was perceived by only a very few persons.

The Vienna journals represent the sport, during the present season, in the woods and forests belonging to the Imperial residence to have been unusually great. In one hunt, in the Park of Laim, in which the Archduke Charles and Louis, Prince Wurm, Prince Charles de Liechtenstein, de Schwarzenberg, and de Lankovitz, and the Count de Hardegg took part, no fewer than 250 wild boars were killed.

The head of a colossal statue, to be called Bavaria, was lately cast at Munich. An idea may be formed of the enormous dimensions of this statue from the fact, that 25 persons were able to place themselves in the head.

A letter from St. Petersburg, of Dec. 4, states that the Emperor, having ordered the Minister of the Interior to urge on the works of the railroad between that city and Moscow, already commenced on the St. Petersburg side, a considerable number of additional workmen have been put on, and measures taken for the commencement of the works at the Moscow end. It is all probability the part of this line between St. Petersburg and Novgorod will be completed about the beginning of next autumn.

A few days ago, a Mr. Morris Thurston, died in Guinea-street, Epsom, at the patriarchal age of 118. He died, up to the last week, enjoying excellent health and spirits. He was a man of great vigour of mind, and economy of character. He lived for upwards of 60 years in the house in which he died. He attributed his long life to his abstemious habits—never making use of intoxicating drinks, being an inveterate water drinker—taking, however, but on very rare occasions, a glass of beer. It was his pride to boast that he had never had a doctor in his life. (He would not have lived to such an age if the latter part of this account were not true.)

The Hague has recently been lighted by gas for the first time. The journals of that place state that the gas works, although on a very extensive scale, and combining all the most useful improvements which have been introduced into the manufacture of gas, were erected in the almost incredibly short space of five months, including the laying down of twenty-five miles of pipes.

A letter from Berlin states that Tschereh, the man who recently made an attempt upon the life of the King of Prussia, was executed at Spandau, on the 14th inst. The execution took place very suddenly, and created much surprise, as it had been understood that the capital sentence would be remitted. The judgment, which condemned him to be drawn on a hurdle and broken on the wheel, had been commuted into simple degradation. The culprit until the last moment relied upon being pardoned, and when the warrant was read to him, in spite of having been deceived with false hopes. Nevertheless he attended with great courage the moment on which he was to receive the fatal stroke, and himself laid his head upon the block. His last thoughts and words were devoted to the memory of his wife, who has been dead several years, and to his only daughter, nineteen years of age, whom he has left behind him.

The Breslau Gazette says that the Russian Government commission established at Poyem, a town situated on the Prussian frontier, has discovered a new conspiracy among the high Russian nobility, the ramifications of which extend to the Caucasus. A great number of arrests continue to be made, especially among the public functionaries. Several gentlemen have been placed in chains for being found in possession of prohibited books. Most of the prisoners are sent at once to the mines of Ural.

The Journal de Lille relates that, on the 11th inst, a child coming home from school in the evening impudently applied his tongue and lips to the iron balustrade of the Post St. Jacques, to which the child made them adhere as tightly, that the unfortunate child could not disengage them without withdrawing the most painful sufferings, and leaving part of the skin of both tongue and lips attached to the rail.

The premises of Messrs. De Vries, Robbe, and Beeke, extensive blanching and ink makers, on the Raatsburgweg, in the parish of Nieuwer Amsterdam, were destroyed by fire last week. This is the second time the above manufactory (which formerly belonged to Messrs. Channal and Co.) has been destroyed by fire. The origin of the latter conflagration is not yet known.

A Vienna letter of the 12th instant states that the board of directors of the Prague railroad have given orders for 48 locomotives of six and eight wheels, and 39 tenders, showing a decided expectation that this road will be opened in the course of next year.

A letter from Valenciennes states that Prince Gustavus de Croix expired last week, from a cold caught when outshooting, which, being neglected, proved fatal. This young prince, aged only 25, was son of the Duke de Croix, of Holstein, Germany, who died six years ago.

Letters from Turin state that a strong sensation had been created in that city by the violation of the Sardinian territory by a body of French gendarmes, douaniers, and other armed soldiers who had been taken prisoners, and conveyed, under circumstances of unnecessary brutality, to Genoa. The affair seems likely to produce a serious misunderstanding between the French and Sardinian governments.

The Paris journals announce that the Committee on Postal Reform have recommended that an uniform rate of postage of twenty centimes (two pence English) should be adopted in France. The journals are unanimous in approving of this recommendation of the Committee.

A correspondent writes from Rome, that never before were there so many strangers in that city. There are said to be 2000 English families; but this must be an exaggeration. The rents of houses and apartments are up as an enormous height.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

* * * In consequence of the largely increased circulation of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, the charge for Advertisements, in future, will be 2s. for the first four lines, and 1s. 3d. per line after.

UNIQUE EXHIBITION.—BATTLE OF WATERLOO.

NEW MODEL, upon a very large scale, representing the Waterloo Campaign in the earlier part of the Battle of the British Heavy Cavalry under the Marquis of Anglesea, and by the British Infantry under Sir Thomas Picton. — EGYPTIAN HALL, PICCADILLY. Open from Ten till Five; and in the Evening, by candle-light, from Seven till Ten. Admission, One Shilling.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS.

—One of the brilliant Novelties in CHILD'S CHROMATOPE, to which may be added exhibits in Nature and Art for the PROTECTOR. The PROTECTOR. The first exhibition of a series of beautiful DISCOVERING VIEWS, the Exhibition of Turin and Florence, Mr. C. E. HORN lectures on the MUSIC OF DIFFERENT NATIONS. Mr. RYAN and Professor BACHOFENBERG varied LECTURES daily. Dr. RYAN also lectures on the FRENCH of Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. All these lectures are in interesting, explanatory, and MARINE EXPERIMENTS on the use of the DIVING-BELL and DIVER. THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC MACHINE.—Admission, 1s. Schools Half-price. A New Edition of the Catalogue, price 1s.

DRAWING CLASSES, EXETER HALL.—On the method of DRAWING FROM MODEL, as sanctioned by the Committee of Council on Education. A CLASS, under the direction of Mr. GANDEE, Teacher of Perspective, Drawing, &c., will be opened at Exeter Hall, on TUESDAY EVENING, Jan. 7th, 1845, and will meet EVERY TUESDAY and FRIDAY EVENINGS, from 8 to 10 o'clock, and a SECOND CLASS will be opened on the same evenings, and will meet from Eight to Half past Nine. A CLASS in PERSPECTIVE, PRACTICE will be opened, at the same hour, on THURSDAY EVENING, Jan. 28th, and will meet EVERY THURSDAY at the same hour. Terms: Forty Shillings for the course of Forty Lessons, but Teachers will be admitted on reduced terms. Tickets and further particulars may be obtained at the Hall.

DRAWING GALLERY, 184, Maddox street, Hanover-square.—On MONDAY, January 8th, this Gallery will be REOPENED for the study of MODEL DRAWING and PRACTICAL PERSPECTIVE, the Human Figure and Anatomy. The Evening Classes for the study of the Human Figure, will be conducted by Mr. T. MUGGERIDGE. The Evening Classes for the study of Model Drawing and Practical Perspective, and the Elementary Drawing of the Human Figure, on the method of M. PERCIVAL, by Mr. A. DEACON. The Drawing Classes will have the advantage of M. Perceval's system of Model Drawing (as extensively adopted by the various Governments of Europe), combined with Mr. Deacon's simplified method of instruction.

Class for Ladies, Tuesday and Friday Evenings, from 8 to 10 o'clock. Class for Gentlemen, Monday and Wednesday Evenings, from 8 to 10 o'clock. Terms: 12s. per Month. Further information respecting the Classes may be obtained by application at Messrs. HICKMAN'S Lithographic Establishment, 114, New Bond street.

STOOPING OF THE SHOULDERS AND CONTRACTION of the CHEST, especially prevalent, in Youth, and Ladies, and Gentlemen of all ages, by the PATENT ST. JAMES'S CHAIR EXERCISER, which is light, easily carried, and can be forwarded per post, by Mr. ALFRED BENTON, Wholesale Depot, 46, Tottenham-street, Strand; or full particulars, on receipt of a postage stamp.

CARRIAGE FREE.—In consequence of facility of railroad conveyance, we have made arrangements with the principal carrying establishments to deliver free of expense—whenever convenient—extra only to those orders that exceed 500 weight of TEA.

MANSELL and Co., 2, Bucklebury, Chesham.

FINEST MOCHA COFFEE, 1s. 6d. per lb. 2, Bucklebury, Chesham.

GOOD USEFUL COFFEE, 10s. to 1s.; Fine, from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 4d. Large quantities of COFFEE, HONEY, and COFFEE BUCKETS, will effect a considerable saving by purchase at this establishment.

MANSELL and Co., 2, Bucklebury, Chesham.

TEA.—WHOLESALE PRICES.—CASH.

Black Tea 2s. 6d. 3s. 6d. 4s. 6d. 5s. 6d. 6s. 6d. 7s. 6d. 8s. 6d. 9s. 6d. 10s. 6d. 11s. 6d. 12s. 6d. 13s. 6d. 14s. 6d. 15s. 6d. 16s. 6d. 17s. 6d. 18s. 6d. 19s. 6d. 20s. 6d. 21s. 6d. 22s. 6d. 23s. 6d. 24s. 6d. 25s. 6d. 26s. 6d. 27s. 6d. 28s. 6d. 29s. 6d. 30s. 6d. 31s. 6d. 32s. 6d. 33s. 6d. 34s. 6d. 35s. 6d. 36s. 6d. 37s. 6d. 38s. 6d. 39s. 6d. 40s. 6d. 41s. 6d. 42s. 6d. 43s. 6d. 44s. 6d. 45s. 6d. 46s. 6d. 47s. 6d. 48s. 6d. 49s. 6d. 50s. 6d. 51s. 6d. 52s. 6d. 53s. 6d. 54s. 6d. 55s. 6d. 56s. 6d. 57s. 6d. 58s. 6d. 59s. 6d. 60s. 6d. 61s. 6d. 62s. 6d. 63s. 6d. 64s. 6d. 65s. 6d. 66s. 6d. 67s. 6d. 68s. 6d. 69s. 6d. 70s. 6d. 71s. 6d. 72s. 6d. 73s. 6d. 74s. 6d. 75s. 6d. 76s. 6d. 77s. 6d. 78s. 6d. 79s. 6d. 80s. 6d. 81s. 6d. 82s. 6d. 83s. 6d. 84s. 6d. 85s. 6d. 86s. 6d. 87s. 6d. 88s. 6d. 89s. 6d. 90s. 6d. 91s. 6d. 92s. 6d. 93s. 6d. 94s. 6d. 95s. 6d. 96s. 6d. 97s. 6d. 98s. 6d. 99s. 6d. 100s. 6d. 101s. 6d. 102s. 6d. 103s. 6d. 104s. 6d. 105s. 6d. 106s. 6d. 107s. 6d. 108s. 6d. 109s. 6d. 110s. 6d. 111s. 6d. 112s. 6d. 113s. 6d. 114s. 6d. 115s. 6d. 116s. 6d. 117s. 6d. 118s. 6d. 119s. 6d. 120s. 6d. 121s. 6d. 122s. 6d. 123s. 6d. 124s. 6d. 125s. 6d. 126s. 6d. 127s. 6d. 128s. 6d. 129s. 6d. 130s. 6d. 131s. 6d. 132s. 6d. 133s. 6d. 134s. 6d. 135s. 6d. 136s. 6d. 137s. 6d. 138s. 6d. 139s. 6d. 140s. 6d. 141s. 6d. 142s. 6d. 143s. 6d. 144s. 6d. 145s. 6d. 146s. 6d. 147s. 6d. 148s. 6d. 149s. 6d. 150s. 6d. 151s. 6d. 152s. 6d. 153s. 6d. 154s. 6d. 155s. 6d. 156s. 6d. 157s. 6d. 158s. 6d. 159s. 6d. 160s. 6d. 161s. 6d. 162s. 6d. 163s. 6d. 164s. 6d. 165s. 6d. 166s. 6d. 167s. 6d. 168s. 6d. 169s. 6d. 170s. 6d. 171s. 6d. 172s. 6d. 173s. 6d. 174s. 6d. 175s. 6d. 176s. 6d. 177s. 6d. 178s. 6d. 179s. 6d. 180s. 6d. 181s. 6d. 182s. 6d. 183s. 6d. 184s. 6d. 185s. 6d. 186s. 6d. 187s. 6d. 188s. 6d. 189s. 6d. 190s. 6d. 191s. 6d. 192s. 6d. 193s. 6d. 194s. 6d. 195s. 6d. 196s. 6d. 197s. 6d. 198s. 6d. 199s. 6d. 200s. 6d. 201s. 6d. 202s. 6d. 203s. 6d. 204s. 6d. 205s. 6d. 206s. 6d. 207s. 6d. 208s. 6d. 209s. 6d. 210s. 6d. 211s. 6d. 212s. 6d. 213s. 6d. 214s. 6d. 215s. 6d. 216s. 6d. 217s. 6d. 218s. 6d. 219s. 6d. 220s. 6d. 221s. 6d. 222s. 6d. 223s. 6d. 224s. 6d. 225s. 6d. 226s. 6d. 227s. 6d. 228s. 6d. 229s. 6d. 230s. 6d. 231s. 6d. 232s. 6d. 233s. 6d. 234s. 6d. 235s. 6d. 236s. 6d. 237s. 6d. 238s. 6d. 239s. 6d. 240s. 6d. 241s. 6d. 242s. 6d. 243s. 6d. 244s. 6d. 245s. 6d. 246s. 6d. 247s. 6d. 248s. 6d. 249s. 6d. 250s. 6d. 251s. 6d. 252s. 6d. 253s. 6d. 254s. 6d. 255s. 6d. 256s. 6d. 257s. 6d. 258s. 6d. 259s. 6d. 260s. 6d. 261s. 6d. 262s. 6d. 263s. 6d. 264s. 6d. 265s. 6d. 266s. 6d. 267s. 6d. 268s. 6d. 269s. 6d. 270s. 6d. 271s. 6d. 272s. 6d. 273s. 6d. 274s. 6d. 275s. 6d. 276s. 6d. 277s. 6d. 278s. 6d. 279s. 6d. 280s. 6d. 281s. 6d. 282s. 6d. 283s. 6d. 284s. 6d. 285s. 6d. 286s. 6d. 287s. 6d. 288s. 6d. 289s. 6d. 290s. 6d. 291s. 6d. 292s. 6d. 293s. 6d. 294s. 6d. 295s. 6d. 296s. 6d. 297s. 6d. 298s. 6d. 299s. 6d. 300s. 6d. 301s. 6d. 302s. 6d. 303s. 6d. 304s. 6d. 305s. 6d. 306s. 6d. 307s. 6d. 308s. 6d. 309s. 6d. 310s. 6d. 311s. 6d. 312s. 6d. 313s. 6d. 314s. 6d. 315s. 6d. 316s. 6d. 317s. 6d. 318s. 6d. 319s. 6d. 320s. 6d. 321s. 6d. 322s. 6d. 323s. 6d. 324s. 6d. 325s. 6d. 326s. 6d. 327s. 6d. 328s. 6d. 329s. 6d. 330s. 6d. 331s. 6d. 332s. 6d. 333s. 6d. 334s. 6d. 335s. 6d. 336s. 6d. 337s. 6d. 338s. 6d. 339s. 6d. 340s. 6d. 341s. 6d. 342s. 6d. 343s. 6d. 344s. 6d. 345s. 6d. 346s. 6d. 347s. 6d. 348s. 6d. 349s. 6d. 350s. 6d. 351s. 6d. 352s. 6d. 353s. 6d. 354s. 6d. 355s. 6d. 356s. 6d. 357s. 6d. 358s. 6d. 359s. 6d. 360s. 6d. 361s. 6d. 362s. 6d. 363s. 6d. 364s. 6d. 365s. 6d. 366s. 6d. 367s. 6d. 368s. 6d. 369s. 6d. 370s. 6d. 371s. 6d. 372s. 6d. 373s. 6d. 374s. 6d. 375s. 6d. 376s. 6d. 377s. 6d. 378s. 6d. 379s. 6d. 380s. 6d. 381s. 6d. 382s. 6d. 383s. 6d. 384s. 6d. 385s. 6d. 386s. 6d. 387s. 6d. 388s. 6d. 389s. 6d. 390s. 6d. 391s. 6d. 392s. 6d. 393s. 6d. 394s. 6d. 395s. 6d. 396s. 6d. 397s. 6d. 398s. 6d. 399s. 6d. 400s. 6d. 401s. 6d. 402s. 6d. 403s. 6d. 404s. 6d. 405s. 6d. 406s. 6d. 407s. 6d. 408s. 6d. 409s. 6d. 410s. 6d. 411s. 6d. 412s. 6d. 413s. 6d. 414s. 6d. 415s. 6d. 416s. 6d. 417s. 6d. 418s. 6d. 419s. 6d. 420s. 6d. 421s. 6d. 422s. 6d. 423s. 6d. 424s. 6d. 425s. 6d. 426s. 6d. 427s. 6d. 428s. 6d. 429s. 6d. 430s. 6d. 431s. 6d. 432s. 6d. 433s. 6d. 434s. 6d. 435s. 6d. 436s. 6d. 437s. 6d. 438s. 6d. 439s. 6d. 440s. 6d. 441s. 6d. 442s. 6d. 443s. 6d. 444s. 6d. 445s. 6d. 446s. 6d. 447s. 6d. 448s. 6d. 449s. 6d. 450s. 6d. 451s. 6d. 452s. 6d. 453s. 6d. 454s. 6d. 455s. 6d. 456s. 6d. 457s. 6d. 458s. 6d. 459s. 6d. 460s. 6d. 461s. 6d. 462s. 6d. 463s. 6d. 464s. 6d. 465s. 6d. 466s. 6d. 467s. 6d. 468s. 6d. 469s. 6d. 470s. 6d. 471s. 6d. 472s. 6d. 473s. 6d. 474s. 6d. 475s. 6d. 476s. 6d. 477s. 6d. 478s. 6d. 479s. 6d. 480s. 6d. 481s. 6d. 482s. 6d. 483s. 6d. 484s. 6d. 485s. 6d. 486s. 6d. 487s. 6d. 488s. 6d. 489s. 6d. 490s. 6d. 491s. 6d. 492s. 6d. 493s. 6d. 494s. 6d. 495s. 6d. 496s. 6d. 497s. 6d. 498s. 6d. 499s. 6d. 500s. 6d. 501s. 6d. 502s. 6d. 503s. 6d. 504s. 6d. 505s. 6d. 506s. 6d. 507s. 6d. 508s. 6d. 509s. 6d. 510s. 6d. 511s. 6d. 512s. 6d. 513s. 6d. 514s. 6d. 515s. 6d. 516s. 6d. 517s. 6d. 518s. 6d. 519s. 6d. 520s. 6d. 521s. 6d. 522s. 6d. 523s. 6d. 524s. 6d. 525s. 6d. 526s. 6d. 527s. 6d. 528s. 6d. 529s. 6d. 530s. 6d. 531s. 6d. 532s. 6d. 533s. 6d. 534s. 6d. 535s. 6d. 536s. 6d. 537s. 6d. 538s. 6d. 539s. 6d. 540s. 6d. 541s. 6d. 542s. 6d. 543s. 6d. 544s. 6d. 545s. 6d. 546s. 6d. 547s. 6d. 548s. 6d. 549s. 6d. 550s. 6d. 551s. 6d. 552s. 6d. 553s. 6d. 554s. 6d. 555s. 6d. 556s. 6d. 557s. 6d. 558s. 6d. 559s. 6d. 560s. 6d. 561s. 6d. 562s. 6d. 563s. 6d. 564s. 6d. 565s. 6d. 566s. 6d. 567s. 6d. 568s. 6d. 569s. 6d. 570s. 6d. 571s. 6d. 572s. 6d. 573s. 6d. 574s. 6d. 575s. 6d. 576s. 6d. 577s. 6d. 578s. 6d. 579s. 6d. 580s. 6d. 581s. 6d. 582s. 6d. 583s. 6d. 584s. 6d. 585s. 6d. 586s. 6d. 587s. 6d. 588s.

N. B.—No business transacted at this Establishment from sunset on Friday till sunset on Saturday, when business is resumed till twelve o'clock.

INTERIOR OF ST. GILES'S CHURCH, CAMBERWELL.

INTERIOR OF ST. GILES'S CHURCH, CAMBERWELL.

We have already illustrated this magnificent specimen of church building, in Numbers 99 and 185 of our journal. In the latter is described the ceremony of the consecration of the church, on the 21st ult., with some details of the interior, more especially of the east end of the structure. The present engraving represents nearly the whole of the interior, from the west end, showing the open timber roof, the general arrangement of the choir, nave, and aisles; the latter designated by the introduction of galleries. The sculptural embellishments, as the capitals of the columns, &c., are in strict conformity with the style of the edifice—the Decorated. The octagonal font, in the foreground of our view, is very beautiful; the moulding and emblematic embellishment are much admired.

In the account in No. 185 is an error of description, which we are anxious to rectify. It is there stated that "the carvings" were executed by Mr. Pratt's patent machine; whereas, the work done by this admirable mechanism was the ornamental panelling and dent-de-lis terminations of the wall ends, boldly delineated by our artist. Mr. Pratt's machine was also used in working the arches, tracery, and other corresponding parts in the organ-case, the pulpit, reading-desk, and altar-rail chairs. Thus far the tracery. The carving was executed by hand; the designs for both being furnished by the architects, Messrs. Scott and Moffatt. In our engraving of the consecration, the altar-table is shown without the rich velvet embroidered cloth with which it is usually covered, and which hangs as drapery, after the ancient manner. We also omitted to mention that the organ, which is extremely powerful, was built by Bishop.

We have already intimated the remarkably fine execution of the windows, the work of Messrs. Ward and Nixon. They, perhaps, present the finest specimen of glass-painting and scriptural design lately executed in this country, where the art is no longer a "lost" one. The details of these masterly performances may, therefore, be acceptable.

The window occupying the east end of the chancel contains a rich and elaborate specimen of painted glass, presented by the gentlemen of the parish. As its position over the altar has been thought to require that it should be executed in the highest, and therefore most costly, style of art, and as the sums hitherto contributed are inadequate to the completion of the whole in that manner, it has been judged best to confine the undertaking for the present to the tracery lights in the head of the window, and the principal of the five lights below, leaving the four remaining, or lateral lights, filled merely with white glass, until the requisite funds be obtained. Even the principal of the lower lights was unfortunately not finished at the time of the consecration, though likely, it is hoped, to be completed in a few weeks; and its imperfect and fragmentary appearance detracted considerably from the effect of the whole. It is intended to contain five circles in a perpendicular series, united by a mosaic ground, and including representations of the Nativity, Temptation, Crucifixion, Resurrection, and Ascension, of Christ, with several minor subjects, partly historical and partly allegorical, in illustration of these principal ones. The Ascension, which is in the highest of the circles, was the only one not then put up. In the head of the window are five cinquefoils, the two lowest of which are respectively appropriated to the two Sacraments, with five subordinate subjects in the foliations around each, typical or otherwise illustrative of them. The three remaining cinquefoils, which are comprised, with three spandrels, in one great circle, contain representations of the Last Judgment, and several of the prophetic visions of the Apocalypse, connected in meaning with that event. The whole is designed in the style of the thirteenth century, (of which the windows of the Temple Church furnish a familiar modern example), and exhibits much of the symbolism which characterises the religious art of that period. From the extreme minuteness, however, of all the subjects, it is almost impossible to distinguish their details, except from the chancel, a part of the church from which the congregation will generally be removed. This peculiarity has been adopted upon principle by the designers, who, we understand, are two unprofessional gentlemen connected with the parish. Their aim has been not to obtrude upon observation a conspicuous glass picture, which might be found by some distracting to the attention during public worship; but, primarily, to cover an important entrance of light with a rich and brilliant coloured screen, thereby soothing the eye, and aiding solemnity of feeling, without disturbing the mind; and then, as a secondary object, to fill each part with elaborate meaning, which, by a closer inspection on a suitable occasion those who desire may unravel and study as a theological composition. The glass has been supplied by Messrs. Ward and Nixon, at a cost of about £200.

The window at the west-end of the nave was presented by the Vicar, and bears his own and his wife's arms blazoned in the three principal lights. It consists chiefly of ancient glass imported from Cologne, with considerable additions by Messrs. Ward and Nixon, who have arranged and fitted up the whole.

The principal window of the south transept, presented by the ladies of the parish, contains two figures of St. Peter and St. Paul, with a few sacred symbols. Both this and the preceding are what the French term "grisailles," i.e. windows with a white ground relieved by a running decoration pattern in positive colours, as distinguished from "mosaïque" (such as the chancel window) when the ground is of the same quality with the figures.

On the east side of this transept is a window in a later style of art, containing figures of Moses and Christ, under two canopies, with the donor's arms above, and an inscription below, recording its erection by a gentleman of the parish (Augustine Robinson, Esq.), as a monument to one of his family. These two windows in the transept are the original work of Messrs. Ward and Nixon.

The church contains about 1000 sittings, there being no pews. The entire cost of the structure and fittings is stated at £18,000, raised by rate and voluntary subscription. It is altogether a remarkably fine church; and "a fitting place of worship for the inhabitants of a large and enlightened district."

COST OF THE IMPROVEMENTS IN THE METROPOLIS.—The Commissioners of Woods and Forests, in their 21st report, state, with regard to the improvements in the metropolis, in the several lines of those improvements authorised by the Acts 3 and 4 Victoria, cap. 13, they have, since the dates of those acts, completed purchases to the amount, in the whole, of £457,844 15s. 10d., and have contracted for further purchases to the amount, in the whole, of £121,617 15s. 10d.; and besides these, the purchases now remaining to be made, in order to clear the whole of the ground required for completing the several lines of improvement, it is estimated will cost the further sum of £54,265 3s. 4d., or thereabouts, viz.:—In the line from Oxford-street to Holborn they have completed purchases to the amount of £211,684 14s. 10d., and have contracted for further purchases to the amount of £16,569 3s. 4d.; and besides these, there remain to be made purchases estimated to cost the sum of £14,571 15s. Thus this new line of street will have cost, in purchases of property alone, nearly £250,000. Secondly.—In the line from Bow-street to Charlotte-street, Bloomsbury, they have completed purchases to the amount of £70,358 18s. 3d., and have contracted for further purchases to the amount of £17,595, or thereabouts. Thirdly.—In the line from the London Docks to Spitalfields church, they have completed purchases to the amount of £96,742 10s. 11d., and have contracted for further purchases to the amount of £30,266 8s. 7d.; and besides these there remain to be made purchases estimated to cost the sum of £6740, or thereabouts. Fourthly.—In the line from Coventry-street to Leadenhall, the Commissioners have completed purchases to the amount of £77,079 5s. 10d., and have contracted for further purchases to the amount of £39,282 12s. 2d.; and besides these, there remain to be made purchases estimated to cost the sum of £3037 10s., or thereabouts. And fifthly.—In the line from East Smithfield to Rosemary Lane, they have completed purchases to the amount of £12,360; and besides these, there remain to be made purchases estimated to cost the sum of £7252, or thereabouts. It appears that of the sum of £360,000 mentioned in the Commissioners' 19th report, to have been borrowed of the Equitable Assurance Company, for the purposes of these improvements, upon the security of certain portions of the land revenue of the Crown in Middlesex, and of moneys arising from interest on Exchequer Bills, and profit on the sale and purchase of these bills, in which part of that loan was temporarily invested—from the sale of old materials, and from moneys of property purchased for the purposes of these improvements, there remained a balance of £1490 6s. 6d. These funds being nearly expended, the Commissioners are taking measures for obtaining a further loan of £250,000, which they find "it will be necessary to raise for the purpose of making the several remaining purchases requisite for the completion of these improvements."

ST. AMANT.

The subject of our engraving—the first of a series of portraits of eminent chess-players—may safely be pronounced the most brilliant player of the present day.

Mons. St. Amant, when young, filled a situation as Clerk to the Colonies, in which he remained a few years. Finding such occupation monotonous, he returned to Paris, joined the theatrical profession, and appeared at the Theatre Français as a comedian. After two or three first appearances he abandoned this line of life, and subsequently became, and is now, a wine-merchant. It was not until after he had fretted his hour on the stage that he applied himself studiously to chess.

It must have been between the years 1834 and 1835 that he first gained celebrity in a match with Mons. Mouret, the gentleman who for some considerable time directed the moves of the Automaton. This match he lost by one or two games only. In a severe contest (in 1837) with that excellent man, Mons. Boncourt, he equally distinguished himself. This match took place at the house of Mons. Alexandre, the founder of the Chess Club in Paris. It was in some of the games then played that St. Amant first used the Evans Gambit. This strong attacking opening, then but little known in Paris, completely paralysed all the efforts of Mons. Boncourt to win a game, for some little time. Mons. St. Amant had, however, lost too many games in the commencement of the match to enable him to regain a sufficient number to claim the victory. His games with all the first players—Le Petit Juif, De la Bourdonnais (who gave him a pawn and two moves), &c. gave promise of his future excellence. In the year 1836, and again we believe, in 1839, St. Amant visited London, played with our best players, and returned to his home crowned with victories. Content with the honours he had so well earned, he discontinued chess for two years, and it was not until he commenced to edit "La Palamede," in 1842, that we find him gathering fresh laurels.

ST. AMANT.

He is at present in the prime of life—aged about forty-five. His play is of the brilliant school; some of the games won by him in the late match, presenting to the chess student, examples of the most imaginative combinations.

His uniform kindness to all members of the Cercle des Echecs has deservedly secured him many friends; and his gentlemanly and hospitable behaviour to all strangers who have the good fortune to visit that celebrated club, entitle him to our greatest respect.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—"J. S." and "J. G."—Their problems have been received.

"C. A. P."—His solution is incorrect. Two.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM NO. 53.

- | WHITE.                     | BLACK.             |
|----------------------------|--------------------|
| 1. Q Kt P 1 ch             | King to Q Kt 3rd * |
| 2. K Kt to Q B 4th ch      | King to Q B 2nd    |
| 3. Q Kt to Q 5th ch        | King to Q sq       |
| 4. K P 1 ch                | King to his sq     |
| 5. K Kt to Q 6th ch        | Kt takes Kt        |
| 6. B checks at K Kt 6th ch | Kt covers          |
| 7. Kt mates at Q B 7th     |                    |

* If Black moves to Q R 4th, White mates in two moves.

PROBLEM. NO. 54.

By H. TURNER, Esq.

White to move and mate in three moves.

BLACK.

WHITE.

The Solution in our next.

INDEX

ABDUL-KADER and his Moorish Allies, 133.
Abduction and Suicide, The late case of, 315.
Abercrombie Dr., Death of, 323.
Absentees: Table of Irish, Scotch, English, Welsh, and Foreign, 411.
Accidents and Offences, 3, 27, 43, 31, 71, 103, 122, 136, 151, 164, 145, 193, 211, 222, 242, 250, 276, 291, 295, 331, 332, 343, 371, 387, 483.
ACRITIA, EXTENSIVE SALE of, 163.
Acton, West India Steam Packet, Loss of the, 170.
Aden, "The Gibraltar of the Red Sea," 250, 260.
Affghanistan, Dinner to the Heroes of, 160.
African Coast, Extraordinary Cruelty on the, 130.
Agricultural Society, The Royal, of England.—Great Meeting at Southampton, &c., 41, 43, 30, 37, 26, 77.
"Aladdin," Scene from, at the Lyceum Theatre, 160.
Albert, His Royal Highness Prince, K. G. Ac., &c., Birthday, 131; Apian—Shill's New Bee Hive, &c., 128; His Royal Highness's Prize at Eton, 226.
Albert Bridge, Manchester, 259, 270.
Albert Park, Proposed New Park in Battersea Fields, 160.
Alfred Ernest Albert, Christening of the Infant Prince in the Private Chapel, Windsor Castle, 167, 169, 177; Magnificent Silver Gun With Cooler, at Windsor Castle—Scene in the Waterloo Gallery, 177.
"Alma," Cerito in the Ballet of, at the Opera, 112.
Almshouses, at Fenge Common, 269.
America, the Riots in, 65.
American Aloe in Bloom, 241.
American Gonging System, Case of, 211.
American Great State Fair and Cattle Show: The Great Poughkeepsie Cattle Show; Interior of the Great Marquee, 256.
American Prejudices against Persons of Colour, 167.
American Presidency, Observations Respecting the, and Portraits of the Candidates, 321.
American President, Approaching Election of the, 322.
American President, Election of, 323, 342, 344; Torch Light Procession in New York; Balloting for President, 340; Exterior of a Polling Booth, New York, 345.
American Principle, 346.
Andrews, Suicide of Mr. Sergeant, 205.
"Anna Bolena," Scene from the Opera of, 48.
Anti-Graham Wafers (From Punch), 12.
Antiquities found near the General Post-office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, 320.
Anti Rent Insurrection in Albany; Outrage on the Sheriff, 211, 212.
Antwerp, Bourse at, 279.
Archery Meeting at York, &c., 95.
Argyle-square, New Church of the Swedenborgians, 144.
Ascot Races, The 1886; The Colt Bloodstone, 83.
Ashantee, The King of, Silver Chest for, 256.
BADEN-BADEN, Arms of the Grand Duchy of, 157.
Baden-Baden, Curious Tree at, 195.
Bally, Mr. Francis, F.R.S., President of the Royal Astronomical Society, Death of, 155.
Ballroom Ascend of Mr. Hampton, 128.
Banbury Race Course, Murder 68, 131.
Bank Charter, The, 12.
Bank of England, Forged Transfer at the Case of Burgess, 235. See "Burgess, William."
Bankrupt Remanded for Alleged Fraud, 205.
Bankruptcy Court, 333, 335, 402.
Bankruptcy, Extraordinary Frauds in the Court of, 216.
Barrister's Bankruptcy, 215.
Barber and Fletcher, The Convicts, 7, 37.
Barrister indicted for Perjury, 31.
Barry, The Clown, in a Washing Tub on the Thames, 162.
"Barrow House," Isle of Wight—"Wilke's Cottage," Isle of Wight, 254.
Baskin, or Sweet Potato, 35.
Bath, The Order of the, Historical Account of the Origin and Progress of, 517; Installation of a Knight of the Order, 214.
Baths and Washing Houses for the Poor; Remarks on Meeting respecting, 243.
Baths for the Labouring Classes; Public Meeting at the Mission house, the Lord Mayor in the Chair, 245.
Bathington Church, 305.
Bees, Extraordinary Freak of, 141.
Belanger, James Cockburn, Trial of, at the Old Bailey, for Following his Wife, 114; Attack upon him by the mob in the North, and proceedings taken thereon, &c., 183, 195, 230, 243, 267.
Belgium and England, Reduction of Postage between, 322.
Benedict, K.C.B., and G.C.H., Admiral Sir John Peel, Death of, 221.
Berkshire (United States), Great Jubilee; Pavilion; Jubilee Hill, 181.
Berlin, Strike of Workmen at, 130; View of, 138.
Besborough, The Earl of, Serious Accident to, 274.
Bill Brokers, Request of, to raise Money on Collateral Securities, 10.
Bill Discounters, Fraudulent, 33.
Bill Transactions (Parry v. Lord C. Fitzroy), 83.
Birkenhead Docks, Ceremony of Laying the First Stone of the, 201, 269.
Birkenhead New Docks, Silver Trowel used by Sir P. Egerton, M.P., 361.
Birkenhead Speculations, 200.
Birmingham, The Athenic Institution, 160.
Birmingham Election; View of Birmingham, 37.
Births, 13, 27, 46, 62, 78, 91, 110, 126, 142, 158, 174, 180, 200, 219, 237, 252, 270, 287, 298, 318, 337, 347, 363, 379, 392, 411.
Bishop's College, Norwich, 133.
Bishopsthorpe, The Seat of the Archbishop of York, 221.
Blackburn and Preston Railway, Fatal Accident on the, 262.
Blackfriars bridge, Lamentable Occurrence at, 55, 55.
Blackwall, Fire at, 246.
Blackwall, Nine Lives Lost off, by the Bursting of a Steam Pipe; Inquest; Sections of the Machinery, 267.
Blackwell Churchyard, Yew Trees in, 317.
Blackfield, Mrs. The Mother of the Bishop of London, Death of, 343.
Blancher Family, Robbery on the, &c., 242.
Bolsin—Execution of Weeks, the Murderer, 92.
Bokhara, Dr. Wolff at; Portrait of Dr. Wolff; Bokhara Chief, 117.
Bolton, Dreadful Accident at, 7.
Bolton, Murder at, 92.
"Bonner's Hall," Hackney, 201.
Books, Wholesale Stealer of, 222.
Borough, Fire in the, 57.
Boroughbridge, Murder at, 221.
Boughby's, Sir Thomas, Gamekeeper, Murder of, 221.
Bow, Meeting at Pradon, near Oswestry, 153, 156; Ladies' Bracelet Prize; Gentlemen's Prize Plate, 126.
Braganza Steamer, and the Ketrol Yacht, Launch of the, 3, 4.
Breandling Junction Railway, Accident on the, 221.
Brazilian Tariff, The New, Remarks on, 220.
Brazilian Treaty, 247.
Bridgroom, Mysterious Disappearance of, 266.
Bridgroom, The lost one, found, 227.
Brighton—Grand Cricket Match, 125.
Brighton, Incorporation of, 250.
Brighton Railway, Accident on the, 270.
Brighton Railway, Another Accident on the, 221.
Brighton Railway—(See London and Brighton Railway).
Bristol and Gloucester Railway, Accident on the, 87.
British Archaeological Association, 193.
British Archaeological, Medal of the Association, 192.
British Association for the Advancement of Science, Meeting of, at York—Sketch of the General View of the Pyramids of Gizeh, &c., &c., 197.
British Association for the Advancement of Science at York, and View of York, 220.
Brookings, Mr. Wm., Case of, Prosecuted by his Son, 229.
Brown, Mr. Alderman, Chamberlain of London, Portrait of, 270.
Buckingham Palace, The Yellow Drawing-room, 5.
Bullock's, Captain, Beacon on the Goodwin Sands, 208.
Burgess, William, Case of, Forged Transfer at the Bank of England, 235, 237, 271, 291.
Burgess House, 204; The North Front, 221; Inner Court at, 217.
The Kitchen, 259; Buffet of Plate in the Banquet Hall, 202.
(See also Queen, The).
Burns, Grand Festival in Commemoration of, 26, 74, 81, 88, 93, 104, 116.
Burns' Three Sons—View of the Monument, 164; Archers' Procession, Uncovering before the Sons of Burns, Procession of Shakespeare, 181; Banquet in the Pavilion, 108.
Burns' "Quaich" Drinking Cup, 108.
Burns' Mausoleum at Dumfries, 260.
Burns, Esq., Robert, Son of the Poet, Entertained to, at Belfast, 162.
Bury St. Edmund's, Murder by a Woman at, 292.
CAB, The New, "The Quarabus," 329.
Calais, Murder of Mr. Thorne at, 221.
Calcutta, R.A., Sir A. W., Death of, 343.
Calcutta—Arrival of the New Governor-General of India, 200.
Calcutta, Town Hall, Banquet in, to Lord Ellenborough, and Grand Staircase, 220.
Cambridge, New Church, (St. Giles) Altar of, and Ceremony of Consecration, 317.
Campbell, The Poet, Funeral of, in Westminster Abbey, 1, 9.
Campbell, The Poet, Commission of Lunacy on the Son of, 165.
Candy and Dean, Case of Attorney-General v., in the Court of Exchequer, 247.
Cannibals in New Zealand, 25.
Canterbury, Views of Ruins of the Augustine Monastery; Staircase of the Conventual Buildings; St. Martin's Church near, 102.
Carter's Lion Chair Post, 141.
Carter's Tiger Foot at Aslety's, 141.
Cary, Lines on the Death of, 261.
Caselli Castle, 203.
"Cats' Castle," Scene from, at the Adelphi Theatre, 409.
Cats' Meat and Horses' Tongues, Statistics of, 163.
Census—Population Returns, 160.
Central Criminal Court, 114, 128, 239, 247, 265, 291.
Certo in the Ballet of "Alma," 112.
Certa, Middle, Crown presented to, at Rome, 112.
Chamberlain of London, Death of the, 181.
Chamberlain of London, Return of Mr. Alderman Brown, 170.
Chamberlain, the, of London, Portrait of Mr. Alderman Brown, 170.
Chamberlain's Office, Guildhall, 170.
Chamberlain of London's Sceptre and Seal, 170.
Championship of the Thames and Tyne, 413.
Chancery Court of, 215, 246.
Chandos, Celebration of the Birthday of the Marquis of, at Stowe, Stowe House, Procession of the Ox, Roasting the Ox at Buckingham, 172.
Char-a-Nanc, The, presented to her Majesty by the King of the French, 257, 264.
Chastelary, The Grand Conservatory, 135, 136.
Chastelary, Frontons and Improvements at, 341.
Chess, 14, 25, 55, 74, 260, 326, 335, 352, 368, 398, 416.
Chester Assizes, Trial and Conviction of Mary Gallop, 271.
Children, Distinguishing Cases of Cruelty to, Cases of, 186.
China, The (by Bell), 224.
China and India, 57.
Chinese Drawing of an English War-steamer, 266.
Christmas, 410, 411; Our Remarks on, 261; Christmas, Lines on, and Illustration, 401, 402; Christmas, Jolly Old Song by A. Wade, and Illustration, 292.
Church, Divisions in the, Observations thereon, 353.
Church-rates, 85, 320, 321, South-west, 37.
Church, Universities, &c., 30, 55, 70, 87, 121, 122, 124, 127, 128, 200, 267, 328, 335, 339, 340, 407.
Chuzavet, Scene from New Drama of, at the Lyceum, 32.
"City of London" Iron Steam ship, 60.
"City Madam, The," Scene from, at Sadler's Well's Theatre, 333.
Clay, Mr., Candidate for the Presidency of America, Portrait of, &c., 321, 322.
Clerkenwell, Old House in—Interior of, &c., 101.
Coal Miners in Lancashire and Cheshire, Strike of the, 245.
Coast Railways, 123.
Colman Park, NEW Gravesend, Recovery at, 160.
Col de Grand, The Passage of the, by an Englishman, 199.
Colliery Explosion at Haswell—93 lives lost, 203, 224.
Colliery

INDEX TO ENGRAVINGS IN VOL. V.

ABD EL-KADER, and his Moorish Allies, 153
Abdul Mesud's, Sultan, Watch, 157
Aden, "The Gibraltar of the Red Sea," 229
Harvestal Society, The Royal Meet, Cattle S., at Southampton, 26
Portrait of Earl Spencer, 26
Harvest Home, 26
Cattle Show Portwood, 27
Victoria Archery Rooms, 27
The Council Dinner, 27
Mr. W. Fould's Short-horned Bull, 26
Mr. J. Cooper's ditto, 26
Mr. G. Turner's Devon Bull, 26
Mr. W. Bruce's Long-horned Bull, 26
Mr. W. Perry's Hereford Bull, 26
Mr. W. F. Hobbs's Improved Essex Bow, 26
Mr. J. House's Dorsetshire Sow, 26
Mr. T. M. Goodlake's Wadley Boar, 27
Mr. J. Linton's Lincoln and Leicester Ewe, 27
Mr. E. Hardy's Improved Cotswold Lamb, 27
Mr. T. Hutton's Hampshire Down Lamb, 27
Pipe The Machine, 27
"Aladdin," Scene from the Burlesque of, at the Lyceum, 199
Albert Bridge, Manchester, 269
Albert's, His Royal Highness Prince, Apartment, Shell's New Bazaar, 128
Alfred, His Royal Highness the Prince, 164
Christening of, in the Private Chapel Windsor Castle, 164
Magnificent Silver Gilt Wine-Cooler, at Windsor Castle, 177
Scene in the Waterloo Gallery, 177
"Alma," Madlle. Cerito in the Ballet of, 112
Alms-houses for Free Watermen and Lightermen at Fenge, Surrey, 399
American Aloe in Bloom, near Amesbury, Wilts, 341
American Prairie on Fire, 398
American Presidency, Candidates for the, Portraits of Mr. Polk and Mr. Clay, 321
American President, Approaching Election of the, 321
Great Whig Procession, at New York, 321
Election of the, 369
Torch Light Procession in New York, 340
Ballotting for the President, 346
Exterior of a Pulling Booth at New York, 356
"Anna Bolina," Scene from, at Her Majesty's Theatre, 48
Antiquities found near the General Post-office, St. Martins-le-Grand, 389
Anti Rent Insurrection, Attack on the Sheriff of Albany, 312
Antwerp, Bourse at, 373
Archaeological Association, The British, Medal of the, 192
Archery, Grand Meeting at York, and Archer in Uniform, 95
Argyle square, New Church in, 144
BADEN BADEN, Arms of the Grand Duchy of, 157
Barking Fishing Boats, 348
Barry, the Clown, in a Washing Tub, on the Thames, 193
Batata, or Sweet Potato, 36
Bath, the Order of the, Installation of a Knight of, 345
Baths for the Labouring Classes—Public Meeting at the Mansion House, the Lord Mayor in the Chair, 256
Beddingford Church, 395
Berkshire Festival, United States, The Pavilion, 181
Berlin, View of, 127
Birkenhead Dock, 361
Ceremony of Laying the First Stone of the, 361
Silver Trowel used by Sir P. Egerton, M.P., 361
Birmingham, View of, 37
Bishop's Bridge, Norwich, 123
Bishopsthorpe, the Seat of the Arch-bishop of York, 221
Blackwell Churchyard, Views in, 357
"Bonanza," Hackney, 361
Bow Meeting at Finsbury, 180
Oswestry, 180
Ladies' Bracelet Prize, 155
Gentlemen's Prize Plate, 155
"Bonanza," Steamer, Launch of the, at Cowes, 4
Brighton Grand Cricket Match, 125
British Association for the Advancement of Science, 197
View of Part of York, 197
Mode of Building the Pyramids, 197
General View of the Pyramids of Jizeh, 197
Brown, Mr. Alderman, Chamberlain of London, Portrait of, 176
Buckingham Palace—The Yellow Drawing-room, 5
Bullock's, Captain, Safety Wagon on the Goodwin Sands, 208
Burgley House, 323
North Front, 323
The Inner Court, 327
The Kitchen, 329
Buffet of Plates, Banqueting Hall, 332
(See also Queen, The.)
Burns, the Festival of, 89
The Auld Brig of Doon, 89

The Brigs of Ayr, 81
Portrait and Statue of Burns, his Cottage, &c., 89
The Room in which Burns was Born, 89
View of Ayr, his Birthplace, 89
The Mackle Stone, Tam O'Shanter, 89
Professor Wilson, Vice Chairman, 89
Arch on the Old Brig of Doon, 89
Arch near Burns's Cottage, 89
Ditto on the New Brig of Doon, 89
The Earl of Eglinton, 92
Isabella, Sister of Burns, 92
Alloway Kirk (Tam O'Shanter), 92
Tam O'Shanter Arch, 92
Arch on the New Brig of Ayr, 92
View of the Grand Procession, 92
The Pavilion, 94
Ground Plan of the Pavilion, 94
Burns's Three Sons, 104
Principal View of the Monument, 104
Procession of Archers, 105
Uncovering Before Burns's Sons, 105
Procession of Shepherds, 105
Autographs of Burns, 107
Banquet in the Pavilion, 108
Interior of a Favourite Resort of Burns, 108
Burns's "Gaiety" (Drinking Cup), 108
Burns's Mausoleum at Dumfries, 209
CALCUTTA:
Arrival of the New Governor-General, 209
The Town Hall, 235
The Grand Staircase, 236
Banquet in the Hall to Lord Ellenborough, 236
Canterbury New Church (St. Giles), Altar of, and Ceremony of Consecration, 387
Campbell, the Poet, Funeral of, in Westminster Abbey, 1
Canterbury:
Ruins of the Augustinian Monastery, 102
Staircase in the Conventual Buildings, 102
St. Martin's Church, near Canterbury, 102
Carter's Tiger Feet, and Lion Chariot Feet, 141
Castell Castle, View of, 265
"Cats' Castle," at the Adelphi Theatre, 492
Cernia, Madlle. in the Ballet of "Alma," Crown presented to, at Rome, 112
Chamberlain of London:
Portrait of Mr. Alderman Brown, 176
Chamberlain's Office, Guildhall, 176
Chamberlain's Sceptre and Seal, 176
Chandos, Celebration of the Birthday of the Marquis of, at Stowe: Stowe House Park Front, 173
Procession of the Ox at Buckingham, 173
Roasting the Ox at Buckingham, 173
Chatsworth—The Great Conservatory:
The Exterior and the Interior of, 146
Chess, 74, 320, 326, 332, 368, 398, 416
Chinese Consul, Drawing of an English War-ship, 368
Chinese Water Race, 12
Christmas, Illustration of, by Crow-Quill, 401
Christmas, Jolly Old, Song and Illustration to, 392
"Chuzzlewit," Scene from, at the Lyceum Theatre, 323
"City Madam, The," Scene from the play of, as performed at Sadler's Wells Theatre, 323
"City of London," The Aberdeen Iron Steamship, 36
Clay, Mr., Candidate for the American Presidency, Portrait of, 321
Clerkenwell, Old House in—Interior of ditto, 161
Cobham Park, Gravesend, Heronry at, 169
Comet, The New, discovered on 15th Sept., 1844, 102
Comet, The New, Drawn at the Greenwich Royal Observatory, 49
Common Council Chamber at Guildhall, 196
"Confederacy, The," Scene from the Comedy of, at the Haymarket Theatre, 226
"Corrado de Altamura," Scene from Ricci's New Opera of, 112
"Cossair, The," Madlle. Dumblaire, in the New Ballet of, 216
Crouch End Academy, Hornsey, 31
DALTON, The late Dr., Portrait of, 89
Statue of, 102
Lying in State, 181
Funeral Procession, 181
Darlington and Newcastle Railway, Timber Viaduct on, at Sherburn, 44
"Daughter of St. Mark, The," Scene from the Opera of, 265, 344
Denman, Lord Chief Justice, Portrait of, 4
Design, The Government School of, Engravings of Prizes, 39
Design, The Government School of: Mr. Rice's Arabesque Painting in Fresco, 40
Mr. Russell's ditto in oil, 40
Mr. Wallace's Design for a Procession Dinner Service, ditto, 40

Mr. Stendwick's Design for a Glass Chandelier, 20
Distin Family, The, 384
Dog Hill Committee, Drawn by T. Landseer, 64
Dogs—Heads of the following Dogs: Scotch Terrier, Old English Hound, Bull, Shepherd's, Wolf, Ireland, Greyhound, Newfoundland, and Balmorian Dogs, 222
"Don Cesar de Bazan," Scene from the Drama of, at the Haymarket Theatre, 326
Doncaster Races:
Manion House, Doncaster, 189
The St. Leger Race, 389
The Salutation Hotel, 189
The Doncaster Cup, 107
"Doon," The Auld Brig of, 89
Dore-Cot Tower, Colmar Castle, Derbyshire, 36
Dumblaire, Madlle. in the New Ballet of "The Cossair," 216
Duncombe, Esq., M.P., Portrait of Thomas S., 3
Durham Monument, The, and Ceremony of Laying the "Foundation Stone" of, on Fensher Hill, 149
EDWARD the Black Prince's Ring, &c., 357
Ellenborough, Lord—(See Calcutta).
Elder, Family, dancing "The Saragossa," 32
Emigrants' Farewell, The, 397
English Theatricals at Paris—the Salle Ventador, 411
Erlend's Gate, Kent, 105
Eton College, View of, 60
Eton and the King of the French, 212
Exeter "Change, The New," 60
Experimental Brig Squadron under Sail, 399
FARNBOROUGH RAILWAY STATION, Arrival of the King of the French at the, 142
Fashions, The, 51, 142, 392, 391, 348, 413
Fashions in Paris, 413
Fine Arts:
"Mignon," The, of Scheffer, 344
Mignon Regretting her Country, 344
Mignon Aspiring to Heaven, 345
Exhibition at the National Gallery: A Jewish Rabbi, after Rembrandt, 42
The Royal Academy Exhibition: The Whistonian Controversy, from Mulready's Picture, 12
Conting Events Cast their Shadows Before Them, by E. Landseer, 24
The Other Spered, by ditto, 25
The Wise and Foolish Virgins, by Landseer, 49
Exhibition at Westminster Hall: Caracacus before Claudius Caesar, 21
The Burial of the Prisoners in the Tower, 21
The Last Prayer of Ajax, 21
Loyalty: Catherine Douglas Harrington, the Door, at Stone, 21
A Falconer, 21
Flitzstephen, by "The Old Sailor," Illustrations to, 39, 61, 77, 199
Fog in the Metropolis, A Scene near Temple-bar during, 336
Foish-a-Ballagh, the Winner of the St. Leger, Portrait of, 327
Forrester, Daniel, Portrait of, 327
Forrester, John, Portrait of, 327
Frost Fair on the Thames in 1814, 393
GARTER, The Ceremony of the Investiture of the Order of the, 337
The Garter, 338
The Surcoat, 338
The Hood, 338
The Great George, 338
The Lesser George, 338
The Cap, 338
Enthronization of her Majesty as Sovereign of the Order, 348
Chapter of the Order, 348
Investiture of the King of the French, 348
Approach to the Garter Banquet, 349
The Banquet, 349
Grand Buffet, St. George's Hall, Windsor Castle, used at the Banquet given to Louis Philippe, 269
General Post Office, Antiquities found near, 389
Gibraltar, The British Fleet off, 65
"Gipsy Queen," The, Sections of parts of Machinery, showing the cause of the Accident on board of this steamer, 267
Glasgow, Inauguration of the Wellington Statue at, 272
Gloucester College School, View of, 89
Gloucester Musical Festival, 212
Goethe, Statue of, at Frankfurt, 341
Goodwin Sands, Captain Bullock's Safety Beacon on the, 208
Goodwood Races (1844):
Goodwood House, Scene in the Park, 72
Road through Goodwood Park, 72
Portrait of Mr. Geo. Payne, Steward, 72
Weighing in, 72
Prize Plates—"The Cup," 72
Gipsies in the Park, 72
The Road, Waggon, &c., 72
Gosport Railway Station, Arched at the, in honour of the Arrival of the King of the French, 324
Grace Barlow, Monument to, 188
"Gracious and Pertinent," Scene from, at the Haymarket Theatre, 409
Grafton, The late Duke of, 217
Gravel-lane, Ancient House in, 264
"Great Britain," The Steamship, leaving Cumberland Basin, Bristol, 385
Great Western Railway Electric Telegraphic Station at Slough, 85
Greece, Amelia, Queen of, Portrait of, 133
Greenwich Royal Observatory—Time Ball and Seven Illustrations of the Machinery, 394
Gresham, Sir Thomas, Portrait of, from the Painting in Mercers' Hall, 276
Gurnsey, Great Meeting at the New Ground, 29
Guizot, Monsieur, Portrait of, 251
HAMPTON'S MR., Balloon, 198
Hardy, Admiral Sir Thomas Masterman, Monument to, on Blagdon Hill, Dorsetshire, 141
Hawell Colliery:
Scene of the late Awful Explosion: Burial of the Dead, 224
Hacconah, View of the Town and Harbour of, 328
"Harlequin, Crochet, and Quaver," Scene from, at Covent Garden Theatre, 428
"Harlequin and Johnny Gilpin's Ride," at Astley's, 428
"Harlequin L. S. D.," at the Surrey, 409
"Hellsport," The Sloop from Bermuda, 12
Heytesbury, Lord, The newly-appointed Lieutenant of Ireland, Portrait of, 60
Hinson, Portrait of the late Mr., 60
Humane Society, the Royal—Ironman—Boat for Saving Persons from Drowning, 379
Hyde-park, Grand Review in, 45
ICHABOE, Views of the Island of, and of the Mode of Shipping the Guinea, 190
Illuminated Magazine, Illustration from, by Phil, 329
India, Criminal Trial in—Vakeel, a Native Harbinger—European Judge—The Omiah—The Accused—Burkumdar, or Native Policeman—The Witnesses, 120
India, Trophy from Monster Gun at the Tower, 132
Indian Overland Mail—(See Overland Indian Mail)
Iowa Indians at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, 92
Iowa Indians, Encampment of, at Lord's Cricket Ground, 189
Iron Church for Jamaica, 328
Isle of Wight:
Barton House, 369
Wilkes's Cottage, 369
JAMAICA, Iron Church for, 328
Jews' Synagogue, Great St. Helen's, Election of Rabbi at, 399
KENSAL GREEN, The New Church at, 167
Kenish Town, Temporary Church, 125
Kynaston, R., Esq., Portrait of, 185
LAMARTINE, Portrait of M. de, 340
Lambton Castle, 142
Lambour, The Great Glacier of, 220
Leaden Coffin found at Bow, 394
Lexington and Warwick Railway:
Opening of the, 372
Kenilworth Station, 372
Melbourne Graze Vaucliff, 372
Leamington Terminus, 372
Leger, Winner of the, "Fogh-a-Hall-lach," Portrait of, 217
Leicester, Monument in the Late Earl of, in Longwood Church, Derbyshire, 258
Liverpool Collegiate Institution, Christmas Distribution of Prizes at the, 397
London and Brighton Railway:
Great Duse Viaduct, 369
Storchen, Train Passage, 369
First Class Passengers, 369
Second Class Passengers, 369
Third Class Passengers, 369
Waiting for the Train, 367
Tunnel Signal "All Right," 361
London Terminus, 364
London-bridge Steam-wharf, 26
Lord Mayor, The Right Hon. Michael Gibbs, Portrait of, 297
Lord Mayor's Day and Show, &c.: The Man in Brass, 296
Ancient Knights, 296
Ceremony of Swearing in the Lord Mayor, 296
Ceremony of Inducting the New Lord Mayor into his Office, 297
The Lord Mayor's Blue and Scarlet Robes, 296
Portion of the Lord Mayor's Collar of S.S., 296
The Lord Mayor's Jewel, 298
The Mace, 298
The Pearl Sword, 298
Louis Philippe, the King of the French, Visit of his Majesty, to her Majesty Queen Victoria, at Windsor Castle:
Arrival of the King of the French at Portsmouth, 225
The "Gooner" Steamer Coming into Portsmouth Harbour, 224
The Inhabitation, 229
His Majesty Entering the Railway Station, 229
Portrait of his Majesty, 228
Tippon Sab's Peace—Part of her Majesty's State Plate, 228
The Nauticus Cup, ditto, 229
Grand Staircase, Windsor Castle, Her Majesty Receiving her Royal Guests, 222
The Crumhills, Drawing-room—in production of Louis Philippe to the Infant Royal Family, 223

The Grand Corridor—the Queen and the Royal Visitors Passing to the Banquet, 223
Investiture of his Majesty as a Knight of the Order of the Garter, 222
Explosion at the King's Bastion, Portsmouth, 241
West Front of Windsor Castle—the Queen and the Royal Visitors Proceeding to St. George's Chapel, 244
The Grand Lawn and Drive in Front of Victoria Gate, 244
The Slopes, Windsor Castle, 244
The King's Closet, 245
The King's Bed-chamber, 245
Enthronization of her Majesty as Sovereign of the Order of the Garter, 244
Chapter of the Order of the Garter with Investiture of his Majesty, 244
Approach to the Garter Banquet, 249
The Banquet, 249
Visit of his Majesty and Queen Victoria to Eton College, 352
Buffet in St. George's Hall at the Garter Banquet, 264
Royal Arrival at the Farnborough Railway Station, 319
Arch at the Railway Station, Gosport, 322
Arrival of his Majesty at the New Cross Station during the Conflagration there, 322
Chal-a-Banc Presented to her Majesty by the King of the French, 357
Lunar Rainbow, 398
Lynatt Park, Gloucestershire, 309
MAIDSTONE, Branch Railway, Opening of the, 205
Manchester, Albert Bridge, 269
Manchester, Burning of Jewell Buildings at, 96
Manchester Regatta, 123
Margate, View of, 29
Mehemet Ali, Portrait of, Pacha of Egypt, 97
"Mignon," The, of Scheffer, 344, 345
"Minister's," The, Serenade, Music and Illustration to, 352
Meadow, The Island of, 132
Arsenal at, 154
View and Bombardment of, 113
"Monster City, The," (Title page to the "Illuminated Magazine," 317
Montpensier, His Royal Highness the Duke de, Portrait of, 321
Moon, Total Eclipse of the, Diagrams Explaining of the Various Appearances of, 335
Moose Deer at the Surrey Zoological Gardens, 422
Morocco, View of, 109
Morocco, Recent Possibilities in:
Lady of the Harem at her Toilet, 116
Peasant of Morocco, 116
Singing Woman of the Harem, 116
Women of Morocco, 116
Morocco Jewess with the Veil, 116
Slave of the Harem, 116
Morocco, Review of Troops at, 153
Morocco, War in:
Arab and Moorish Cavalry, 4
The Emperor of Morocco giving Audience, 17
Trophies of the—Sidi Mohammed's Tent, Captured by the French: The State Parant, Top of the Parant, The Interior of the Tent, 246
Mount Edgecumbe—The Hazzar and the Italian Gardens, 137
"Mysterious Stranger," Scene from the Drama of, 390
NARVAEZ, GENERAL, Portrait of, 384
Nasmyth's Patent Steam Hammer, 164
Nauticus Cup, The, 220
Nesscliffe, Count, Portrait of, 117
Newcastle-upon-Tyne, New Catholic Church at, 160
Great Skiff Match at, 413
New Cross Railway Station:
Great Fire at the, 223
Arrival of the King of the French during the Conflagration, 223
Ruins of the Octagon Building, 293
Newman, The Rev. Mr., 43
Newport Free Grammar School, 98
New York:
Burning of the Washington Hotel at, 85
Commemoration of Independence at, 85
Scene in the Park, 85
Great Native Procession in, 406
Great Whig Procession at, 221
Nightshade, The Deadly (Atropa Belladonna), 398
Northfleet, New Almshouses at, 172
Nottingham, Dreadful Accident at, at the Execution of a Murderer, 85
OBSERVATORY AT GREENWICH—(See Greenwich)
O'Connell at the Balceny in Merrion-square, Dublin, 161
O'Connell and the Other State Prisoners at Dublin, The Liberation of, 161
Arrival of the News at the Penitentiary, Dublin, 164
The Procession Passing the Bank, 164
Mr. O'Connell in his Triumphant Car, 165
The Car, 165
Night Scene in a Dublin Street, 165

Old Friends, Meeting of the Improved Order of, in Finsbury-square, 29
Oldham, Ruins of the Lower House Mill near, 361
"Old Heads and Young Hearts," Scene from the New Comedy of, at the Haymarket Theatre, 323
Orlando (Col. Peel's), the Winner of the Derby Stakes, 28
Orleans House, Twickenham, once the Residence of Louis Philippe, 262
"Orwell," The, and "Sylph" Steamboats, Collision between, 285
Oswestry, New Church at Llanyfrynock, 188
"Ottello," Scene from the Opera at her Majesty's Theatre, 32
Overland Indian Mail:
The Mail Packet from Alexandria off Marseilles, with the Indian Mail on Board, 4
Telegraphing the Abstract of the Indian Mail from Marseilles to Paris, 4
Abstract Express from Paris to London, 5
Boulogne, the Embarkation of the Indian Mail, 8
Indian Mail Signals at Folkestone, Landing the Abstract Express at Low Water, 9
Folkestone, Arrival of the Indian Mail, 9
Express Omnibus Proceeding to Receive it, 9
Express Train, with the Mail Signals, 9
Oxford, The Taylor Institution at, 4
PARIS, English Theatricals at—The Salle Ventador, 413
Peterborough Bridge Fair, 217
Fire Driving Steam Engine, Patent American, 48
Pine Apples, Sale of West India, 26
Pine Apple from Eleuthera, 36
Pipers—The Great Highland Bagpipe Competition at the Theatre Royal, Edinburgh, 48
Pittin in Northumberland and Durham, Encampment of the, 69
Poet's Grave, The, 32
Polk, Mr., Candidate for the American Presidency, Portrait of, 321
Polytechnic School at Paris, Pupils of the, 122
Poor's Boxes in Churches, 37
Portland, The proposed Breakwater at, 4
Portsmouth, The Explosion at the King's Bastion, 241
Pottinger, Sir Henry, Banquet to, at Manchester, 463
Poughkeepsie Great Cattle Show, and Interior of the Great Marquee, 268
"Problem," The Experimental Yacht, 294
"QUARTOBUS," The New Cab, The, 349
Queen, The, Her Most Gracious Majesty, Alexandrina Victoria:
Her Majesty's Second Visit to Scotland, 169
Embarkation of her Majesty at Westwick, 169
Royal Yacht Dining Room, 172
The Royal Yacht Dining Room, 172
The "Ug Ship," "Ocean," saluting the Royal Squadron at the North, 172
Her Majesty and Prince Albert disembarking at Dundee, 184
The Royal Party at King William Dock, Dundee, 184
The Royal Party passing the Triumphant Arch, High street, Dundee, 184
The Queen and Lady Glenlyon visiting the Falls of the Fenslers, 183
Her Majesty and Prince Albert viewing the Pass of Kilskenno, 183
Blair Athol Castle from Ben-y-Glas, 185
Her Majesty and Prince Albert alighting at Blair Athol Church, 185
The Royal Entry into Blair Athol, 188
Cottages at Blair Athol, 260
Prince Albert and Lord Glenlyon deer-stalking at Athol, 268
Glen Tilt, 269
Lower Falls of the Bruar, 261
Blair Castle and Glen Tilt, from the top of Tulloch, 261
The Queen and Prince Albert feeding the Garry, 264
The Falls of the Tummell, 264
The Queen and Prince Albert on Tulloch Hill, 264
Entrance to Coupat Angus, 218
Archies at Coupat Angus, 218
Blair Athol, 213
Her Majesty leaving Blair Athol Church, 213
Highland Guardmen at Blair Athol, 213
Her Majesty's Visit to the Isle of Wight, &c., 269
Arrival of Her Majesty at Cowes, 268
Her Majesty's Visit to Burghley House, 265
Burghley House North Front, 265
Triumphant Arch at Great Weldon, 268
Archies at Kettering, Wreckley, Walthorpe, and Deanthorpe, 268
Archies at Easton, Bulwick, Budington, near Stamford, 269
Entry into Stamford, 269

- Arrival of Her Majesty and Prince Albert at Burghley, 312
 The Lodges at Burghley, 312
 The Banquet in the Great Hall, ditto, 313
 Curious Staircase at Burghley, 315
 Queen Elizabeth's State Bed, 316
 Her Majesty's State Bed, 316
 Arch at West Bridge, 324
 Her Majesty passing the Market Place, Northampton, 324
 Her Majesty passing "The Castle," Northampton, 325
 Her Majesty's Return to the Western Station, 325
 Arch at Broughton, 325
 The Procession, St. Mary's Hill, Stamford, 328
 Ruins at Wollorpe, 328
 Procession passing St. Michael's Church, Stamford, 328
 The Kitchen at Burghley, 329
 The Christening in the Chapel, 329
 The Burghley Christening Cake, 332
 Buffet of Plate, Banqueting Hall, 332
 The Char-a-Banc presented to her Majesty by Louis Philippe, leaving Windsor Castle, 337
 Interior of her Majesty's Railway State Carriage on the Southampton Railway, 351
 Her Majesty's Visit, with the King of the French, to Eton College, 352 (See also Royal Exchange, Opening of the, by her Majesty.)
- RACE HORSE VAN, 69
 Railway Signals:
 Birmingham: "All clear," 373
 "Slacken Speed—Engine," 373
 "Caution—Rails," 373
 Dover: "Caution—Rails," 373
 Junction Signal-man at Work, 373
 Station Post Signal, "Caution and Danger," 373
 Dover Junction: "Danger—Up and Down Lines, Bricklayer's Arms; Caution—Up Line: Danger—Down Line, London-bridge," 373
 Placing a Fog Signal, 373
 Junction of the Great Western Railway with the London, 412
 Junction Signal Post, 412
 Station Signal, "All Right," 412
 Line Signals, "All Right," 412
 "Caution," 412
 "Stop," 412
- Reading Regatta, 140
 Reading Races, 140
 Repeal Meeting in Washington Hall, 35
 Revenue Cruisers, Inspection of, in Kingstown Harbour, Dublin, 133
 Review in Hyde Park, 45
 Rheingau, Map of the, 304
 Rhode Island, Great Meeting in, 224
 Richmond, Fire at, 136
 Richmond Penitentiary, Dublin, Portrait of the Governor of, 136
 Roberts, Mr., the Welsh Harp, 43
 Rogers's Bank in Clement's-lane, Interior of, 357
 Roman London—Roman Wall, Bread-street-hill—Roman Lamp, 44
 Royal Academy Exhibition—(See Fine Arts)
 Royal Christening—(See Alfred, Prince)
 Royal Exchange, The, &c.
 Sir Thomas Gresham's Wedding-ring, 263
 Host School, formerly the Residence of the Gresham Family, 263
 Seals used by Sir Thomas Gresham, 264
 Gresham House, afterwards Gresham College, 264
 Medalion to Commemorate the Opening of the Royal Exchange by Queen Elizabeth, 265
 Interior of the First Exchange in 1569, 265
 The Royal Exchange and the Tum in Cornhill, in 1648, 265
 First Royal Exchange in 1569, 264
 Royal Exchange, 1668, 264
 The Royal Exchange, 1818, 264
 Royal Exchange and Bank Buildings in 1780, 129
 The New Royal Exchange, 130
 The New East and South Fronts, 264
 North Entrance, 265
 South Entrance, 265
 Bells for the Hours and Chimes, 268
 Lever Apparatus for Striking the Chimes, 268
 Barrel for Playing the Chimes, 268
 Venetian Window, 268
 West Front, 268
 Monogram of the Architect (W.T.), 268
- Royal Exchange, The New, Opening of the, by her Most Gracious Majesty, and the Procession thereto:
 Delivery of the City Sword at Temple Bar, 273
 The Procession Passing the Mansion House, 276
 Her Majesty Crossing the Great West Portico, 277
 The Procession in the North Ambulatory, 277
 Sketch from the Procession by a Correspondent, 278
 Procession of her Majesty to Open the New Royal Exchange (Giving a Coup-d'oeil of, 285, 281)
 The Procession Crossing the Merchants' Area, 284
 Ceremony of Naming and Proclaiming the Royal Exchange, 284
 Presentation of the Address in the Reception-room, 285
 The Grand Vestibule, 285
 Departure of her Majesty, 295
 Lloyd's Subscription Room, as it appeared at the Entrance of her Majesty, 292
 Royal Exchange Hall at the Mansion House, 292
 Lloyd's Commercial Room—Admission of the Public, 292
 The Queen's Drawing-room, her Majesty inspecting Mr. Tito's Models of the New Royal Exchange, 292
 Perspective View of the Great Clock of, 292
 Drawings of Various Parts of the Machinery of the Clock, 292, 330
 Royal Exchange Medal (W.T.'s), Obverse and Reverse of the, 299
 Royal Humane Society's Receiving House and Ward of Dillo, Hyde Park, 144
 Royal Observatory—(See Greenwich)
 Russian Tartar Family, Annual Migration of a, 364
- ST. AMANT, the French Chess Player, Portrait of, 415
 St. Barnabas Roman Catholic Church at Nottingham, 132
 St. Beurt's Abbey, 203
 St. Dunstan's in the East, The Church of, 116
 St. Giles's New Church, 176
 St. Giles, Camberwell, New Church—
- The Altar of, and the Ceremony of Consecration of, 337
 Interior of, 416
 St. Giles in the Fields, Church of, 4
 St. James's Chapel Royal, 28
 St. Mary's New Church, 176
 Dulwich, and Interior of ditto, 303
 St. Michael's New Church, Pimlico, 309
 St. Wilfred Festival, Ripon, 124
 St. Wilfred Races, Ripon, 124
 Seven Passions, "The Castles of the," Scene from the Drama of, 309
 Shakespeare's Jug, Cane, and the Case in which the Jug is kept, 312
 Sheffield, St. George's Schools, 364
 Sheriffs, The New; Ancient Ceremony of Chopping Sticks, and Counting Horse Shoes and Hobnails, in the Court of Exchequer, 216
 Shill's New Beehive, &c., 129
 Silver Trowel used by Sir P. Egerton at the Birkenhead Docks, 203
 Skating in the Regent's-park, 376
 "Smith, Joe," The Mormon Prophet, Portrait of, 131
 Smithfield Cattle Market at Christmas, 366
 Smithfield Prize Cattle Show: Red Stock Deer from Windsor, 376
 Arrival of the Prize Cattle at the Bazaar, Baker-street, 377
 Prince Albert's Angus Fatted Ox, 377
 Mr. Holford's and Mr. Senior's Old Herefordshire Oxen, 377
 Mr. Smith's Old Short Horned Steer, 378
 Sophia Matilda of Gloucester: Her late Royal Highness the Princess, Portrait of, 380
 Ceremony of Lying in State at the Ranger's House, 380
 Departure of the Funeral Procession, 381
 Arrival of the Funeral Procession at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, 381
- Southampton, View of the Town and Port of, 41, 42
 Southampton Meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society of England—(See Agricultural Society)
 South Windmill Manor House, 124
 Soyer, the late Madame, Monument to, in Kensal green Cemetery, 169
 Sphinx Cutter Lish, Price Sculls, 126
 Stanley, Lord, Portrait of, 181
- State Trials, House of Lords—the Lord Chancellor Pronouncing Judgment in the Case of the Queen v O'Connell, 145
 State Trials, Dublin (See also O'Connell)
 Steam Pile-driving Engine, American Patent, 44
 Steam Screw—Iron Collier, "Q.E.D.," 384
 Sun's Disc, Representation of the Spots on the, 171
 Sussex, Statue of his late Royal Highness the Duke of, 61
 Swan Upping on the Thames, from Brentford Ait, 33
 Sydney Oak, The, at Penshurst, 404
 "Sylph" and "Orwell" Steam-boats, Collision between; Wreck of the "Sylph," 388
- TAHITI:
 Arrest of Mr. Pritchard, the Consul at, by the Soldiers of the French Protectorate, 65
 The French Block-house in which he was confined, 65
 Imprisonment of Mr. Pritchard, 65
 The British Force off Tahiti—her Majesty's Ketch "Basilisk," 64
 The French Blockade of, 64
 "Orange," French Frigate, 64
 French Forts, 64
 French Prison, 64
 British Consulate, 64
 Her Majesty's Tahitian Consul, Mr. Pritchard, in his Official Dress, receiving the Petition of a Native Chief, 64
- Tangier, View of, 180
 The French Fleet off, 181
 Bombardment of, 181
 The Gate of, 182
 Flight of the Population, 182
 Isly, the Battle of—Flag for the Standard, 182
 Tartar Soldier, The, in Hyde Park, 137
 Taylor, C. Esq., Portrait of, 125
 Taylor Institution at Oxford, 4
 Telephone, The, 117, 118
 Tippos Sahib's Portraits, 228
 Tom Thoms's, General, Equipage, 141
 Tottenham Old Church, Wood Green, 374
 Tottenham New Church, Wood Green, 374
- Toucan, The, at the Surrey Zoological Gardens, 405
- "VALENTINE AND ORSON," Scene from, at the Lyceum Theatre, 408
 "Vanguard" Steamer, Wreck of the, 404
- WARFARE, Novel Experiments in: Shower of Hand Rockets, 372
 Non-recoil Gun, 372
 Hut destroyed by a Shell, 372
 Warner's, Captain, New Destructive Power, Experiment at Brighton: The "John o' Gaunt" being towed to Destruction, 32
 The Explosion, 32
 Settling Down, 32
 View of the Wreck at Sunset, 32
 Supposed Case of a Steamer pursued by an Enemy, 32
 Supposed Appearance of Shell, 32
 Diagram of Ship and Fleet, 32
 Washington Hall, Great Tapest Meeting in, 36
 Watermen's Free, and Lightermen's Almshouses at Penge, 209
 Waterton, Charles, Esq., Portrait of, 124
 Waverley Hall, The, 24
 Webster, The Late Miss Clara, Portrait of, 307
 Wellington Barracks in St. James's Park, 43
 Wellington Statue, at Glasgow, in auguration of the, 269
 Westminster Hall, The Exhibition at—(See Fine Arts)
 Wight, Isle of, Map of; Norris Castle, 148
 Her Majesty's Marine Residence, 149 (See also Isle of Wight, and Queen, The)
 Windsor Castle—(See Louis Philippe; also Alfred's, Prince, Christening also Garter, Order of the; Windsor Castle, Steamer, The Wreck of the, 340)
 Woolf, Dr., Portrait of, 117
 Wolverhampton Races, 188
- YORK, View of the City of, 220
 "You See the Slender Spire that Peers," Illustration and Music to, 32

DIRECTIONS FOR BINDING VOL. V.

The History of London, published as a Supplement to No. 141, is to be placed immediately after the Title, Preface, Chronology, and Key; and the Large Print of the Thames to front the Tail to Vol. V. The Census of Ireland and Scotland is recommended to be placed immediately after the Index.

All the Numbers are reprinted, and Subscribers can complete their sets.

Portfolios for preserving future numbers, Price 4s., may be had at the Office.

Cases for Binding either Volume may be had at 3s. Any bookbinder in the country can bind the numbers in the case at a trifling expense.

The whole of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, bound in Five Volumes in cloth, gilt, are on sale—Vol. I., 21s.; Vols. II., III., IV., and V., 18s. each.

